Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Bright Hours.

A lesson in each sublime,
A lesson worth enforming,
In this "I take no heed to time,
Save when the sun is shining."
These matter words—a dial have,
And we soon as it precedes
To happier hours as it we hope
Than this—most rainy touches.
As life is rosy hours bright and fair,
And sometimes dark and lonely,
Let us forget the sad moments,
And note the bright hours only.

There is no grave so cruel and dread chart
But hope can find its heart,
So hope sings on in every heart,
Although we may not hear it.
And it to day the heavy wing
Of sorrow is oppressing,
Perhaps to-morrow's sun may bring
The weary heart a blessing.

We find the joyous moments haste,
And then forget their glitter;
We take the cup of life and taste
No portion but the bitter.
But we should teach our hearts to learn
Its sweetest drops the strongest,
And pleasant hours should ever seem
To linger with us longest.

The darkest shadows of the night
Are just before the morning;
Then let us wait the coming light,
All bad phantoms scorning.
And while we're gressing on the tide
Of time's fast ebbing river,
Let's pluck the blessings by its side,
And bless the gracious Giver.

What We Believe. No. 13.

What was said in our last concerning Lev. xiv. 15, 16 is further strengthened by the fact that in the Hebrew, as well as in the LXX. (the O. T. Greek), three different words are employed. They are yatsag, yaar, tabal, [illegible] Tabl, is found 16 times in the Old Testament, and is given as "dip" 15 times, and "plunge" once. To the Hebrew people it had no other meaning than this: and if they wished to convey the idea of pouring or sprinkling, they used different words to do so. In addition to this, will the reader look up the following Scriptures where the Greek word for "dip" is either bapto or embapto: Matt. xxvi. 23; Mark xiv. 20; Luke xvi. 24; John xiii. 26. If the root verb bapto here means to dip, as given in our A. Version, why should the same word, when used in connection with men and women, have a different meaning? Cheo is the Greek for "pour," and is the original word in the following: John ii. 15; Acts ii. 17, 18; x. 45, and others. Rhantizo has been translated "sprinkle." See Heb. ix. 13, 19, 21; x. 22; 1 Pet. i. 2. Baptizo is never, in any place in the Bible, translated sprinkle or pour, neither are cheo or rhantizo translated baptize. Sprinkling was never authorized as baptism by any church Council until the Council of Ravenna A. D. 1311. But long before this sprinkling was practiced and called baptism, though falsely. There is nothing in the Bible or history to contradict the proposition that immersion; and that alone, constituted and was regarded as baptism in the Church in the days of the apostles. The ordinance has, as John Calvin said, been "changed." "Sprinkling a little water on a person," said he, "is as good as immersion, and the Church had the right to change the ordinance to suit herself." Paul praised the Corinthian brethren for keeping the ordinances as he had delivered them. 1 Cor. xi. 2. Little apostolic "praise" would be forthcoming could Paul and other apostles witness the reckless departure, in doctrine and practice, in our day, from the primitive order. What Calvin designated as "the right (of the Church) to change the ordinance" of baptism "to suit herself," is nothing less than unauthorized and wicked tampering with God's order. There is not one shred of evidence on record in the Scriptures that the Church was ever authorized to "change" any "ordinance" of God.

There is another line of thought to which I invite the reader's attention. Man is mortal, condemned to death, because he is a sinner; but God in his goodness has provided a way of escape from the power of the "enemy." He has given to the Son "to have life in himself" (John. v. 26), and has delegated to him the power to give eternal life (John xvii. 2) to those putting faith in him. John xx. 31. To obtain "life.....even length of days for ever and ever" (Psa. xxi. 4), it was necessary that Jesus should be obedient to his Father's will "as far as death, the death of the cross." Phil. ii. 8. And "in that he died, he died unto sin once." Likewise the true believer is to reckon himself to be "dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord." Rom. v. 10, 11. To what period does he trace this "reckoning?" To his baptism into Jesus Christ. "Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ, were baptized into his death? Therefore we are buried with him in baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life." Rom. vi. 3, 4. By being buried with Christ in baptism, planted together in the likeness of his death, the believer not only expresses faith in the death, burial and resurrection of Christ as a fact; but also confesses that he himself is a mortal justly condemned to death, who, when dead, is wholly devoid of life, and unless God who raised Christ from the dead, should intervene, he would forever remain in this condition. He thereby sets forth his unqualified acceptance of God's arrangement to give him life; as some who went to John for baptism, he "justifies God." Luke vii. 29. Then, upon hearty "obedience to the faith" (Acts vi. 7; Rom. i. 5; vi. 17) God, in turn, "justifies the ungodly" (Rom. iv. 5), "him that believeth in Jesus." [illegible] "Without the shedding of blood [illegible] there is no remission." Heb. ix. 22. The blood of Christ was "shed for many for the remission of sins." Matt. xxvi. 28. "Faith in his blood" (Rom. iii. 25) is required. This faith must be expressed by obedience, and that obedience is shown by being voluntarily baptized in the likeness of Christ's death to walk henceforth in newness of life. When these requirements are complied with, God is faithful and just to forgive sins. Thus is baptism related to "the remission of sins." The apostles not only so understood the matter, but also thus presented it to others.

The question is sometimes asked, "Can we by faith, repentance and baptism change God's mind or attitude toward us? Can we make him willing to forgive our sins?" No, indeed, this we can not do. Nor would we want to. What is his mind toward us? Is it anything but pity and a desire and willingness to save us? He calls to the wicked to "forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon." Isa. lv. 7. "God commendeth his love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." Rom. v. 8. Hence nothing that we could do as originating with ourselves, is needed to change his mind toward us; but we need to change our minds toward him, and fall in with his thoughts and ways by humble obedience to his just demands. We did not originate the gospel plan of salvation; it comes from God, and when we submit to him, we show our approval and acceptance of his beneficent design. "If we confess (and forsake. Prov. xxviii. 13) our sins (Matt. iii. 8) he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." 1 John i. 9; Acts xxii. 14.

It is plain at once that baptism is for believers of the gospel, and for them only. No instances are recorded where non-believers or little children, who are incapable of either belief or unbelief, were baptized. True, households were baptized, but in nearly every instance it is said that those households "believed" and were baptized. But above all, Jesus said, "HE THAT BELIEVETH and is baptized, shall be saved," and not "he that is baptized and afterwards believes, shall be saved." The apostasy, foreseen and predicted by the apostles, resulting in Romanism, is responsible for the departure from the early simplicity in faith and practice, and even the Reformation was not able to efface many of the errors which had so deeply intrenched themselves. These errors, including baby sprinkling, still linger, and it is even regarded as a mark of impiety to honestly call in question certain religious practices. The writer knows how difficult it is to break away from well established lines of error, having undergone the ordeal of passing out of traditional and systemetized error into the light of God's revealed truth. Seniority in years and superiority in learning—as well as numbers, are not safeguards against error. Let us know and obey the truth for ourselves. This alone can make us "free indeed."

A. H. ZELMER.

"Behold, I stand at the door, and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me." The word "behold" calls for our special attention, as when John said of Jesus, "Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world." "Behold, I stand and knock." A right royal visitor seeking admittance at a beggar's door, having rich gifts to bestow upon the occupant of the house. He is not only heir to David's royal throne, but by virtue of his righteousness, and true sonship to God, God has appointed him "heir of all things." Heb. i. 2. What an honor to receive such a guest, and to be associated with him in the government of the world, and to share with him in the blessings of Israel and the other tribes of Jacob, and to restore the preserved of Israel: I will also give thee for a light to the Gentiles, that thou mayest be my salvation unto the end of the earth." This would-be guest says, "If any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him and he with me." "Any man," Jew or Gentile, rich or poor, will be given the honor of supping with the Lord of glory, "If he will listen to his voice, and open the door." This he must do in order to receive the honor promised by the royal visitor, because he is no burglar and will not force the door. And it is for all of us a serious question to ask ourselves, have we heard the "voice" of God? Because he says "my sheep hear my voice,..... and they follow me; and I give unto them eternal life." John x. 27-28. This voice was heard from one of the mountains of Judea, saying, "Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth. Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness; for they shall be filled. Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy. Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God. Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God. Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you." And when sorrowful even unto death he prayed, saying, "O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me: nevertheless, not as I will, but as thou wilt." And when in the agony of the cross he cried, "Father forgive them; for they know not what they do." But the dregs of the cup were yet to come—the lonely cry, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" Have I not in all things been obedient to thy requirements? Has not my whole life been a sacrifice, to do thy righteous will, and now in my dire suffering; why hast thou forsaken me?" The answer to this question is contained in the lonely cry of our Lord, is found in the prophets and apostles. In the 53rd chap. of Isa. where the seer pictures the sufferings of Christ, he writes, "All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way; and the Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all." He that was represented by the passover lamb; he "who through the eternal Spirit offered himself without spot to God." He was made "sin for us, who knew no sin: that we might be made the righteousness of God in him." 2 Cor. v. 21. Having heard the voice, and opened the door, the Lord enters. What rich gifts does he bestow on the one opening the door? He gives him himself. Col. ii. 20. Then the man hath, "Christ in him the hope of glory." Gal. i. 27. "And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure." 1 John iii. 3. Then he has the promise that he shall see God," having purified himself by the indwelling of his royal guest, the man manifests sound wisdom in that he listens to the voice, and opens the door. Because on account of his acquaintance with his new guest, he lets go those things that belong to the old man, his former master; but now he has a new Master that speaks peace to the troubled breast; inspires him with faith in God, his Creator, and gives him hope of eternal life in the everlasting kingdom of his God; and fills his soul with love to God and man.

In the voice of the Master there is Spirit, and there is life. The Spirit of his voice in the early centuries of the Christian era, entered the Roman Empire and dispelled the superstition of Paganism, and overturned their temples. Then came the apostasy and mixed the old doctrine with Christianity, and dark superstition like a thick cloud covered all Europe; and the iron yoke of the Papacy was riveted on the necks of all the nations. The density of the darkness that covered Europe may be judged by one short extract from Barnes' notes on the Revelation. "Under Irene a council was convened —the second Council of Nice, or the seventh general Council.....the answer of the bishops in the Council to the question of the Empress Irene, whether they agreed to the decision which had been adopted in the Council, was in these words, "We all agree to it; we have all freely signed it; this is the faith of the apostles, of the fathers, and of the Catholic church; we all salute, honor, worship and adore the holy and venerable images; be they accursed who do not."—Bower's lives of the Popes, II. 159.

God in his providence brought upon them, on account of their apostasy, the fanatical followers of Mohommed; whose cry was, "There is but one God and Mahomed is his prophet." What a reproach to those who had departed from the worship of the one God, and had turned to the worship of images. See Rev. ix. 20. The invading of Europe by the hosts of the prophet of Mecca, and the capture of Constantinople, failed to produce any reformation in those that had departed from the worship of the true God, and were turned to idols. But the Spirit of Christ emenating from the open book in the hands of the reformers, did what the sword of the prophet could not do; it made an opening in the thick cloud of darkness and superstition that enveloped all Europe during the dark ages. The stout hearted Luther, aided by Melancthon, and a host of others, cried with a voice like a lion, appealing to the God of heaven for the truth of what was contained in the open Bible. Their cry startled the occupant of the Vatican, and drew the Papal thunder from the seven hills of Rome, but the Master had set before those who listened to his voice an open door, and no man could shut it; no, not the man of sin; because the one "that hath the key of David, he that openeth, and no man shutteth," had opened a door for the spread of the truth contained in the open Bible; and wherever the footsteps of the reformers went, on sea or on land, they were like fire to consume the darkness of the apostasy. The kings lent their aid, having become jealous of the claims of the harlot. The voice of Christ, the Spirit of his mouth as stated by Paul in 2 Cor. ii. 8, speaking of the man of sin "whom the Lord shall consume with the Spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy by the brightness of his coming." This process of consumption by the voice of Christ or the Spirit of his mouth, is still going on, as seen by the expulsion of the Friars from the Philipines and the closing of the Catholic schools in France not authorized by law. We are nearing the great jubilee when, not only in Israel's land, but in all the world shall be heard the great trumpet, "and liberty shall be proclaimed throughout all the land." "In that day.....when the towers fall.....the light of the moon shall be as the light of the sun, and the light of the sun shall be seven fold, as the light of seven days, in the day that the Lord bindeth up the breach of his people, and healeth the stroke of their wound." Isa. xxx. 26. "For as the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west; so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be." Matt. xxiv. 27. With the light that will accompany the Son of Man, there will be no danger of men going to a false Zion in the Rocky Mountains—that is the "desert," nor will they be deceived by Spiritists, "that he is in the secret chambers."

GEO. FRANCIS.

What is Truth?

In attendance at a Camp meeting, held by the "Holiness People" of the M. E. Church, the following statement was made, "You cannot have faith except the Holy Spirit lead you into it." The preacher was J. N. Smith, of Redlands, Cal. His text was, "Ye are complete in him," Col. ii. 10.

His subject was divided into "ye," "complete," and "him." The completeness was all the work of the Holy Spirit, and the end was sanctification.

The speaker occupied an hour and a half in trying to prove that the text meant that we must be sanctified in order to be saved. He failed to give a single text in proof of his assertion. More than one-half of the time was employed in attempting to prove that God and Christ are of one substance, that Christ had his existence with God. He (Christ) was the Creator of all things. He, (the preacher) stated that the churches of today are drifting into Unitarianism. If Luke i. 31 and 35 were read and believed would it not settle the question? It certainly would. The testimony of the angel is to Mary, "Thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a Son and shalt call his name Jesus. The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee; therefore, also that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God." Jesus, that was born of Mary was to be called "the Son of God." Previous to this event he was called the "Seed of the woman, the Seed of Abraham, the Son of David, etc." He was the Seed of the woman that should bruise the serpent's head, the Seed of Abraham that should bless all nations, the Son of David who should occupy his throne forever. Gen. iii. 15; xxii. 18; 2 Sam. vii. 12-18; Psa. cxxxii. 11; Luke i. 32, 33; Acts ii. 30; xiii. 34.

If these Scriptures do not prove when Christ first existed and that he was God's promise previous to this event, they do not prove anything.

The above texts are very plain and hundreds could be given in further proof; but we deem it not necessary.

What is faith, and how is it obtained? Let us again refer to the Scriptures for proof.

"Faith is the substance (Margin, ground, or confidence) of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." Heb. xi. 1. Romans x. 17, says, "Faith cometh by hearing, and (this) hearing by the Word of God." The apostles were commanded to "go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth (what is preached) and is baptized shall be saved." Here, to believe is to have faith in. There is not a word said about the Holy Ghost leading us into this faith, or that, it is a gift of God. Neither can it be found in the Scripture. I wish to get into the fold of Christ, or of his sheepfold. There is but one door and that door is Christ, the Son of God.

How may I accomplish this?

By obeying the commands of our Father who art in heaven. "If ye love me ye will keep my command-

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LI. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, SEPTEMBER 3, 1902. NUMBER 33.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

ments." When the [illegible] asked the apostle on the [illegible] of Pentecost, What shall we do? he answered, "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." Now what Peter told the Jews to do he told others to do: "Believe, repent and be baptized." These three steps would bring them into the fold of Christ, or by these they would put on Christ. He says, "I am the door of the sheep, (sheepfold.) If we follow him in his teachings we will reach the fold of Christ and be free. Whoever enters here must believe what the prophets have said about this Son of God, also Christ's message and that of his apostles, further, he must repent of his past sins and be baptized into Christ, after which he must arise to walk in newness of life. Strive for the mysteries, and strive lawfully, as Paul admonishes.

Our Savior's prayer in St. John xxii. is "that they might be sanctified through the truth." Further, we read in St. John xv. 3, "Now ye are clean through the Word which I have spoken unto you, and these words that I speak unto you, they are Spirit and they are life." St. John vi. 63.

Let us see what Christ has said about the office of the Holy Ghost.

"And I will pray the Father, and he will give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you forever. Even the Spirit of truth; whom the world (sinners) cannot receive because it (the world) seeth him not, neither knoweth him." St. John xiv. 17, 18. "And when the Comforter is come, that is the Spirit of truth, he will guide you into all truth." St. John xvi. 13. The "you" in this text means the apostles, not the world or sinners. After that Christ arose from the dead he was with [illegible] apostles forty days, speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God. He commanded them that they should not depart from Jerusalem, but wait for the promise of the Father, the (Comforter) whief saith he, ye have heard of me; for John truly baptized with water; but ye (apostles) shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost, not many days hence." Are these texts plain and do they not teach that Christ promised to send another Comforter and that Spirit should guide the apostles into all truth, and that he shall teach you all things and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you. It was sent to the apostles. It was to guide them into all truth. It was to teach them all things and to bring all things to their remembrance. The world could not receive it; for it did not know Christ. It is admitted by all Bible students that this promise was verified on the day of Pentecost, as found recorded in Acts iv. This qualified them to do the work Christ gave them to do. On this occasion they were baptized with the Holy Ghost and received power to lay hands on others, that they might receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. Philip was commissioned to preach the kingdom of God to the Samaritans, but they could not receive the Holy Ghost from Philip so two of the apostles were sent for and when they came they laid their hands on them and received the Holy Ghost. Can any one deny that there was given a power to the apostles that no others received? They alone had the power of laying on of hands that others might receive the Holy Ghost. If we but add to our faith virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness and charity, and if these things be in you and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ; for if ye do these things ye shall never fall; for so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Can it be that completeness can be reached in any other way?

My prayer is that we may be complete in him, (Christ.)

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, SEPT. 3, 1902.

IT will be remembered that during the South African war the Boers obtained war material and men through the Portuguese possessions about Delagoa Bay. England has now obtained possession of this important territory by purchase.

QUITE a number of persons to whom we addressed letters regarding delinquency on subscription have responded, and we thank you each for your prompt attention. There are, however, still a good many who have failed to make reply. We presume this is largely neglect, and not due to a desire to defraud us. We do not like to think that any one would knowingly keep back what is due on THE RESTITUTION, and we ask you once more to look on your accounts, and if you have not yet renewed, please send in at once and give us what is ours.

"As thy days, so shall thy strength be;" says the unchangeable God, Deut. xxxiii. 25 and speaking to us by his Son in Matt. vi. 34 he reminds us of this promise long ago, and encourages us to rely upon it, by saying, "Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof." And beautifully in harmony with this are the lines of Saxby:—

"Oh, ask not thou, how shall I bear
The burden of tomorrow?
Sufficient for today, its care,
Its evil and its sorrow;
God imparteth by the way
Strength sufficient for the day."

And Jeremy Taylor said:—

"He that hath so many causes of joy, and so great, is very much in love with sorrow and peevishness, who loses all these pleasures, and chooses to sit down upon his little handful of thorns. Enjoy the blessings of this day, if God sends them; and the evils of it bear patiently and sweetly; for this day only is ours, we are dead to yesterday, and we are not yet born to the morrow. But if we look abroad and bring into one day's thoughts the evil of many, certain and uncertain, what will be and what never will be, our load will be as intolerable as it is unreasonable."

Having just room left for one of Paul Fleming's stanzas we will give it, as it beautifully presses home the same lesson:—

"Why shouldst thou fill today with sorrow
About tomorrow, my heart?
One watches all with care most true,
Doubt not that he will give thee too,
Thy part."

The Almond Tree.

"The almond tree often blossoms in February, and this fact is frequently alluded to in the Bible. Jeremiah in his heavy visions thus: The Word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Jeremiah, What seest thou? And I said, I see the rod of an almond tree. Then said the Lord, Thou hast well seen, for I will hasten my Word to perform it—just as this tree hastens to bud and blossom long before any other has begun to awake out of the repose of winter, and before it has put forth its leaves.

The same thing is applied to the economy of miracles, in the selection of rods from this tree by Moses to be laid up in the tabernacle in order to settle the controversy in regard to the family that should be clothed with the priestly office. "And it came to pass, that on the morrow Moses went into the tabernacle of witness; and behold, the rod of Aaron, for the house of Levi, was budded, and brought forth buds and bloomed blossoms, and yielded almonds." Num. xvii. 8. This was miraculous rapidity certainly; but a rod was selected for the purpose from that tree which in its natural development is the most expeditious of all. And not only do the blossoms appear on it suddenly, but the fruit sets at once and appears even while the flowers are yet on the tree; buds, blossoms, and almonds together on the same branch, as on this rod of Moses.

In that affecting picture of the rapid and inevitable approach of old age drawn by the royal preacher, it is said that the almond tree shall flourish or blossom. Eccl. xii. 5. The point of the figure is doubtless the fact that the white blossoms completely cover the whole tree, without any admixture of green leaves, for these do not appear until some time after. It is the expressive type of old age, whose hair is white as wool, unrelieved with any other color."

Death's Doings.

The Church in Cleveland was again, Aug. 17th, called upon to give up another of their number, and that so suddenly, that we could scarcely realize that it was true that our dear Sister Wm. Pate was silent in death's embrace. It was a startling proof of the precariousness of our own existence, and the stern necessity for readiness for the coming of the Lord, then we will be ready for any emergency. The solemn event gave us an opportunity to address a greater number than was ever before crowded into the church building; even the aisles being filled; with what result, God only knows.

THE ADDRESS.

In our journey through life many clouds darken our path,—many events tend to bruise our spirit and break our heart; but no event so solemn and sad as that which converts our homes into houses of mourning, and stretches one of our nearest and dearest relatives or friends on the bed of death.

The Spirit's Word recorded more than twenty-five hundred years ago by Isaiah, says that "We all do fade as a leaf." And at this great distance in time we have another painful proof of its truth. What a humiliating comparison this is! What object in nature so frail as a withered leaf? It hangs to the bough by a single thread, ready to be carried away by the feeblest breath of wind. Things remained the same seven hundred years later, for we find the same Spirit speaking through the apostle James saying, "Ye know not what shall be on the morrow. For what is your life? It is a vapor that appeareth for a little time and then vanisheth away." No one will dispute this fact. But very few can account for this frailty and shortness of life. Not one in a thousand seems to know whose fault it is, and many are disposed to blame the Creator for it. I address myself on this solemn occasion to those only who accept the Bible as a revelation from God. As such, it cannot stultify itself. What it declares in one place, it cannot contradict in another. So it is of the first importance to

of the frailty and mortality of our race; and we have the divine testimony in Rom. v. 12 that "By one man—by one man, SIN entered into the world, and DEATH BY SIN." In the 3rd chapter of Genesis we learn the circumstances under which sin entered, and death ensued,—In the history of the first human pair. Sin is transgression of law,—man was disobedient to a law, the penalty of which was death,—after being forewarned of the consequences. In the very nature of things the children of a mortal man must be mortal—subject to death,—and this is the death that passed upon all men. He who sins once is predisposed to sin again,—inclined to break other laws, including the laws of nature, the penalty of which is pains, sicknesses, diseases; and these sweep millions off from the face of world in infancy, through weaknesses

INHERITED FROM PARENTS,—

other millions are cut off in childhood and youth, others by follies of their own in later years so that few live out their allotted time. In this way the cause of death is traced to its source. The same divine authority informs us that the death threatened for disobedience, and afterward executed, returns man to the ground from whence he was taken. In passing sentence upon him, the Judge said, "Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." The same infallible Book tells us that the dead know not anything, Eccl. xi. 5; and that they go the grave, where there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, Eccl. ix. 10. In Psa. cxivi. 4 we are positively told that man's breath goes forth—no mention of anything else leaving him, "his breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth, in that very day his thoughts perish." Mark you this is exactly in harmony with the sentence passed upon him. Man goes to the dust of the earth he was formed of. And not even that he is dead; and Psa. cxv. 17 is equally emphatic in its statement, that the dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence. Doubtless you all know that these Scriptures teach the opposite of what is almost universally believed. We have made our choice, friends, and have determined to believe God rather than man and others can do the same or reject the testimony as they please. You are also aware, doubtless, or, if not, at this moment, a little reflection would convince you that a system of salvation calculated to take the essential part of man to heaven or consign him to hell at death,—would not reorganize and raise the whole man at the last day. Thousands, oh millions, disbelieve in the resurrection, because they see no use of it, supposing the man proper to be saved and glorified or condemned without the body, and is vastly better off without it,—but Jesus by Paul says that he is coming to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired of all them that believe. Proof of this is found in 2 Thes. i. 10. And Jesus in Luke xiv. 14 says the saints are to be rewarded at the resurrection of the just, not at death. And in John v. 28 he tells us that they shall hear his voice and come forth out of the grave to life. And Hebrew xi 35 says all the ancient worthies suffered as they did, to procure and that they all died and received not the promise, because God had decreed to perfect all the faithful at the same time.

This should prepare all who have ears to hear, to listen to the words of Jesus at the grave of Lazarus, "I am the resurrection and the life." That's just what we NEED—life. It was life that was lost,—it can be recovered in Christ. They died here, were buried here, and will be raised here, and the earth when redeemed from the curse is to be their everlasting inheritance. Jesus said the "meek shall inherit the earth." Matt. v. 5. And David and Daniel and others testify to the same truth, and that they are to dwell therein for ever. All this is obtained by the believers of these covenanted blessings, through the blood of Christ, shed for remission of sins, and the ratification of the everlasting covenant. The eternal life, the kingdom, offered of God, and all the offices and work of Christ at his first advent, and the conditions of faith, reformation and baptism constitute the

and is the veritable power employed by him to save men. This is, very briefly, the gospel which the dear one lying before us silent in death became obedient to, some eighteen years ago. And I am sure this is the course she would have had me take, had not the enemy struck her so suddenly and unexpectedly, because she would desire that those dear to her by the ties of nature and association should see the truth as it is in Jesus, and be begotten to a hope of life by the resurrection of Jesus, and cherish the same blessed hope of seeing him, and being made like him and reigning gloriously with him when he comes. The Scriptures regard her as asleep in Jesus;—as one of the blessed who die in the Lord; one of those who rise first when the Lord himself descends with the voice of the archangel and trump of God, who live and reign with Christ a thousand years. In laying away the devoted wife, and affectionate mother, consistent member of

and kind and constant friend and neighbor, we do not sorrow as those who have no hope of seeing their loved ones again. We hope to meet her again—and the Spirit shows it will be no detriment to the dead when the Lord comes, for they rise first, before the living ones are changed, even, but all are caught away together to meet the Lord in the air, and henceforth are ever with him; and we are told to comfort one another with THESE WORDS, not the words of man about entering heaven at death. Death is not the gate to endless joy. If God and Christ be true, the resurrection is the gate to endless joy. Paul sacrificed everything to obtain a resurrection like Christ's, and just before his head dropped into the executioner's basket he said his crown was laid up for him and would be given him at that day. This is the divine testimony in the case. My time has about expired, but I cannot close without asking what profitable lessons is this distressing incident, this great trial going to teach us? Will it cause us all to heed the Savior's injunction to be ready. That means that our accounts are made up and ready for inspection. The dear deceased one had no idea that her end was so near. Without a minute's warning and before her breath had entirely left her she had lost all consciousness, and could not even say good by to loved ones, till we meet in the kingdom. When in health, in a quiet, patient, self-denying way she was diligent in business as well as fervent in spirit, serving the Lord. But it was to her that some who were very dear to her by ties of nature had for many years turned a deaf ear to the blessed hope that anchored her soul through nearly twenty years of her life, and neglected God's gracious invitation to his kingdom and glory, and could not be induced to search the Scriptures to see if these things be so, and lay hold of the hope set before them there. This interest in others betokened high appreciation of the call according to God's purpose herself.

Others very dear to her had given intellectual assent to the things concerning the kingdom of God and name of Jesus Christ, but instead of accepting it as the power of God unto salvation to every one that believes it, they practically said that something else that was not true would answer every purpose, as if sincere unbelief and sincere disobedience, and were not hateful to God. Just think of this position a moment, and you will see how blind unbelief causes them to err. To admit the truth of the gospel of the kingdom is to admit the untruth of something else; and to admit the truth of the gospel of the kingdom, is to admit that it is the kingdom the saints will inherit,—and that they have the awful presumption to think they will inherit a kingdom they were ashamed to confess the gospel of, before the world. The dear Sister knew the Lord had forewarned them that he would be ashamed of them if they were ashamed of his words. She knew believers of the truth are expected to be lights in this world of abounding iniquity, and not hide the light under a bushel, or in a body where they dare not teach that immortality was to be sought for, or never obtained, as a gift from God—dare not teach the gospel of the kingdom preached by Jesus himself, and his apostles. Yes; she knew they would have to and follow him through evil report as well as good, or be left out. She knew that if they were led by blind leaders of the blind they would fall into the ditch with them. She knew the command to come out from among them and be separate,—and that light has no fellowship with darkness,—and that the words of Jesus will judge them at the last day, if not obedient to the truth. Is it any wonder that with this load upon her [illegible] some time the enemy has been working, for her heart strings she should carry a sorrowful countenance? She knew God's Word would not fail; there would be a long farewell,—an everlasting separation, without repentance toward God. But mercy still lingers, Jesus is still saying, "Come unto me." If you are weary come! If thirsty for the water of life, come! But if you come, you will get exactly what he offers—life in the everlasting kingdom. But there is an inner circle yet, that I must speak to. It is composed partly of those who were every thing she could wish them to be to her, except in one respect. They were her children,—most affectionate children, and her heart twined all about them,—but they are not God's children as well, and how she prayed and longed to have an unbroken family in

THE KINGDOM OF GOD.

And how it distressed her to think it possible that any one of them should be swept along with the torrent of iniquity in these last days, till their life should go out in the blackness of darkness. I plead with them by all the love of God and of Christ,—and by all the love and prayers, and tears, not to neglect this great salvation,—not to lay her away out of their sight without turning to God with full purpose of heart; putting on the sin-covering name of Jesus, then live godly and wait for his Son from heaven; then, O what a general assembly! What a glorious reunion! Patriarchs and prophets and apostles, and martyrs and an innumerable company, including our own loved ones who have fallen asleep will be there,—but the center of attraction will be the Lamb that was slain, and redeemed us to God by his blood, and the arch of the heavens will ring with shouts of victory,—and of blessing and honor and glory and power unto him who sitteth upon the throne, and to the Lamb for ever! Shall we all be there? Some of these dear bereaved ones have boarded the gospel ship, the ark of safety—God help them to keep in the narrow way till the Prince of life shall call. "Gather my saints together unto me." May the day soon come, and end these scenes of sorrow, pain and death, amen and amen.

Our dear Sister Pate was the daughter of Thomas and Sarah Musson, of Old Weston, Huntingdonshire, and was aged sixty-two years, seven months, and seven days.

Signs of the Times.

The population of our globe has doubled during the last hundred years. Now, in that long century, art, science, discovery, music, invention, intelligence, civilization, all, all have advanced. And the Bible and Christianity have also advanced, so that all nations are now open to the gospel, and the Bible, in 267 dialects, is thickly scattered over our world. The translation of the Scriptures have increased five-fold: the number of evangelical missionary societies ten-fold; the number of missionaries five-fold; contributions in money twenty-five fold; the circulation of the Bible thirty-fold; and the number of converts from heathendom thirty-five-fold.

"This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world as a witness to all nations, and then shall the end come."

Notwithstanding all this a mass of figures at hand shows that in Europe as in America the Church schools are decreasing in the number of students for the ministry. Taken in the aggregate with all the denominations it will show a 50 percent decrease.

"Upon the earth distress of nations with perplexity."

Dr. Talmage says of the violent classes of our day. "He owns nothing but a knife for a universal blood-letting, and a nitro-glycerine bomb for universal explosion. He believes in no God, no government, no heaven, no hell, except what he can make on earth. He slew the Czar of Russia; keeps Emperor William of Germany practically imprisoned; killed Abraham Lincoln and William McKinley; would put to death every king and president on earth, and if he had the power, would climb up until he could drive the God of heaven from his throne—the universal butcher. In France it is called Communism; in the United States it is called Anarchism; in Russia, Nihilism. That last is the most graphic and descriptive term—it means complete and eternal smash-up. It would make the holding of property a crime; it would drive a dagger through your heart, apply a torch to your dwelling, and turn over this whole land into the possession of theft and lust and rapine and murder."

A Philadelphia lawyer writes: "The national debt of [illegible] indemnity incurred for war purposes, and wrung from the sweat of the people, has reached the inconceivable total of twenty-three thousand million dollars. If one is to measure the interests of man by his expenditures, then surely the supreme passion of civilized Europe in this twentieth century is war, for two-thirds of all the revenues that are drained from labor and capital is devoted to paying merely the interest on the cost of past wars, and the remaining third to all objects whatsoever.....If these preparations for war, which cover our waters and our lands, mean anything, they indicate that civilized man is on the verge of a cataclysm, of which he is apparently as unconscious as were the people of Pompeii on the last fatal day of their city's life, when they witnessed with indifference the ominous smoke curl from the crater's mouth. Our age has sown, as none other, the dragon's teeth of standing armies, and the human grain is ripe unto the harvest of blood. It needs but an incendiary like Napoleon to set the world on fire."

If we add the labor strifes, gigantic trusts, lawlessness, the few with all the wealth, the many with scarce the necessaries of life, we will see the whole of society ready for upheaval.

"The World to Come and the Life Everlasting," is the name of a book of over 400 pages. The title page describes it as a Symposium of Writers on eternal life from the Bible Basis, and is selected from the works of a goodly number of Bible Students who have written during the past few years. It is compiled and published by Bro. John C. Woodruff, of Elizabeth, N. J., of whom it may be ordered. The paper and print are excellent, as is the durable cloth-binding. The price is $1.00, and considering the work as a whole it is very low, and we urge all who need a book on this subject to procure one without delay.

Report.

Dear Restitution:

Having recently had the pleasure of a visit to the mountains of Virginia, and communion with the little body of believers near Browntown, I feel much encouraged "to earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered to the saints." After a very pleasant stay of two months in the city of Washington, I went to Bentonville, was met at the station by a son and daughter of Sister Cook, at whose house I was kindly entertained that night. Early the next morning Brother Jackson Updike drove over and took me to his home, where I was kindly welcomed by his good wife and other members of his family. The scenery was beautiful, the air pure and invigorating. I never had a more pleasurable drive, though the road was rough and ran zig zag among the mountains. We arrived at Brother Updike's in time for meeting, there I had the pleasure of being introduced to Brother Boyer and wife from the Shenandoah valley, and of hearing Brother Boyer discourse on Bible subjects in the forenoon and again at night; and felt that it was good to be there. After the morning service Brother Boyer and wife, Sister Updike and I repaired to the pleasant home of Brother Ashby Updike's to dine, and such a dinner I had never seen since ante bellum times when in old Virginia colored servants ruled in kitchens and mistresses in parlors. My old friend and sister in the faith S. P. Morgan was the assistant Martha of the occasion. After a separation of forty-one years I was delighted to meet her again, still fighting for the truth. I was baptized by her husband, N. J. Morgan, in 1861, have never had any church home, but while sojourning with friends, seeking a mansion in the skies have held on to the faith. I had the pleasure of associating with several families while at Browntown, and my impression is that they are the healthiest, happiest, and most hospitable people I have ever met. I hope to meet them all in the kingdom.

L. W. HORNER.

Dear brethren, one and all:

It gives us comfort to read the testimonials and Scriptural letters from [illegible] in-law, has been a subscriber for 20 years or more and of course it is one of the family. Without it we have no preaching. I have not heard a sermon by one of our brethren for two years. We are down here in Independence, Kansas, alone, not another family of our faith. There are two churches near us, the M. E., and the Christian. We have been here six months, we go to their churches some and we have not heard but one sermon to which we could say, "Amen," and it was a surprise to us. It came from the lips of the Christian preacher who took his text from Luke i. 32, 33, and I can truthfully say that it was ment in due season, and justice to the Word of God. He told the people that he would let God be truthful and all men liars. That the notion that is so prevalent that men have immortal souls and go off somewhere at death is not true. God has never promised the saints anything but the earth. They will let us have their church free, but I have nothing of this world's goods to pay a preacher. If Brother Crowe, or some one would come there is a good field open here where the truth has never been preached. Would like to have W. H. Wilson come this way on his western trip.

Poetry.

Dwelling in the Light.

Dark who will in the valley below,
I go up into the sunshine;
Free and warm and glad in its play,
Life and light are in every ray.
Bearing to brighter and brighter day;
Let who will in the valley stay,
I go up into the sunshine.

Mists are down in the valley below,
Shadows and clouds wave to and fro,
The rivers co-creeping sluggish and slow;
The very winds have forgotten to blow;
Dear it who will in the valley below,
I go up into the sunshine.

Down in the valley dread fullness feel;
The pulse moves with a measured beat;
The senses are sleep-dumb and numbed;
The soul is lulled by an opiate sweet;
Let who will to the valley retreat,
I go up into the sunshine.

On the golden summits the morning sings
Like a glad bird planing her radiant wings;
The torrents flash like living things;
Sparkling and forming the violet springs;
Every bright drop like a joy-bell rings,
Away up there in the sunshine.

There in the veins the life-currents flow;
The heart with fervor is all aglow;
Tempted calls the mild breezes blow;
The soul like a warrior would go;
Stay who will in the valley below,
I go up into the sunshine.

Short Sermons. No 30.

"He opened not his mouth." This and many other wonderful things were foreseen and foretold of Jesus of Nazareth seven hundred years before he was born. One of God's old prophets was permitted to foresee and tell of the trial and sufferings and death and burial of that good man, Jesus of Nazareth. Read Isaiah liii. In this chapter is portrayed the sufferings of our blessed Master, which was fulfilled literally at Jerusalem. And how any honest hearted man or woman can read this chapter and the record of its fulfillment as given in the New Testament, and remain an unbeliever, is a mystery to me. He was falsely accused, buffeted, spit upon, and shamefully mistreated yet he opened not his mouth. He is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he opened not his mouth. Here is abundant evidence that his claims were just—that [illegible] the truth, so no more silently endured such treatment. And what could prompt a bad man to undergo such treatment? When he was brought before the powers that be, and falsely accused, he was calm and meek as a lamb. And he bore our griefs and carried our sorrows. He was despised and rejected of men. He endured all this shameful treatment of this blind, wicked mob, in such a meek, quiet and god-like manner that God his Father approved and accepted of his offering. And when his enemies saw and heard the wonderful things that occurred, some of them feared greatly, and said, truly this was the Son of God. I would plead with all who may be bothered over some things in the Bible, and feel a little doubtful over its claims, to go now and read again carefully this wonderful third chapter of Isaiah. And then turn and read the three last chapters of Matthew's gospel, and mark the fulfillment of this wonderful prophecy. And be no longer faithless, but believe and do, and live you may. This opportunity will not always be yours.

Then again we would be pleased to draw something practical out of this lesson. All the Master's teaching and examples are not mere chance, but are designed for our good. And if we profess to follow him we must do as he did, or else we are not his disciples. When the Master was brought before the powers that be, and falsely accused, he knew what was in the heart of his blind enemies, and when to speak, and when to not speak. How wise and good he was. The truth often provokes and enrages silly folks, and makes matters worse. This is why the wise man has said that a soft answer turneth away wrath. And observation teaches me that if a soft answer fails us, then we must do as the Master did, Keep still and open not our mouth. And if we can't do this, then we are at fault and need working over. And if we fail to overcome self, and our hasty tempers, then we will fall of the crown. And our life will be a failure. If these common sense remedies fail, then I would suggest and recommend the old woman's remedy for madness and constant fretting and growling, Fill the mouth full of cold water and hold it five minutes, and it will cool the head and quiet the tongue, and will work wonders for us. The old woman who tried it was led to say, "I did not know there was so much virtue in water." I often commend this remedy to those who can't hold their silly tongue, but am sorry to say few will try it. Oh, how much trouble and heart aches might be missed if people would only fall in line and practice this common sense remedy, or do as the Master often did, Keep the tongue still and open not the mouth. Let us consider him who set us many good examples, and who endured such contradiction of sinners against himself, lest we faint in our mind and grow weak.

Probation in the Age to Come.

It is believed and taught by Advent Christians, that the coming of the Lord puts a stop to probation; that beyond this event there is to be no extension of mercy to any of Adam's race. They teach that he is coming for the specific purpose of saving the church and destroying all not found within its pales. There may be some among them belonging to the rank and file who do not so hold. This seems so from the questions which appear in the editorial columns of their papers from time to time touching the subject. The liberty of asking questions is granted, but not that of presenting opposing arguments. Answers are given by the editors. I think their preachers to a man reject the doctrine of probation in the next age. If there is an exception, I have not learned who he is from the reading of their papers. They take special pains to place the subject on the program prepared for each recurring mid-winter Conference, annually held in the city of Boston; assigning the discussion of it to one of their ablest men, who, in the judgment of his believing audience, settles the question in the negative, beyond controversy.

In spite of systematic opposition and all efforts to keep down the doctrine or prevent its spreading, its adherents today are quite numerous and include some of the most gifted of men in professed Christian churches, who have come to the conclusion that the prophecies must be construed literally; and so, teach that beyond the epoch of our Lord's second advent nations in the flesh will exist, be subject to the rulership of this heir to David's throne and share the blessings of his beneficient reign; that individually men and women will be allotted the opportunity of forming characters in accord with the will of God, and so be entitled to eternal life. Apart from these representatives of this view, as found in the popular churches therein today a church or body of believers that is to a man holding and promulgating the doctrine of probation in the age to come; believing that the coming of the Lord is not alone for the salvation of the church, and to mark the beginning of a brief reign of vengeance on all else, unrelieved by any element of mercy. To this body of believers I belong. While we hold several important truths in common with the Advent Christian Church, the doctrine above stated is a living issue between us and them—not as a subject of wordy contention and quarrel, but one, we on our part, wish to press upon them for reconsideration and investigation—a question viewed from our standpoint involving the integrity of the Scriptures themselves, and making void many of the promises of God. They of course believe our view to be utterly false and for this reason pernicious, subversive of the truth. This accounts for their systematic and studied opposition to it. With this conviction, it is but natural that they oppose it in real earnest. Of their mode of meeting the arguments adduced in proof of the affirmative, I cannot speak so favorably. In the words of Melancthon they "play tricks with the Word by a fanciful interpretation." This will appear as I proceed to give the argument on the affirmative. There are prophecies and promises which carry both Israel and Judah, as the natural seed of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, over in the next age, the age to come. The only difficulty is in making the selection from the great mass of Scripture which crowds upon my attention as proof. Establish the fact that these two houses of the chosen race have made to them by Jehovah promises of blessing and prosperity which are to be theirs subsequent to their final captivities and punishment, then you will have probation in the age to come, as a foregone conclusion. Our Advent opponents know this, hence their determined opposition to the regathering and re-nationalization of the two houses. At this point there comes into play a string of groundless assertions such as "God is done with the Jew;" as such "Nothing remains for them as a nation," "As to the ten tribes many of them went back to the land when Judah returned from Babylon, and the rest were absorbed by the nations among whom they were held as captives, and thus lost beyond the possibility of identification and recovery"!! These are bare assertions, destitute of proof, and might be harmless if the destiny of the two houses had been left as matter of conjecture, but these assumptions are in the face of plain promises, and therefore pernicious, being subversive of the truth. Turning to the 37th chapter of Ezekiel we find God's clearly stated purpose in reference to the two houses set forth. 1st, the union of these is shown in type by the union of the two sticks in the hand of the prophet: followed by language explanatory of the symbolic action and descriptive of the regathering and forming into one nation the two houses or kingdoms under one king, never to be divided into two kingdoms any more. 2nd, They will no more defile themselves with their idols, nor with any of their transgressions. God declares here in plain terms that "he will cleanse them," and regard them as his people and be their God. This rendering of obedience to him in walking in his judgments is not to be temporary as witnessed in their past history down to their final captivity. They will no more do as they had done. And because of this changed character and relationship they will dwell for ever in the land given unto Jacob, and be under an everlasting covenant of peace which God has promised to make with them. All this shows, in the face of confident assertions, that God is not done with either Judah or Israel. Both houses are remembered in promise, whatever may have been the enormity of their national guilt. How presumptious and daring, and even sinful to contradict what is here written. The last verse shows also the existence of other nations over in that blessed era of Judah's and Israel's reunion, and these nations will know and bear witness to the marvelous blessings bestowed upon Israel. Hear the language of the text: "The heathen (nations) shall know that I the Lord do sanctify Israel when my sanctuary shall be in the midst of them for ever more." Then according to this prophecy there will be a chance for both Israel and other nations besides. Probation then belongs to that coming age as a prominent element of the divine operations. "Tricks of fanciful interpretation" applied to this prophecy will not work. It is Judah, Israel and the nations of which things are here affirmed—merciful and gracious things. It is not the church; to so teach is to make foolishness of this otherwise plain prophecy. Now do not say its fulfillment took place at the return from Babylon. One man, quite prominent as a writer and author in his day, once said this, but he said little else on this prophecy, for the good reason that the less he said the better for his reputation as an expounder. "It looks Babylonish" as this same writer said, does not settle the question. Any intelligent man who is not over prejudiced can see at a glance that this prophecy did not meet its accomplishment at the return of the Jews from Babylon. The Ten Tribes did not return at that time, but were off in Media where they were placed by Shalmanezer, or passing through the gate of the Caucasus in their westward march, preparatory to being "sifted among all nations." Amos ix. 9. There was no union of the two houses at the date of Judah's return. If the union had been brought about when Judah went back from Babylon then there would have been from that time down to the present an Israelitish kingdom in existence in the land promised to the fathers, a kingdom reigned over by one styled David and the people cleansed from all their pollutions, and living under an everlasting covenant of peace. Here is a clearly revealed chance for Israel after the flesh.

The Wisdom of Saloomoon. Chap. 3.

1. But souls of justified ones (saved folks) are in God's hand and a dissolution test (the touch-stone trial) shall not touch them.

2. In the eyes of the thoughtless they have seemed to have died, and their departure hath been accounted a calamity and their going away from us a crushing blow; but they are in peace.

4. For even if in the sight of men they have been cut off, their hope is full of deathlessness (immortality).

5. And having been chastened a little they will have received great benefaction; because God hath tried them and found them worthy of himself;

6. As gold in a furnace hath he proved their value, and as a whole burnt-offering of sacrifice hath he accepted them.

7. And in an appointed time for their visitation will they flame up, and like sparks of fire in stubble will they run through.

8. They will judge nations and control battles (church-peoples); and their lord will reign as king for the ages to ages.

9. Those who trust in him will understand truth, and the faithful in love will patiently wait for him, because grace and mercy is there for his elect ones.

10. But the irreverent as they have reasoned will have a penalty to pay, those who have disregarded the justified one and stood away from the Lord.

11. For the one who despiseth wisdom and chastening-instruction will be wretched and their hope vain, and the results of their weary toil undiscernible, and their works profitless.

12. Their wives will be heedless and their offspring wicked, their genesis accursed.

13. Because blessed happy is the unpolluted sterile woman who hath not known a marriage-bed in error; she will have fruit in a visitation of souls.

14. And a eunuch who hath not transgressed law with hand nor inordinately desired wicked things against the Lord—for unto him will have been given a choice grace of faith, and a more desirable allotment in the Lord's inner-sanctuary ("holy of holies").

16. For a truly renowned fruit is there for good painful labors, and the root of its thoughtfulness is infallible.

16. But offspring of adulters will be unperfected, and seed from the marriage-bed of an evader of law will have vanished away.

17. For even if they become long-lived, they will have been accounted for naught, and their old age will be dishonorable in last experiences.

18. And if they come to an end quickly, they will have no hope, and in a day of discrimination for value no comfort.

19. For the endings of an unjust generation are hard to bear.

Comment.

This chapter is so unmistakeably Messianic in its general and specific import that it seems hardly necessary to call attention to it and the doctrinal teaching and "first principles" are exactly in accord with the New Covenant assertions of Christ himself and his apostles, and "the hope of immortality" here emphasized is constantly asserted by Paul as "the hope of Israel." What Paul says of the glory awaiting the virgin and the faithful eunuch is also in exact accord of this teaching of this chapter.

Paul and Peter also use the same words descriptive of the result of the final judgment upon the wicked—"the dissolution-test" or "the fire test" or "the touch-stone trial" or "the Geenna judgment"—"seeing and vanishing away" or in general phraseology "the second death." The living in torment as a result of the final judgment is borrowed from heathen mythology and is absolutely unscriptural, and unsupported by the teaching of the Old or New Covenant Scriptures in their integrity.

Some Reasons Why I Can No Longer Believe the Year-Day Theory.

1. Because it changes the meaning of language, a thing which would not be tolerated for a moment in law, science, or literature.

2. Because there is no record in the Bible of a predicted time being fulfilled on the yearday scale. Every recorded fulfillment has been literal.

3. Because there is no rule or means given for distinguishing "prophetic" from "literal" time.

4. Because the passages, Num. xiv. 34; Ezek. iv. 46, which are claimed to teach the theory, do not teach it. Those passages not carrying the sense put upon them, the symbolism in them applying only to that particular case, and every period mentioned in them having transpired literally; the symbolism had no farther, or general application.

Does any one believe that the three periods predicted by Ezekiel after the 4th Chapter, namely 40 years, xxix. 12, 7 months xxxix. 12, are "prophetic time," and if not, why not? And if these periods of Ezekiel are not symbolic, far less are the periods of Daniel and John, in neither of whose writings is any authority given for calling any time symbolic.

5. Because Daniel has given two examples of how he reckoned time, each literally, Dan. iv. 25–34; ix. 2.

The fulfillment of the 70 weeks proves them to be weeks or 7s of years. It is assumed, 1st, that these weeks are weeks of days, 2nd, that they are not real days but symbols of years. Weeks or 7s of years were used to measure Jacob's servitude and absence from home, Gen. xxix. 27–28. The same measure is used upon Jacob's anti-type, the nation of Israel, to measure their punishment and absence from their land, Dan. ix. 24, which will end with their "time of trouble, Jer. xxxvii. 7; Matt. xxiv. 21, as did Jacob's, Gen. xxxii. 6–29. The measures run two 7s of years to Jacob, ten 7s to Israel in Babylon, seven times 10 7s to finish the transgressions.

6. Because "prophetic time" is an invention, used to conform a few prophetic periods to the "historical" system of interpretation. Did Jonah sit down to wait 40 years for the fall of Nineveh? or did Christ rise after three years.

7. Because the theory makes additions of words and ideas to the Scriptures, 2300 days (years.) 1260 days (years,) notwithstanding the awful words of Dent. iv. 2; Prov. xxx. 6; Rev. xxii. 18, 19.

8. Because the theory assumes that man may determine when God does not mean what he says.

9. Because the theory is unsupported by Scripture, grammar or history.

10. Because "for the first four centuries the days were interpreted literally, a mystical meaning of the 1260 days then began.

Walter Brute first suggested the year-day theory in the end of the 14th century." J. F. & B. on Dan. viii.

11. Because the confusion and disappointments due to following this theory has discouraged the study of prophecy, increased scepticism, and is largely responsible for the dense and alarming ignorance and unbelief of prophecy which is met in pew and pulpit.

Our Letter Drawer.

Dear Restitution:

We are still firm in our views of the faith once delivered to the saints, and although we are alone here, in that faith, we are still trying in our weak way to keep our light burning. Not long ago we had a talk with a neighbor about the coming King. He seemed interested, but could not help but believe we were already in the kingdom. He placed great emphasis on Col. i. 13, and for his benefit we would like for some of the brethren to give us a talk on that passage.

Yours, watching and waiting for the kingdom.

Ella Deffenbaugh.

Brother Underwood:

Enclosed please find money for the renewal of The Restitution, which gives me so much pleasure in reading. We enjoy the good letters from the brothers and sisters. Please remember my wife and myself in your prayers.

Yours, in hope of eternal life.

A. J. Miller.

Brother Underwood:

I am located at Tissie, Wharton Co., Texas, on the Southern Pacific R. R., or better known here as the Galveston, Harrisburg and San Antonio Division on the Sunset Route to California. Any one of the brotherhood coming this can stop off with me and have a good visit. This is what is called the "Gulf Country," about sixty miles from the Gulf, from which we have a good, bracing breeze most of the time. We have very little winter here, hardly ever freezes the ground. Nearly all kinds of vegetables do well here. Pears are the most reliable fruit. Peaches do fairly well. Strawberries are a pretty sure crop if attended to. Sweet potatoes can be raised in abundance. With good will to the brotherhood, I am your brother.

John S. Arnold.

Dear Brothers and Sisters in Christ:

I could hardly get along without The Restitution. It has so many good sermons and so much good advice and kind letters from the dear ones scattered all over the land. May God bless The Restitution and keep it pure, is my prayer.

Your Brother in Christ.

B. J. Woods.

Dear Restitution:

I would rather go without my food than the dear, old Restitution. It is such a help to me. It is next to the Bible. I love to read its instructive articles, the well-spring of treasure. I am very blind, but the dear Lord still permits me to read a little. I love to read the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ. I love to think that the time is near when the Lord will set up his kingdom and rule in righteousness.

In love of the truth.

Mrs. E. J. Rathbun.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

Paul says that we should take heed lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief and departing from the living God. My prayer is that every one who has taken the all-saving name Jesus upon themselves through baptism in earnestness of the heart, may overcome and be faithful unto the end and have a good entrance into that glorious kingdom. I ask an interest in all your prayers and may the grand and glorious day soon come that will bring the Messiah and the gathering together of all the saints in his eternal kingdom. May I be accounted worthy to be among the faithful ones.

Your Sister in Christ.

Ellis Jackson.

To the Household of Faith, Greeting:

A few days ago I handed a copy of The Restitution to a gentleman, requesting him to read it, that he would find some good things in it. To my surprise and pleasure I had the paper returned to me this morning by his wife, with the request of three months subscription and a copy of "Scriptures Opened." I have taken "Second Advent" papers for 40 years, and during all that time never permitted one of them to be destroyed. It is to me like destroying food from the table. Many years ago I gave tracts and papers to host men. One day I made the acquaintance of a believing brother, who had raised eight or ten believers in his village, and inquiring as to how he first came into the truth, to my surprise he told me he found a tract on a canal boat one day that gave him the start. It may not have been one of my distribution, but it might be so. Behold what a growth a single seed may produce. Jesus says pertaining to the days we are now living in, "And great earthquakes shall be in divers places, and famines and pestilences; and fearful sights, and great signs shall there be from heaven." Thus far this year has already fulfilled the first of these, "earthquakes" and the present weather conditions over the earth indicate the presence in the immediate future of famine and pestilences, both of which have already begun. Are we not then to look for these, to be followed with "fearful sights and great signs from heaven?" Esdras, who drew his wisdom or inspiration from the prophets says the end is marked by "earthquakes and uproars among the people." We are having a share of the latter in this section just now. We are evidently nearing events when "men shall faint and breathe out their lives for fear, looking at the things that are coming on the earth." Let us "lift up our heads and rejoice for our redemption is near."

Your Brother, in Jesus.

Announcement.

The Seventeenth Annual Conference of the Church of God, in the State of Nebraska will be held D. V. at St. Paul, Nebraska, beginning September 5th and convening till the 14th inclusive. Some very able speakers are expected to be present. The brethren and sisters of St. Paul will kindly care for all sisters and brothers who will attend, so it will not be necessary to take bedding. Brethren and sisters, in this time of turmoil and conflict we need your presence to encourage one another and your help with the meetings. We must have a good attendance to obtain success. Many weak and weary ones may faint by the wayside while if only encouraged by your presence and word of comfort they may find strength to hold fast to the truth and be found worthy of an intrance into the kingdom of God; so each and every brother and sister please make an extraordinary effort to attend and make this meeting an exceptionally successful one.

Your Sister.

EMMA ELTON, Sec.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God in Indiana will be held at Argos, beginning Friday, Sept. 5th and continue over Sunday. Argos is well located, being on the Nickel Plate road east and west, and the Lake Erie and Western road north and south, making it easy of access to most of the brethren. At this meeting the main business of the year is to be done, and new officers chosen to take charge of affairs. It is therefore of importance to the work that there be a good representation of the different organizations throughout the state. We feel that no urging should be necessary, but that each brother and sister who can ought to make an effort and attend and take part in the deliberations of the business sessions, enjoy the sermons and other meetings and each help to make it a success. Our last meeting at Antioch was one of the best ever held in the state, and there is no reason why this coming gathering should be less pleasant and profitable. It is our intention to try and arrange a programe which will be published in due time. We expect to begin business at the first of the meeting, so it will be vital to the success of the work that you be on hand at the beginning. The Lord's cause needs you each one to do his part. Will you not willingly give the three days to Him? Officers of churches, please see that your organization is represented so the plans for next year may be fully reported to you by your own members.

SMOKING STUNTS THE GROWTH.

Whatever difference of opinion there may be upon the advisability of smoking for men, there is none as to its pernicious effect upon boys. It affects the action of the heart and reduces the capacity of the lungs. Young men who are being trained for athletics are not permitted to smoke by their trainers, because, as they say, "it is bad for the wind." The argument that will appeal most forcibly to your boy is that smoking will stunt his growth. It has been proved that youthful smokers are shorter and weigh less than their comrades who do not smoke. Cigarettes are particularly injurious. Nicotine, the active principle of tobacco, is said by chemists to be, next to prussic acid, the most rapidly fatal poison known. The tender tissues of a growing boy cannot absorb even a very small quantity of it without most injurious results.—Ladies Home Journal.

It requires quick hearing, sharp observation, and good memory to know always a friend's peculiar ring of the house bell, although there is, no doubt, an individuality in that as in every other human act. Not to be able to do this is not a proof of dullness in a child or man; and when done by a cat is worth noting. A lady in Boylston Street, in this city, had a cent which for years always left its rug and went down the stairs to the front door when its mistress rang, to meet her, if the doors of the room were open; but it took no notice whatever of the ring of anybody else.

There is a vast difference between that wisdom which is "earthly, sensual, devilish," and that wisdom which is profitable to direct, which "is from above," and is "first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality, and without hypocrisy." The former wisdom leads to perdition, and the latter leads to the kingdom.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LI. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, SEPTEMBER 10, 1902. NUMBER 34.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

"Tell Jesus."

Is there a shadow resting on thy brow
Caused by the daily cares that none may know;
Trials which little though they seem in one,
Often o'er thy life as water frets the stone?
Tell Jesus.

Is there a chord within thy aching breast
More sensitive to pain than all the rest,
That oft is struck by cruelty and wrong,
Until like a wound it [illegible] long?"
Tell Jesus.

And does thy spirit grieve o'er doubts and sin
Thick clouds without and dreary clouds within?
Poor tempted one, there is an eye above,
Marking thy daily with a pitying love.
Tell Jesus.

And when dark waves of tribulation roll
In wild and surging billows o'er thy soul,
Oh, think, amid the tempest's might, of One
Who cried, in that dark hour, "Thy will be [illegible] done;"
Tell Jesus.

And do'st thou mourn in solitary mood,
Sighing because thou art not understood:
That in the world there is no spirit tone
To reach the sacred music of thine own?
Tell Jesus.

Oh, may this thought sustain thee in thy grief,
Though earthly sympathy give no relief,
Yet there is One who holds from courts above
To sound all depths of human woe and love.
Tell Jesus.

What We Believe. No. 15.

The Church of God advocates "a holy life as essential for final salvation." A close inspection of this statement will show that the Church of God holds that our "final salvation" is a matter of hope and not of present enjoyment, and depends upon a manner of "life" or conduct which is holy. That this position is well taken is clear from a number of Scriptures, of which we will give the following as examples. Paul says in writing to the Romans, that "we are saved by hope: but hope that is seen is not hope; for what a man seeth, why doth he yet hope for? But if we hope for that we see not, then do we with patience wait for it." Rom. viii. 24, 25. Here we have the following points:

1. We are saved.

2. This salvation is "by hope." We both desire and expect it because it is a matter of promise and is provided for.

3. We do not yet "see it;" it is not a present possession.

4. Hence we "with patience wait for it."

Elsewhere (xiii. 17) he told the brethren that "now it is high time to awake out of sleep: for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed." That salvation approached or came "near" when they believed; but now, later on, after some years of experience, it was "nearer" than at first. Yet, though nearer, it had even then not fully arrived. They, Paul included ("we"), were still preparing and "waiting" for it. He wrote to the Philippian "saints" (Phil. i. 1), "Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling." Phil. ii. 12. These persons had, as the Romans, accepted the "call" to be "saints" (Rom. i. 7), yet it was necessary for even these "saints" to "work out their salvation," and this work was to be accompanied with "fear and trembling." All of which would be entirely useless and uncalled for if persons obtain "final salvation" as soon as they become "saints" by obedience to the gospel.

This renders ineffective at once the contention put forth by some very zealous people that they can be and are so completely saved in this life that it is impossible for them to be saved any more at any time. This misapprehension is due to a failure to take into account all the evidence bearing upon the question of salvation. The Bible not only tells us what salvation is or will be, but also what we are to be saved from, as well as when this salvation is to be enjoyed. It is certainly true that this salvation must be inaugurated in the present life, the preparatory steps must be taken, the conditions must be understood and complied with; but if at any time the "saint" relinquishes his vigilance, if he "neglects so great salvation" (which is certainly possible, or such "neglect" would not be warned against, Heb. ii. 3.) his "final salvation" goes by default. This shows how "essential" a "holy life" is to final salvation.

At what period of time will this salvation be accomplished? The apostle Peter wrote to "the "scattered strangers" that having been begotten to a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, to an incorruptible and undefiled and unfading inheritance reserved in heaven for them, they were "kept by the power of God through faith unto (eis, toward, in the direction of, with a view to) salvation," and this salvation is "ready to be revealed in the last time." 1 Pet. i. 3-5. This "last time" can be no other event than the appearing of Jesus Christ, which believers are so constantly admonished to be looking for. However, we are not confined to such inferences, though well grounded, but he ve the apostolic statement that "Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many: and to those who look for him will he appear the second time without sin unto salvation." Heb. ix. 28. Thus then:

1. Christ was offered once for the sins of many at his first appearing.

2. He will appear a second time.

3. This time without a sin offering.

4. Unto salvation to those looking for him. These are those living "a holy life." Yet there is another question demanding consideration, What is the "salvation" which is "ready to be revealed in the last time," and which Christ will bring to those looking for him? It was announced to Mary that she should call her Son Jesus, "for he will save his people from their sins." Matt. i. 21. But why save them "from their sins?" What undesirable quality attaches to "sin" from which "salvation" should be desired? We can not escape the fact that certain consequences attach to sin. "The wages of sin is DEATH." Rom. vi. 23. "The soul that sinneth shall DIE." Ezek. xviii. 4, 20. Now, Jesus came to save men from their sins that they might be saved from death. This salvation from sin pertains to the present life; the "holy life," so "essential" to "final salvation," must be lived now. Then, when Jesus comes the second time, he will save from the power of death and the darkness and gloom of the grave his sleeping ones, those who have "fallen asleep in Christ" (1 Cor. xv. 18), "the dead in Christ" (1 Thes. iv. 16), clothing them with incorruption (1 Cor. xv. 53, 54), the living changed from mortal to immortality (1 Cor. xv. 52; 1 Thes. iv. 17), and thus is mortality swallowed up of life (zoe). 2 Cor. v. 4. This salvation, when once brought about, will be so effectual, so "final," that those so saved, will, like Jesus, be no more subject to death or corruption (Rom. vi. 9; Acts xiii. 34), and will be "like" the "glorious body" of "the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ," for whom they have been "looking" from heaven. Phil. iii. 20, 21; 1 Thes. i. 9, 10. Everlasting life, exemption from death and all its attendant evils, an entrance into the everlasting kingdom of Jesus Christ, and the unbroken companionship of the Savior as the ages roll—this is the "final salvation" for which a holy life is essential.

"A holy life." Holy means "separate, set apart." That from which "saints" (holy ones) are "separated" is sin; to to whom they are "set apart" is God. Sin is unholy, and as long as it adheres to persons, they are separate from God (Isa. lix. 2), and cannot please him; for he is holy. That a holy life is possible with the ample provisions made by God, must appear to all. Yet I do not wish to be understood as pleading for the kind of holiness that is responsible for the saying in "religious" gatherings, "For six years I have had no need of saying, Forgive us our trespasses, because I have committed no sin to be forgiven." When we wish to know what "a holy life" is we need but look to Jesus, who was "holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners." Heb. vii. 26. He not only suffered for us, but also left us an example that we should follow in his steps. 1 Pet. ii. 21. Those sufferings "for the kingdom of God" (2 Thes. i. 5), previously referred to, have a purpose. We are not naturally "fit for the kingdom of God" (Luke ix. 62), but must be fitted for it by a course of training, which requires the closest attention to the lessons to be imparted in the school of suffering. Saints, holy ones, are not made on short notice or in a few minutes. True saints are made in the crucible of suffering, where their faith is tried and their patience put to the test; and only when they come to be approved shall they receive the crown of life which the Lord has promised to those that love him. Jas. i. 12. Having endured the trial, and being thus approved, they shall be "found unto praise and honor and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ." 1 Pet. i. 7.

God has not only commanded us to be holy, but has also made it possible that we, though sinful and mortal, can be made holy, in that he, "according to his divine power, hath given us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him who hath called us to glory and virtue;" hath given us exceeding great and precious promises; that by these we might be partakers of the divine nature if we escape the corruption that is in the world through lust." By his power he drew us, by his power keeps us through faith, and by his mighty power we shall be transfigured into the likeness of the glorious body of Jesus Christ.

"Now unto him that is of power to stablish you according to my gospel, and the preaching of Jesus Christ, according to the revelation of the mystery which was kept secret since the world began, but now is made manifest, and by the Scriptures of the prophets, according to the commandment of the everlasting God made known to all nations for the obedience of the faith, to God only wise, be glory through Jesus Christ forever. Amen."

A. H. ZILMER.

Who are Without Hope?

"I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope." 1 Thes. iv. 14. When death approaches we naturally shrink from it, and haste to use every means at command to postpone the day of its visitation. There are those also who would like to view grim death as a friend, in place of its being an "enemy," and hence sing:

"'Tis but the voice that Jesus sends to call us to his arms."

And yet, judging from their manifestations of grief when the socalled "voice of Jesus," has called one of their number "to his arms," we should judge that the aforesaid "voice" was very unwelcome among them.

Paul enjoins the "brethren," not to sorrow as those do "which have no hope." He presents reasons to them to show that while they do sorrow, yet it need not be as poignant as those "which have no hope." Paul recognized the fact that there are those who die "which have no hope." The phrase "no hope" closes the door to everything, it is utter hopelessness, a complete blank, nothing whatever to look forward to.

WHO ARE THEY?

Personally I would not dare to answer such a question, and hence appeal directly to the Word of the Lord for an answer, and in giving this I feel that the judgment is authoritative. Refer to Eph. ii. 11, 12, and you will learn that are spoken of as "having no hope, and without God in the world." Consult the context as to what is meant by the phrase "in the flesh." They are spoken of as "dead in trespasses and sins," were "children of disobedience," their 'conversation' was in regard to "the lusts of the flesh," they fulfilled "the desires of the flesh," they were by "nature children of wrath, even as others." All such Gentiles were "Gentiles in the flesh," and continued to be so, until they ceased to be "aliens from the commonwealth of Israel."

See Rom. viii. 9: "So then they that are in the flesh cannot please God." Those who live in such a manner which "cannot please God," must, of necessity be hopeless, because if you "live after the flesh, ye shall die." This refers to something more than natural death, because all experience that death, yes, even those also who live after the spirit. It means a death in which there is "no hope."

[illegible] are not in the flesh, but in the spirit if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you. Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his," (Rom. viii. 9) and being "none of his," is "without Christ." (Eph. ii. 11), and if "without Christ he is one of those who "have no hope." There is no hope out of Christ.

See Rom. viii. 11: "But if the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you." None of these need sorrow "even as others which have no hope."

This Spirit cannot dwell with "Gentiles in the flesh," and hence while they remain such they "have no hope." The carnal and spiritual mind are antagonistic the one to the other; the one is death (eternal death), and the other life (eternal life). For to be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace. The death of the carnal minded person cannot be hopeful. And all who are not spiritually minded, must be classed with the carnal minded, there is no middle ground. Why? "Because the carnal mind is enmity against God: for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be." Rom. viii. 7. When a person dies while in "enmity against God," and "not subject to the law of God," such have no hope."

[illegible] which are the children of the flesh, these are not the children of God; but the children of the promise are counted for the seed."

The class of people who shall remain in the congregation of the dead could certainly be spoken of as those "which have no hope." Prov. xxi. 16, calls attention to those who wander out of the way of understanding, concerning whom it is written: "They shall remain in the congregation of the dead." Psa. xlix. speaks of those who trust in their wealth, etc. in place of the living God, concerning these it is written: "They shall never see light." This also is a finality, over their grave is written "No hope."

Concerning unbelievers Jesus says: "He that believeth not the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him." John iii. 36.

Jesus ought to know, and he has distinctly declared that all who die in unbelief "shall not see life." And if they "should not see life" any more, then it is said of them they "have no hope."

Again, Jesus said: "Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of Man, and drink his blood, ye have no (zoe) life in you. Whoso eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, hath (zionion zoen) eternal life; and I will raise him up at the last day." This Scripture makes clear cut to who have or have not hope. Of the one class it is said, "Ye have no life." They have the natural (psuche) life, which is nothing more enduring than the life of the brute creation, hence the death of all such must be as "the beast which perisheth." Of the other class it is said they have (zionion zoen) life eternal, and of all such, he says, "I will raise him up at the last day." It is only those who secure "the life," during the continuance of their (psuche) life which have hope of a resurrection "at the last day." It is wrong to assert otherwise when Jesus has so plainly said they "shall not see life." Do not many disciples of today say, "This is a hard saying; who can hear it?" But this is no harder than the words of the King, the Lord of Hosts (Jer. li. 57) who said, They shall "sleep a perpetual sleep and never wake." This is of the same force as Jesus' words, "shall not see life."

Let us with unswerving fidelity stand by God's Holy Book, perfectly independent as to where it leads.

Conference Report.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God, of Indiana, met in Argos on Sept. 5, 1902.

At 2:00 p. m. met in Business Session with President, A. R. Underwood in the chair. The meeting was opened with singing, reading of the 12th of Romans and prayer by Bro. Woodward.

After a short and [illegible] talk by the President on the object of the meeting, the roll of churches was called showing the following to be represented by delegates, viz: Argos, Antioch, Bracken, Burr Oak, Plymouth, Rensselaer and South Bend.

The minutes of last meeting were read and adopted as published in THE RESTITUTION.

The report of the Evangelist Board showed that Bros. Zilmer and Smith had each done some work as evangelists. Olio, Inwood, Lake Village and South Bend having been visited. The amount paid out of Evangelist Fund was $111.55.

The report of the Literature Committe showed that $18.92 worth of literature had been sold during the year.

The Ministers' letters from the local churches were referred to the following committee:—E. K. Barnhill, L. B. Boggs and B. F. Taylor. In speaking of granting ministers letters of commendation, it was suggested that Sec. 7, of the Constitution be amended. Bro. Halstead was asked to prepare such amendment to be presented at the Saturday meeting.

"The needs of the State" was taken up and discussed. Many good suggestions were made on this part of the work.

The following committee on nominations was appointed: E. K. Barnhill, Wm. Railsback and R. C. Railsback.

On Friday evening the Social Meeting was led by Bro. G. W. Smith. This was truly a good, spiritual meeting as several old soldiers of the cross were there and testified of their great love of the truth and the number of years they had been working for it. There exhortations were truly inspiring and ought to cause each one to take new courage to go on fighting the battles for truth. At 7:45 Bro. Wince gave a sermon on "The Divine and Human Side."

Saturday the Business Meeting was called at 10:00 a. m. The Treasurer reported that $486 36 had been paid into the treasury and that $182.55 had been expended, leaving a balance of $303 81 on hand.

Brother Halstead presented his amendment to the Constitution. Such amendment was adopted and took effect immediately upon its passage. Section 7 formerly read: "Letters of commendation may be granted to ministers of the Word, upon the recommendation of the local church to which such applicant belongs. Such letters shall be for one year, and may be rescinded at any time for sufficient cause, by the conference, if in session, or by the Executive Board, when the Conference is not in session." Said section now reads, "Letters of commendation may be granted to Ministers of the Word, but when not satisfied as to fitness of applicant, from want of information or otherwise, then to be granted only on recommendation of the local church to which the applicant belongs. Such letters may be rescinded at any time, for sufficient cause, by the Conference, if in session, or by the Executive Board, when the Conference is not in session."

Letters of commendation were granted to the following persons:—A. H. Zilmer, F. L. Austin, D. T. Halstead, G. W. Smith, J. F. Wagoner, J. S. Hatch, S. T. Hook, H. F. Cordill, R. C. Railsback, J. L. Wince, A. Drew and D. E. VanVactor.

A letter was read by Bro. Zilmer from the Berean Society of Ill., to the young people of Indiana, wherever there are three or more to organize and meet regularly for Bible study. It was moved and carried that the Conference commend the sentiments of such letter.

The subject of ways and means was again taken up. It was decided that the Conference recommend that the Evangelist Committee employ Bro. Zilmer to go into the Evangelist field as soon as possible. It was also decided that the Evangelist work be in the main among the churches.

11:00 a. m. a sermon by Bro. O. R. L. Crozier. Brother Crozier being quite feeble, was forced to sit, but for all that could be plainly heard. His subject was "The Sanctuary and its [illegible]

2:00 p. m. a sermon by Bro. Halstead, subject, "Childhood and Manhood."

3:15 Business session. The following committees were appointed:

On literature, E. K. Barnhill, A. H. Zilmer and S. Roxana Wince.

Auditing, S. Osborne, D. E. VanVactor and A. C. Roberts.

Ways and means, J. L. Wince, J. F. Wagoner, R. C. Railsback, E. K. Barnhill, H. F. Cordill.

The committee on nominations made the following report which was accepted and officers elected as named:

President, A. H. Zilmer.

1st Vice-President, J. L. Wince.

2nd Vice-President, Miss Mattie Benjamin.

Treasurer, T. O. Taber.

Secretary, Mrs. Lydia A. Railsback.

The Evangelical Committee, W. D. Thompson, T. O. Taber, E. K. Barnhill.

7:00 p. m. Social Meeting led by R. C. Railsback.

7:45, Sermon by A. H. Zilmer, subject, "What Must I do to be saved?"

Sunday, 10:00 a. m. Social Meeting led by S. W. Woodward, followed by a sermon by himself, subject "The Judgment."

2:30 p. m. Sermon by F. L. Austin.

3:30, Communion service conducted by J. L. Wince.

7:00, Social Meeting led by F. L. Austin assisted by M. A. Woodward, who followed this service with a sermon on "The Hope of The Church."

These meetings were all good, and we can truly say, "It was good to be there."

We had the pleasure of meeting a number from other places and it did us much good to have them in our midst. Among those from a distance were, B. W. & M. A. Woodward, of Dutton, Michigan; O. R. L. Crozier and wife, Grand Rapids, Michigan; G. Alexander & S. D. Fahrney, Chicago; P. H. Bouk and Mr. & Mrs. Platts, Fonthill, Ont.; Mrs. M. Halsted, Mrs. B. Harris and Miss Mattie Benjamin, Rensselaer, Ind., and Mrs. Etta Fry, Huntington, Ind.

May the good work go on and may we have many more such good meetings as this one, and we truly thank the people of Argos for their kind hospitality and the welcome they gave us in their homes.

MRS. LYDIA A. RAILSBACK, Sec'y.

Brethren, What Say You?

For some time, since the edition of my pamphlet, "The Reasons of my withdrawal from the Evangelical Association," 25 pages, was exhausted, I have had requests for it from different parts of the country. Now, I wish to say to the brotherhood that if I can be assured that it can be disposed of, I am willing to have another edition printed. How many will you take and pay for at five cents per copy? Don't send money, but write me a postal, stating number of copies you want, and as soon as I see that it can be done, will print an edition that will meet the demands. Please answer me at once. My Address is Plymouth, Ind.

Yours, In the Faith.

A. H. ZILMER.

"The World to Come and the Life Everlasting," is the name of a book of over 400 pages. The title page describes it as a Symposium of Writers on eternal life from the Bible Basis, and is selected from the works of a goodly number of Bible Students who have written during the past few years. It is compiled and published by Bro. John O. Woodruff, of Elizabeth, N. J., of whom it may be ordered. The paper and print are excellent, as is the durable cloth binding. The price is $1.00, and considering the work as a whole it is very low, and we urge all who need a book on this subject to procure one without delay.

M. JOBLIN, SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, SEPT. 17, 1902.

Do noble things, not dream them all day long.

WE feed on what we read, but digest only what we meditate upon.

HE who can suppress a moment's anger may prevent a day of sorrow.

JESUS said: "My judgment is just, because I seek not my own will, but the will of the Father who sent me." John v. 30.

HAPPY is he who does his work conscientiously and then without anxious questionings or haunting fears leaves the result to God.

SOLTH said: "God rewards every degree of sincere obedience to his will with a further discovery of it." "I understand more than the ancients," says David, "because I keep thy statutes."

WE have received a communication from Sister Clara Chaffee regarding the Mission she was running in Grand Rapids, Mich. It does not seem to us that the brethren generally will be benefitted by hearing more regarding this matter. Those in Michigan understand all about it, or can learn easily if interested. We will just say that Sister Chaffee carried on the work till in July, when it was closed for want of support, and she needed the rest from the severe strain she had been under.

ONE of the "signs" that is to mark the closing of this age is "earthquakes in divers places." The first six months of the present year show a large list of earth disturbances in many places. The list includes Nova Scotia, Austria, Mexico, Portugal, Russia, Turkey, Italy, Guatemala, Iceland, West Indies, Spain, France, Greece, the Cape Peninsula, Chile, Sicily, India, and the United States. When we take notice that in our own land the shocks have been felt in places widely apart, from Florida to Washington State, down the Pacific coast to Mexico, and through other sections; and when we consider that the other nations mentioned have been like ours shaken in more than one place and more than one time, we get an idea of how very unsettled the physical world is. This is a "sign."

A JEW writing of the seeming determination of Russia to gain a place in the Holy Land that will enable her to manipulate affairs to suit her aims, says: "Why does Russia give our people no rest! By torture and oppression she has driven us from our own land (Russia), while she advances with determined greed upon the only refuge which in the fulness of time seems to be marked out for the children of the chosen seed. Her apparent resolve to establish herself as the paramount power in the ancient land of Israel, is today the greatest menace to the hopes of every Jew for the future of his race. Palestine, under the quiescent rule of the Turk, had always the appearance of merely waiting for the day of restoration. But in the clutches of a virile despotism like Russia, which has already shown such desperate hospitality (?) to the chosen people, the fulment of these hopes would seem to be indefinitely postponed. Nevertheless, we hold to our faith in the God of our fathers, that the oppressor shall not greatly triumph. For, it is written in our prophetic books of him that, he shall fall on the mountains of Israel."

Hell.

Dr. Channing said,—"The Word hell which is used so seldom in the sacred pages, which in a faithful translation would not occur once in the writings of Peter, and John, which we meet only in four or five discourses of Jesus, and which all persons acquainted with Jewish geography know to be a metaphor, a figure of speech, and not a literal expression—this word, by a perverse and exaggerated use, has done unspeakable injury to Christianity. It has possessed and diseased men's imaginations with outward tortures, shrieks and flames,—given them the idea of an outward ruin as what they have chiefly to dread,—turned their thoughts to Jesus as an outward deliverer, and thus blinded them to his true glory, etc."

WE learn from an English exchange that Silas Henn who was well known to some of our readers through his writings, died at his home in Dudley, Worcestershire, a short time ago, aged 80 years.

Pause and Think.

"Our trials we would often.
If we'd only pause and think,
Tears would not flow so often
If we'd only stop to think.

"We would not proceed so blindly
If we'd only pause and think,
We would never speak unkindly
If we'd only pause and think,
We won't cause unrest to borrow,
Darkly clouding each tomorrow,
We could banish worlds of sorrow
If we'd only pause and think."

An Inspired Prayer.

To the prayer of David in Psa. lxxiv. 20, 21, we say amen, and amen. It says, "Look attentively to the covenant (Young's Trans.) for the dark ages of the earth have been full of habitations of violence; [for long ages]. Let not the oppressed turn back ashamed; let the poor and needy praise thy name. Arise, O God, plead thine own cause. Remember how the foolish man reproacheth thee daily. Prov. xiv. 31. Forget not the voice of thine enemies; the noise of thy withstanders is going up continually."

This is in beautful harmony with what he has elsewhere said. The covenanted blessings that were all his desire (2 Sam. xxiii. 5;) and the declaration that that Son promised him shall judge the poor of the people, and save the children of the needy, and break in pieces the oppressor, so that the righteous shall flourish, and abundance of peace would obtain so long as the moon endureth. Psa. lxxii. 4-7. This is the comforting outlook of all who like the Psalmist rely upon the fulfillment of the covenant, to right up the wrongs of the earth. May the morning without clouds soon dawn, is our prayer; but if it tarry we must patiently wait; and in the mean time there is plenty to do.

Unprofitable Servants.

"In Luke xvii. the Lord Jesus teaches a lesson which is worthy of our consideration. In verse 10 we read, "When ye will have done all these things which are commanded you, say, we are unprofitable servants,—we have done that which was our duty to do." What our duty is may be learned from the Scriptures. Some may have one talent, some two, some five. But whether one or more, they must be increased, else we are not fulfilling our duty. Jesus illustrates this in the parable of the talents. Matt. xxv. In this parable we read that the servant with one talent had not used it; he was therefore called an

and was cast into outer darkness. But Jesus calls those who have done their duty, unprofitable servants as well as those who had not. Why? Simply because they have done only what they are told to do. They by the goodness and condescension of God, have had the truth imparted to them. The privilege has been conferred upon them of becoming sons of God. Rom. ix. 16 reads: "It is then not of him that willeth, nor of him that runneth, but of God that showeth mercy." This mercy God hath shown to all who are in the truth, for they became a chosen generation, a holy people, having now obtained mercy." 1 Peter ii. John puts this matter plainly before us in the words, "Behold the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God. Those in this position are promised at the commencement of their new life in Christ, a gift if they do their duty. "The gift of God is eternal life." This gift is conditional upon the servant of God doing his duty. If a man sows to the flesh, he gets his wages, for the wages of sin is death. If a man sows to the spirit he will receive as a gift,

WHAT MANNER OF LOVE

ETERNAL LIFE.

It matters not how long a man may have been doing his duty in the truth, he is only fulfilling the contract he made when he accepted the truth. If he would be saved, he must endure to the end. Jesus gives us an illustration of the one gift to be given to all who do their duty, in the parable of the laborers. Matt. xx. 1-14. Although some of the laborers had wrought only one hour, yet they received the same at the end of the day as those who had worked twelve hours, just because they had all agreed to receive the penny at the end of their work. We read that some of the

at being treated thus, but they were told that no wrong had been done them, for had they not agreed to work for a penny? It may be said that this is only a parable; true, but Jesus largely taught by means of parables. Are the servants of God to expect any recompense in this life for doing their duty to their Maker, who has called them out of nature's darkness into his marvellous light? Nay, rather the opposite, for whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth," and this for a purpose, to cause them to be

"PATIENT IN TRIBULATION."

James says: "Count it all joy when you fall into divers temptations, for blessed is the man that endureth temptation, for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord has promised to them that love him." This, then, is the reward in store for all who patiently endure to the end. Although all God's servants are in one sense unprofitable servants (for he can do without any of them), yet if they do their duty in the truth, the crown of life is theirs. The fact of there being no reward in this life should always be remembered, so that it may not cause us to nor give up the race, for only they who by patient continuance in well doing, seek for glory, honor and immortality will receive the gift of eternal life at the hands of the Lord Jesus. It is true that some will have greater honor in the kingdom than others, but this is a matter entirely apart from the gift God gives to all who serve him faithfully, that is the gift of eternal life. Respecting the

in the kingdom, we read in Luke xix. that some are placed in authority over ten cities, and some over five cities. And Daniel speaks of this (xii. 3) thus: "They that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament, and they that turn many to righteousness, as the stars, for ever and ever." The Apostle Paul also in 1 Cor. xv. 15, speaking of the resurrection, says, "There is a glory of the sun, a glory of the moon, and a glory of the stars, for one star differeth from another star in glory." And when Jesus was asked to reserve the two seats at his right and left hand in the kingdom, he replied, "It is not mine to give, but it is for whom it is prepared of my Father."

Early Church History on Missions. No. 2.

[Bro. J. F. Gellelty sends us some articles he has had published in the Denton Journal on the above subject. Our readers will bear in mind that originally the articles were written for a secular paper. In this way our brother endeavors to get truth before the people, and reaches some that could not otherwise be induced to read such matter.—ED.]

"Many shall come in my name, saying, 'I am Christ,' and shall deceive many."—Jesus of Nazareth.

Properly speaking, the towering political engine that ground Europe for long centuries, and which goes by the name of Christianity, had nothing in common with the little humble communities that during the first century came together for the worship of the Holy One of Israel and for mutual edification and spiritual culture. That vast and imperial machine should be named Constantinism, after its founder, the first "Christian" emperor of Rome. Of this blood-thirsty ruffian, Witherow writes: "He appears to have adopted the Christian name for expediency rather than from conviction and, stained with the kindred blood of wife and son and nephew, it deserves the name 'saint,' bestowed in solemn adoration by a venal church." At first this royal hypocrite "spoke like a lamb" and endeavored to propitiate the various warring elements of sectarianism and bend them to his use, but later he threw off the mask and showed them that he meant business. "Understand now by this statute," says he in an edict issued in 332, "ye Novatians, Valentinians, Marcionites, Paulians, ye who are called Catephygians, and all ye who devise and support heresies by means of your private assemblies with what a tissue of falsehood and vanity. * * Ye haters of truth and life in league with destruction. * * Why do I bear with such abounding evils, why not strike at once at the root of so great a mischief! * * We give warning by this present statute that none of you henceforth presume to assemble yourself together. We have directed accordingly that ye be deprived of all the houses in which you are accustomed to hold your assemblies, and our order in this respect extends so far as to forbid the holding of superstitious and senseless meetings, not in public merely but in private houses or any place whatever. * * All your houses of prayer, if such be worthy of the name, he made over to the Catholic Church * * and no facility be left for future gathering."

That was the day when human liberty fell, and it lay dead for over a thousand years, and only by centuries of war and rivers of blood has that liberty been partially restored. Under the patronage of this pious cutthroat things went well in the "Kingdom of God." The scribes, Pharisees and hypocrites sat at the entering of gates, and all had to receive their mark. When one had the misfortune to be born he passed beneath their sacred spell; if one married they said the rite; when he died they had to lay him in the "hallowed ground." To be excommunicated was to be outlawed and ostracised beyond the pale of even the very lowest society. And the grip of that dead hand extends all through the intervening ages to us of today. It is relaxed somewhat after the long conflict, but the weight is still heavy, especially in some portions of the world; witness, the siege of the dragon in Count Tolstoi's case. Old and feeble, said to be dying of a cancer, yet the ukase has been issued forbidding him burial with their "sanctified." There was Mr. Chauncey Depew, our own genial senator. He wanted to take a wife in France, and to satisfy all the requirements, sacred and secular, had to marry the same women three times. And to come nearer home, more's the pity, it was reported not long ago that they had caught another "Seventh Day Adventists" in Kent county and jailed him for breaking the law of Constantius.

Gentle reader, don't lay the flattering unction on your innocent soul that the Ethiopian has changed his skin or the leopard his spots.

But for long, long ages there was not a fighting chance against this stupendous institution. It took the field, it swept everything, reducing all within range to the lowest level of superstition and ignorance. No, not all. There was just one exception, for the promise to Israel was, "Though thou passest through the rivers they shall not overflow thee; when thou walkest through the fire thou shalt not be consumed." And so they took the doomed, obstinate, "Christ killing" Jew and shut him up in the Ghetto. They placarded him with a yellow patch, one on his breast and one on his back. They pulled his teeth, cropped his ears, chopped his fingers, hung him up by the thumbs, stretched him on the rack, broke him on the wheel, burnt him alive, and then, when, to save his "never-dying soul," they pressed the crucifix to his fainting lips, he spat on it and died. God be thanked for the witness of the eternal Jew! Humanity stands up straighter for his kinship, and his turn comes next.

Now, this great institution for its propaganda sent out various kinds of "missionaries." There was the bare-footed friar, for instance. His function seems to have been to inquire into the internal regulation of Christendom. Tramping about from place to place in affected poverty, but armed with all the awful authority of the Vicar of Christ, even princes trembled before him. If any one was suspected of heresy he was called up to judgment and asked if the "transmogrification of consubstantiation was equivalent to the divine approbation of sanctification"—or something to that effect. If the heretic said yes, he was probably beaten to death, if he said no he was burnt alive, if he scratched his head and said nothing they administered the "cold water cure" and several other kinds of cure that even General Smith didn't know anything about, and when a "confession" was made they let him have what they thought he needed anyhow. You talk about history being dull reading, and may be it is so, but it wasn't dull making. Nobody died of ennui if the "good gray friars" could help it. If any one thought at all he didn't even die in bed. Then the Holy Church had other missionaries in her service. There were the knights errant, big, bull-necked ruffians that Sir Walter Scott and other romance writers have gilded with the glamor of their genius. These steel-clad bullies were the ignorant tools of this conspiracy against human liberty and rights. They delighted in war and blood. A heretic or a Jew was a proper thing to stick. When let loose they "painted the towns red" with rapine, rape and murder. Compared with them, the rowdiest frontier ruffians are gentlemen and scholars. Here and there, of course, there may have been exceptions, but the devastation of their tracks indicates what the rule was. These fellows were the natural progenitors of the militarism under which Europe groans today and which we in America are working up to. It would have been a dreadful thing for humanity if these "missionaries" had had their own way over all the earth. Fortunately, in the good providence of God there arose another set in support of the Mohammedan Church who were just about as tough citizens, and the two sets succeeded in wearing themselves out on each other.

Then as time wore on the Reformation rose in the west, and people began very dimly to see something like light—a light that made the darkness visible." Then the light thickened, sweeping away to the west, even to the hills and glens of far off Scotland, where the royal Stewarts, the fag-ends of bigotry, endeavored to Constantinize the Puritans and covenanters and hunted them with horsemen, driving them hither and thither, ultimately sending them over to found a haven of refuge for the oppressed on this side of the Atlantic. Previously, however, there had been "Christian missionaries" that had visited this continent. There was Christopher Columbus, for instance, who received a commission from their divine highnesses, Ferdinand and Isabella, to discover the "marvellous province of Cipango" and convert to Christianity the "Grand Khan." Failing in that he did the next best thing he knew—proceeded to reduce the natives in the West Indies under Spanish sway, "captured the cacique Caonabo and the rest submitted. Five ship loads of Indians were sent off to Seville (24 June, 1495) to be sold as slaves." (Enc. Brit.) This was going out into the highways and hedges and compelling them to come in. Then there were the bloody Christian exploits of Cortez and Pizarro, who succeeded in establishing that particularly belligerent brand of crusty anity that obtains south of the Gulf of Mexico.

Obituary.

Died, Aug. 21, 1902, at her home in the vicinity of Browntown, Warren Co. Va., Mrs. Susan Cooper, in her 84th year. She was a good, kind neighbor, a fond and loving mother, whose examples of quietude and piety were worthy of imitation. She leaves two sons, six daughters and many grandchildren to mourn the loss of one whose place none other can ever fill. She united with the Church of God at this place many years ago, and she has ever adorned her profession with a meek and contrite spirit, which is, in the sight of God, of great price. She was the most aged member of the church at this place, and while we feel the loss of such a worthy member yet we sorrow not as those who have no hope. Why not? Because it is written, "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord, on such the second death hath no power; for the trump shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and the living shall be changed; then it will be said, Death is swallowed up in victory. Thanks be to God, who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."

The writer had the pleasure of visiting Sister Cooper frequently during her illness. She bore her sufferings with great Christian fortitude, and patiently waited the Master's call. She now sleeps in Jesus, waiting the resurrection morning.

SARAH F. MORGAN.

Died, at his home near Gauda Springs, Kansas, William Hadicke.

He was born in Woodford Co. Ill., Dec. 19, 1850. At the age of 21 he settled in Sumner Co. Kansas, where he lived till the time of his death. On the 3rd day of May 1874, he was married to Minerva Williams. To this union five children were born. On August 18, 1902, Brother Hadicke yielded to the summons of death, his age being 51 years, 8 months and 18 days. He left behind, his wife and four children, all of whom were at his bedside except Elmer, the eldest son. The family present listened to his last will and exhortation. Appendicitus was the cause of his death. He only lived a short time after the operation was performed. Every thing that loving hearts and hands could do was of no avail; only to watch as he passed the threshold from light into the shades of night. Another loved one has fallen; death has claimed him as his own. Sister Hadicke has lost an able companion, the children a noble father, the church a noble and worthy brother, and the community at large one of its noblest and most honored citizens. Oh, how our hearts go out in sympathy with this lonely family; God bless them collectively. Brethren near by should not fail to call on them. Brethren far away that have made their acquaintance send a good word; it may serve to lighten the burden. Please don't forget this. The writer of this event by request read the 1 Cor. xv.; also Job xiv. 14 from which we talked to a vast throng of people. The largest procession said to be that ever was known at Gauda. This was positive evidence of his worth as a Christian man. Yes, all that ever came within the circle of his acquaintance found in him the true principles of manhood with all the principles of the highest life of Christianity. We tried from the Scriptures to show that Bro. Hadicke was dead; it took all he had to pay the claim, even his very life, and what was common to him was the condition of all. Now, will Bro. Hadicke live again? This question has been asked thousands of times. Now, Job seemed to know that he would live again. In Job xix. 25-27, just what he would do, what he knew. Then the man that suffered and died is to live again. He will come from the land of the enemy just so sure as Jesus died and rose again; just so sure will the great harvest be. Christ is the first ripe sheaf; the garnered ones must be like him when gathered. As Christ gained the seat at his Father's right hand by obedience, now those desiring eternal life may have it by obedience—a holy life. Bro. Hadicke was solid, built upon the promises of God, that in the ages to come he would take the right to rule. All power is in his hands; he will unlock the prison house and let the captives go free. He will wipe away all tears. Let us get ready to swell the mighty throng when he comes to reign. Now as we part let me say to those dear children, Seek first the kingdom of God, it will fit you for any position in life that is honorable; by so doing you may lead, influence others, lead them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God. The same power that made our dead Savior live will make our brother live. If we would enjoy eternal life we must be found doing the Father's will. May the King in all his glory soon come. Amen.

Poetry.

"Let Me Love Thee."

Let me love thee. Thou art claiming
Every feeling of my soul,
Let that love, in power prevailing,
Render thee my life, my all.
For life's burdens, they are easy,
And life's sorrows lose their sting,
If they are carried, Lord, to please thee,
If their pain, thy smile should win.

Let me love thee. I am gladdest
When in loving thee the best,
For in sunshine, or in sadness,
I can find in thee a rest.
But without thee, life is failing,
Treasures, its choicest flowers,
Taken are its gifts eternal:
Left, its empty, passing hours.

Let me love thee. Love is mighty,
Swaying realms of deed and thought.
By it, I shall walk uprightly,
I shall serve thee, as I ought.
Love will soften every sorrow,
Love will lighten every care;
Love, unquestioning, will follow,
Love will triumph, love will dare.

Conference Report.

Pursuant to notice given in THE RESTITUTION the Conference convened at Oregon, Ill., Wednesday evening, Aug. 27, 1902, with Bro. Jas. W. Wilson presiding. Sermon by Bro. A. H. Zilmer.

Without giving the report in detail I will state the programme was carried out as given, with but a very little change. By request Bro. Geo. Brown delivered a discourse on "The Resurrection," which was considered very good indeed.

On Friday a collection was taken for the benefit of a sister who lie in a Chicago hospital, which amounted to $23.37 and the Conference Board contributed out of their general fund $10.00, making in all $33.37.

A motion was passed unanimously that all brethren from other States and Canada be voted members of this Conference and with authority to take part in its affairs, which they did with pleasure and with profit to the Conference.

The next in order was the reports of the Secretary and Treasurer which was accepted. The statement of the Treasurer showed that on September 1, 1901, cash on hand was $83.88 and the collections to date were $361.16. The cash on hand now is $92.27 and the money paid out was $352.77.

Bro. Crowe reported as State evangelist that he had worked from Jan. 15th to June 15th, 142 days. Wages and expenses $256.00. He also collected $87.75. Had visited Harvey, Lanark, Plum River, Oregon, Atkinson, Moriah, Annapolis, Walnut, Marshall, Hazel and Ripley. Had immersed quite a number, but your Secretary did not learn how many, therefore cannot give it.

Good reports were given by Adeline, Antioch, Chicago, Dixon, Lanark and Oregon.

Bro. Lindsay gave the following report for Oregon: balance from last year $16.22; free will offerings $301.05; collections $26.18, from Swedish Sunday school $11.00, making in all $356.45. They paid out for the year to the sick $4.25; Evangelist, $18.50; Conference hall $2.75; lights $8.75; janitor $11.75; incidentals $22.55; note and interest $268.00; fuel $13.20; balance on hand $6.70; making a total of $350.45.

The number of sermons by the local minister 48 and by the same at other places 21. No. of sermons by Bro. W. L. Crowe 14, by Bro. G. M. Myers 3, programmes by the children 2.

Besides these services Bible class work has been held twice each week during the year and the Sunday school work has been regularly held. Baptisms, Henry S. Stroh, Sarah Eychaner and Ella McGarvie. In addition to this number two were immersed on Sunday morning by Bro. Lindsay; Lillie Myers of Oregon and Miss Eaton of Mt. Carroll, Ill.

Bro. Bouk of Fonthill, Ontario reported a number of active members at that place.

The following are the Board of Management: S. D. Fahrney, 1123 S. Hoyne St., Chicago; Martin Aslakson, Chicago; E. F. Gesin, Forreston, Ill., J. M. Glotfelty, Lanark, Ill.; and L. Booth, Ashton.

Ways and Means committee: J. M. Glotfelty, E. F. Gesin and L. Booth.

Printing Committee: Jas. W. Wilson, S. D. Fahrney and M. Aslakson.

Evangelist Committee: E. F. Gesin, L. Booth and J. M. Glotfelty.

It was decided by vote that a Ministerial Certificate be issued to Sister Anna E. Drew in behalf of the Bereans. Also to the following brethren: C. P. Graham, Jas. W. Wilson, W. H. Wilson, Samuel Wilson, A. J. Eychaner, S. J. Lindsay, W. L. Crowe, L. E. Conner, Z. E. Brant and A. H. Zilmer. As there were not enough blanks they were not all issued but will be as soon as more are procured.

By motion the Evangelist Committee was empowered to employ and direct where he should work.

It was also decided by motion that the next Quarterly Meeting of the Board be held at East Plum River, the date to be determined by Bro. E. F. Gesin and J. M. Glotfelty and they to notify the other members. A resolution was also passed for Bro. Jas. W. Wilson to conduct a series of lessons in exposition of the Book of Revelations, in weekly installments, for the use of adult Bible class, similar to the lessons given at this Conference, and that the Editor of THE RESTITUTION be requested to publish the same.

Thus another Conference meeting has passed, and of one fact we are fully persuaded, that it was of no less interest than those of former years, for all whom we heard make mention of it said that it was the best ever held. Another thought was expressed and according to the sign of the times is manifestly true and that it is that we will not be permitted to attend many more before the coming of the Master "who will come with power and great glory" to reward those who hold on to the "faith once delivered to the saints."

Judgment.

According to Webster, "judgment is the act of determining, as in the courts of law what is comfortable to law and justice; also the determination, decision, or sentence of a court, or of a judge, the mandate or sentence of God as the Judge of all."

In order that judgment may be rendered there must be a transgression of law. In civil affairs a crime is committed; if the offender pleads guilty, sentence is pronounced, if not he is given a trial to prove his innocence or guilt and then he is sentenced. Judgment must be executed upon him unless he obtain a pardon. If a pardon be granted, he is restored to his former condition. In God's great court are found the same steps that are necessary in secular affairs.

God made the man and his help and placed them in the garden giving them a law of action with the penalty of disobedience—"And the Lord commanded man, saying, of every tree of the garden thou mayest eat; but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it; for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." Did Adam abide by the law? The record is that the woman gave to her husband and he did eat; and Paul says, "And Adam was not deceived." 1 Tim. ii. 14. Then he willfully disobeyed. When the Lord asked him if he had eaten of the forbidden fruit he replied, "The woman whom thou gavest to be with me she gave me of the tree and I did eat," he plead guilty. The penalty was already affixed to the crime so nothing remained but the pronunciation of the sentence, "Dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return." Adam was driven out of the garden, forfeited his right to the position he occupied, and returned to the dust out of which he was formed.

A prominent educator once said that five years of training would overcome one hundred years of heredity, but Carlyle says, "To train a child you should begin with his grandfather;" and Bible authority is stronger still for Adam entailed his sin and sentence upon the whole human race by the law of hereditary transmission. "Therefore as by the offence of one judgment came upon all men to condemnation; even so by the righteousness of one the free gift came upon all men to justification of life. For as by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, so by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous." Rom. v. 18, 19. "Wherefore, as by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned." Rom. v. 12. For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead. For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." 1 Cor. xv. 21, 22. From the reading, we all rest under the curse, all are sinners by birth, judgment has passed upon us already and we must serve the sentence unless a pardon can be procured.

The pardon is the thing with which we are now most concerned, for without that we will inevitably "sleep a perpetual sleep and not awake saith the Lord." If the thought of a pardon is brought to view in God's plan, then the steps necessary for obtaining it are prescribed. As we find them, they are in brief: faith, repentance, baptism, and a continuance in good works. A pardoned criminal is restored to his former place in the state. Adam was given absolute dominion—he was in fact a king, and if the great Judge sees fit to grant a pardon to any one, that individual will be a king and a priest. "And hast made us unto our God kings and priests, and we shall reign on the earth." Rev. v. 10. This is one phase of judgment and it is vitally important that we recognize it, because if we do not we will never seek a pardon.

Another phase of judgment brought to view in the Bible is concerned with the pardon process and it is also very important that we understand this subject. When we have turned our faces toward Jerusalem that alone is insufficient, but the path of travel is plainly indicated and success is assured by following directions. "And besides this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity. For if these things be in you and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ." 2 Peter v. 8, and the latter part of the 10th verse reads, "For if ye do these things ye shall never fall." During life we are being continually judged as to whether or not our acts conform to God's standard. "Rejoice, O young man, in thy youth; and let thy heart cheer thee in the days of thy youth, and walk in the ways of thine heart, and in the sight of thine eyes; but know thou, that for all these things God will bring thee into judgment." Eccl. x. 9. In Rom. xi. 16 we find that God "judges the secrets of men by Jesus Christ according to the gospel." Paul to Timothy in the 4th chapter bases his claim to a crown of righteousness upon the fact that he has kept the faith and has fought a good fight. Matt. xii. 37 we have this reading, "For by thy words thou shalt be justified and by thy words shalt thou be condemned." The recompense for right living comes, according to Luke, at the resurrection of the dead.

We find recorded in 2 Cor. v. 10, "For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ; that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad." This text is thought by some to teach that every individual who has ever appeared upon the stage of action will rise from his dusty bed and stand before the judge. This could not have that meaning for it would make a flat contradiction for David says Psa. i. 5, "Therefore the ungodly shall not stand in the judgment, nor sinners in the congregation of the righteous." The Catholic version reads, "The ungodly shall not rise again in the resurrection." Isaiah says in xxvi. 14, speaking of the wicked, "They are dead, they shall not live: they are deceased, they shall not rise: therefore hast thou visited and destroyed them, and made all their memory to perish." The apostles looked forward to the coming of the Lord as the time when they should receive their reward. Paul to Timothy speaks of the Lord's appearing as the time when he should receive the crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." The wicked do not love his appearing but rather look forward to it with fear and dread. Prov. xxiv. 20 reads "For there shall be no reward to the evil man; the candle of the wicked shall be put out." The language referred to in 2 Cor. v. 10, which reads, "For we shall all stand before the judgment seat of Christ" evidently has reference to the saints who will be assigned to positions which their works have merited.

These as it seems to me are the three phases of judgment brought to view in reference to the individual. First he is a condemned criminal by the law of inheritance, second he applies for a pardon—the whole of his life being required to fulfill the necessary steps to obtain a pardon—and lastly the pardon is granted by a resurrection from the dead, and he stands before the King to receive his appointment.

There is another judgment spoken of which has reference to an entirely different class of people from those already discussed. The individuals judged and found worthy, the called out ones, are to be rulers, to sit upon thrones—to be kings and priests. If rulers there must be subjects and these must be the nations upon the earth when the Lord returns. Rev. ii. 26, 27. "To him will I give power over the nations: and he shall rule them with a rod of iron." That the nations are to be judged we have further evidence. Acts xvii. 31, "Because he hath appointed a day, in which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained." David says Psalms ix. 8, "And he shall judge the world in righteousness, he shall minister judgment to the people in uprightness." Matthew describes a judgment scene in the 25th chapter, beginning with the 31st verse, "When the Son of Man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory: and before him shall be gathered all nations: and he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats." We see then that there are two classes appearing in judgment, the individual, through all the ages prior to the coming of the Lord, judged for the purpose of selecting co-workers with Christ when he comes to reign, and the nations living on the earth at Christ's return. The glories promised in the future age, through the loving mercy of God in providing a remedial system, is the reward of those who are successful in obtaining a pardon: the privilege of living under a government administered in absolute righteousness is the reward of those who stand the test in the judgment of the nations.

Probation in the Age to Come.

Probation in the world or age to come is no more untenable than probation in the present age; and that the view is in accord with God's revealed plan can be easily sustained. In the second chapter of Isaiah we find plainly set forth the existence of nations at a point of time in the future when the house of the Lord shall be established, and exalted above the hills. It is here affirmed that "All nations shall flow unto it." The prophet under inspiration says this. Those expounders who reject the doctrine of probation beyond the bounds of time in God's return hold that the prophet records in the 2, 3 and 4 verses bring the language of the peoples of the I am aware, that repeatedly inspired men recorded the false notions or thoughts of others without lending sanction to them. The devil's lie to our first parents may be taken as an example. What the devil said is one thing; putting it on record is quite another. But, knowing this to be a fact, I am not willing to concede, that because the people are here represented as saying what is recorded in these verses, that therefore the sentiment is false. Where is the proof that what these delighted and enthusiastic worshipers of Jehovah say concerning the happy state of things in the time to which the prophecy relates is false. The ground for this worshipful feeling is the condition of Zion at this period as contrasted with a former condition when it "was plowed as a field and Jerusalem had become heaps and the mountain of the house as the high places of the forest." Micah iii. 12. Jerusalem is still trodden by unholy Gentile feet and the land given in covenant unto our fathers is yet in possession of the Edomite according to his boast made many centuries ago. Ezek. xxxv. 10. Zion is not the church but the place from whence Christ will promulgate his law demanding submission to his righteous authority. Nor is the language here the utterance of the people belonging to popular churches as some have claimed. They can do little or nothing for the Zion of the prophets and as to the application of the name to these same churches it is unscriptural. The people who speak out so joyously in these two prophecies do so in view of the exalted state of the Zion of the inspired prophets and historians and in view of their own blessed privilege of celebrating the praises of the Lord at this great center of worship for all nations. The sentiment they utter is not condemned as false or as a vain boast of human lips, but on the contrary is quoted as the truth by both Micah and Isaiah, as in harmony with what they wrote about Zion, the Zion styled the mountain where the Lord of hosts shall make unto all people a feast of fat things and destroy the vail that is spread over all nations. Isa. xxv. 6, 7, Isaiah wrote "All nations shall flow unto it" and "many people shall go and say," and what they say is the echo of what the prophet wrote. "Let us go;" where? up to the mountain of the Lord to the house of the God of Jacob." Like many other prophecies this teaches the fact that nations will exist after the Lord's house has been established; and this must be subsequent to our Lord's return, for no such condition of things can possibly exist prior to that event. This Adventists believe as firmly as we do. So probation beyond the second advent must be a part of God's clearly revealed purpose. The same nations that say let us go * * * to the house of the God of Jacob also say he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths, teaches that they are afforded the chance of conforming to the Lord's will made known through instruction. The ways and the paths will be set before them by the law going forth out of Zion and the Word of the Lord from Jerusalem. The fourth verse brings to view the result of his reign, the answer to prayers that have gone up from so many devout and peace loving hearts through the ages of battles and of wars, And the Lord shall rebuke strong nations afar off, and the effect upon the hearts of these nations will cause them to cease waging war against one another No national affronts will be offered and no appeal to arms be made to settle international questions. The arsenals, armaments and navies of the world will become useless and worthless for the purposes for which they were designed. Every peace loving citizen of the various nationalities will hail with joy that blessed era of the Messiah's reign. There will be nations to feel the salutary effect of his stern rebuke in that age, and to become loyal citizens of his world wide dominion. If not why have the prophets so taught? I will have more to write along this line of thought.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LI. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, SEPTEMBER 24, 1902. NUMBER 36.

Poetry.

No Sweeter Word.

I will not leave you desolate.—John xiv. 18.

No sweeter word than this can find a tongue,
When strength and courage fail with harp unstrung—
"I will not leave you desolate"—
A precious word which poets love to sing,
The troubling and a word most comforting—
"I will not leave you desolate."

When loving friends and social joys depart,
And troubles come to overwhelm the heart—
"I will not leave you desolate."
When night is coming on that hides the sun,
And weary limbs remind you "day is done"—
"I will not leave you desolate."

Oh, blessed word! I hear it once again—
The seeress ended—as a sweet "amen"—
"I will not leave you desolate."
Lingering awhile until the Father call,
I catch the vanishing recessional—
"I will not leave you desolate."

—W. T. Sleeper.

Original.

"Staggered Not."

It is said in Rom. iv. concerning Abraham, that "he staggered not at the promise of God through unbelief; but was strong in the faith, giving glory to God." "Abraham believed God, and it was counted unto him for righteousness." ver. 4, 5, 9, 10, 22. God is the One making promises to Abraham. "The promise" here referred to is stated in v. 13, and is further alluded to in verses 14, 18, 20, 21. It comprehended heirship of the world and a multitudinous descent. From man's point of view all this would seem highly improbable. Abraham was a stranger in the land of Canaan, owning not a foot of it, and no human prospect of ever taking it either by conquest or otherwise. And as for his becoming "the father of many nations" (18), this, too, seemed improbable, if not impossible; for Abraham was now "about an hundred years old" (19), and Sarah was "past age." How, then, could they be the parents of even one child, to say nothing of nations? But it is written that "Abraham believed God;" and Sarah, too, "judged him faithful who had promised." Heb. xi. 11.

"The promise of God" underlies the faith and actions of Abraham. "He staggered not at the promise of God through unbelief." To "stagger" is "to hesitate, to begin to doubt; to become less confident or determined." When God disclosed his purpose to Abraham, the latter did not start back as if he were greatly shocked, but took God at his Word, "was strong in the faith, giving glory to God; and being fully persuaded that, what he had promised, he was able also to perform. And therefore it was imputed to him for righteousness." Rom. iv. 20, 21.

Reader, this was "not written for his sake alone, that it was imputed to him; but for us also to whom it shall be imputed, if we believe on him that raised up Jesus our Lord from the dead." Rom. iv. 23, 24. We are, or ought to be, interested in this matter. Though "not of the circumcision" we are to "walk in the steps of our father Abraham, which he had being yet uncircumcised." v. 12. What are we to believe? "The promises of God." Faith rests on promise. What has God promised to us? Are we interested in the same promises God made to Abraham? Now, do not stagger when I tell you that God, through the gospel, is making the same promise to us which he originally made to Abraham. Says Paul to the Galatians, "As many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ .....And if ye be Christ's (belong to him), then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." Gal. iii. 27, 29. That is, heirs according to the same promise made to Abraham. And this promise, according to Rom. iv. 13, was that "he should be the heir of the world," and was not to Abraham alone, but "to his seed" as well, and was obtainable "through the righteousness of faith." "By faith Abraham, when he was called to go out into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance, obeyed; and he went out not knowing whither he went. By faith he sojourned in the land of promise, as in a strange country dwelling in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise..... These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off, and were persuaded of them, and embraced them, and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims in the land." (Greek, our land). Heb. xi. 8, 9, 13. This is what with promises, by Abraham, and he believed the promise. He saw the land he was after to receive; he sojourned in it, but did not receive it. He did not expect it then, but "AFTER." If we are Christ's, we are Abraham's seed and heirs according to the same promise. Does this startle you? Did you suppose that Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob went to heaven when they died, and that you will be taken there when you die? If this is your "faith," where is the "promise" upon which you rest such a belief? And what do you do with these promises which pledge to Abraham and his seed (you, too, if you really belong to Christ by baptism), everlasting possession of the land of Canaan? Does this stagger you? Abraham "staggered not."

We are told in the Scriptures that Abraham's ancestors were religious (Josh. xxiv. 2); they were no doubt sincere in their belief, and it is presumable that Abram himself was instructed in their manner of worship, but when the call of the Most High God came to him, he obeyed, and came out. It did not stagger him when God began to unfold his purpose and state his intentions to him. He believed what God said, just as he said it, without any spiritual interpretation or figuring away of God's words. And in this faith he lived the rest of his days. Why should not we do thus with the promises of God? The earth has been promised to the righteous and the meek, "and they shall dwell therein forever," never to be removed. Psa. xxxvii. 29; Matt. v. 5; Prov. ii. 21, 22; x. 30. Here again the mind begins to stagger, and objections begin to loom up. "Too gross,"—is sometimes urged against these plain statements. "To earthly, too material!" But why not the earth, my dear child, when God will make it new, remove the curse, take away sin, destroy death, and wipe away tears from all faces? Could heaven be any more beautiful or desirable? There are promises to the righteous of possessing the earth forever, but the belief of going to heaven rests purely on assumption and inference. There is no definite promise of heaven for the children of men in the whole Bible. Reader, did you ever notice this? Did you ever ponder the meaning of this fact? Believe the promises as Abraham did. It is by the exceeding great and precious promises that we are to be partakers of the Divine nature, if we escape the corruption that is in the world through lust. 2 Pet. i. 4. Be assured that God's promises are yea and amen, and are to be "to the glory of God by us." 2 Cor. i. 20. What he has promised, he is able also to perform.

The Gospel Recovered. No. 41.

DRAWBACKS AND HINDRANCES.

"That they all may be one.....that the world may believe that thou hast sent me."

In the preceding article, No. 40, reference was made to a special "Gathering" of Christadelphians in Birmingham, England. These are a distinct group from the original body of that name. They adhere generally to the Birmingham statement of faith which was described. The occasion of division between the two bodies alluded to is the inspiration of the Scriptures, a subject which is not contained in the "statement of faith," but, as will be observed from what follows, it was a later development of the divisive spirit.

In "The Fraternal Visitor" for May, 1901 is an article by A. Andrew, London, entitled "Barriers to Re-Union." A few brief extracts will show how this subject was viewed by the parties concerned, and afford the necessary information to the reader. The article begins, "At various times during the past fifteen years there have been attempts made by brethren here and there to heal the breach made by those who, in 1885, separated themselves from us because we refused to lay down as a condition of fellowship the theory they propounded with regard to the inspiration of the Scriptures. These efforts to effect re-union have [illegible] tion that the only difficulty to be overcome was the divergence of view on the subject of inspiration, or on the question whether a particular view of inspiration should be held as a condition of fellowship. That assumption may have been a correct one during the early part of the period referred to, but as time has gone on it has become more and more apparent to brethren who have come into close contact with those who separated from us, and who have thus had opportunities to look beneath the surface, and to see the spirit operating amongst them, that there are other barriers besides those referred to, and some which, if not greater barriers to re-union, would be greater barriers to unity. There is also this fact to be noted, that, whilst the differences on inspiration are barriers to their re-union with us, the other differences referred to would be hindrances to our re-union with them, or at least to our cordial co-operation in the work they are carrying on."

What the "other barriers" mentioned by A. Andrew here may not be very apparent, but it may be mentioned that he says he tried to interest a leading brother on the other side in a co-operation for the revision of the hymn book. He received a reply, "Our presiding brethren share my opinion in regard to your suggestion, viz; that co-operation is inexpedient; if not [illegible] practicable, in consideration of the largeness and seriousness of the question which divides us. Oh! that things were otherwise," etc. In his correspondence with the brother alluded to, A. Andrew says, "I may take this opportunity of remarking that even were the difference on the question of inspiration removed, re-union of the two sections would not produce unity unless there were also a radical change in the spirit that pervades the majority of your section. The spirit of narrowness and intolerance that pervaded the body generally in former years has been very much accentuated in your section since the inspiration controversy, whilst in our section it has diminished," etc. "A brother in one of the leading meetings on your 'side' recently admitted to me that it would be impossible to make a declaration on inspiration that would represent the views of all in that meeting." He had received no reply to this, and says, "No one would welcome more earnestly than myself a re-union of those who were separated without any adequate reason, could it be brought about on a sound basis," etc.

It surely goes without saying, that if consistently carried out, this profession of A. Andrew would apply to the entire "statement of Faith," for no "adequate reason" has ever been assigned for the compilation of such a "basis" for faith and fellowship. As an illustration of this it may be noted that in describing the "Gathering" in June No. of the magazine, it is said that "there was a commendable abstention from the introduction of disputable topics.....to which such meetings offer no small temptation. The fundamentals of the truth on which all are agreed furnished ample matter for thought and for speech," etc. It is difficult for an ordinary individual to understand how it is that the spirit displayed in A. Andrew's profession, and in the utterances described as given at a Fraternal Gathering, should not also characterize the ordinary every-day existence of the Ecclesias concerned. If the motto at the heading of these articles, "THAT THEY ALL MAY BE ONE," were thoroughly realized, the "consummation devoutly to be wished," need not be long deferred. But the imperfection of our common humanity is a continual obstacle to what is right and proper.

In the "Fraternal Visitor," after giving a number of letters from brethren expressing gratification with the "Gathering," give one headed "Communication of another spirit." A brother [illegible] H. Horsman writes:—Dear Bro. [illegible]ley, On my way to business this [illegible]ng a letter was shown me by [illegible]other who was present at the [illegible] Yesterside, of which [illegible] ... Plymouth, Indiana, Sept. 24, 1902.

Turkey has granted permission for four Russian torpedo boat destroyers to pass the Dardanelles, and this being a violation of the international convention, action is expected by the other powers.

Russia warns the Sultan to give attention to the troubles in Macedonia and Albania, and see that his people are contented with the recently appointed Russian consul at Mitrovitsa in European Turkey.

There is more trouble in China. It seems that the works of Li Hung Chang live after him. Russia is claiming exclusive control of mines in Manchuria, basing her claims on documents said to have been signed by Li Hung Chang before his death.

"There is an ugly kind of forgiveness in this world—a kind of hedgehog forgiveness, shot out like quills. One who has offended, is set down before the blowpipe of their indignation, and they scorch him, and burn his fault into him; and when they have kneeded him sufficiently with their fists, then—they forgive him."

"There remaineth therefore a rest to the people of God:" "a keeping of a sabbath for the people of God," Kingdom. How sweet this assurance is to the worn and weary Christian! During that endless and unclouded day, the glorified ones will mingle in celestial activities so pure, so unfettered, so unwearying, so delightful, that the Word of God pronounces them a perfect rest,—the very thought of which makes many a child of God homesick, and makes him cry out, "Lord Jesus, quickly come."

The recently appointed French minister of Marine caused a ripple on the already disturbed surface last week by making the statement that France was ready to engage in a "holy war"—was able to defy both England and Germany—could control the Mediterranean in spite of British strongholds,—and in a strong speech sought to stir up his hearers. Of course there was no occasion for all this, so his colleagues had to apologize for him, and make excuse that he was formerly a journalist of the "red" order, and not used to being a "minister," and not careful of his words.

We see from the Jewish World that Dr. Herzl, the leader of the Zionist movement, has again been to Constantinople in response to a telegraphic invitation from the Sultan. He was treated with the greatest distinction, and throughout his stay was the guest of His Majesty. Dr. Herzl explained the standpoint of the Zionists, and formulated the conditions of a Jewish settlement in a part of Palestine and elsewhere in Asia Minor, on the basis of a charter. The Sultan did not see his way clear to grant concessions asked for, but expressed deep sympathy with the Jewish people; but Dr. Herzl is quite sanguine that in the near future the Sultan will see that it is to his interest to grant them.

As we look abroad over the world we can not well escape the conclusion that the times of tribulation spoken of in the Scriptures are already come. Governments are corrupt, the people are rebellious, industry and commerce paralyzed, order and trade languid, and individual business bankrupt. There is distress everywhere, and suffering's cry is heard the earth around. Wars and rumors of wars, famine, pestilence and earthquake, not in one place, but all over; while startling casualities thrill the hearts of men, and wickedness increases. What are we coming to? The cup of all nations is full of iniquity, wrath is laid up against the day of wrath, and the righteous judgments of an outraged God are ready to be poured out. False religions mean false Christs, and their number is on the increase. Nations and kingdoms are disorganized, and prophecy is becoming history. Seeing all these things we know that soon our Lord must come and assume the reins, that the plan and purpose of God may not fail. These things but admonish us to more vigilance and activity in the service of the Master. More of our time, more of our money, more of self,—let us rather say all of self—all I have to push on the work, for haply I may gain one more for him.

How the great God stoops down to to us when he spreads out his will for us in types of nature.

"Be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh." The Lord is coming—some time—we do not know just when—but soon, if the "signs" are read aright. We are commanded to be "ready" for his coming. It is not enough that we believe right—the right things correctly. We must then live right lives. Keep in the right path. This is not all, but only the commencement. An obligation is laid on us each to help others get ready. Do you pay for the preacher to go out and tell the gospel message? Do you send tracts and papers to relatives, neighbors, friends? How are you helping others to get ready? Who are you helping to get ready?

"A Holy Life."

A holy life is a perpetual sun shining in his strength, day after day, and shedding on all around his enlightening and warming beams. A holy life is an ever-flowing river, fertilizing its banks and clothing them with never-fading verdure. A holy life is an unfailing fountain, sending forth its gushing streams to refresh the way-worn and weary. A holy life is an endless telegraph line, stretching itself all along the devious highways of human existence, and guiding the lonely and the lost to a safe destination."

How the Worlds were Made.

"The evolutionists explain how the worlds were made in this way: Away back in the ages, there was a fire mist or star dust, which cooled off into granite, and then was shaped into mountains and valleys, and seas. Who made the first fire mist? For a great while, the evolutionists thought they had found the very stuff out of which worlds were made—a nebula of simple gas—but spectroscopes were invented, by which they found that the nebula was not a simple gas, but a compound, which had to be supplied from some other source, and so they had to shift their ground, which they have always had to do, and always will, till they recognize in the God of Israel, the Creator of heaven and earth."

The Natural Man.

We once saw those of a carnal or natural mind listening to a discourse on spiritual things, likened to a man standing upon the brow of a hill which commands the prospect of an extensive landscape. The varied beauties of flood and of field are before him; nature is clad in her richest livery; there is every variety calculated to interest and inspire; rugged rocks frown as if they would keep sentinel over the sleeping valley; the earth yields her increase, the crystal streamlet leaps merrily along, impressions of the beautiful are everywhere visible. There is just one drawback to the picture, and that one drawback is, that the man who stands upon the summit of the hill is blind. That is precisely the case in reference to the truth of God. It is there in all its grandeur; but the man has no eyes to see it."

Young Man.

Learn to say no, "no." When you are tempted, say it with a will,—NO!" When fair hands offer you the wine-cup,—say it gently, yet with unwavering firmness—"No!" If a young companion invites you to the billiard room, or the dance house. Do you think it would be well to go? No. Well, then, how will you answer him? "I—I—I think I won't go tonight." He will collar you and say, "O, come along now." If you add, with bated breath, "I was not brought up to go to such places," he will say, "Be your own man, I wouldn't be always tied to my mother's apron string; come on;" and on you go, like a dumb ox to the slaughter. A decided and emphatic "No!" which would have made your tempter feel that your self respect was touched by his proposal, would have sent him away to return on such an errand no more."

"Original Sin."

"When the Creator of the ends of the earth formed man and bade him be fruitful and replenish the earth, his object, so far as we understand it, was not to make a race whose nature made them incapable of doing wrong, but rather to form a reproductive human pair capable of either walking in his ways, or choosing a path of their own, and thereafter by showing them his will, by trial to take out from among them a people for his name. Adam when under the trial of law in the garden, chose his own way and rejected God's, thereby incurring the penalty attached to the breaking of the law under which he had been placed, by extinction of his being. This action of Adam's in transgressing God's law was sin, and when God had pronounced

SENTENCE OF DEATH

upon him he was sin-stricken. Paul, in the 5th chapter of Romans, says: "By one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin, and so death passed upon all men for that," or, as the margin reads, "in whom all have sinned." We read that the tribe of Levi, who themselves took tithes, paid tithes to Melchisedec, priest of the Most High God, while they were in the loins of their father Abraham; and it is in this sense that all the population of the earth have

SINNED IN ADAM.

Levi did not actually pay tithes to Melchizedec, for at the time the tithes were paid, they were unborn; but Abraham, in paying tithes to the priest of the Most High God, acknowledged the supremacy of God, and Levi, his descendant, coming forth from him, could not be superior to him, and therefore must have been inferior to the power he acknowledged as supreme, and so figuratively speaking, paid tithes in Abraham. In like manner all the descendants of Adam were in his loins, when he transgressed, and so by one man death passed upon all men in whom all have sinned. Sin is therefore the law of being of all they being merely extensions of him. "They are shapen in iniquity, and in sin doth their mothers conceive them." It is, however, no more their fault that they are inhabitants of Satan's kingdom of sin than it is the fault of one man that by the accident of birth he is brought forth a mighty prince in that kingdom, while another is born into it

A HUNGRY PEASANT.

All the inhabitants of the earth are by the same accident subject to the sentence pronounced upon Adam. Dust they are, and unto dust they return. The race polluted at his source only drags out a weary existence through the sustaining breath of God, in whom he lives and moves and has being. But the individuals of the race daily pass out of existence as the principle of life within them and they fade into the land of forgetfulness. Adam, by his eating of the tree of knowledge of good and evil, became aware that he was naked or sin-stricken, and felt his shame. His invention of a fig-leaf covering, instead of being a protection to him, was merely a symbol of his nakedness, and before he was mercifully thrust out of the garden, he was covered by a diviner garment. "Unto Adam and his wife did the Lord God make coats of skins, and clothed them." We say they were of the garden, "lest they should put forth their hands and take also of the tree of life, and eat and live for ever," and so perpetuate their misery and that of their offspring while the sun and moon endured. We read that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God, and it was only through death that they could ever hope to put off their

SPUTTERS SLOWLY OUT,

but under a covering symbolic of him who was to die for the sins of many, and so were enabled to approach the Father in prayer for forgiveness. God, therefore, in mercy, and in furtherance of his glorious design, thrust them forth from the garden, covered them with the skins of slain animals, and by the Word his promise to them, they were able to look beyond their returning to dust, to the time when the serpent power, the world of which Paul taught the Romans not to be conformed to, shall bruise the heel of the woman's Seed (Christ), and forward until the seed of the woman (Christ) shall bruise the serpent's head,—to the time when he shall put down the mighty from their seats and exalt them of low degree, and so by the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world, they should again, as at the first, be able to stand uncovered in the having a divine and deathless nature, the priceless gift of God. God is of purer eyes than to behold iniquity, (Hab. i. 13), and it is necessary before we can gain access to him that we should find a covering not of flesh and blood. He has provided this in his Son Jesus Christ, unto whom with a knowledge of the gospel in our hearts we can pass from sin through death, into his covering name, after which we are amenable to other laws, and are the children of the Most High God."

Notes By the Way.

The ten days Session of the Nebraska State Conference is now ended. I am not going to write a report of that Conference, (the Secretary will do that shortly) but give expression to some items of interest, and impressions I received.

The Conference was held at St. Paul, Neb., about seven hundred miles distant from Chicago. I arrived at Grand Island, Neb., (a place of about seven thousand five hundred inhabitants) at 5:30 a. m. Sept. 3, and then took a branch road of the Union Pacific, to St. Paul, about 21 miles north of Grand Island. I was met at the depot by Sister Williamson, and by her was escorted to the hospitable home of herself and husband.

The Conference opened on the evening of Sept. 5, in the Court House, where I had the privilege of speaking to them on the topic of "The Rock Foundation." On the next day the tent was set up between the Baptist and Presbyterian churches. During the day brethren and sisters from different parts of the State gathered in. Among others came Almus Adams and wife from Omaha. Brother Adams is their State Evangelist, and right here I would say that Nebraska has an evangelist second to none in the United States. He is sound in the faith, a man of good address, a fluent speaker and thorough Bible Student, and should receive a hearty support.

For ten days Brother Adams and myself daily addressed the Conference on various topics, assisted by Bro. Shults of Bassett. The interest grew day by day until the last evening, when the tent was full. By request of citizens on Sunday afternoon a McKinley Memorial Service was held, which was addressed by Bro. Adams and myself.

The Conference has strengthened their work mightily by forming a State organization of the young Bereans.

Miss Rena Gordon, of St. Paul, was elected President, Eva Mehrens, of Blair, Secretary, and John Mehrens, of Blair, Treasurer. Brother Almus Adams, State Evangelist, is Organizer. If the Editor of The Restitution, will grant the privilege, they will doubtless furnish The Restitution with a monthly Berean Column, like that of the Illinois Bereans.

One Sister was baptized during the Conference. Bro. Adams says he has had the privilege of baptizing at different times over eighty candidates at St. Paul.

As to my personal experience at St. Paul, I must say that I had a delightful time. I never found a more hospitable set of people. Everywhere their doors were thrown open to me with a hearty welcome. My greatest difficulty was to find time to get around among all who desired me to visit their homes. I stayed nights with Brother and Sister Williamson, who did all in their power to make me feel at home.

It seems to me that the spirituality of the household of faith is growing stronger, which to me is exceedingly gratifying.

Another thing I must not forget to mention is, that at no time during the entire ten days session of the Conference did any one attempt to ride a hobby. They left all their hobby-horses at home with their other toys. If we give due attention to the more important matters which pertain to the faith and hope of the gospel, and the cultivation of a higher type of spirituality, we will have no time to play with childish toys.

I am at present, (Sept. 16) resting for a few days, at the home of our worthy Brother John Siesle, and family, at Columbus, Neb. On Sept. 21, I expect to commence meetings at Blair, Neb., and then go to Dover, Minnesota.

May God bless his faithful people in Nebraska.

W. H. Wilson.

AN APPEAL.

Brethren, our Conference Board has engaged me for their Evangelist for the entire ensuing year, and to sustain the work they have instructed me to make to you an appeal. We have now pledged so far to date, Sept 1st, 1902, $217.50 for the year's work. We must run this sum up to $600.00 for the year to drive our work. We still have the assurance of $100.00 more from three brethren, thus giving us a fund of $317.50 from 16 persons. If the remaining 459 members of our working membership will send us $1.00 each, we will have more than the above mentioned amount. And if all will do this, with the amounts that will be paid by the few above this $1.00 per capita, we will have no trouble in sustaining two men in the field the entire year. Brethren, let us hear from you at once by return mail. Send us a donation of at least $1.00, and a pledge for as much more as you possibly can. The Lord has blessed you with a bountiful crop this season, and in return you should consecrate a portion of this to his cause. Address your pledges to me, and send the money to the treasurer.

Respectfully,
A. W. Darby,
Secretary and Evangelist.

Obituary.

Sister Mary Ruthbun was born in Ashtabula Co., Ohio, and died at Cedar Bluffs, Kan., July 28th, 1902, aged 81 years. Her husband, Benjamin Ruthbun, died 33 years ago. Aunt Molly, as she was familiarly called, was a member of the Church of God at Antioch, Ill., for over 20 years till her removal with her children to Kan., in 1882. She had been a great sufferer for many years, but her unfailing trust was in the Lord who would waken her, perfect and without pain at the resurrection. One by one the pioneers in our faith are falling asleep. To them it will be but a moment, but to us who remain, the time drags wearily. Let us watch lest that day come upon us and find us not ready and waiting.

Jennie Page.

Brother Underwood:

Have just been reading the report of the Illinois State Conference and note one omission which I wish to fill in. The persons baptized in Oregon during the last conference year are Henry Stroh, Minnie Stroh, Margaret Waite, Ella McDarvie and Sarah Eychaner.

While speaking, I may as well add a sentiment in behalf of Brother Zilmer's inquiry regarding "The Reasons of my withdrawal from the Evangelical Association." I have read the tract twice and can read it again with profit. To those who are doing missionary work I would say that it is one of the best little tracts that you can find to give out to your friends.

S. J. Lindsay.

Brothers and sisters in Michigan:

Are you interested in the salvation of your fellowmen? Do you believe the gospel is saving? Do you want to see the truth advancing in Michigan? or have you become selfish, worldly and think because you have the truth it is not necessary for any one else. If the coming age is full of good things for you and me, it is for others. Shall we try to convince others of it? Another opportunity presents itself—the Quarterly Conference is soon to convene at Coat's Grove. Will you be there with effort, push and money; give good and receive good. We must soon give an account of our stewardship; let us be ready. Come and help.

B. W. & M. A. Woodward.

Brethren, What Say You?

For some time, since the edition of my pamphlet, "The Reasons of my withdrawal from the Evangelical Association," 25 pages, was exhausted, I have had requests for it from different parts of the country. Now, I wish to say to the brotherhood that if I can be assured that it can be disposed of, I am willing to have another edition printed. How many will you take and pay for at five cents per copy? Don't send money, but write me a postal, stating number of copies you want, and as soon as I see that it can be done, will print an edition that will meet the demands. Please answer me at once. My Address is Plymouth, Ind.

Yours, in the Faith.

A. H. Zilmer.

Quite a number of persons to whom we addressed letters regarding delinquency on subscription have responded, and we thank you each for your prompt attention. There are, however, still a good many who have failed to make reply. We presume this is largely neglect, and not due to a desire to defraud us. We do not like to think that any one would knowingly keep back what is due on The Restitution, and we ask you once more to look on your accounts, and if you have not yet renewed, please send in at once and give us what is ours.

Poetry.

Heaviest Troubles.

Of the hard and weary loads
Neath which we bend and fall,
The troubles that do not come
Are the heaviest ones of all.

For grief that cuts like a knife
There's oil of comfort and cure,
And the Hand that binds the weight
Brings strength and grace to endure.

But to phantoms of pain and woe
The lips of pity are dumb,
And there's never oil nor wine
For troubles that do not come.

There's a song to lighten the toil,
And a staff for climbing the height,
But never an alpenstock
For the hills that are out of sight.

There are bitter herbs enough
In the brimming cup of today
Without the sprig of rue
From tomorrow's unknown way.

Then take the meal that is spread,
And go with a song on thy way,
And let not the morrow shade
The sunshine and joy of today.

—Lettie B. Bigelow, in Zion Herald.

Communicated.

Letters Read at Kansas-Missouri Conference.

Brethren and sisters:

Grace to you and peace from God the Father, and from our Lord Jesus Christ. I would love to be with you, and converse with you concerning the good things in store for all who worship "our God" and keep his commandments. But as I cannot be with you, therefore do I write. A prayer for Jerusalem: "I have graven thee upon the palms of my hands, saith God; thy walls are continually before me." Our holy city has often been doomed to seeming utter destruction. But phœnix like thou hast risen in due time. God suffered chastisements to be inflicted upon thee, and declares in judgment for thy sins, "I will make Jerusalem heaps and a den of dragons. Zion shall be ploughed, and Jerusalem shall become heaps, and the mountain of the house like the high places of the forest." These judgments would seem merciless, were it not for the revealed promise of God. For the same Almighty Being also declares in fulfillment of his immutable decrees, "Because they called thee an outcast, saying, this is Zion, whom no man seeketh after; behold, I will bring again the captivity of Jacob's tents, and have mercy on his dwelling places. And the city shall be builded upon her own heap, and thy palace shall remain after the manner thereof—it shall not be plucked up nor thrown down forever."

Jerusalem! name ever dear, was, is and ever will be the great central figure in the thoughts and prayers of every devout Hebrew and restitutionist of every age and clime. What hallowed memories and entrancing recollections spring at the mere mention of thy name! There is magic, yea, music in the very thought! Jerusalem the golden, "the joy of the whole earth." From thy walls was faithful Daniel snatched, and with the host of Israel, were marched within the impregnable walls of Babylon, at whose feet lay the prostrate world, and they hung their harps on the weeping willow boughs and wept when they remembered Zion. What are the recollections associated with the monuments and antiquities of Memphis, Babylon, Nineveh, Athens, Rome and London or the cities of the Aztecs, compared with those that cluster around thee, O Jerusalem the mistress of the new born earth, the beauty of the saints excellency! Thy antiquity is of ancient days,—even the days of the diluvian patriarch Shem! Thou art the city where the "King of peace and righteousness" communed with the "Friend of God"—where Saul ruled in war and unrighteousness, and Solomon in peace, and reared the temple, a type of the body of thy King, within thy walls, and the Lord of Hosts dwelt there between the Cherubim. O Zion, that bringest good tidings, get thee up into the high mountain; O Jerusalem that bringest good tidings, lift up thy voice with strength. The Holy One of Israel invited thee under the shadow of his wing, but ye would not. For thy sin thy walls are broken down, thy gates are burned with fire. Hear, O Jerusalem! the Lord hath heard the prayers of his saints, and thou shalt be comforted. For the Lord hath said, "Speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem, and cry unto you that your warfare is accomplished, that your iniquity is pardoned: and you shall receive of your Lord's hand double for all your sin."

Dear brother and sister of the common faith, let us never cease to pray for Zion, the holy habitation of God. And Jerusalem the seat of government, let these days be days of separation, let us purify ourselves by coming out and staying out of Babylon, be ye no more partakers of her wine. Pray that the time may soon come that we may say as Daniel did, "I was glad when they said, Let us go into the house of the Lord. Our feet shall stand within thy gates, O Jerusalem! We pray for thy peace, and we shall prosper because of thee, O Zion! "Peace be within thy walls, and prosperity within thy palaces." I exhort you, brother and sister, to pray without ceasing, never be slack in your prayer for Zion, lest your right hand forget its cunning. Prefer a prayer for Jerusalem above your chiefest joy. Thou, O Salem, the theatre of the most memorable and stupendous events that have ever occurred in the annals of the world. Jerusalem! a spot at once the focus and the radiating point of the emotions of three powerful religions. The renowned metropolis of the children of miracle, of prophecy, of promise and providence—people near and dear unto the Lord and still beloved for the Father's sake. We brethren have been grafted into the Abrahamic stock by faith, and hold claim on Canaan, Zion and the Holy City. Let us never forsake our King, but fight the good fight of faith, and be constant in prayer and supplication for these places so dear to Jerusalem, our eternal home, where the son of Jesse tuned his soul-stirring harp, and penned his psalms for the saints of all ages: where the Son of Man labored, suffered and died, and was declared to be the Son of God by the resurrection, and ascended on high, and will come again in like manner as he went up. "And his feet shall stand in that day upon the Mount of Olives," and "Jehovah of hosts shall reign in Mount Zion and before his ancients gloriously." Sitting upon his throne in the sublime metropolis, (then brought near), the New Jerusalem from above. Then shall our holy city truly become "the joy of the whole earth." My prayer is that the Lord may ever watch between me and thee while we are absent one from another. I pray that faith hope and love may ever abide.

Your brother in the perpetual faith.

OTTO WILSON.

Dear brothers and sisters:

One who is to you a stranger sends you greeting, but let me say to you first of all, the Father knows me, and some sweet day I hope to meet you all "where congregations ne'er break up." I was for several years a Methodist; have been for fifteen years an invalid. Nine years ago this summer our church had a great revival; had one of the noisiest of evangelists to conduct the meeting and many were added to the church. Just in the beginning I was called away to Detroit, Michigan, to take treatment of a specialist who had come there from New York City. I was so sorry to leave my church just then, but there seemed no other way, and I went. Yes, praise God, I went and while gone I found my Savior. My electrician was that grand good man, Dr. J. H. Thomas, now of Wyoming, Delaware. Are there any here who know him? Surely you must by his pen work, if no other way. Oh, how I thank God for letting me know him. He presented the "gospel of the kingdom" to me so kindly, yet so forcibly. I soon saw how strong a delusion had been my former belief. Then I was anxious to get home to tell my husband the good news. He had never accepted any creed or church, but they were working to get him into the church, saying, it makes no difference what you believe. But God kept him, and when I returned home made me the humble instrument in his hands of bringing light and peace to him. We were both buried with Christ in baptism and expect to live with him. We have never in all these years met one of the faith, but the doctor's letters have been a great help and comfort to us. I am still an invalid and cannot come to greet you, but my husband Andrew Filkins will, God willing, spend several days with you. I have tried to sow beside all waters and last spring two dear ones were added to our number. Bro. T. N. Frantz (who presents this letter) and Kate, his wife, were led by the loving Father to hear and accept the truth that saves. They were baptized and since that time there are four instead of two at Breaking of Bread, "and we know how sweet it is for brethren to dwell together in love." We are RESTITUTION readers and many of your names are household words with us. And although I must be absent from you in the body I am with you in the spirit and praying for you that each dear one be benefited by your meeting together. May there be a unity of the spirit and may you be guided into all wisdom. May I ask to be remembered in your prayers. I am your Sister in the one hope."

DELTA C. FILKINS.

ARE WE NEARING THE END?

And as he sat upon the Mount of Olives the disciples came unto him privately, saying, Tell us when shall these things be? and what shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world? Matt. xxiv. 3. If the disciples were anxious to understand these things while Jesus was yet with them, why should we not be equally interested? Living as we believe, near the end of Gentile times, should we not speak often to one another, and to isolated ones send words of greeting, and so much the more as we see the day approaching, that we may all take heed to the sure Word of prophecy, and watch for the signs hung out by our Lord, and learn what is the mind of the Spirit concerning this matter. The Apostle is very explicit and declares, "Ye brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief." Our Lord's prophecy in the 21st chapter of Luke, leads the church down to the close of Gentile times and the end of the great tribulation on the Jewish people. The signs following the close of this tribulation are given to signal the coming of Jesus. They are given in plain language that the careful student may not be in darkness. Matthew says, Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the power of the heavens shall be shaken, then shall appear the sign of the Son of Man in heaven. Mark's record is about the same. The testimony of these three witnesses corroborates the above. When the term of Israel's suffering is over, Gentile authority will come to an end. For Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled. Long ago we learned, in the evening if the sky is red, it will be fair weather. In the morning, if the sky is red and lowering, it will be foul weather. Shall it be said of us who are walking in the light of present truth, Ye can discern the face of the sky, but ye cannot discern the signs of the times. The Lord's comparison is conclusive that one is as clear as the other. He also assures us, when we see these things begin to come to pass, we may look up, lift up our heads, for our redemption draweth nigh. We already see the power waning that has so long oppressed Jerusalem, and when the foot of the oppressor is withdrawn, Jerusalem will be free. Just how long the Sick Man will linger we do not know. But his malady is incurable and his death is certain. The earnest watcher will note the progress of events. For we know God rules in the affairs of nations, and will bring to pass the thing he has declared, at the time appointed. What could stimulate the waiting ones more, than to know that God has not left them in uncertain darkness concerning the most important of all events. The coming of Christ and the final close of Gentile power when the kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ, and he shall reign forever and ever. But before the marriage of the Lamb takes place the Bride must make herself ready. Would it not be well enough for us who are aspiring to this high honor to examine ourselves at this time? Are we getting ready for the nuptial feast? Have we chosen the robe of fine linen, clean and white. Are we feasting on the bread of life, the Word of God? If any man speak, let him speak as the oracles of God. Do we speak his Word faithfully, or do we join hands with the world and say, The truth of God is too unpopular, and we choose a more gaudy attire? If we have only become cold, perhaps the cares of the world and deceitfulness of riches have almost choked out the Word. Possibly some are wandering away into blind paths, and do not find the proper nourishment, and now feed on husks, or rather they may have become interested in speculations, theories and mysteries until the pure bread from the Father's house has become stale. Therefore to make it more palatable it is mixed with the wine of Babylon. The result is confusion. O Church of God, where are you? Look up, lift up thy head, arise and trim thy lamps, and be ready when the Bridegroom comes. We humbly pray, Thou mayest again don the raiment of linen clean and white. Feast on the pure truth of God, separate thyself from the world and Babylon. Watch and pray that thou mayest escape all these things and stand before the Son of Man. Who then is a faithful and wise servant, whom his Lord hath made ruler over his household, to give them meat in due season? Blessed is that servant whom his Lord when he cometh shall find so doing. Even so, come Lord Jesus. Amen.

SALLIE BLACK.

Brothers and Sisters:

While the nineteenth century is numbered with the past, there are many things which occurred while it was yet with us which we cannot afford to lose sight of; for though it was truly a wonderful century to the world, it has been much more so to the Christian; for while the progress of the arts and sciences has been with stalwart strides and unabated vigor to the betterment of the whole human race and working wonderful changes in civilization; to the church it comes as a fulfilment of a prophecy, written in Dan. xii. 4, which is placed as due just previous to the close of the dispensation, "Many shall run to and fro and knowledge shall be increased," has been glutted with fulfillment during the last 70 years. The world was startled some 70 years ago by the preaching of Wm. Miller and others, that the world would come to an end in 43 and the judgment day be ushered in, but the church was aroused to investigate and learned that "no man knoweth the day and the hour; no, not the angels in heaven, but my Father only." Twenty years of Bible research following the date of 43 revealed a flood of Bible literature and resulted in the embracing of the doctrine of the near approach of the second advent of Christ by about one million persons (so it is said) in the United States.

Among other attainments the problem of the great pyramid of Gizah is supposed to be solved; the pillar in Egypt to be a witness to the Lord. Isa. xix. 19. No less a personage than Prof. Piezah Smyth, royal astronomer of Scotland, went from Edinburgh to Egypt in Nov. 1864, and spent 7 months in the work of making scientific investigation of the pyramid, and published the result to the world just in time to intensify the expectation of events indicated by the impending wail at south end of grand gallery when the indicated dates arrived, and as it were duplicate the admonition of our Savior to "watch." Mark xiii. 34-37.

When looking back over the past 70 years of watching and waiting, though we see many prophecies fulfilled the years seem to have passed wearily by as we were searching the Scriptures till the arrival of the above named pyramid dates, when in the short space of seven years three momentous events transpired, to wit: the opening of first seal, the inauguration of the rise of the papacy, and the sign of the Son of Man; the date of each pointed out by pyramid, as it to set us in definitely on a new series. The pyramid date 1897 seems to verify the truth of this idea and designate the opening of the seals as the new series, and then leaves us to keep our bearings by the seals till the Master comes, which happens at the end of the sixth seal. The pyramid date 1897 very sharply marks the Turko-Grecian war and the inauguration of president McKinley and the four years following witness the "to and fro through the earth" movement until peace was taken from the earth and restored, and the present year (1902) records a grievous famine in the north country. Compare Zech. vi. 6 with Rev. vi. 6 and now it remains to be verified by the following up of the white horses and the third seal stands open before our eyes, and we must conclude that the things concerning the kingdom of God are fast assuming a business shape. But the sixth seal must turn out to be the business seal after all, which will call for all our Christian qualifications. God grant that we may be ready.

Submitted in love of the truth.

J. M. FYFE.

Dear Brethren and Sisters in Christ:

While you are far, far away from us, yet we feel drawn near to you all, by the cords of love which bind our hearts together in sweet Christian union and fellowship, and while we cannot be present with you, yet we can by the eye of faith, see you all, I trust, working harmoniously together in the Master's cause, laboring to build each other up in our most holy faith, until we all can come in the unity of the faith and the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ. It appears to my mind that if we had attained to this high position, that we would henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine. If the truth makes us free, we are free indeed; then in this state of freedom, let us add all the Christian graces practically, and this will enable us to run the race with patience, ever looking unto Jesus, who is the author and finisher of our faith for there is none other foundation laid save the prophets, and apostles, and Jesus Christ, who is the Chief Corner-stone. Then let us all take heed how we build, do not use any wood, hay or stubble, such material will not stand the fiery trials that oft come upon us. There is a little body of believers here at Browntown, Va., who ask to be remembered in your prayers.

It would afford me untold pleasure to meet with you all at the conference. I always look forward to the annual gathering as a time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. While we are reaching for each other's hands, many of whom we have never met before, it points us to the time when they will come from the east, and west, and north, and south; to sit down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in the kingdom.

Dear brethren, assembled in the service of the Lord. Let the Word of Christ dwell in you richly, in all wisdom, teaching and admonishing one another in psalms, hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord. And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him. Now the God of peace that brought again our Lord Jesus, that great Shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the everlasting covenant, make you perfect in every good work, to do his will, working in you that which is well pleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ, to whom be glory forever and ever.

May your coming together be crowned with success, and may you all be rewarded for sacrifice and labor of love.

Yours, in hope of immortality.

SARAH F. MORGAN.

The Wisdom of Saloomoon. Chap. 5.

1. Then will the justified one stand with much boldness of speech before the face of those who have caused him tribulation and those who have disregarded his pains.

2. When they have seen they will be terrified with a dreadful fear, and will be astounded at the paradox of the salvation.

3. They will say to themselves repentant and sighing because of a narrowness of spirit, This was he whom we at one time held in laughter and for a parable of reproach.

4. We thoughtless one accounted his manner of life a craze and his end a dishonorable one.

5. How hath he been accounted among sons of God and how is his allotment among saints?

6. Surely we were led astray from the way of truth, and the light of righteousness did not shine for us, and the sun did not arise for us.

7. We were filled with paths of transgression and loss, and we passed through trackless waste places, and the way of the Lord we did not comprehend.

8. What hath our supercilious pride profited us? And what advantage was our wealth to us with its braggart boast?

9. All these things have passed by like a shallow and like intelligence that runneth by.

10. Like a ship that goeth through watery waves, of which, when it hath gone through, it is not possible to find a trace, nor the unreturning path of its keel in the waves?

11. Or as no mark of a bird that hath flown through air is found, but a light breath of wind scourged with a blow of its pinions and divided with the violence of the rushing of its moving wings hath been passed through, and after that there hath not been found therein a sign of its passage;

12. Or like as when an arrow hath been shot at a mark, the punctured air straightway closed upon itself as though ignorant of the way made through it.

13. Even so we also when begotten left off and have no sign of virtue to show;

14. But in our evil-doing did we lavishly squander ourselves.

15. And the hope of an irreverent man is like dust borne by the wind, and light hoar-frost that is thrust away by a flaw of wind, and like smoke hath it dissipated, and like the remembrance of a single day that is spent hath it passed by.

16. But justified ones live forever and with the Lord is their wages, and thoughtfulness for them is there on the part of the Most High.

17. Therefore they will take the royalty of propriety and the diadem of beauty from the hand of the Lord, because with his right hand will he shelter them and with his arm will he shield them.

18. He will take his zeal for a panoply and make the creation ward off enemies.

19. He will put on righteousness for a breastplate, and judging without hypocrisy for a helmet.

20. He will take irresistable holiness for a spear.

21. And he will sharpen precipitate wrath for a sword, and the cosmos will war along with him against those who wander away from self-evident truth.

22. Well-aimed bolts of lightning will go their way and as though from a well-bent bow of the clouds will they leap to a mark.

23. And from a rock-hurling anger full hail stones will be cast. The water of a sea will be irritably stirred up against them, and rivers will absolutely cut off escape.

24. A word (spiritual breath) of (divine) ability will withstand them and like an upward-sweeping whirlwind will it winnow them; and transgression will desolate all the earth, and evil-doing will overturn thrones of absolute-rulers.

COMMENT.

What a startling and vivid picture of "the great day of the Lord" when forbearance ceases and "he taketh his great power to rule" and "the wrath of the Lamb" is made manifest and the "King of kings and Lord of lords" arises to judge the earth.

The epitome of revelation in both covenants, the gist of God's purpose in creation and redemption and "the motive" of the grand oratorio of the gospel are in this brief chapter of divine inspiration. As with the few exhumed bones of a prehistoric natural creation, the acute scientist can reconstruct the extinct species, so were all the inspired record lost except this chapter alone, the plan and purpose of man's Creator could be divined, I think, with the help of the natural creation and its uniformity of law, as a great object lesson to illustrate the equation.

Dear Restitution:

I here enclose a check for the renewal of the paper ta which I am so much indebted. I consider myself in great luck to have been brought in touch with such a beacon as THE RESTITUTION. It has made plain many problems that the sectarian churches intimated that we might understand hereafter but not now. It is the Christian's duty to know all that is knowable. It is, to me, astonishing how very little stock, that is, biblical knowledge, the average preacher starts business with. In every other business success depends largely on knowledge, knowledge of the work, means to the end, etc. Our Christian religion requires teachers today as much as ever it did. Mothers, fathers and others may be drawn to the church by a dear little one asking mamma and papa to meet her in heaven. These partings are often patent enough to convert from folly to thoughtfulness, for a time, but nothing short of an earnest presentation of the gospel—the story of Jesus, can bring about a conversion to the truth, to God. I often wonder why some of our strong men, who preach immortality only in Jesus, the Christ, do not visit Baltimore.

ISAAC MCCURRY, Sr.

Editor Restitution:

The Church of God at Springfield, Ohio, are encouraged in their witnessing for the truth in this city. On Aug. 24th, the First day morning, 9 a. m. a goodly number of our little Ecclesia took the trolly car 6 miles in the country, to a lovely grove and there buried Brother Beck and wife in baptism, in a delightful stream of clear water. Brother Beck is the son of our faithful Brother, John N. Beck, known to many of the readers of THE RESTITUTION. In just one hour we all returned to our hall and listened to a very able discourse on 1st John iii. by Bro. B. T. Howell. Our hearts all rejoiced to have our new Brother and Sister join in commemorating the Lord's death. Our prayer and desire is that we may be instrumental in bringing more into the fold.

Your Brother, in the blessed hope,

R. L. HOLMAN.

Brother Underwood:

I cannot think of doing without the dear, old RESTITUTION. I understand the Scriptures and the signs of the times to indicate that we are nearing the final consummation of this age. We have had good meetings during the summer months at our meeting-house conducted by our good brothers Boyer of Shenandoah County. They have labored hard to make the truth plain. I do believe they have left them that came to hear without an excuse. The few faithful of this place have some hope of having Bro. W. H. Wilson to visit us and give us a series of meetings. I was glad to hear from Sister Lucy Horner through the paper. Write again Sister. My daily prayer is that the Church of God may grow more Christ-like, and that we may be blessed with a double effort to bring the truth before the people. I ask the prayers of the faithful ones.

Your Sister in Christ.

MRS. MARY F. COOK.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

It is with interest that we read the news and valuable ideas conveyed by those of like faith from various parts of the universe. Realizing that the world is principally "vanity and vexation of spirit," still we are in the world yet not of the world; but to do our duty we must make the best of it. We have a good, little congregation here in Tacoma, Washington, and most of them are quite thorough. We have preaching every Sunday, and while times are improving materially, yet it keeps most of us busy to keep square with the world, and the prospects are very good for excellent times in Tacoma in the near future, as it is becoming a great commercial centre, with the finest harbor in the world where commerce meets by land and sea; and there is no doubt in my mind "Tacoma" will be the New York City of the Pacific coast. And this Puget Sound Basin can bear a population equal to Massachusetts; and for mineral, coal, lumbering etc., is in abundance, and is a country well adapted to all occupations and is suitable for both rich and poor and those of moderate means. I have been here for fifteen years, principally in the Real Estate business, and I would say for stock-raising, farming, gardening, fruit-growing and climate it is almost unequaled in the world, and the thermometer seldom reaches 90 or falls to zero, and I feel that life is too short to indure the extremes that exist east of the rocky mountains. For the benefit of friends you may publish this and further information will be given on application.

Yours in faith.

ALONZO S. WILKINS.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter which contains money by it. Take warning and remember.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LI. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, OCTOBER 8, 1902. NUMBER 38.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

TO OUR PATRONS.

We want more readers for THE RESTITUTION. We want One Thousand new names on our list before January 1st, 1903, and can have them if you will help us.

In every Church our faith in the land there are members who do not take our paper, who would be benefitted by reading it.

There are those who are isolated by circumstances from any Church fellowship, who would be kept firmer in the faith, helped and strengthened for the battles of life if they had THE RESTITUTION each week.

There are others interested in the truths we hold, who would often have their attention called to the principles of our faith by reading our paper. When no preacher can be heard, when you cannot talk to them, THE RESTITUTION in their homes would be ever a present visitor—a missionary that will do more than any other one thing to keep the interest alive.

There are those whom we wish were interested in the Bible and what it promises. Many of this class of persons have never had the opportunity, or have neglected the matter when it was before them.

You are surely known to people such as are mentioned, and you are surely interested in them. We are satisfied you are not unmindful of their eternal well-being. How much do you care for these people? Will you join with us in getting the gospel before them, and keeping it there a year? We have this to offer to you for consideration.

We will send THE RESTITUTION one year to NEW Subscribers for $1.00. We will start them as soon as received and give credit to the end of 1903.

With a little persistent effort in presenting the paper to those you know who are not taking it, you can induce them to try it for $1.00. If you want some sample papers we will gladly supply them to you, and our list can be increased by 1000 names by Jan. 1st. It can be done easily if you will act on this suggestion, and get those near you interested. If each reader would get a new name our list would be doubled at once.

It would seem as if every reader of THE RESTITUTION could exert influence enough to get one more new name if the effort was made. Will you try it? If the first person you suggest it to does not respond, do not be discouraged, but try some one else. Perhaps the one you least expect will answer quickest.

Did you ever stop to figure up how many words are contained in our paper in a year? You will be surprised at the number of sermons it contains. There is variety too. There is doctrine and the practical, encouragement and cheer, and comfort for the distressed. Each phase of teaching would make several good sized books during the year. You can do no work that yields as large a return for the money expended as by sending THE RESTITUTION to a friend for a year.

We ask you to go at this work and push it along with a will. The time is getting short, and if you can be the means in God's hands of gaining one more for the Master, it will pay for all your labor. The sooner you get the names, the more papers they will get. We wish to do our part in the work, so even the [illegible]

Our Unchanging Day.

Thou hast arisen, but thou declinest never,
Today shines as the past.
All that thou wast, thou art and shalt be ever,
Brightness from first to last.

Night visits not thy sky, nor storm, nor sadness.
Day fills up all its line.
Unfading beauty and unfaltering gladness,
And love forever new.

Light of the world! undimming and unsetting,
Oh, shine each mist away!
Banish the fear, the falsehood, and the trifling!
Be our unchanging day!

The Spirit of God. No. 1.

Much thought has been devoted to the subject introduced by the above heading; much has been said in public discourse and in private converse, and many learned articles have been written upon it; and it would seem from the amount of attention it has received, it ought to be well nigh exhausted by this time. However, this is not the case. It is like every Bible subject—inexhaustible. There is still a vast amount of misunderstanding regarding it. Since the rising generation needs to have these things brought to its attention, and those who have been long in the faith, need to have their pure minds stirred up by way of remembrance, I will add my contribution to that of others and say a few things on this subject that have impressed me very deeply. I would not create the impression that after the perusal of these sentences there will remain nothing further for the reader to search out or say. If by reading these lines, any one is benefited or prompted to a more thorough investigation of this subject, I shall feel that my effort has not been in vain.

That the question of the Holy Spirit is not as well understood as its place in the economy of God and its importance demand, is evident from the fact that there is such a great diversity of views among religious people regarding it. This is a subject which cannot be considered by itself, as it stands closely related to other subjects. The primary question, underlying this one, is as to God; his personality, his abode, and his manner of communicating with men. Is there a God? Is he everywhere, as some teach, or is his personal Presence confined to a certain locality? Is God One, or Two, or Three? If either, what is the proof? Then come in other questions, such as, Who is Jesus Christ? Is he God? Is the Holy Spirit a person? What is the office of the Holy Spirit? How is the Spirit communicated to men? When these and other related questions have received due attention, there ought to be an approximation to a proper understanding of the question of the Holy Spirit. Otherwise this is impossible. "Theology," as handed down by many generations, and as taught in the schools, has invested this subject with the garb of "mystery" which makes investigation of some Bible truths appear like prying into matters which do not concern us. Even ministers speak of the doctrine concerning God, known as "theology," as "a great mystery;" and Scripture is cited to show that we have no authority to search into such matters. It is said that "the secret things belong unto the Lord." It is assumed that the knowledge of God is one of these "secret things;" and the inference is that therefore we ought not even try to look into questions of this kind. But this way of dealing with God's revelation is far from satisfactory; for the same verse in which the foregoing statement is found, also says, "But those things which have been revealed belong unto us and to our children forever." The knowledge of God [illegible]

I wish to lay down as a leading thought the statement that there is One God. In order to properly bring this truth before the reader, I will cite from the words of Jesus, the accredited representative of God to men. In that wonderful prayer of his (John 17), he says, "And this is life eternal that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou didst send." A careful analysis of the opening verses of this chapter will show, among other things:

1. That the Speaker here is Jesus. (1)

2. He is addressing God as his "Father." (1)

3. That this "Father" is "the only true God." (3)

4. That this true God "sent" Jesus Christ. (3)

5. That the "power" which Jesus had was not his own, but was "given" to him by the Father. (2)

6. This "sent" One craves of the "Father," the "only true God," that he may "glorify" the Speaker, his "Son." (1)

7. That "eternal life" depends upon the knowledge of the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom he sent.

The Scriptures do not simply "assume," as men are wont to say, but distinctly affirm, the existence of God. God says to Moses, "I am Yahwe: and I appeared unto Abraham, and unto Isaac, and unto Jacob, by (the name of) God Almighty, but by my name Yahwe was I not known to them." Ex. vi. 2, 3. To the people of Israel he announced in thundering tones from Sinai, "I am Yahwe thy God, which have brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage. Thou shalt have no other gods before me" ("beside me."—Luther). Ex. xx. 2, 3. "THERE IS A GOD in heaven," was the direct statement of Daniel before the Babylonian king, whose puzzling vision he was called upon to interpret. Dan. ii. 38. And in the New Testament, besides the one already introduced, we have Paul's solemn averment, "THERE IS one God" (1 Cor. viii. 6; Eph. iv. 6), thus directly announcing the existence of God.

The Scriptures speak of God as having his abode "in heaven," confining his personal Presence to a place, a locality. "For God is in heaven, and thou upon the earth." Eccl. v. 2. If "earth" is a locality, so is "heaven," where "God is." "But our God is in heaven." Psa. cxv. 3. "Unto thee I lift up mine eyes, O thou that dwellest in the heavens." Psa. cxxiii. 1. "For he hath looked down from the height of his sanctuary; from heaven did the Lord behold the earth." Psa. ciii. 19. "Is not the Lord in the height of heaven?" Job xxii. 12. All these examples make it plain that GOD IS SOMEWHERE. In the "Lord's Prayer" we are taught to address God as "Our Father which art in heaven." Matt. vi. 10. But there is still stronger proof that the "dwelling place" of God (2 Chron. vi. 21, 30, 33, 36) is confined to some place, which is the fact that Jesus was "received up into heaven, and sat on the right hand of God." Mark. xvi. 19. (He had previously said, "I go to the Father." John xvi. 16. To the Jews, and later also to his disciples, he said, "Whither I go ye can not come." John viii. 21; xiii. 33. Which shows how futile will be the efforts of those who would "go to heaven.") "The heavens," to which Jesus ascended, while not to retain him for all time to come, "must receive" him "until the times of the restitution of all things which God hath spoken." Acts iii. 21. From these "heavens," which received him, "the Lord himself shall descend." 1 Thes. iv. 16. Jesus personally and literally ascended to heaven, he is now in "heaven itself" (Heb. ix. 24), acting as High Priest over the House of God, the Church, and from heaven he will come again in like manner as he was seen going to heaven. Acts i. 11. If [illegible] people in a place or in the [illegible] ing to which he is "a spirit without body, parts, or passions," and generally he is everywhere, but specifically nowhere. This idea is the basis of the popular conception of the immortality of the soul, which makes the latter an intangible, "immaterial substance," a part of God (what "part" of him who is "without parts" is not so easy to tell), which goes to heaven at death; and since heaven is only "a condition and not a place," the immortal soul goes into a condition! But where is that?

A. H. ZELSER.

Early Church History on Missions. No. 4.

[Bro. J. F. Gellatly sends us some articles he has had published in the Denton Journal on the above subject. Our readers will bear in mind that originally the articles were written for a secular paper. In this way our brother endeavors to get truth before the people, and reaches some that could not otherwise be induced to read such matter.—ED.]

"My word shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and prosper in the thing whereto I sent it."

"Behold my servant whom I uphold, mine elect in whom my soul delighteth! I will put my spirit upon him and he shall bring forth judgment to the nations."

There is a mysterious missionary with us that the Lord God has sent to give light to his believing children, and it bears all the stamps of its Sender. Though begotten of human parentage, it bears nothing of human perishability; though mingling in human vicissitudes and taking part in human affairs, it serenely survives when nations and empires pass away. It makes no bow to kings or potentates, and salutes no sages by the way. It calmly proclaims its message independent of wealth, power, influence, sect, or individual.

It is one of the strangest things in nature how the Bible has survived to us today. First, the Jews were commissioned to bear it, and, thinking it their private and particular property, became vain on that account and were discharged from the position. Next, the mediæval church took charge, and, puffed out with pride, also was cast out. Now sectarians of every denomination bear it along, as his particular standard. Strange that all have done well by it, and preserved it with a reverence that often degenerated to gross superstition. The Jew has his original Hebrow, hand-written, scroll-fashion, read in the synagogue on the Sabbath. Rome preserves the Greek texts, the famous Vatican MSS. and the Vulgate or Latin; while the various modern sects have done great things in translating the book into every known language on the face of the earth, and publishing and popularizing it in many other ways. This is the great redeeming feature of all so called evangelical effort in these days. It has been a magnificent effort. It is a wonderful feature, and the result has been—what? The conversion of the world to Christianity? No, the written Word was not intended to convert the world, but to "choose out from among the nations a people for his name." It has so done. There are those with us, and among every other nation, who bear the impress of its teachings—gentle, loving spirits who walk in the guidance of its Word, who in spite of sectarian confusion and theological nonsense have reached over it all and caught hold, and these "shall be mine, saith the Lord of Hosts, in that day when I shall make up my jewels."

Then, on the other hand, we have a contrary result brought about by the same means. By the light of the same sun the tares ripen in the same field with the wheat. Though it cannot be doubted that there are as good people in the world now as ever, and probably as many of them [illegible] ghty in their seats great phenomena of nature with a reverential mind, and so teach, but the great trend of modern "science" is strictly atheistical. Nature is to the mere swirl of blind force—all push and no policy. The fashionable language of the profession is the jargon of evolution—the Pisanthropus Erectus and the anthropoid ape—and the crude and "great unwashed" in the hurry to escape from the fiery damnation of the priestcraft are altogether glad to take in the menagerie with the ancestral monkey, while the professional gentlemen run the show.

The religious world, not to be counted behind in the world's progress, are dressing up on the same lines. We have bombastic talk about "higher criticism" by pedantic grovellers who don't seem to have the first principle of the literary instinct, but, occupying high ecclesiastical positions, their word goeth forth and echoes through all the exchanges, filling the world with sound. A certain celebrated professor of Oxford, England, for instance, has published a work recently in which he states that "some Old Testament characters are historical though the stories told of them are mythical. Many, however, are not historical; they never existed. Abraham, Isaac and Jacob are lunar heroes; Sarah is the daughter of the moon-god. Leah and Rachel express the new moon and the full moon. Joseph is the sun-god. Saul and David existed, but Saul was a lunar hero and David solar. His real name was Dod, and his red hair is an image of the sun!" In this country we have a certain Prof. Pearson, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, who has come out boldly on the same lines, discounting all biblical authority and denying the possibility of what are commonly called miracles; and there are also a [illegible] host of lesser lights, who mutter [illegible] fusion in the darkness.

In the political world "Peace on earth and good will among men" is passed as a cynical joke. In time of peace we are preparing for war and on such a stupendous scale as the world has never seen, and all nations are like gamblers sitting round the card-table showing swaggeringly ostentatious indifference concerning the big stakes, but all the same ready to scoop in the jack-pot whenever the proper hand shows up. It is not always a strait game either. None of them seems to be above making a "little deal" and a "divvy" and "killing off a few people" to save appearances, for "all is fair in war," "and there are lots of things which are not communicated to the public." (Dewey).

In business we have the strife between labor and capital, and corporations interfering with and in many instances controlling the government.

In society—what cannot be said of society? On the one hand towering wealth that surpasses the Arabian Nights tales; on the other hand, degraded, squalid poverty that is appalling. On the one hand, carved temples with heaven-pointed pinacles; on the other hand, all the sweltering villainy of the slums, whose disgusting annals swell the yellow journals, and there are some things which even the vilest sheets never dare publish. And all this after nineteen centuries of "gospel light!"

No attentive reader of his Bible can suppose that such a state as this is a finality. All good people believe and hope and work for a better state of affairs. Well and good, but can any sane person credit that the present organizations that have undertaken the task, "divided against themselves," are sufficient for it. "This kind cometh not out with prayer and fasting." We need power. These good people may proselyte a Kaffir, a Hindoo or a Chinaman once in awhile. Then there is joy in the church conference over one sinner repented, but who among them will dare to [illegible] the devil where he [illegible] of the kingdom royal ukase the publication of "The Sermon on the Mount." Can one face him and his myrmidons with an argument or a platitude? No one cares for a mission to Siberia or the holy fortress of St. Peter and St. Paul. Better take chances with the Congo savages or the Sabbatarians of Kent county.

Or, we have the strenuous "war lord" of Germany, the head of another system of military oppression that has exiled millions of his countrymen. All he needs is a text and a dry goods box, so they say, and he can preach as good a sermon as any of us, and so with all the round of them—personally good enough fellows, but they represent the brute in man. They understand nothing but force, and they stand at the throttle of the vast engine of modern civilization and turn it any time to their local advantage or what they consider the advantage of their political system, which they dignify by the name of country. At any time they can sweep the land with desolation and trench the dead inhabitants in rows. No use to blow warm air at such fellows as these. You can only stop them with the whirlwind or the earthquake or blasts from Mount Pelee.

And so there is a voice comes to us out of the past: "Let not your heart be troubled * * I will come again." "Behold, I come quickly, and my reward is with me." "Ye shall see the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory." That is the kind of talk we want. We need some one to grasp the throttle of the engine after the other clamorous and contentious hands have been wrenched away, and control the whole vast political machinery for good, for righteousness, for truth. Let's have done with the snifle and the whine, with the weak and weeping Jesus that renaissance painters have portrayed "like the hypocrites, of a sad countenance." No more of the crucified Lamb—crucified and put to open shame so often that the whole skeleton even is not left. We need a risen and a glorified Christ—the "Christ that is to be;" the Lion of the tribe of Judah "to take his great power and reign, to take his portion with the strong," "to bind the strong man and spoil his home." Then, indeed, when God's own true missionary comes will we have peace on earth and good will among men. Then there will be light and life from the dead. For he comes not to destroy but to fulfil, to break the power of the oppressor, to open the blind eyes, to unstop deaf ears, as well as to wither up the barren fig trees and drown the devils and their swine in the eternal peace of "deep Galilee."

Seek Ye the Kingdom.

In religion decision of character is very important. One may drift into worldly success without appreciating it. We have known men to be elevated to important positions by fortunate combinations of circumstances, and to be kept there by political influence when they were in no way worthy. A man may become rich by the mere accident of birth. He may be a citizen of the most beautiful and prosperous country under the sun without choosing it. But one cannot become good without definitely and intelligently choosing it. Goodness is a treasure which we cannot inherit from our parents. We shall never come into possession of it by accident. We cannot drift into the kingdom of God. Political influence can never give us a place in our Father's house. It matters not how many excellent qualities we may inherit from our ancestors and acquire by culture, we must deliberately choose the kingdom of God and his righteousness, or we cannot enter therein. There is no trick nor art nor device of men or the devil whereby the gate of the kingdom [illegible]

He that over lose the race the loss is his; if he gain the gain is his. In the race for eternal life, therefore, so run that ye may obtain.

We cannot serve two masters. The world is one master; God is another. Whosoever, therefore will be a friend of the world, is at enmity with God, says the apostle James.

The doctrine of the immortality of the soul, is found in the Bible, but not as the Word of the Living God, but as the lying statement of the serpent—"Thou shalt not surely die."

Send us the names of all the members of your church who do not take The Restitution and we will send a sample copy to them and try and interest them in its worth.

The End Near.

We are now living in the last end of human governments, as symbolized by the four beasts of Daniel vii. and the metalic image of the second chapter; with its head of gold, Babylon; breasts and arms of silver, Media-Persia; sides and thighs of brass-bronze, Grecia; legs of iron, Rome. These symbols span the entire period of the four great empires of the earth, in their successive order. Protestant, Catholic and heathen writers have very minutely sketched the rise and fall of these prophetic kingdoms, and are obliged to admit that their work was previously laid out by the Hebrew prophet. It is a fact worthy of notice that the last of the four entered upon its universal dominion some thirty-one years before the birth of Christ, hence 1932 years of its trampling power is gone, and we watch with keen interest the rapid development of events pertaining to its fall; and our hearts beat with joy as we witness the accuracy of the unfolding of God's purpose to establish the fifth universal and everlasting kingdom in its stead.

Reader, are you ready for the great change? The stone will soon smite the image upon the feet, and it will be broken to pieces; let us cast ourselves on the Anointed One, the rock of salvation, and not suffer the terrible consequences of it falling upon us at that great day. Luke xx. 18.

"Shame and Everlasting Contempt."

"Daniel xii. 2, 3, so far as we know, is the only Scripture in the Old Testament that requires to be noticed as seeming to favor the doctrine of eternal torment. It reads as follows: "And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt. And they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars for ever and ever." Let the reader take notice how careful the prophet is, in the use of the epithet everlasting, not to say the very thing he is charged with saying. What is it that is everlasting, and for ever and ever? It is the life of the righteous, and the brightness of their shining. It is not the shame; no such epithet is applied to that which the wicked themselves feel; and, no doubt will feel, as long as their miserable lives last. But it is the contempt, or abhoring, as this word is elsewhere translated, which OTHERS SHALL FEEL towards them, that will be everlasting." Theological Dilemma.

The Social Aspect of Sin.

From an article in the Homiletic Review by Dr. William W. McLane, Ph. D., New Haven, Conn., on the social aspect of sin, we learn that a catechism recently prepared and accepted by the free churches of Great Britain, sin is defined as follows: "Sin is any thought or feeling, word or act which is contrary to God's Holy Law, or falls short of what is required." But the writer goes on to say,—"True as the Hebrew conception of sin as offending God is, and much as the Divine law, however revealed, should be obeyed, yet the human race, as it approaches maturity, must enquire, why some things offend God? And why are they forbidden by him? The genius of this age is social rather than religious; the primary thought of man is about men, rather than God..... men do not conceive of some things as sin because it is a violation of law, but because it in some way violates the relations of life and the spirit of society; and therefore the social aspect of sin is that which man most quickly see and most keenly feel. If sin is defined as the denial of God and disobedience to his law,.....many men have so little consciousness of God, and God being so remote, it is not at all effective in awakening a consciousness of sin. If sin is defined as the denial of the spirit of social order, and the injury of society, most men will have a clear conception of what is meant and some conscience concerning it.

Continuing, he illustrates, as follows: The first and most fundamental relation in human society is based upon sex. The greater part of mankind believes in marriage and the majority of them practice monogamy. If a man and woman by mutual consent, live together temporarily, society condemns them as criminals, because they realize that a temporary union has no relation to the founding of a home, no reference to the rearing of a family, no regard to the construction of society, is in spirit and deed a denial of the spirit and structure of society, and, if permitted and common, such unions would disintegrate and destroy society."

We refer to this matter of sin, because the writer, in our opinion, furnishes the key to the state of the world religious today. Declension, declension, is the alarming cry among all denominations, almost; being alike strangers from the covenants of promise, and of necessity aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, they are without God and Christ and therefore hopeless. They are not bound together with the best of bonds—love, love of the same God, and Christ, but truth and one another, having [illegible] faith they are not under [illegible]

Question Answered.

A correspondent from Ruskip, California, asks the following question:

Dear Bro. Wilson:

Will you kindly explain Acts ii. 39? To what does the word promise refer? In the preceding verse the gift of the Holy Ghost was promised, which we know was bestowed first on the Jews, and afterwards on the Gentiles, but to what promise does it refer, when it goes on to say: "To your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call?"

Answer.

In the first place the word "promise" cannot apply to the promises made unto Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. The grammatical construction of the language would forbid such an interpretation of the passage. The language plainly shows that it is the Holy Spirit which is the subject of promise.

In the second place it is not the miraculous gifts of the Spirit given on Pentecost. It is a self-evident fact that those gifts ceased as the Apostle said: "Whether there be (the gift of) prophecies they shall fail; whether there be tongues, they shall cease; whether there be knowledge, it shall vanish away." 1 Cor. xiii. 8.

From the fact that the phrase, Holy Spirit as given in the Scriptures, is used in so many different ways, and in its different connections, signifies different things, it requires very great care and discernment to rightly divide the Word on that topic. The gift spoken in the text, is a gift that follows obedience of faith. We must bear this in mind in investigating this phase of the subject.

The Holy Scriptures were indited by the Holy Spirit, because holy men of old spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit. Hence they are called "spirit and life," and in some cases where the Word of God dwells within, we are said to have the gift of the Holy Spirit. This gift however we had before baptism, but the gift spoken of in the text, is received after baptism.

There is also the confirming gift. "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him; God also bearing them witness, both with signs and wonders, and with divers miracles, and gifts of the Holy Ghost, according to his own will?" Heb. ii. 3, 4. "After that the Holy Ghost is come upon you; and you shall be witnesses unto me," etc. Acts i. 8. "These signs shall follow them that believe" etc. "And they went forth, and preached everywhere [illegible]

Holy Spirit, the one promised to believers now. No one can exhibit the signs.

There is a Spirit, however, possessed by believers, and only by believers, which Spirit must dwell within before the life to come can be received. See Rom. viii. 11: "But if the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you." This Spirit is "the Spirit of life," because it [illegible] ens your mortal bodies." This "Spirit of life" can only dwell in those who are "in Christ," and none are in Christ before being baptized into Christ. Hence, this gift is "to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call." See Rom. viii. 1: "There is therefore now no condemnation to them that are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit. For the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death." See Rom. viii. 8, 9. "So then they that are in the flesh can not please God. But ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you." Hence, we must see that it is essential to have "the Spirt of God dwell in you." We can make no mistake as to what this Spirit is, if we will notice the context: "To be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace." "Now if any man hath not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his." This Spirit is a mind which is in harmony with the Spirit, and also of Christ. If this Spirit does not dwell within there is no possible power which can quicken our mortal bodies. This spiritual mind is a mind which is educated or taught in the Word which is itself "spirit and life." On the other hand it is not possible for one who is not taught in the Word, to have this mind (or spirit) of God, no matter how correct a life such an one may lead. No one can know the mind of the Spirit, unless taught by the Word or Sword of the Spirit. "For as many as are (thus taught and live are) led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God." All who are thus taught and live will also receive the gift of eternal life, which is also the gift of the Holy Spirit, (God is Spirit) and this gift also is to "as many as the Lord our God shall call," even "to all them that are afar off." This is a promise to those who believe the Word of the Spirit, has been made free by the law of the Spirit of life, and have the mind of the Spirit, and walk after the Spirit. Such an one possesses the Spirit which will quicken his mortal body. The text under consideration is all right just as it is, the trouble is many err most grievously in dividing the Word.

To Our Preachers and Bible Teachers.

"But the wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality, and without hypocrisy." James iii. 7.

In the above text there seems to me to be something from which we as Bible students and teachers may draw lessons of great value. The earlier we learn the wisdom of purity, peaceableness and gentleness, the more we can serve our Master acceptably. Christ says that if he is lifted up he will draw all men unto him. Everywhere I find this wisdom spoken of, I find that its forcefulness in its power to draw or attract those who follow after it. Christ's power to draw men lay in the ability he had to plead with men. The foundation for this wisdom is LOVE. Without love in the heart for mankind there is no dwelling place in man for this wisdom. This fact will preclude all thought of language toward the friends we wish to convert that wound the feelings. Language which borders on abuse cannot be tolerated. In conversation with people of the world or with people who are religious but do not see things the way we do, we should be careful to exemplify every element of Christian character represented in the above text. Let them see that our knowledge of the Bible and our notion of living in its atmosphere far excel theirs. It is necessary to exercise the wisdom of a serpent but the harmlessness of a dove. This involves not only wisdom in the matter of handling the Scriptures but tact in dealing with those [illegible] them. I do not believe he acted the hypocrite as some would make us believe. Before he began his work among them he studied their needs and doubtless, in his imaginations, he placed himself in their circumstances that he might the better meet their needs.

So with our work, it takes time to find out just what kind of procedure will best accomplish the ends we pursue. Many times I have had the misfortune to have wo[illegible] that I had well [illegible], spoiled by the indiscreet but well-meaning remarks of some brother or sister. Often I have seen articles written which, because of the spirit in which they seemed to be written, had better been left unwritten. I believe that the work done at our recent conference meetings, as well as the more recent writings in our paper, would indicate that we as a Church are learning the value of this wisdom of purity, love and peace.

After all, the greatest work we can do for the Master is to increase in these things personally. Too many of us have spent altogether too much time looking after the conduct of our fellows with too little regard for ourselves. I criticize myself severely on this point that others may take no offense at what I have said. When we get ourselves right in the sight of God, there will be a quiet influence going out from us, which we cannot withhold, nor would we if we could. This influence is better than sermons for drawing people. Let us lay down the goad and any notion of driving we may have, and take up instead the shepherd's crook and go before our flock to lead them by our own example of what we preach—a gospel of love, peace, gentleness and meekness May God bless every effort put forth in Christian love. Let us study to make ourselves approved, workmen that need not be ashamed.

Your brother in Christ.

Notes By the Way.

I am still rejoicing at the good time we had at the Nebraska Conference. After leaving St. Paul, I visited a few days with our worthy brother John Sissle and family, at Columbus. These are the only believ[illegible] of the Blessed Hope at that place. One thing I noticed was, although all alone, they do not grow cold and lax in their Christian duties, but stand right up to the mark. Every day they have family worship. Every Sunday the family observe the communion in memory of our blessed Lord. Another creditable point about our brother is, that he never fails to contribute financially of his means when convinced it is necessary to advance the Lord's work.

My next point was Blair, Neb. On leaving Columbus for Blair it started to rain, and continued off and on all the time I was at Blair. On arriving I was escorted to the home of Brother and Sister Johns, where dinner was served. I was met there by brethren John and George Mehrens and wives, and taken five miles into the country to the home of Brother John Mehrens. Meeting was announced for Saturday evening, but it rained so heavily that it was impossible to go. I preached ten times while at Blair, although it did rain, and roads were muddy, and nights intensely dark. We met part of the time at the School House and part of the time in the parlor of Bro. Herman Mehrens, at whose hospitable home I stayed while at Blair. On the last Saturday and Sunday of my stay at this place the weather cleared over head, but the roads were very bad. On Sunday morning we had a fair audience, and in the evening the house was full. The meetings were closed by observing the communion in memory of our blessed Lord.

While in the country Sister Herman Mehrens took me to the home of Sister Free, where we had a pleasant visit and conversation about the Blessed Hope, which is so precious to us all.

On Monday morning Brother John Mehrens and wife and Sister Cole, accompanied me to the home of Sister Johnson in the town, where I remained over night. On Tuesday morning I took the train for Dover, Minn. At Sioux City, Iowa, a lot of Methodist ministers got on the train. One of them took a seat beside me, and we soon fell into a conversation. He wanted to know the leading points where we differed from others. I told him it was in two points, viz: The premillennial advent of Christ foreign [illegible] that was a vision or pict[illegible] coming royalty of Jesus? D[illegible] know that Peter said: "We h[illegible] followed cunningly devised [illegible] when we made known unto y[illegible] power and coming of our Lord [illegible] Christ, but were eye-witnesses [illegible] majesty. For he received hono[illegible] and glory, when there came such [illegible] voice to him from the excellen[illegible] this is my beloved Son, in whom [illegible] well pleased. And this voice w[illegible] came from heaven we heard when [illegible] were with him in the holy mount."

He then asked, Don't you know that God said that "he is not the God of the dead, but the God of the living?" I told him I did, and that being the case, it was necessary that the dead should be raised in order that he may be the God of the living. I asked him if he did not know that this was Jesus' argument why the dead should be raised? "As touching the dead, that they rise: have ye not read in the book of Moses how in the bush God spake unto him" etc?

He then spoke of eternal punishment. I asked him if he did not know that God prevented such a calamity coming upon us of being afflicted with a race of immortal sinners by preventing Adam after he became a sinner, from partaking of the tree of life, lest he eat and live forever? He admitted there was lots of room for an argument on that question. I told him I once had a written discussion with a Chicago pastor named Smith, on the immortality question of which he took the affirmative. He asked me if he attempted to prove it from the Bible? I told him he did. "Well," said he, "he must have had a hard time of it." I told him that he did, and that I did not think he would want to try it again.

Now, just think of it; this preacher admits that the faith and hope he is advocating is one he would have a hard time to prove from the Bible! I think he is right. If I had a faith of that kind, I would throw it to the bats and moles.

Such is not the case with us, beloved in the Lord. We can easily prove ours from the Bible. Which is likely to be right, the faith that is easily, or that which is hard to be proven from the Bible? So much for an incident by the way.

The scenery across the country, over 300 miles, between Blair and Dover, is simply delightful. I arrived about 9:30 p. m. and being too late to [illegible] turb any one, put up at the hotel. In the morning I called up Brother Wilsie by telephone, and he soon came for me with his carriage. I begin meetings tonight, Oct. 2, in the hall, where I speak three nights, and then Sunday morning and evening in the United Brethren Church. Next go to Omro, Wis., and then to Albany.

"To the poor the gospel is preached" said Jesus. My heart is touched along that line. It makes me feel sad when I receive calls from some of God's dear children to go into their neighborhood and preach the glad tidings, who are too poor to pay my necessary expenses, and not being able to bear them myself, I have to let such places go by. If there are any who would like to make contributions to carry the gospel to the poor, even though it may be small, (many small sums in the aggregate make a large one) you may send them to my address, W. H. Wilson, 420 N. Willow ave., Austin Station, Chicago, Ill., and the money will be strictly used for that purpose alone. My wife will receive and care for it during my absence.

I want to bear this testimony, that while I am abroad trying to do good to others, I am richly blessed myself. This work of the Lord is so rich and blessed. I rejoice exceedingly. "Praise the Lord, O my soul."

W. H. Wilson.

Announcement.

The first quarterly Conference of the Church of God of Indiana, will be held at Plymouth, beginning on Thursday evening, Nov. 13, and continue over Sunday following.

We earnestly desire a large attendance at these meetings. It does us so much good to meet others who are also contending for "the faith." Let every Church and the isolated ones be represented. Come one, come all and help us to better know the needs of the State, so better work may be done in future than has been done in the past. You will be well cared for [illegible]

The Great Day of Jubilee.

TUNE—"RESTITUTION SONG."

Look to the East, ye weary traveler
See Israel returning to Jordan's strand.
Christ has foretold the great re-gathering
Transpiring in the promised land.

Chorus:—
See the celestial morn appearing
Soon life's dark night will all be o'er
Soon we'll see our blessed Savior
Face to face on Jordan's shore.

Jesus calls, oh hear his pleading.
Calls the ransomed of his name.
Be faithful yet, for soon he's coming
His Jubilee forever reigns.

Waste not your time in idle scorning,
Fear not those who strive within,
Give to the world his words of warning
Seeking to rescue it from sin.

Behold, our Lord, for soon descending
In the clouds of glory we shall see,
Soon Gabriel's trump will shout through the nation.
'Tis the Great day of God's Jubilee.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of our little daughter, Clara, died August 1st, 1902.

Yes, she sleeps neath the sod, little Clara,
The idol of heart and home.
Only lent of the Lord for a season,
Then to rise, sweetly rest, till he comes.

How sweet were the hours while she lingered,
How little we thought that ere long
The pale reaper, death, would claim her,
Our darling, our precious one.

But he came, the home circle is broken,
The bush of the flock was highest,
Oh, so sad is the home and lonely,
Since Clara, our loved one's away.

And our tears fall tonight for our darling,
We miss her sweet little face,
As we look at the bed where she rested,
And see her not there in her place

Oh, home where the vacant chair lingereth,
The dear God alone only knows,
The anguish of heart that it bringeth,
As we long for the dear ones we love.

But a morning of joy is nearing
And we anxiously watch and pray.
Hasten, oh hasten, dear Savior,
Hasten, the sweet, sweet day.

At home we'll be gathered with Jesus,
Our sorrows forever passed.
The glad fruition of all our hopes
Will be realized at last.

A Word of Warning.

To the brethren who have laid a good foundation, when you were baptized into the all-saving name of Christ, after believing the things pertaining to the kingdom and repenting, we must not stop at the good foundation laid or our work will be lost and we will be worse off than if we had not started in this grand work, but let us move onward and finish what we have begun, crown the foundation with a structure that will be acceptable of Christ, when he appears.

This is prompted by a report coming to me from a community of our brethren.

"For as touching the ministering to the saints; therefore I thought it necessary to exhort the brethren, that they would go before unto you, and make up beforehand your bounty, (blessing) whereof ye had notice before, (which hath been so much spoken of before,) (marginal reading) that the same might be ready, as a matter of bounty, and not as of covetousness. But this I say, He which soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully. Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly, or of necessity; for God loveth a cheerful giver. And God is able to make all grace abound toward you; that ye, always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound to every good work: (as it is written, He hath dispersed abroad; he hath given to the poor; his righteousness remaineth forever. Now he that ministereth seed to the sower both minister bread for your food, and multiply your seed sown, and increase the fruits of your righteousness;) being enriched in every thing to all bountifulness, which causeth through us thanksgiving to God; for the administration of this service not only supplieth the want of the saints, but is abundant also by many thanksgivings unto God; while by the experiment of this ministration they glorify God for your professed subjection unto the gospel of Christ, and for your liberal distribution unto them, and unto all men; and by their prayer for you, which long after you for the exceeding grace of God in you. Thanks be unto God for his unspeakable gift."

This is the whole of the 9th Chapter of 2nd Corinthians. I give it all here as I am afraid if I only stated where you would find it you might not take the time to look it up.

Those that love their money too much are not to be envied; but rather brethren, to be pitied, let us look into the reason why. A good young man gets married, buys a farm, a store, or something else; at any rate he assumes an indebtedness. Now of course he must pay off this debt, and can only do so by strict economy. Now, to this, no one, not even our Heavenly Father finds fault with, but my dear brother or sister he will, and has good cause if as soon as you are out of debt, you get immediately in again, by buying another "forty acres," or store, etc., and thereby slight your duty toward God of administering to the wants of the saints, and helping to further spread this precious gospel to others. Know you not that the saving of one soul covers a multitude of sins? "Habit is a cable of which we weave a thread each day until, at last we are unable to break it." Wefor - ed this cable while we were paying off the debt which was commendable, but don't allow yourself to become condemnable, so weave a thread of the cable of "GIVING" to God, and make that cable strong enough so that the other cable you wove will yield, hence helping you obtain salvation.

I think I hear a voice saying, "I preach and get not anything for it, why should this other brother get anything for his? mine is as good." Well, may be that other brother you are speaking of who is spending his time spreading the "precious truth," and even if not all his time, the greater part, would not accept a cent if he had one-half, or even one quarter as much as the one who uttered the remark. "Be not deceived, God is not mocked. As you sow, so also shall you reap." He reads the heart and reads it correctly.

To those who are always "short" buying more land or stores etc., don't you remember what was said to the man whose barns were not large enough to hold his grain and who was going to tear them down and build larger ones, "Thou fool, this night shall thy soul be required of thee." And listen to what was said to the rich young man who came to the blessed Master, saying, "All the commandments have I kept from my youth up. What shall I do to inherit eternal life? Go sell what thou hast and distribute, or give to the poor, and thou shalt be saved." The young man went away sorrowful... Why you know because he had made money his god. I might not have quoted verbatim but the meaning is not changed.

The farm hand, the clerk, and all who have their labor to sell, want their wages, and it is right that they should, but also remember when you read that "the laborer is worthy of his hire," that God too meant his laborers in his vineyard were worthy of their earthly hire as well as their reward in heaven, that to keep alive their bodies and put energy into their calling, would take food the same as if they were following the vocation of farmer, store-keeper, clerk etc., and I wonder if the evangelists do not like to see their wives and children look neat, have more than one dress, and if they don't feel bad when they do not receive enough for their labors to grant the desire, should not they receive as much as we who are following a money making business. Let us not forget that they are just common clay like we. with like desires.

A millionaire once said, "Is is a sad mistake to think that money makes one happy. Mine never made me happy until I started to do good with it." Example, Andrew Carnegie, he finds it a task to judiciously give his money away. A woman told me that I should stop reading my Bible. It was when I had nervous prostration, that she could not read here as it made her too nervous. Well, later I did not wonder at the remark as I found that her god was money, that she was not taking the only true and living God, and no wonder, to pretend to be a Christian and be stingy with what God has permitted you to make would take one with a very dulled sense of right and wrong to sleep well and read the condemnation pronounced on such.

Now brethren, we believe the time to the coming of our blessed Master is short. Don't let anything like this stand in our way. It might cause us to lose the crown. "Let us make our calling and election sure." Some have the feeling always present, that if they don't be as saving as possible, yes and even more so, that they will have to go to the poor-house in their old age. Well, if you did you would not be guilty of withholding from God, but this feeling is akin to being too envying and soon I will give you a good prescription for it. Just begin giving to God one-tenth of your income and you will be surprised how soon it will leave you. The feeling of going to the poor-house will not trouble you any more. Does not the Book teach that "Our Heavenly Father cares for those that love him," and "As the day is, so shall thy strength be?" No doubt we miss many blessings on account of our condition, we not being in the right mind or spirit, or there being something in our heart that should not be there prevents the blessing coming to us. This brings to my mind a story which will be instructive, so I will give it. A man who was quite wealthy in this world died, and he always had trouble as to where to put his money so that it would be safe. He was afraid that if he put it in the banks that they would fail, and he did not dare trust himself to invest it as he might make a mistake and did not dare trust any other person, they would rob him or charge him too much for investing it, so he died in this great quandery. When he arrived in heaven Peter asked him his vocation on earth, and heard what I have just quoted, and Peter gave him a wheel-barrow and his money and told him to find a safe-keeping place for it. Well, that was his work through eternity, no rest. Would'nt you like to go through eternity with the fear always staring you in the face, that you would have to go to the poor-house. The above prescription of giving one-tenth of your income is a sure cure.

I am not an evangelist, just an ordinary druggist who hopes for eternal life, by believing the things pertaining to the kingom, which were preached, first by our blessed Master and then by his apostles and now by his evangelists and teachers, and by a continuance in well-doing, so it is not selfishness that prompted me to write this article.

Now the whole question is simply this, which is your god? We all know ourselves best, and God knows what is in each and every heart, and he is not deceived. He reads the innermost thoughts, and his Word plainly teaches that you cannot serve God and mammon, and the prayer of your brother in Christ is that each will look unto himself and not let anything stand in the way of our crown of life which Paul with such pleasure looked for, and it is not for Paul only but for all those who love his appearing, and if there is anything in our hearts that condemns us will we rejoice at his coming?

Submitted in Christian love.

Millennium.

Dear Restitution:

When but a child I remember often hearing and reading the expression, "The Bible, the whole Bible, and nothing but the Bible is the religion of Protestants." Also that we must have "thus saith the Lord for everything we believe or teach." And again that "we should express what we believe in Bible language;" that if we cannot find the words in the Bible to express our ideas it is very doubtful if the ideas we express are there, and so on. Now in those days we thought those expressions pretty good, and I confess for myself, I think so yet. When we have something new or that we are not familiar with, it is a pretty good rule to see what the Bible says about it, and if we should not find the new thought expressed there, be pretty cautious about receiving it. It is not best to take anything for granted, no matter from whom it comes, except from the Bible, and even then we need to see whose words they are—I mean whether the speaker be God, Jesus, an apostle or prophet, or whether it be the serpent, a Pharisee or Saducee, etc. Today there are many words in common use used to express what the Bible is supposed to teach, which if we turn to the Bible for them, we do not find them there, and often the ideas are not there expressed in other words. For example we take the word millennium out of which comes millennial and then millennial dawn, millennial age, millennial glory, millennial peace, and so on millennial nearly everything. One writer says the great discovery of the 19th century is, that the work of the saints during the millennial age will be to raise from the dead all who, in the ages past, died without having heard the gospel, and to preach the gospel to them, by which means, all or nearly all will be saved. Other folks have other ideas about the millennium. Some hold that the Lord will come before and others after the millennium and so on, so that it is not easy to find out what all would entertain, that all would endorse. But what does the Bible say about the millennium? One would expect to find considerable about it, but where is it? We read from Genesis to Revelation and find not a word. True in Rev. xx. we read of a "thousand years," and the word millennium means a thousand years. Then why not express ourselves as it reads, and not substitute another word? When we vary a little we are apt to vary a little more, and a little more till we get far from the starting point. Thus by changing a thousand years to millennium we easily get a host of words we would not have, if we adhered to the Bible. Words such as millennial dawn, millennial age, millennial peace, millennial glory, etc. Words so often heard that many people suppose that when the Lord comes there will be no more war death or suffering, but that all will be peace and glory and happiness for the whole thousand years, during which the Lord with his saints would reign over the whole world, after which they would reign no more. They reign one thousand years no more. Now it seems to me that the thousand years will be very different from that. That at least a large portion of the thousand years will be occupied by war and conquest, that the Lord and his armies will go on from conquering and to conquer nation after nation, till all shall be subdued. He will break to pieces and consume all the kingdoms of the world, and all that will take time. He must reign (the saints with him) till he has put all enemies under his feet, even death must be rendered powerless, but I do not think this will all be done for a long time after he begins to reign. I am not sure but instead of the one thousand years being all peace, they may be all of conquest, so that at the end of the one thousand years he will have accomplished his mission and will present to the Father a restored world, all things made new. More anon.

Find enclosed money for my subscription and to pay for some extras of Sep. 10, with Bro. Robison's article as I wish to send them to parties I think it may benefit. That article of Bro. Robison's should be put in tract form and circulated among the people calling themselves "Christians" or "Disciples," and perhaps many might be led into the way of truth concerning God's kingdom.

Wife and I are alone here in the faith, and the only encouragement we receive except from each other and the Bible we get from the weekly visits of the dear old RESTITUTION. What a welcome messenger it is, ladened with its precious food from the pens of so many able writers, that builds us up and strengthens and encourages us to battle on for the prize that is set before us.

We have not been working long in the Master's vineyard, although I have been a reader of the paper for several years. It took a long while for me to get clear of the entanglements of sects and isms that I had been taught. But thanks to the Bible THE RESTITUTION and tracts supplied me I saw the truth, and taught it to my wife, and then arranged with Bro. Robison last May to come and help us to put on that sin-covering name in baptism; so we have arisen from the watery grave to walk in newness of life. May we so live that we may be living epistles known and read of all men, that our influence may go out for good to those that are about us. Pray for us that we may attain unto the resurrection from among the dead to inherit the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

Yours in hope of eternal life.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

May love, mercy and peace be and abide with you unto the coming of the Lord.

I have just returned from the Nebraska conference at St. Paul, where I had a very enjoyable time. I meet many of the faith I had never seen before, and was very kindly treated. I met our old friend Bro. Almus Adams whom I had not seen for seven years. Also Sister Adams. May the Lord bless and keep them is our prayer.

I also met Bro. W. H. Wilson from Chicago, and heard him set forth the oracles of God. May he be blessed in his work.

I will say to any one in Nebraska, Kansas or Missouri if you think good can be done in your locality, I would be pleased to call on you this winter and hold meetings. You can address me at Bassett, Neb.

In hope of the soon coming King.

Selections.

Miracles are Not Always Evidence of Divine Power.

The sainted John charged the church to try the spirits. Many spirits had gone out into the world, but they were not all to be believed; but were first to be tested by the Word of God. 1 John iv. 1.

However men may think of God's Word, and however they may treat it, he himself has a high regard for it, and will punish those who knowingly corrupt, or pervert it in teaching it to others. Said the apostle Paul: "We are not as many which corrupt- mar,- deal deceitfully with—the Word of God." 2 Cor. ii. 17. God's Word is not yea and nay; i. e., one thing in teaching to one, and a contradictory thing to another. 2 Cor. i. 18.

We have heard the advocates of great errors, when confronted with the positive statements of God, sanctimoniously claim, "Well, that is the way the Spirit revealed the matter to me." Never let such off without asking what spirit it was. The Holy Spirit and the Word of God agree.

We have seen people, even some Adventists, sit and bask in the fascinating spell and magnetism of false teachers, and pronounce it the great power of God, when in fact the teaching was a great contradiction of God. Is God divided against himself? In apostolic days Satan was transformed as an angel of light. 2 Cor. xi. 14. Soft spoken and fascinating as an angel of light: but in fact the same old deceiver as when he lied about God in Eden. Gen. iii. 3, 4.

Let it be remembered that it is the Word of God, and not even miracles that is the standard by which the spirits are to be tested. Isa. viii. 20. We do not always accept even the miracle of healing as of the Lord. We first inquire to whom and for what purpose has God delegated this power. Mormonism reports many, very many, cases of healing, that goes with as much authority as those of John Alexander Dowie, or Mr. Sanford, and some others that might be mentioned.

Rome has held its thousands in bondage by spectacular manifestations of healing power, and so practices to this day; as also Spiritism, and especially in its latest, and most fascinating phase, known as Christian Science. And who can say that all its claims to miracle-working power are deceptive frauds? We think those best acquainted with Mormonism, Dowieism, Sanfordism, and Spiritism, would be quite unwilling to admit that the only miracle performed is that of deception.

I cannot believe that all the miracles of Rome in mediaeval days were unmixed mockeries and senile fables. Nor do I see why, if Satan has the awful power to touch my mind, without consulting my will, and to inject into that mind unholy thoughts, without my permission, he may not have the power of doing deeds that the senses shall attest as altogether above the level of the natural. But you say, are not miracles the great proof of the inspiration of the Bible? And if a friend, or Dr. Wiseman were to do a miracle, would not that be evidence that his doctrines are right? Suppose that subtle controversialist, that devoted priest of his church, were to stand upon one of the graves of the dead, and were by his bidding to stir the cold ashes in their silent urn, and to bring forth the dead man and to show him among the ranks of the living, again taking his place in the arrangements of social life; the first question I would ask, as a spectator of the admitted supernatural act, would be, "Dr. Wiseman, what do you mean to prove by this miracle?"

In the Bible I find that every miracle our Savior wrought was not a piece of splendid fireworks, a vivid display of supernatural force, but omnipotent power, stretching down from the heavens to hold up a definite light, or doctrine, or truth. Every miracle in the New Testament was wrought, not to show that God was mighty, but to show that a certain truth was from God. Acting on these principles I ask this miracle-worker, "What is your object?" He says, "To prove that the Virgin Mary is immaculate, and that she ought to be worshiped as we worship her in the Church of Rome." What should, and I hope would instantly be my emphatic answer?

First, I should remember that in the last days they will do signs and wonders so startling, that if it were possible they would deceive the very elect.

Secondly, I should remember that Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light; and Thirdly, I should remember that the coming of the antichristian head is with all lying wonders; not false wonders. If you look at your Greek Testaments you will find it is.....miracles that prove a lie, not miracles.

I should remember lastly, "If we, or an angel from heaven preach any other gospel unto you than that which is here preached, let him be anathema." I would then turn round and say to this eloquent advocate of the worship of the Virgin Mary, who has wrought a miracle to prove it to me, "Get thee hence, Satan, for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve."

We have no doubt that there is both the genuine and the spurious in healing, and that the one may be as real as the other, with objects of each diametrically opposed to each other. The one to confirm faith in Bible truth, and the other to lead to the supposition that there is no great importance attached to Bible doctrine, and that God works through those who ignore it.—G. H. Wallace in Crisis.

Higher Criticism Criticised.

D. S. Margoliouth, M. A., professor of Arabic in Oxford University, England, himself a higher critic, in writing on the "Higher Criticism" in the Chicago Record Herald, remarks: "It is evident that all the hypotheses which it has produced have either broken down or been lost in a maze of hypotheses which are necessary to support the first, and that in the course of the procedure each place that seemed to offer firm ground has given way." And that is candid and true. The learned professor tells us that we know "in consequence of the researches of the higher critics," "very little, if anything," "more about the structure and dates of the books of the Old Testament than was known in the eighteenth century, or to the mediæval rabbis." And he further tells us that the various schools are contradictory, one utterly rejecting the conclusions of another, and thus concludes: "We can scarcely feel sure that the opinions which are now dominant may not be similarly ousted, though it may be difficult to predict the character of those that will be substituted for them." The child of faith has nothing to fear. He has put to the proof Christ's test, and has not found it wanting. John vii. 17.—Signs of the Times.

Editor Restitution:

On Sunday, Sept. 28th, Charles and Elsie Gesin, son and daughter of Bro. E. F. Gesin of Adeline, Ill. put on the sin covering name of Jesus by baptism. They came on Saturday to spend Sunday with the church in Oregon, and while with us they fulfilled the mission for which they came. Our prayer is that they may ever be found in the path of duty. As brethren, we mean to do all in our power to help them.

With this addition to the class of young people at Adeline good work for the Master should be done in that locality. Praise God that the young people are taking such an interest in the work. Let us all eagerly watch for his soon coming.

Editor Restitution:

As our Secretary at Oregon omitted the number of baptisms in my work in Illinois, and some wonder if any obeyed, I give the following information that the brethren may know that some will still take a stand for truth. Twenty obeyed the Lord in baptism in Illinois under my preaching, beside those baptized by Bro. Lindsay. It is probable a dozen are convinced of the truth to one who obeys.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

TO OUR PATRONS.

We want more readers for THE RESTITUTION. We want One Thousand new names on our list before January 1st, 1903, and can have them if you will help us.

In every Church of our faith in the land there are members who do not take our paper, who would be benefitted by reading it.

[illegible] by circumstances from any Church fellowship, who would be kept firmer in the faith, helped and strengthened for the battles of life if they had THE RESTITUTION each week.

There are others interested in the truths we hold, who would often have their attention called to the principles of our faith by reading our paper. When no preacher can be heard, when you cannot talk to them, THE RESTITUTION in their homes would be ever a present visitor—a missionary that will do more than any other one thing to keep the interest alive.

There are those whom we wish were interested in the Bible and what it promises. Many of this class of persons have never had the opportunity, or have neglected the matter when it was before them.

You are surely known to people such as are mentioned, and you are surely interested in them. We are satisfied you are not unmindful of their eternal well-being. How much do you care for these people? Will you join with us in getting the gospel before them, and keeping it there a year? We have this to offer to you for consideration.

We will send THE RESTITUTION one year to NEW Subscribers for $1.00. We will start them as soon as received and give credit to the end of 1903.

With a little persistent effort in presenting the paper to those you know who are not taking it, you can induce them to try it for $1.00. If you want some sample papers we will gladly supply them to you, and our list can be increased by 1000 names by Jan. 1st. It can be done easily if you will act on this suggestion, and get those near you interested. If each reader would get a new name our list would be doubled at once.

It would seem as if every reader of THE RESTITUTION could exert influence enough to get one more new name if the effort was made. Will you try it? If the first person you suggest it to does not respond, do not be discouraged, but try some one else. Perhaps the one you least expect will answer quickest.

Did you ever stop to figure up how many words are contained in our paper in a year? You will be surprised at the number of sermons it contains. There is variety too. There is doctrine and the practical, encouragement and cheer, and comfort for the distressed. Each phase of teaching would make several good sized books during the year. You can do no work that yields as large a return for the money expended as by sending THE RESTITUTION to a friend for a year.

Will you not start right away and send one name, and next week when that person gets his paper, some one else will hear of it, and you can send another subscriber.

VOLUME LI. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, OCTOBER 15, 1902. NUMBER 39.

Poetry.

The Day is at Hand.

Poor, fainting spirit, still hold on thy way—
The dawn is near!
True, thou art weary; but yon brighter ray
Becomes more clear.
Bear up a little longer; wait for rest;
Yield not to slumber, though with toil oppressed.

The night of life is mournful, but look on—
The dawn is near!
The dawn is pearl
[illegible]
Yield not to fear!
The mountain's summit will, ere long, be gained,
And the bright world of joy and peace attained.

"Joyful through hope," thy motto still must be—
The dawn is near!
What glories will that dawn unfold to thee!
Be of good cheer!
Gird up thy loins; bind sandals on thy feet;
The way is dark and long; the end is sweet.

The Spirit of God. No. 2.

There is one God, that is, he is one Person. "God is one," says Paul. Gal. iii. 20. If this is true, he is not "One in Three, and Three in One," as taught by "theology." The term "trinity," as employed in popular teaching, is of heathen origin, and is not found in the Bible, since the Bible dealt with nothing that required its use; and hence it is not a Bible term. From beginning to end the Scriptures state and re-state, in every conceivable way, that there is ONE GOD. Language could not be plainer than that setting forth this truth. "There is none other God but one.....To us there is but ONE GOD, the Father." 1 Cor. viii. 4, 6. "There is ONE God and Father of all, who is above all" (even "above" the "one Lord"). Eph. iv. 4-6. This truth was plainly set forth not by the apostles only, but from the lips of Jesus as well, who "declared" the Father unto us. John i. 18. Turning to John v. 44 in the R. V., we have him saying to the persecuting Jews, "How can ye believe who receive glory one of another, and the glory that cometh from the only God ye seek not?" A similar affirmation concerning the Godhead of only "ONE" is found in his reply to "one of the scribes," who questioned him concerning "the first commandment of all." "The first of all the commandments," said he, is "Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God is ONE LORD (The Lord is one. R. V.). And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, soul, mind, and strength." Mark xii. 28-30. The scribe who was familiar with the Hebrew Scriptures, replied, "Well, Master, thou hast said the truth: for there is one God; and there is NONE OTHER BUT HE." v. 32; Deut. vi. 4. Nowhere does Jesus intimate or leave the inference that more than One are required to constitute God. That ONE is not only acknowledged to be "the only true God," but is also the "God" of our Lord Jesus Christ, as can be seen from the following references. Matt. xxvii. 46; John xx. 17; Heb. i. 9; 1 Peter i. 4. Jesus gave honor to the Father, and prayed to him as God. Heb. v. 7. Nowhere did he arrogate to himself the honors belonging to God, though he repeatedly spoke of God as his Father, and of himself as God's Son. The "co-equality" of Jesus with the Father, contended for by "theologians," is not as much as hinted at in Scripture, while the superiority of the Father to the Son, and the inferiority of the Son to the Father, and his dependence on the Father, are almost constantly affirmed, both by himself and the apostles. "My Father is greater than I," said Jesus to his disciples. John xiv. 28. To the scoffing Jews he said, "The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do: for what things so ever he doeth, these also doeth the Son likewise.....I can of mine own self do nothing." John v. 19, 30. He did not even pretend to be the originator of the doctrine he taught, but said, "My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me." John vii. 16. He said to the Jews, "And now you seek to kill me, a man that hath told you the truth, which I have heard of God." John viii. 40. Here we have several truths:

1. Jesus did not claim to be a God, but "a man."
2. He told the Jews "the truth."
3. This truth did not originate with himself, but he heard it "of God." Had he been, or claimed to be, a "God," one God would have heard another.

The same truth was [illegible] Speaking under the figure of the human body, he says, "But I would have you know, that the head of every man is Christ; and the head of the woman is the man; and the Head of Christ is God." 1 Cor. xi. 3. The head is indispensible to the life of the body. It is the seat of the intellect, and directs the movements and actions of the body. Now if "the head of every man is Christ," every man can do nothing without Christ (see John xv. 5). In like manner, Christ can do nothing without God, "the Head of Christ." Paul goes so far as to say that "Christ is God's" (1 Cor. iii. 23), the possessive showing that "Christ is God's" own or possession, his Agent through whom he accomplishes his will. In the same way the saints are "Christ's" own, belonging to him.

God also "exalted" Jesus "to his own right hand to be a Prince and a Savior" (Acts v. 31), and this exaltation was not because Jesus was a God (in which case one God would be exalting another), or because he previously existed as an immortal spirit, and God re-instated him in a former position; but because he was "obedient unto death, even the death of the cross"—"WHEREFORE God hath highly exalted him." Phil. ii. 6-11.

God gave the Spirit without measure to Jesus, as John the Baptizer testified. John iii. 34. "God anointed Jesus with Holy Spirit and power (dunamis, ability): who went about doing good, and healing all that were oppressed of the devil; for God was with him." Acts x. 38. A little careful thought will show at once the awkwardness of the position of "Trinitarianism," which claims three are God, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit. According to this view the above Scripture teaches that one God anointed another God with a third God. If, on the other hand, we accept the truth that "there is one God, the Father," that this God and Father has a Son, and that he also has a Spirit with which he anointed his Son, thus enabling him to perform mighty works, the subject is divested of its "mystery," and all is clear to the understanding.

Various Scriptures are cited in the effort to prove that there are "Three in One, and One in Three" to make one God. John x. 30 is cited to show that Jesus and the Father are "one." And indeed, Jesus himself distinctly said, "I and my Father are one." But will any one say they are one in the sense of being the same Person? When this is established it is proven that when Jesus died, God died, and hence for three days and three nights there was no living God." Indeed it is sung in a certain hymn, "The immortal God for sinners died." That "Christ died for our sins," the Scriptures solemnly and repeatedly affirm (1 Cor. xv. 3; Rev. i. 18), and we rejoicingly believe it; but we do not and cannot believe that God died, since he is immortal (1 Tim. vi. 16), and lives for ever. Deut. xxxii. 40. In what sense, then, are Jesus and the Father "one?" They are one in mind, in purpose. The Father desires that certain things shall be done, and the Son delights to do them. John iv. 34. In the same way he desires his own to be "ONE, AS WE ARE." John xvii. 11, 21, 23. This argues most emphatically and distinctly against the contention that God and Jesus are One Person. Another Scripture cited to prove the "Three-in-One" theory, is 1 John v. 7, 8. The R. V. rendering of this passage is, "And it is the Spirit that beareth witness, because the Spirit is the truth. For there are three who bear witness, the Spirit, and the water, and the blood: and the three agree in one." The words, "in heaven, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, and these three are one," are not in the Sinaitic, Vatican, and Alexandrian MSS. They are omitted by all the modern translations. They are marked as spurious by Griesbach, Lachmann, Tischendorf, Tregelles, Alford, and Wordsworth. Young classes them among the "interpolations." They are the product of men who [illegible] to maintain the trinitarian [illegible] all hazards, and to do so, [illegible] to the text. Their absence from the oldest MSS., and the "Fathers" up to Cyprian A. D. 253, is the strongest argument against their genuineness. Hence these words, as Dr. Young observes, "are never to be adduced as proof texts." Therefore those verses, because spurious, do not prove that "Three are one." Before leaving this part of our subject we will consider Paul's saying, "There is one God, and one Mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus." 1 Tim. ii. 5. This clearly shows a distinction not simply between "God and man," but also between "God" and "Christ Jesus" who is also a "man." Christ Jesus is not the Mediator between man and man, nor between God and God; nor is he the "one Mediator, the God Christ Jesus." As children are partakers of flesh and blood, even so he himself likewise took part in the same, that he might suffer death in behalf of those who were subject to death. Heb. ii. 14.

A. H. ZELMER.

The Second Coming of Christ.

How little we hear preached on this subject during the closing of these Gentile times. Some profess to believe in his second coming, but are ignorant of the real object of that coming. Others say I believe the doctrine but I dread to think of it. I was talking to a friend the other day who is well informed in the doctrine of Campbell but thought that the promise might have been fulfilled at the destruction of Jerusalem. His mind seemed a blank on this subject. The churches of today are asleep on this grand thought viz., Behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his works shall be. Rev. xxii. 12. The preaching of the doctrine of the immortality of the soul does away with the necessity of his coming again. If we go to heaven at death why should Christ come again? No need of such an event. Our Savior's warning to the Jews is as true today as it was when he uttered it viz., by your tradition you have made the Word of God of none effect. How few today believe Paul in Col. iii. 1-5. If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God. Set your affection on things above not on things on the earth. For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory. The reward that Christ has promised is eternal life and we are to receive it when he comes. So those who believe this are patiently waiting his coming. Paul says that Christ is our high priest and that he has entered into heaven itself to appear for us. He is our Advocate. Under the law the High Priest entered the Holy of holies to offer sacrifice for himself and for the people who were expectantly waiting his return that they might receive the blessing. Now if the people had not thus been waiting would they have received the blessing? Certainly not, so we must be in an attitude of expectancy if that blessing of life comes to us when he appears. Peter speaks prophetically of these times when he says that there shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying, Where is the promise of his coming? For since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation. Paul expected to receive his crown at Christ's appearing and kingdom. This same apostle in writing to the Thessalonians says, "We say unto you by the Word of the Lord, that we who are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent (go before) them which are asleep. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words. [illegible] 14-18. The apostle here plainly declares that Christ will come to raise the dead and change the living. In Rom. viii. 11 we read if the spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his spirit that dwelleth in you. If we have not this spirit he will not raise us up. He that believeth on the Son of God hath the witness (spirit) in himself. He that believeth not God hath made him a liar; because he believed not the record that God gave of his Son, and this is the record that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son. He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life. With this testimony can we expect a reward if we do not believe the record that God has given us. We get his spirit by believing what God has said concerning his Son. Part of that record is that he will come again. The times of this ignorance God winked at; but now commandeth all men everywhere to repent; because he hath appointed a day, in which he will judge (rule) the world in righteousness by that man (Christ) whom he hath ordained or raised from the dead. Read carefully the parable spoken by our Savior in Luke xix. In which he represents himself as the nobleman who was to go into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom (kingly authority) and return. After his return he became a ruler as I called his servants to an account for their actions during his absence. In the xiv. of St. John he says I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am ye may be also. We have the testimony of two angels who said: "This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven. Acts i. 11. Peter in Acts iii. 20, 21 says further, God will send Jesus Christ whom the heavens must receive (retain) until the times of the restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began. Here we have the testimony of Christ, the angels and the apostle Peter. Surely we should not discredit such witnesses. Is there any sacred or profane history that Christ came at the destruction of Jerusalem? No not one word. The historian Luke says chap. xxi., Behold the fig tree, and all his trees; when they now shoot forth, ye see and know of yourselves that summer is now at hand, so likewise ye, when ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is at hand. Verily I say unto you, This generation (that sees these signs) shall not pass away, till all be fulfilled. In Matt. xxiv. 33 it reads, "When ye shall see all these things know that it is near at hand. Margin, he is nigh at hand. In the face of these testimonies can we consistently remain ignorant of this grand truth that Christ will come again to restore this earth to its former glory, when our first parents were inhabitants. Think of what God has in store for his worthy ones who believe the gospel, repent of their sins, obey the gospel and walk in newness of life. A new earth with eternal life to enjoy it, no disease or death. What a picture to contemplate. May we be found worthy when the Lord shall come.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Why Rejoice.

A brother in Arizona, sends me the following question: "Why is it necessary for us to think as we do, in order to be able to rejoice as we do at the Lord's coming?"

Those who do not know anything about his coming, cannot rejoice in it at all; neither can those who have but a partial knowledge of his coming rejoice in it to the same extent as those who possess a more accurate knowledge, as for instance, a second Adventist believes that when Jesus comes, his mission will be as a destroyer, to exterminate the earth and all that are thereon, with the exception of those who are Christ's at his coming. Contrast this with the Bible view of his coming, that in place of his coming as a destroyer, he comes as a restorer, to bless and save. "In thee shall all nations be blessed." Then to have this rejoicing at his coming it is necessary to "believe as we do," that he comes as a restorer, to bless and save, otherwise we could not rejoice at his coming. He could not come as "the Desire of all nations," if he came to curse "all nations," he certainly would not come as "the desire of all nations," for the reason that all nations do not "desire" destruction. When Jesus said, "Surely I come quickly," we could not respond as did John on Patmos: "Even so, come, Lord Jesus," if he was coming as a destroyer.

We read in God's Book: "Men shall be blessed in him: all nations shall call him blessed." All nations would not have the opportunity to call him "blessed" if he should destroy all nations at his coming. It is quite necessary, then, "to think as we do," "in order to be able to rejoice as we do at the Lord's coming." "Let the righteous be glad; let them rejoice before God; yea, let them exceedingly rejoice. Sing unto God, sing praises to his name; extol him that rideth upon the heavens, by his name JAH (YAH) and rejoice before him." "The Lord reigneth; let the earth rejoice; let the multitude of isles be glad." "Let the heavens rejoice; let the earth be glad; let the sea roar and the fullness thereof. Let the field be joyful, and all that is therein: then let all the trees of the wood rejoice before the Lord; (Why?) For he cometh, for he cometh to judge the earth; he shall judge the world with righteousness, and the people with his truth." If we believed that he was coming to set the world on fire, we could not so rejoice.

Obituary.

Died at her home in Frankfort, Ind., Oct. 3, 1902, Sister Naomi Burgett, wife of Emanuel Burgett; age 67 years. Her demise was due to acute dysentery, after an illness of seven weeks' duration. A year ago she became partially paralized and was a constant sufferer, but bore her sufferings so patiently. To know her was to love her and many times when my father was holding meetings in this part of the country her house was our home, where I was treated as one of her own. She was a true Christian, and we know that she sleeps in Jesus. My father, J. S. Hatch, preached the funeral. Then she was brought fourteen miles into the country to be buried, near her relative near her old home. She leaves a husband, one son and daughter, who are both married, and five grand children, together with three brothers and four sisters, with a host of friends to mourn for one whom they loved. But sorrowing ones, she is taking her rest, her last sleep, which will be but a short sleep to her, then in the morning of the resurrection she will come forth clad in immortality with the bloom of youth upon the cheeks that were so pale and sunken.

O glad day, soon may it come and put a stop to the work of the enemy death.

MOQUART said, "I see that spirituality of mind is the main qualification for the work of the ministry."

FULLER said, "Our want of usefulness is much oftener to be ascribed to our want of spirituality than to any want of natural ability."

JESUS says, "No man can serve two masters, for either he will hate the one, and love the other, or else he will hold to the one and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon." Matt. vi. 24.

WHY Christ suffered, "For it became him, for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the Captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings." Heb. ii. 10.

THE activity of the nations everywhere, their commerce, their political revolutions, their social transformations,—are all so many elements in the preparation of a place for the Body of Christ, and the transfer of the government of the earth to Jesus and his brethren!!

A WISE self-understanding man, instead of aiming at talents he has not, will cultivate those that he has, as the way in which Providence points out his way to be useful. We see by what Paul wrote to Timothy, (1 Tim. iv. 14; 2 Tim. i. 6) not to neglect, but to stir up the gift of God which was in him, that it had been given to him to be improved; and it follows from this, that not only the abuse, but the neglect of it would have to be accounted for.

REGARDING the condition of affairs in the Balkan region, we quote from a dispatch of Oct. 11, as follows: "It is impossible to obtain trustworthy information as to what is really happening in the Balkans. There are two rival revolutionary factions at work in Macedonia and they flatly contradict each other's statements. The news of the uprising is certainly serious and the action of Turkey after a council of war at the Yildiz palace on Thursday was on such a scale that it was evident that a big campaign was under way. The porte complains that Russia's ally, Bulgaria, is chiefly responsible for fomenting the trouble. It is learned that Russia and France are ostentatiously urging the porte to take the situation in hand and suppress the insurrection. The diplomatists who represent other powers do not conceal their suspicions that the peaceful protestations of the dual alliance are insincere and that Russia's real desire is that the insurrection shall continue in order to mask and promote her ultimate designs."

SUCH headlines as "England is near a religious war," "Bitter struggles over education bill array ancient foes for action," "Peril to the government," etc., given in the daily papers, indicate serious difficulties over something little understood in America. In England the elementary schools to the number of about 6,000 are strictly secular, and called board schools, managed by school boards, through whom the government pays all bills, and assumes all responsibility. The others numbering some 14,000 are called voluntary schools, and are supported largely by religious denominations; about 12,000 to the Anglicans, 1,000 to the Roman Catholics, the rest to Protestant churches outside the Church of England. The new "Education Bill" puts all these voluntary schools under government control and provides for their support from public taxes. The secular authorities to appoint part of the trustees and the denominations part. The Nonconformists, such as Baptists, Presbyterian, Methodist, etc., are numerically weak, and see danger that with all the schools under secular control their religious instruction will soon be lost entirely; besides many of the Anglicans who see the increasing tendency of the English Church toward ritualism and Catholicism, see that it is but a step till priests are in charge largely. All want government support but not control. Whatever the outcome be, it is making much stir throughout all England, and serious trouble is expected.

Jews and the Holy Land.

The London Daily Express brings us word of Mr. Smedly Greene's project for a crusade of Christians, based upon money instead of arms. The object is to purchase the land from the Sultan and establish a semi-independent state. Several men of wealth endorse the plan, and thinks the wealth of the Jews, as a power behind the thrones could control the powers directly concerned and keep them from quarreling about the matter, as well as operate upon them to use their influence to make the Sultan behave himself. Many letters, favorable and unfavorable to the project have been received by the Express, among them the following:

Sir,—There are other religious difficulties besides those mentioned by Mr. H. Rider Haggard. The Holy Land belongs by Divine decree to the Jews, and their re-instatement is only a question of time.

The Zionist movement is in accordance with the Hebrew prophecies, and will therefore succeed up to a certain point; and then Jesus Christ, in fulfilment of numerous prophecies in the Old and New Testaments, will return to restore the throne of David and re-establish the kingdom of Israel. A republic in the Holy Land is at variance with God's long revealed purposes.—J. J. Andrew.

Another writer refers to this letter as follows:

Sir,—Your correspondent J. J. Andrew is absolutely right in his letter to the Express. All history proves the truth of the Bible. All the prophecies in the Bible have been, are being, or will be fulfilled.

Take a map, take a universal history and take the Bible. Read and compare. Consider the history of the Jews, and of the Roman Church. Consider the current events in international politics. Then it is easy to perceive the significance of the Zionist movement.

We are approaching the great "time of trouble"—"I will shake all nations."—Student of Prophecy.

And a contemporary magazine commenting upon the foregoing says what we say amen to heartily.

"With such formidable plans as are put forth for the settlement of Palestine, the echoes of the cry of the poor Roumanean and Russian Jews in all the world, the nations urging each other to demand fair play for the sons of outcast Israel, and the policy of self protection closing all doors against the "wandering Jew," except the door to their ancient home—with all this, surely we may be encouraged to believe that the time to favor Zion cannot be far off."

Beloved, let us give our God no rest till he make Israel a praise in all the earth.

"Obedience!"

Peter exhorted those who were pricked to their heart by his sermon on the day of Pentecost, to "Repent and be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sin," Acts ii. 37, 38; and in the absence of later instruction which supercedes this, it is the imperative duty of all who believe the gospel Peter preached, and wish to procure pardon of their sins, to do the same.

The prevailing idea among religionists generally, is that the ordinance of baptism into the name of Jesus Christ is not necessary to salvation,—that it is merely a matter that may, or may not be set aside according to taste or opinion. Thus the vast majority of Christendom put it aside as a useless ordinance, or nullify it by the unscriptural doctrine of infant sprinkling. We recently read of a conversation that took place between a brother in the faith, and a minister on this subject, as follows:—I asked:

"Is baptism a command of Christ?

Ans. I admit it is, but not absolutely necessary to salvation.

Ques. What do you say, then, is necessary to salvation?

Ans. Faith in the Lord Jesus Christ.

Ques. Does not faith in the Lord Jesus Christ imply obedience to his commands inasmuch as he declares, "Ye are my friends if you do whatsoever I command you?" John xv. 14.

Ans. I admit the force of your remarks as to obedience to Christ, but who is to decide as to the subjects and methods when scholars differ?

Ques. Do scholars differ as to the manner or subjects by appeal to the Scriptures?

Ans. In some instances, which I can not call to mind just now.

Ques. Do you consider the command given to Adam imperative as to the forbidden fruit?

Ans. Certainly.

Ques. Do you also consider the command given to Abraham as to circumcision imperative?

Ans. Yes, under the law, etc.

Ques. Then, if these commands are imperative and binding, the violation of them bringing punishment, do you not consider the non-fulfilment of Christ's commands, under what you term the law of grace, deserving of equal punishment?

Ans. Perhaps, putting it in that light, there is much force in your statements.

This, in substance, was the conversation and admission made by a minister who sprinkles helpless babes, and, by practice, nullifies his own admission as to the sacredness and binding character of Scriptural commands. Those ministers speak to their people on the importance of faith and obedience to Christ, yet they themselves turn aside from the plain and direct path Christ commands. Ignorance, when light is obtainable is no excuse, and cannot be put in as a plea when these things have been plainly pointed out as the implicit truths of Scripture.

With all earnestness we would point out to any who may read this, how important it is to attend now to the exhortation of Peter. If pricked to the heart, and the truth as it is in Jesus is believed why delay? Have you a lease of life and ample opportunity? If your conscience is aroused, and the truth demands surrender, will you get a more convenient season?

Paul says: "I was obedient to the heavenly vision." The same Christ through the Scriptures speaks to you that spoke to Paul. He said, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" Are you ready to say the same? If not, why not? Will you turn a deaf ear and put from you the gift of God—eternal life? If Christendom declares the commands of Christ not necessary, Scripture does not,—the inspired apostles do not. This exhortation included every one of the three thousand anxious ones before Peter,—and hence there can be no escape because of the traditions of men?

Do you say it will entail persecution and suffering for Christ's sake? Well, yes; but remember the apostolic Word, that if we suffer with him we shall also reign with him. This promise is just as absolute as the conditions which are exacted. The invitation is first to suffer, then to reign.

Not to be known now, except to be disowned and isolated by the popular religionists is the lot of all who confess the truth of God before men. But what of it? Have we not another absolute promise that all such will be confessed by him before the Father and the holy angels? Yea, verily.

This shows that the changes will be rung by-and-by. Be patient, brethren, we shall exchange our poverty and loneliness for riches and honor, and an eternal weight of glory. Yes, the cross will be exchanged for crowns; dishonor for honor, shame and reproach for equality with angels and the high places of earth. Rev. v. 10.

"The Grave of Protestantism."

At a Confederation of Catholic Societies in Chicago recently, the following statement was read, "Infidelity, agnoticism, or absolute indifference is already digging the grave of Protestantism." It was declared to be one of the most important missions of the federation to secure the help of laymen in making this country Catholic. That the United States would become Catholic was no idle dream. And Dr. Stuckenberg, in the social section of the Homiletic Review, commenting upon this statement says:—

"Here is a definite end, prosecuted with the great power and wonderful machinery of Catholicism, under the inspiration of the hope of success. Protestants who are wise, who appreciate their heritage, and who recognize their grand mission will not fail to consider this scheme of conquest, and the duty it imposes upon them. The disintegration of Protestantism is a patent fact. Infidelity, agnosticism, and indifference are not the only causes. Catholicism is a united, compact, and determined host, facing denominations and sects which cannot even unite to defend themselves against a foe who threatens to annihilate them. There are other significant facts. For some decades the Catholic church made astonishing progress in coherence and strength. Its political influence has ever been on the increase, so that today it is one of the most powerful factors in elections and legislation. We are continually reading of conversions from Protestantism. No priest will marry a Protestant and Catholic without a vow that the children shall be Catholic.....Since 1896 the emigration from Catholic countries has been far greater than from Protestant countries. Last year 178,875 came from Italy; 171,089 from Austria-Hungary.....New England is being overrun by Irish, Italians, and French Canadians. Continuing, he shows that there are several powers at work that must be reckoned with,—and that our freedom makes a paradise for Jesuits and other orders, and that behind what appears on the surface is a deep but unseen sea. That the persistent purpose of Ultramontanism is that American and Protestant Germany are both to be brought to Rome. And quotes from the Vatican organ at Rome, that Catholics ought to welcome freedom of worship when they are in the minority, but are not bound to respect it when they obtain the majority. He then closes with a quotation from the Western Watchman to show what it would do if it could:—

"We would like to rack and quarter Protestantism; we would like to impale it, and hand it up for crows to build nests of. We would like to tear it with pincers; we would like to fill it with hot irons; we would like to fill it with molten lead, and plunge it into hell-fire a hundred fathoms deep."

In Cleveland one of its leading pulpit orators on the 5th of October in giving a glimpse of life at Newport, R. I., speaks of "the terrific balls, receptions, dinners, and teas with which these millionnaires make Rome how hall winter. Then think of the flash of jewels, the clink of glasses, the dream of sensuous music, the revel, the wassail, reeling men, swaying women, unholy amours, illicit affection, palaces of evil, mansions of lust, and you have a dim suggestion of a luxury in our land that puts to blush all the orient, Babylon, Egypt, Greece, Rome, or any nation that ever existed on earth." And yet before closing had the temerity to predict that existing Christian agencies would leave the whole lump and usher in a universal spring; oblivious of the fact that the gospel of the kingdom Jesus preached is the only power of God that converts, and that his word-picture of these times, agrees with the moral condition of the world before the flood, and also that at the time of the Son of Man to seal the doom of those who teach lies in the name of the Lord. "Lord Jesus quickly come."

Big Concession to Russia.

[Brief mention was made in these columns of Russian warships passing the Dardanelles. The following from the Chicago Tribune will give in detail the account of the incident, and the bearing it has with other nations, especially England.—ED.]

In order to appreciate the full importance of the appearance of the Grand Duke Nicholas at Constantinople, under the walls of the Yildiz Kiosk, on board a Russian ironclad, under the pretext of paying a state visit to the Sultan, it is necessary to bear in mind that no foreign battleship has passed through the Dardanelles straits since the Crimean war, forty-seven years ago.

That war, resulting in the defeat of Russia by the united forces of France, England, Turkey, and Sardinia, was brought to a conclusion by the so-called treaty of Paris of 1856, according to the terms of which Russia was debarred from rebuilding the defenses of Sebastopol, and from fortifying any port in the Black sea, while the straits of the Dardanelles were closed for all time to the passage of any ships of war save those of Turkey.

The Black sea was at the time neutralized, and while opened to the commerce of the world, was closed to the ships of war of every kind, save a limited number of small gunboats for revenue purposes and for policing the [illegible]. At the close of the war between France and Germany in 1870, Russia, however, took advantage of the situation to address a circular note to the signatory powers, declaring that it declined to be bound any longer by those stipulations of the treaty which provided for the neutralization of the Black sea.

This led to an international congress in London, which resulted in an amendment of the treaty of Paris in so far that Russia was permitted to maintain any number of warships she saw fit in the Black sea. But the straits of the Dardanelles were declared as strictly barred as ever to all men of war. The result of this has naturally been that Russia has been compelled until now to build all the ships of its large and powerful Black sea fleet on the shores of the Black sea, since it has been impossible for the czar to bring into the Black sea any of the men of war which have been built in his Baltic shipyards or in foreign countries.

As Russia has no port on the Mediterranean she has been obliged when any of the ships of her Mediterranean squadron have been in need of repair, drydocking, etc., either to depend upon the friendly offices of France, of Greece, of England, or of some other Mediterranean power, or else to send the man of war in question all the way back through the straits of Gibraltar up the stormy bay of Biscay and the North sea to her naval arsenals on the Baltic.

It will readily be understood that Russia has chafed bitterly under these costly restrictions, so galling and humiliating to her national pride. Indeed, it is only the reluctance to involve herself in a war with a coalition of great powers that has induced her to submit until now to such a well nigh intolerable condition of things, for when in the war between Russia and Turkey, in 1876, the former wished to use her Mediterranean fleet to awe Constantinople, she was warned by the signatory powers of the treaty of Paris, and in particular by Great Britain, that the attempt of any Muscovite man of war to enter the straits of the Dardanelles would be regarded as a casus belli and would have the effect of ranging the powers in question on the side of the Porte against Russia. The latter had enough on its hands at the time without wishing for further trouble, and accordingly abstained from making that naval move on Constantinople which, if there had been no interference from the powers, would have brought the struggle to a rapid and victorious conclusion.

Some weeks ago the Czar's government inquired of the Porte, as the power owning the territory on either side of the Dardanelles, whether there would be any objection to Russian ships of war passing through the straits if the guns were unmounted and the vessels reduced for the time to the inoffensive condition of merchantmen. The Sultan seems to have made use of this request to attempt to drive a bargain with Emperor Nicholas, while the great powers of the world, instead of protesting, remained silent.

It is this attitude of the powers, as well as of the porte, that has seemingly induced the czar to determine to waste no more time in negotiation and preliminaries, but to confront the parties concerned with a "fait accompli." Accordingly, he dispatched his cousin, Grand Duke Nicholas, the son of that grand duke who commanded the army that was halted at San Stefano in its victorious march on Constantinople in 1877, to pay a visit to the Sultan at Stamboul, on board a Russian battleship bearing the name of the procurator general of the holy synod, George Pobiednotsoff—that is to say, of the statesman of all others in Russia who is most particularly identified with the pan-Slavist movement and with the religious aspirations of the Muscovite people to supplant the crescent with the cross at Stamboul.

It is probable that the result of the grand duke's visit, and above all of his action in taking a Russian man of war through the straits to Constantinople, will be another congress, or possibly merely an interchange of notes, according to the terms of which the Dardanelles will be neutralized in the same fashion as the Suez Canal is, and will be open to the war ships of all nations without any hindrance.

Genesis.

The book of Genesis is the most ancient and the most venerable, the most instructive, and the most indispensable of all books. It is the foundation, the beginning, and we may say, the anticipated explanation of all the others. The name "Genesis" means the birth. This title is a most suitable one to be given to the first book of the Bible, for it makes known to us the birth of all things,—the birth of the world,—the birth of the earth and of the heavens; the birth of the light,—the birth of the atmosphere,—the birth of the great lights of heaven,—the birth of continents and seas; the birth of mountains and valleys; the birth of plants, birds, fishes and quadrupeds; then last of all, the birth of the first man and woman; and then soon after, alas! the birth of sin; but also the birth of the gospel; then the birth of the Church of God in the world; and then again the new birth of the earth after the flood, and the birth of the nations who re-peopled it: and lastly the birth of the nation of Israel; and yet the learned (?) throw it away.

"TRUTH can stand any test, and fears nothing but the lukewarmness of her friends, in whose house she is more frequently wounded than in conflict with its foes."

Report of Conference.

The seventeenth Annual Conference of the Church of God of the State of Nebraska was held, as previously stated, at St. Paul, Neb., beginning Sept. 5th, and convening till the 14th inclusive.

On account of the trains being delayed we did not arrive in St. Paul in time to erect the large tent for the meeting Friday evening, so the meeting was held in the court house Friday night. We had beautiful weather throughout the meetings, not even having a thunder shower to interfere with the meetings.

There was a Free Methodist revival meeting being held there at the same time as our Conference, but it did not interfere with the attendance of our own meetings.

All who attended the Conference pronounced it one of the best meetings ever held in Nebraska. All who attended were well repaid for the expenses of travel and all who did not attend missed one of the greatest feasts of their lives. Though not so many speakers were present during the meetings as have been at meetings in the past yet the truth was very elaborately expounded to large and very attentive audiences. The sermons were all so harmonious, being free from any discord whatever. If any one had any hobbies they were not introduced at any of the meetings.

The cities which were represented at the Conference were—Ainsworth, Ashland, Blair, Bassett, Chicago, Columbus, Holbrook, Kearney, Lincoln and Omaha. Through the hospitality and brotherly love of the congregation of St Paul all visitors were well cared for, and each and every one left St. Paul with a feeling of satisfaction, and a warm spot in their hearts for the dear brothers and sisters of that congregation. I went to St. Paul as a stranger in the flesh, but returned with a feeling of life-long friendship. We gladly met the dear ones of like precious faith, but O, how sad that the time must come when we are compelled to say "good bye." O what a glorious time that will be when we may all meet and "good bye" will be unknown, when we will be free from sorrow, pain or death. May that time soon come to pass is my prayer.

The officers of the Conference were elect as follows: President, E. Lipincott, Blair; Secretary, Emma Elton, Omaha; Treasurer, John Mehrens, Blair; Evangelist, Almus Adams, Omaha.

Solicitors of Evangelist's fund were elected as follows: Sister Williamson for St. Paul; Sister Carrie Free of Blair, Sister Emma Elton of Omaha, and Brother S. A. Story for Holbrook. A Berean society of Nebraska was organized. The officers elected as follows: Rena Gordon, President; Eva Mehrens Secretary and John Mehrens Treas.

Evangelist report: Amount received $351.80, expended $28 95, amount less expense $321.21. Number of sermons 93, baptized 8.

Treasurer's report: Money received for year 1902 $364.36, paid Evangelist $351.86, on hand $12.50.

The time each day was occupied by song services, sermons by Bros. Almus Adams, W. H. Wilson, C. H. Shultz, Herriman and Bartlett, besides Bible readings and social meetings.

On account of bad roads and busy times after we got home the report is delayed somewhat.

Submitted in love.

EMMA ELTON, Sec.

Dear Brethern and Sisters:

I moved from Scholls, Oregon, to Orangeville, Cal., last January. Was married Sept. 14, to Miss Mollie Davis of this place. Have purchased a place here and expect to make this my home. Have preached for brethren at Oleander as often as I could, but during the busy fruit season could do but little. I hope to do some work later in the season. I am rejoicing in hope and ever thankful that these precious truths concerning a coming kingdom and life through Christ, were made known to me. It seems that the world in general is slumbering on to destruction, and so many of the believing ones are growing cold. Oh! let us be careful brethren, and zealous of good works. Do we realize as fully as we should what it really means to be SAVED or to be LOST? Language cannot express the joy of endless life in God's kingdom. May it be our happy portion to soon meet with our coming King and to reign with him in glory. To this end let us watch and pray.

Yours awaiting his coming.

EDWIN GROAT.

Poetry.

A Window Picture.

Enclosed within my window frame
A fairer picture lies
Than artist's hand could ever paint
With all his magic dyes.

Broad fields with daisies all abloom:
Low hills in greenness dressed;
While in the background, blue and dim,
The mountains raise their crest.

A changing picture, now, the sun
Lights all with mellow tint:
Then clouds, and over field and wood
The darkening shadows glint.

Yet ever, midst the changing light
The distant mountains tower,
Firmly outlined against the sky,
In grandeur, calm and power.

And thus my window picture lies,
Changing, but ever fair;
For summer sun or summer cloud
But adds new beauty there.

DRAWBACKS AND HINDRANCES.

"That they all may be one.....that the world may believe that thou hast sent me."

In some previous articles mention was made of Eureka. Some quotations were given from it, and references made to certain extravagant eulogiums pronounced on it by the late editor of the Christadelphian. As to whether Eureka was no "Drawback or Hindrance" to the "Gospel Recovered," the reader will judge later on.

In the "Millennial Harbinger" 23rd Aug., 1885, Detroit, Mich., editor T. G. Newman,—we find two eulogiums on Eureka. Referring to the Apocalypse, and the expected issue of Vol. II. of Eureka, a writer says:—"Hence the responsibility and the honor of making it (the Apocalypse) intelligible to 'the unlearned,' that they may be duly warned of the thief-like coming of the Ancient of Days.....The exposition of the Apocalypse is a duty that must be fulfilled before the coming of Jesus Christ.....The offer is now made to all disposed to 'devise liberal things' that 'by liberal things they may stand' before the Judge, and sharing in the honor of presenting a work.....which none but a Christadelphian can perform, and which will be held in remembrance for a thousand years.....such is the view of the matter presented to me by the Dr." signed S. W. Coffman, Adeline, Ill.

This is followed by J. Donaldson, Detroit, Mich., who says that "All previous expositions of this.....Book have been failures.....This is not the case with our brother John Thomas who.....is capable of giving a true exposition in harmony with the whole Book of divine inspiration."

Such ideas as the above of the supreme importance of the Apocalypse, and the failure of commentators to expound it, had been put prominently forward by the author of Eureka himself. In the Prospectus to Vol. I. printed in the Herald of the kingdom, Vol. X. April 1860, the Preface, Table of Contents, and terms of publication, extending to five pages, were therein set forth. The author says, "The most celebrated Commentary upon.....the Apocalypse, is that of the 'Horæ Apocalypticæ, by Rev. E. B. Elliott A. M.....It consists of four vols., 2415 pp....No Scriptural, logical, and correct historical exposition of it (the Apocalypse) has any existence in the world. The learned have frequently inflicted upon society their apocalyptic lucubrations.....The learned cannot expound it. No clergyman can by any possibility expound Daniel or the Apocalypse.....My declaration is sustained by the fact that no clergyman has ever yet done it. I believe that the volume written will enable him that runs to read, and thereby be enabled to watch the signs of the times, and to be prepared for the appearing of Christ.

As to 'watching the signs of the times,' which are alleged to be intimated in the Apocalypse, the fact is that the Apostles and early disciples watched for half a century before the Apocalypse was written. The injunctions are "watch and be ready," "watch and pray." Even in the Apocalypse it is, even as S. W. Coffman calls it a "thief-like coming." See also 1 Thes. v. 2. In such a case no signs are given. It is not, therefore, a matter of watching for signs.

The extracts given above from preface to Eureka Vol. I. in 1860, show that the author had a sufficient acquaintance with the Horæ to warrant no adverse an estimate of its author as an expositor. Let the reader compare this estimate with the following [illegible] from Eureka Vol. II. p. [illegible] of the Herald of the kingdom, Vol. XII. April 1862

The Wisdom of Saloomoon. Chap. 6.

1. May ye have heard then, ye kings, and understand.

2. May ye have learned ye civil judges of the ends of the earth; may ye have marked it well ye who control multitudes and are gaped at before crowds of nations.

3. Because your control hath been given you from the Lord and your potential power from a Most High.

4. Who will search out your doings and search through your counsels.

5. Because being subordinates of his kingdom ye have not judged uprightly, nor watched to guard law; nor gone your way according to the counsel of God.

6. Frightfully and quickly will he arise against you, because a precipitate way of judging hath there come to be for those who are in superior positions.

7. For the least one is cognizant of mercy, and potential ones will have been tried in a potential way.

8. For the sole Lord of all will not be abashed at a face nor give heed to greatness; because small and great he made, and likewise he foreknoweth concerning them all.

9. And a strong searching inquiry awaiteth the controllers.

10. Unto you, ye petty rulers, then are my words, that ye may have earned wisdom and fail not.

11. For those who have watched to guard the holy things in a holy way will have been made holy, and those who have taught them will find excuse.

12. May ye have longed then for my words, may ye have yearned and may ye have been chastened.

13. Luminous and unfading is the wisdom, and easily beheld is she by those who love her and she is being found by those who seek her.

14. She anticipateth meeting those who long to foreknow.

15. The one who goes at dawn unto her will not toil wearily; for he will find her seated beside his gateways.

16. For the longing desire for her is a perfecter of thoughtfulness, and the one who hath been wakeful for her sake will quickly be without undue anxiety.

17. Because she environeth those worthy of her seeking them, and she appeareth in a truly abiding way to them in their paths, and in every purposeful thought she meeteth them.

18. For her authority is a most truthful longing desire for instruction (chastening).

19. And thought of instruction is love, and love is a watchfulness to keep her laws, and a heeding of her laws is an assurance of immortality (or incorruption).

20. And incorruption maketh one to be near to God.

21. Surely then a longing for wisdom leadeth up to royalty.

22. If then ye delight in thrones and sceptors ye petty rulers of lalties,

23. May ye have honored wisdom, that ye may rule as kings forever.

24. And what wisdom is and how it came to pass (or she originated) I will tell, and I will not hide mysteries from you: but from a beginning of origin will I trace out and make manifest the comprehension of it (or of her) and I may not evade the truth.

25. Nor may I travel with one born to envy, because he will not join partnership with wisdom.

26. But a multitude of wise men is the salvation of a cosmos, and a thoughtful king is the establishment of demo.

27. So then be chastened with my oracular sayings and ye will have been profited.

COMMENT.

This chapter should be emblazoned in letters of gold in the judicial and legislative halls of our own land and the world. It is a talk to the head as well as the heart of all humanity; and has in it the gist of the gospel of the life that now is as well as the life that is destined to be. It is a gloria resonant with the opening theme of creation and redemption in revelation. Wisdom's plea for God the Author and Controller of all things is strong, terse, logical and transparently clear in statement and beautifully ornate in figure and forensic utterance.

The representatives of international polity at the Hague should make this book their chief text book for study and contemplation; and nothing would promote the amity of the civilized nations of the world more directly and efficiently than to formulate in practical statutes of international law its fundamental teaching.

CHAS. GARDNER

Obituary.

Alva Russell of Pittsburg, Kan. fell asleep Sept. 12, 1902, aged 67 years, 11 months. Death was caused by a complication of diseases, he having been sick about nine months, though he did not suffer severely till just before he died.

He was born in Indiana, moved to Illinois, and then to Kansas, where he had lived about 42 years. He was married twice. He was baptized 27 years ago by the writer. He was the father of three children.

Brother Russell was a very consistent and quiet man, respected by all who knew him, and firm in the faith. The funeral took place at Girard, Sep. 13, conducted by the writer at the Christian Church. Text 1 Thes. iv. 13 to 18. A number of the brethren were there from Lightning Creek Church. Besides his wife and children two brothers and four sisters and many good friends mourn their loss, but we are not without hope, for there is a better resurrection.

To the sorrowing ones I say, prepare to meet husband and father in the kingdom of God, for it is appointed unto man once to die, after that the judgment. May we each so live as to meet the Master when he comes.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express money orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole; sent on application. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

TO OUR PATRONS.

We want more readers for THE RESTITUTION. We want One Thousand new names on our list before January 1st, 1903, and can have them if you will help us.

In every Church of our faith in the land there are members who do not take our paper, who would be benefited by reading it.

[illegible] circumstances from any Church fellowship, who would be kept firmer in the faith, helped and strengthened for the battles of life if they had THE RESTITUTION each week.

There are others interested in the truths we hold, who would often have their attention called to the principles of our faith by reading our paper. When no preacher can be heard, when you cannot talk to them, THE RESTITUTION in their homes would be ever a present visitor—a missionary that will do more than any other one thing to keep the interest alive.

There are those whom we wish were interested in the Bible and what it promises. Many of this class of persons have never had the opportunity, or have neglected the matter when it was before them.

You are surely known to people such as are mentioned, and you are surely interested in them. We are satisfied you are not unmindful of their eternal well-being. How much do you care for these people? Will you join with us in getting the gospel before them, and keeping it there a year? We have this to offer to you for consideration.

We will send THE RESTITUTION one year to NEW Subscribers for $1.00. We will start them as soon as received and give credit to the end of 1903.

With a little persistent effort in presenting the paper to those you know who are not taking it, you can induce them to try it for $1.00. If you want some sample papers we will gladly supply them to you, and our list can be increased by 1000 names by Jan. 1st. It can be done easily if you will act on this suggestion, and get those near you interested. If each reader would get a new name our list would be doubled at once.

It would seem as if every reader of THE RESTITUTION could exert influence enough to get one more new name if the effort was made. Will you try it? If the first person you suggest it to does not respond, do not be discouraged, but try some one else. Perhaps the one you least expect will answer quickest.

Did you ever stop to figure up how many words are contained in our paper in a year? You will be surprised at the number of sermons it contains. There is variety too. There is doctrine and the practical, encouragement and cheer, and comfort for the distressed. Each phase of teaching would make several good sized books during the year. You can do no work that yields as large a return for the money expended as by sending THE RESTITUTION to a friend for a year.

Will you not start right away and send one name, and next week when that person gets his paper, some one else will hear of it, and you can send another subscriber.

Poetry.

The Border of the Secret.

Ask not to see, for God does not permit,
The book of life in which his saints are writ;
Thy sum of knowledge and of duty lies
In that already opened to your eyes.
How many shall be saved, and who they are,
The Lord, all-wise and good, does not declare.
But though that roll be sealed and hidden yet,
Behold an index by the Savior set:
The sacred page that blessed hand proclaims;
There read their character, though not their names.
[illegible] and keep the word,
And bear their cross, and, walking with the Lord,
Continue in the faith that works by love?
Lo, these are written in his book above.

The Spirit of God. No. 3.

Having seen from positive testimony that there is one true and living God, and that Jesus Christ is his Son, we are prepared to consider the subject of the Holy Spirit. God is, He is SOMEWHERE. He has a Spirit. The first mention we find in the Bible of the Spirit of God, is in Gen. i. 2. "The Spirit (ruach) of God moved upon the face of the deep." By his Spirit (ruach) he garnished the heavens." Job xxvi. 13. What is this "Spirit," which was such a potent factor in the ordering of the heavens? Elsewhere we are told that "by the Word of the Lord were the heavens made, and all the host of them by the breath (ruach) of his mouth." Psa. xxxiii. 6. And again, "He stretched out the heavens by his understand." Prov. iii. 19. "Who hath directed the Spirit of the Lord, or being his counsellor hath taught him? With whom took he counsel and who instructed him and taught him in the path of judgment, and taught him knowledge, and showed him the way of understanding?" Isa. xl. 13, 14. Paul, evidently having in mind the above citation from Isaiah, propounds the question, "For who hath known the mind of the Lord? or who hath been his counsellor?" Rom. xi. 34. What is termed "the Spirit of the Lord" in Isaiah, is called "the mind of the Lord" by Paul. It is the Spirit of God which knows the things of God, as the spirit which is in man knows the things of man. 2 Cor. iii. 11. According to this Scripture,

1. There is a man.
2. There is a spirit in man.
3. It is the spirit of man which is in him that knows the things of man.
4. There is a God.
5. God has a Spirit.
6. The Spirit of God knows the things of God.

What man is we know. What is the spirit in man? Is it a being in him which is capable of conscious activity after the man himself has succumbed to death? This position cannot be maintained, and hence we have nothing to do with it. The spirit in man is his mind, his disposition. In this case it is the consciousness which is in him while he is living, while his organs are capable of functionary action. When violence is done to those organs, they are incapacitated for such action, and death ensues, their activity ceases entirely. The Spirit of God which knows the things of God, is, in its last analysis, not a concrete substance; not a person, as trinitarians hold; not even an angel, but the mind of God, as the spirit of man is his mind. If there were no God, there could be no Spirit of God. It is the Spirit of God that planned, devised, thought out, and made, brought into being, the heavens, the earth, and man. Everything he made attests his wisdom and power. "The heavens ("garnished" by the Spirit of God. Job xxvi. 13) declare the glory of God; and the firmament declareth his handiwork." Psa. xix. 1. In their creation he took counsel with no one: his Spirit, his wisdom and understanding, were sufficient. "The Lord possessed me (wisdom) in the beginning of his way, before his works of old. I was set up from everlasting, from the beginning, or ever the earth was. When there were no depths I was brought forth; when there were no fountains abounding with water. Before the mountains were settled, before the hills were brought forth: while as yet he had not made the earth, nor the fields, nor the highest part of the dust of the world. When he prepared the heavens I was there: when he set a compass upon the face of the depth: when he established the clouds above: when he strengthened the fountains of the deep: when he gave the sea his decree, that the waters should not pass his commandment: when he appointed the foundations of the earth: then I was by him as one brought up with him: and I was daily his delight, rejoicing always before him." Prov. viii. 22-30. The secret of this wisdom is, that it originated with the Spirit of God, which is "the Spirit of wisdom and revelation." Eph. i. 17. God not only has a Spirit, but also communicates his Spirit to man, and in this way influences man's course of action. Frequently he sent angels to men to instruct, admonish, or warn them; and it is doubtless from the fact that angels are termed "spirits" (Heb. i. 14), that some have concluded that the Holy Spirit is an angel. But this term "spirit" thus applied, would also make men "angels," as that term is commonly understood. See 1 John iv. 1-3. But before those angels could "do his commandments," and communicate God's will to men, they had to "hearken unto the voice of his word." Psa. ciii. 20. We read, "who maketh his angels spirits; his ministers a flame of fire." Psa. civ. 4. This "making" leads back to hearing the voice of God's Word, above referred to, and their authorization to bear messages to men.

It is sometimes said by persons who are none too well informed as to the teaching of the Church of God, that we do not believe in the Holy Spirit. It may be that this misapprehension is due in part to the fact that once in a while some one says, "We do not need any Holy Spirit, as we can have all the Holy Spirit there is for ten cents," meaning the Bible. But I am glad to think that this view does not represent a large proportion of our people. I thoroughly believe that the vast majority accept the apostle's statement, that "if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his." Rom. viii. 9. But however much or little it may be believed to either apply or not apply to Christians living at the present time, it is a sweeping statement that exempts no one who claims relationship with the Anointed. "If any man," whoever and wherever he may be, "have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his." This shows that every one belonging to Christ has Christ's Spirit. This Spirit is variously named, as the following examples will show. "Spirit of holiness." Rom. i. 4. "Spirit of meekness." 1 Cor. iv. 21; Gal. vi. 1. "Spirit of wisdom and revelation." Eph. i. 17. "Spirit of grace." Heb. x. 20. "Spirit of glory." 1 Pet. iv. 14. "Spirit of truth." Jno. xiv. 17; 1 John iv. 6. "Spirit of adoption." Rom. viii. 15. "Spirit of power, of love, and of a sound mind." 2 Tim. i. 7. There is also a "spirit" of an opposite character from the "Holy Spirit," which may be "received," which is "the spirit of the world." 1 Cor. ii. 12. There is "a lying spirit" (1 Kings xxii. 23; 2 Chron. xviii. 21); "a perverse spirit" (Isa. xix. 14); "the spirit of whoredom" (Hosea iv. 12; v. 4), and "the spirit of jealousy." Num. v. 14, 30. There are no such things, entities, as the qualities expressed in the above, which have a spirit that can be imparted, but they are clearly conditions of the mind. Neither is there such a thing, abstractly, as "wisdom," "holiness," "power," etc., but these are all relations in which persons stand or qualities of mind attaching to them. As an illustration, I call attention to Rom. viii. 12. "Ye have not received the spirit of bondage again to fear, but the spirit of adoption" (sonship). There is not a thing, person, or being, called "bondage;" hence there cannot, by itself, be such a being called "the spirit of bondage." Bondage is a relation in which one person stands to another; out of this relation there grows a certain state of mind, called "fear," or we may say, dread. This feeling is what is here contemplated as "the spirit of bondage." "The Spirit of adoption" is not a tangible substance, but a mental state arising out of the relation existing between God and those who through faith in Jesus Christ have become his children. Gal. iii. 26; Eph. i. 5. Thus Paul says, "And because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father." Gal. vi. 4. No "bondage" here (to the law. Gal. iv. 24-26), hence no "spirit of bondage," no "fear." On the [illegible] to God, consciousness of being "children," and with this as a result arising out of this fact, "the Spirit of adoption," crying, "Abba, Father." This spirit, disposition, or state of mind, is for all God's children, whether living in apostolic times or at the present.

The Spirit of God is to lead God's children; as Paul said, "As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God." Rom. viii. 14. What are they "led" to do, and how is this "leading" manifested? The previous verse shows this most clearly. "If ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live." "The flesh" and "the Spirit" (of God in his children) are "contrary the one to the other." Gal. v. 17. Putting to death the works of the flesh is the work of the Spirit, and if this work is going on in any one, that one is "led by the Spirit of God." The putting to death of the deeds of the body in order to live, the building of a rugged Christian character, rather than the working of miracles, healing the sick, speaking with other tongues, and the like, is the object of God in communicating his spirit to men. The "gifts" of the Spirit had their place, but they were only given to "some" (1 Cor. xii. 28) for a time and for a specific purpose (1 Cor. xii. 1; xiii. 8-13); while the "fruit of the Spirit" (Gal. v. 22, 23) is to be found in all without exception.

Come Let Us Reason Together.

In reading an article on faith in a religious journal the following expression is found, viz: "In intellectual matters the light descends from the head to the heart; but in spiritual affairs the light ascends from the heart to the head." In the above we can see to what extent some of the clergy will go to darken the counsel. We would be pleased to know what author the writer studied on physiology. We know that the skull contains the brain which all admit is the source of thought and reason. Is it not a fact that knowledge comes through the source of the eye or the ear? These are the two organs through which our knowledge comes. To say that light (knowledge) originates in the heart is to state what is not true according to the laws of physiology. "The heart is the seat of the affections and passions as distinguished from the intellect and will. The emotional nature; feelings. Emotion is the power of feeling. A stirring or excitement of the mind resulting from intellectual apprehension and appreciation of something suited or unsuited to meet some need or appetence and furnish an end of action. Intellect is the faculty of perception or thought, intelligence; mind, the higher thinking powers." Can it be true that the heart (emotions) stirs the brain? Is it not rather true that we must see or hear a thing before the heart is stirred. Must we not hear of and believe in the Christ before we lay claim to God's promise of eternal life?

The command was to "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." The gospel must be preached in order to be heard and believed. Is it not plain to all candid minds that the gospel must be conveyed to the brain through the ear? Hearing, believing and doing is God's order. When we hear and believe the gospel it becomes to us glad tidings, good news and then our emotions are stirred and we obey the command, "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins." "Perception is the faculty or power of the mind by which we acquire immediate and fundamental knowledge. Knowledge is a result or product of knowing. Specially any fact or truth, or the aggregate facts, truths, principles and special or general information, acquired or retained by the mind." We have the order, perception, conception, knowledge. Perception being defined as the act of grasping together two or more [illegible] into the unity of thought which we call a single conception or idea. We have thus given the above definitions to show how unreasonable the statement is that light or knowledge originates with the emotions. All knowledge, intellectual or spiritual (Bible knowledge) must originate and end in the same way.

Paul says, faith is the substance or confidence of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen. For he that cometh to God must believe that he is and that he is a rewarder of them who diligently seek him." Again Paul says faith cometh by hearing and hearing by the Word of God. We do not wish to be understood as believing that emotion has nothing to do with our religious life. It has its place and office, but not first. The mind can not be stirred in the right without our first knowing and believing a thing. We are aware that Paul says in Rom. x. 10, "For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation." Does the apostle in this Scripture teach that we can believe with the emotions or does he not rather teach that we must have that faith that will reach the affections? A saving faith must stir the heart that we may act. It was this sort of faith that led the Ethiopian eunuch to demand baptism at the hands of Philip. We therefore interpret Paul not from one passage, but his whole writings. We are admonished to bring every thought into subjection to Christ, also to have the mind of Christ. Peter says it is through the knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ that we are made partakers of his divine nature. Again it is said it is through ignorance that we are alienated from that life which is in God. "This is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent." There is but one way of knowing the only true God, and that is by hearing the message or reading it in the Word, and exercising that faith that stirs the heart and leads us to obey the gospel.

Again it is written, "We are saved by hope; but hope that is seen is not hope; for what a man seeth, why doth he yet hope for? But if we hope for that we see not, then do we with patience wait for it. Is not hope a creature of faith? Can we believe without evidence, which comes from our knowledge of facts? To accept any things as credible or as a mere historical fact is not exercising a living faith in that fact. We may believe that Christ lived and died and rose, and not believe in him as the Seed of the woman, or the seed of Abraham, which shall bless all nations. But we must believe in him as our life, and accept the whole truth as revealed in God's plan of salvation in which Christ and his associates will judge (rule) the nations righteously. Let us study to show ourselves approved of God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of truth. Looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ, who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works.

D. C. ROBISON.

"WALKING with God is a very common-place truth; but how lustrous it becomes when translated into action. The phrase, how hackneyed—the thing, how rare! It is such a walk—not an abstract ideal, but a personality, a life. Oh that we could right earnestly set ourselves to this work of translation."

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Jesus, King of the Jews.

Jesus was born to be the King of the Jews, and when he takes his seat on the throne of his father David; he will then be the King of the Jews in very deed. But do we read that David ever acted as a Priest? I think not. But Jesus was born to be a Priest as well as a King. But as he was under the Mosaic law until his death; it was necessary that he should submit to the Mosaic law of Priesthood. See Ex. xxiv. 4. So he went [illegible] with water to fulfill the righteousness of the law of Priesthood. And Jesus appointed the same law of Priesthood to those who are to act as Priests in the age to come. See John iii. 5. "Except a man be born of water and the spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." This is tantamount to saying that those not born of water and spirit cannot attain to the first resurrection; for the kingdom of God will consist of those, and only those who are born of water and the spirit.

In describing the first resurrection Paul says "We shall be caught up in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord." And in R v. xiv. 4, I read—"These are they which follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth. These were redeemed from among men being the first fruits unto God and the Lamb."

Here, then, is a description of the first resurrection. They are taken to heaven with the Lord; evidently to be invested with royalty to reign over the nations. In Rev. xiv., "A Lamb stood on Mt. Zion and with him an hundred and forty and four thousand. And they sang as it were a new song, and no man could learn that song, but the hundred and forty and four thousand which were redeemed from the earth." But what was that song? See Rev. v. 10, "And hast made us unto our God kings and priests, and we shall reign on the earth." This is the song that no man could sing but the hundred forty and four thousand. And why could no man learn that song? Evidently because no others had been born of water and the Spirit. "The wind bloweth where it listeth and thou canst not tell whence it cometh and whither it goeth, so is every one that is born of the Spirit." The person himself is so. Can go into a room the doors being closed as Jesus did, Luke xxiv. 36, or vanish out of sight as Jesus did from Emmaus.

There is a Mission in New York especially devoted to the conversion of the Jews to Christ in which thousands of Jews are accepting Jesus as their Messiah so long looked for by their people. But the man that is at the head of this Mission, gets his authority to baptize, (as he calls it,) his converts from the Presbyterian Church; hence he sprinkles his converts and calls it baptism. Now what place will these rantized Jews occupy in the glorious age to come? They have not been born of water and the Spirit; hence cannot get into the kingdom of God. See John iii. 5.

In Rev. vii. 9, an innumerable multitude is brought to view of all nations, kindreds, people, and tongues. Therefore Israel must be represented; then the angel said, in the 14th verse, "These are they that came out of great tribulation and have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb; therefore are they before the throne of God, and serve him day and night in his temple." Here, then, we learn that these rantized Israelites are to be servants. See Isa. lxvi. 18, 19, 20. "And they shall bring all your brethren for an offering unto the Lord out of all nations upon horses, and in chariots, etc., to my holy mountain Jerusalem saith the Lord." Here will be business enough for these rantized Jewish servants. Who can gather Israel as well as Israel himself? Here it is plain that these Israelitish servants will be utilized to gather Israel from all nations and countries wherein they sojourn. "And I will also take of them for Priests and for Levites saith the Lord."

"THE present age differs from all preceding ages by the multitude who are running to and fro in every part of the earth. The increase of knowledge is great, and there is no record of anything like it ever existing on the earth before. But it is not the knowledge of God, and Daniel neither says nor implies that it was to be divine knowledge."

"DR. F. LOOFS, University of Halle, is one of the most eminent of Germany's theological Professors. "CONTENTMENT is mental repose amidst Providential allotments. It is an equable temper which gives poise of spirit in varying conditions. It is that satisfaction of soul which sees good in every appointment of life, imparting inward peace, restraining complaint, suppressing inordinate desires, and promoting happiness. It consists not in the addition of more fuel, but the substraction of some fire—not in the increase of goods, but in the diminution of coveted longings."

DR. David H. King, Pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Vineland, N. J., delivered a sermon on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 25th, before an audience of over 5000 people, at the Main, N. J., camp meeting, on "The Second Coming of our Lord," from 1 Cor. xvi. 22. "If any man love not the Lord Jesus Christ, let him be Anathema, Maranatha." The sermon was quoted at length in the Philadelphia American, says the Voice of Israel. Does the doctor know what he is coming for? What does the doctor expect when the Lord comes?

"The Czar of Russia."

A few days ago the Cleveland Leader contained what purported to be a likeness of the Czar of Russia, clad in his uniform and brilliant decorations. Beneath the picture, printed in capital letters were the following lines:

"Emperor of a mighty nation which not a few close observers believe will soon contest with the Anglo-Saxon race, the supremacy of the world."

Close observers of the trend of events believe this. Men without assistance from the inspired Word can see what we know will surely happen, because the mouth of the Lord has said it. But not one of a thousand, scarcely, of those who are, professedly, expounders of the Scriptures, knows anything of coming events. This is not for want of education, nor mental calibre,—but because of an apostate system which blinds them to the eternal purpose of God in creation and redemption. That system excludes the idea of the gospel before the appearance of Christ, and therefore even the most devoted ones in their ranks have little use for Old Testament Scriptures, except for history, aids to devotion, etc., etc.

But while this is so, the central idea of their system is "The Immortality of the soul" and the foundation of that doctrine was laid in Eden, when the serpent said man should "not surely die;" just what they believe and teach, without realizing, doubtless, where the doctrine originated. They could not believe in heaven-going at death but for the immortality dogma, and then they would have ears to hear God's offer of life everlasting in his kingdom on earth; and dwell with rapture upon the glorious pen-pictures by the prophets, of that good time coming. And this would induce them to seek out from the prophets the course of events in this world's history designed to warn God's children of the mighty revolution, which results in the kingdoms of this world becoming the kingdom of our Lord and his Anointed.

Religious leaders with a knowledge of Jehovah's purpose could point out the shadows of coming events, instead of depending upon "close observers" of things from a human point of view. But we are thankful that public men unaided by Scripture can see what is coming, if religious leaders cannot; it shows us that redemption draws nigh to those who have given heed to the sure word of prophecy.

We remember reading in the first edition of Elpis Israel that the author send a copy of it to the Emperor of all the Russias through the Russian ambassador at London, together with a letter calling attention to Ezek. xxxviii. and xxxix. But it was returned by the minister in courteous terms, as not in keeping with the usages of the court; and so Nicholas died, doubtless, without learning the fate of his empire as depicted by the prophet.

As a people we should be glad and rejoice more and more in that blessed hope begotten in us by the the resurrection of Jesus, because, while scoffers are saying, "Where is the promise of his coming," passing events prove to us the literality of all the exceeding great and precious promises which comprise the glorious gospel of the grace of God.

TWO hours after making the above notes the daily papers came to hand with an article headed: the "LION SHOWS ITS TEETH; great fleet of British warships ordered to take up strategical positions—war clouds overhanging the Mediterranean—England is determined to head off a possible eventual Russo-Turkish Coup;" followed by a despatch dated London, Oct. 13, which said:

"Information has reached here that the great British fleet lately maneuvering in the Mediterranean has been suddenly ordered to take up strategical positions in the neighborhood of Salonika and Smyrna, while the squadrons at Malta and Gibraltar will be immediately strengthened.

These measures are considered necessary in consequence of Russia's endeavors to coerce Turkey, particularly with reference to warship privileges in the Dardanelles. The situation is deemed so urgent that it completely subordinated the education bill crisis in Saturday's Cabinet meeting.

Russia's determination to turn the Bardanelles into an exclusively Russian channel to the Mediterranean may be regarded as the first step in her recently announced policy of irritating British interests. While London diplomats hesitate to credit the rumor of an actual Russo-Turkish compact with that end in view, which is now in circulation in the highest quarters in Great Britain and on the continent, the feeling is general that the Czar's government has taken the first step toward an eventual coup.

It is to throttle such an enterprise in its early stage that the strong British fleet now in the Mediterranean is under orders to dispose itself for important emergencies. The fleet constitutes the most powerful collection of British warships ever gathered except for review purposes. It consists of twenty new first-class battleships, twenty armored cruisers, and more than thirty destroyers and torpedo boats.

Simultaneously with the orders to the fleet every artillery garrison in the Mediterranean has been instructed to augment itself to its full strength.

It is said that the British foreign officials are considering the whole situation in the light of the information that Russia is finding support for its project for violating the treaty of Paris at the hands of France itself."

Not long since England and Japan formed an offensive and defensive alliance, which Russia understands to mean that she must keep her hands off Corea; and being for the present thwarted in that direction, announced the policy of irritating British interests elsewhere. These great powers are watching each other closely, and seem to know that they will by and by come to blows; and are making strenuous efforts not to be taken at a disadvantage.

We judge, however, that even if Russia and Turkey come to terms respecting warship privileges in the Dardanelles, it will not be taken advantage of just yet; unless the British fleet is called off for urgent duty elsewhere. But the rapidity with which moves are now made upon the political hesboard of the East rejoices the hearts of all who long to see the King in his beauty; and prompts them to be ready to meet him with joy.

The Church at Salem, Ohio.

Since the re-opening of the house for worship and the proclamation of the truth in the spring, brethren from Cleveland have been going [illegible] Word of life every Sunday. This has been highly appreciated by the faithful few there; and in the aggregate quite a number of others have listened to the joyful sound. Being desirous of continuing to witness for God and truth in that city, they invited Bro. and Sister Neill to locate among them, and carry on the good work indefinitely.

After due consideration and consultation with the brethren in Cleveland, the duty to obey this Macedonian cry for help seemed imperative, and so, without conferring with flesh and blood, they decided to go.

Bro. Neill presided at the Lord's table for the last time, Sunday Oct. 12th, and gave many earnest words of exhortation in view of the imminence of the times, and with the hope of meeting again never to part,—being ever with the Lord, and expressed the satisfaction it gave him to know that he was leaving behind him a united body of believers.

Many present expressed regret at their leaving, but consoled themselves with the thought that what was our loss was gain to others, and pledged to follow them with their prayers, that he who alone can give the increase would bless their efforts.

It would be difficult to find two more zealous and indefatigable workers than our dear Brother and Sister Neill. And, although it is the prayer of all who have labored in that region, that there is fertile congenial soil there for the seed of the kingdom, we are not without hope that they will by and by "come with rejoicing, bringing their sheaves with them."

After all the words of good cheer had been spoken a brother read the inspired benediction recorded in Num. vi. 25, 26: "The Lord bless them, and keep them; the Lord make his face shine upon them, and be gracious unto them; the Lord lift up his countenance upon them, and give them peace."

And all the people said. AMEN.

The Ark of the Covenant.

A correspondent asks;

1. Was the ark of the covenant ever placed in Solomon's temple?

2. If so, what became of it? Did it perish with the temple, or was it hidden away by Jeremiah as stated in the Maccabees? Or,

3. Did the Lord take it to heaven?

Answers,

1. Yes; proof, 2 Chron. v. 2-9; 1 Kings viii. 5-9.

2. It is not known what became of it when the temple was destroyed, and all conjecture is useless. The Jews believe that it was concealed from the spoilers, and think it among the hidden things the Messiah will reveal when he comes. Doubtless this accounts for what is said in Maccabees concerning Jeremiah hiding it. But neither Ezra, Nehemiah nor the Maccabees mention the ark as being in the second temple. And Josephus who mentions all the other utensils is silent respecting the ark.

3. Not Be it remembered that the "ark of the covenant," is also styled "the Ark of the Testimony" in Ex. xxv. 16 and other places. In Num. ix. 15 the tabernacle is called the "Tent of the Testimony;" making it clear that "covenant and the testimony" referred to the same thing. The Spirit in Heb. x. 1 informs us that the ordinances of the Mosaic administration were types or shadows of good things to come. We hold that the good things typified have come, and that when they came that which typified them was no longer of use. We further hold that the ark and its contents typified Christ; because the Spirit had revealed to Isaiah that the Anointed would be preserved and given for a covenant of the people, to establish the earth, to cause to inherit the desolate heritages. Chap. xlix. Christ then, being the antitypical ark of the testimony, we can understand why he expounded unto them in all the Scriptures the things concerning himself, and said, all things written of him in Moses, the prophets and the Psalms concerning him must be fulfilled. This antitype having come there was no further use for the covenant that was given till the Seed should come, and so it was nailed to the cross with Christ. The covenant which the ark contained being nailed to the cross, because it had expired by statute of limitation, it borders on the ridiculous to contend that the chest that once contained it, should be taken to heaven by Christ. The Scripture has been wrested to support a man-made doctrine. Only strangers to the New Covenant brought into force by the blood of Christ and through which Christ himself was brought again from the dead by the God of peace could teach such things for truth.

The Wisdom of Saloomoon. Chap. 7.

1. I also am a mortal man like to all, and an earth-born descendant of a first-moulded one; and in a mother's womb I became sculptured flesh.

2. In a ten-month period, fixed in blood from a married man's seed, and from a joy of sense that cometh along with sleep.

3. And when born I drew in the common air and fell down upon the like-feeling earth, lamenting with the first voice like to all in like manner.

4. With swaddling clothes and with thoughtful attention was I wrapped up.

5. For no king hath had any other beginning of generic origin;

6. And one entrance into the life time is there for all, and a similar exit.

7. Therefore I vowed a vow, and thoughtfulness was given unto me; I invoked, and a spirit of wisdom came unto me.

8. I preferred it (or her personified) to sceptres and thrones, and no wealth did I account in comparison with her.

9. Nor did I liken a priceless stone unto her, because all gold in her sight is a little sand, and as clay will silver have been accounted in her sight.

10. More than health and beauty of form I loved her (the word for the higher or sacred love here), and I preferred to have her rather than light, because the ray from her doth not set (sit is good English though)

12. And with her came all the good things unto me, and unnumbered wealth in her hands.

12. And I rejoiced in them all, because wisdom led them, and I was not aware that she was the genetrix of them.

13. Without deception have I learned and ungrudingly do I distribute; her wealth I am not hiding away.

14. For an unfailing treasure is it for mankind, which, when they have used it, they have sent back to God as friendship, made friends because of his chastening given them.

15. And may God have given me to speak in the way of comprehension, and to become enthused in a manner worthy of the things given, because he is also wisdom's guide, and the restorer to uprightness of wise men.

16. For in his hand are both we and our words, and all thoughtfulness and exact knowledge of employments.

17. For he hath given me an infallible knowledge of the things that be, the constitution of the cosmos and the energising power of first principles.

18. A beginning end and middle of times, changes of modes and interchanges of periods;

19. Circuits of years and arrangements of stars.

20. Natures of living creatures, and passions of wild beasts, forces of winds and reasonings of men, differences of growth and dynamic forces of roots.

21. Whatever is hidden and whatever is manifest I know; for wisdom the designer of them all hath taught me.

22. For there is in her a spirit, mental, holy, (lit. sacred) only-born, of manifold parts, fine in substance, very mobile, penetrating, unpollutable, unerring, free from harm, friendly to good, keen to pierce, impossible to hinder, beneficent.

23. Philanthropic, assured, unfailing, without undue anxiety, having all ability, with an oversight of all things, and making room for itself to pass through all intellectual, pure, most finely organized spirits.

24. For wisdom is more susceptible of motion, than any motion, and it goeth through and maketh room for itself to pass through all things because of its purity.

25. For it is a breath of God's dynamic power (or ability) and an influence of the translucent glory of the All-Controller; therefore nothing defiled falleth in the way of it.

26. For it is a reflected brightness of invisible light, and an unspotted mirror of the divine energy, and an image of goodness.

27. And being one is in every way enabled, and abiding in it (this oneness) it reneweth all things, and generation after generation passing over from one to another into holy souls it filleth them to be friends of God and prophets.

28. For God loveth nothing except it be the one that wisdom dwelleth with.

29. For she is more befitting than a sun, and when compared with light she is found superior to any setting of stars.

30. For night succeedeth this, but evil doth not avail against wisdom.

COMMENT.

This chapter, the reader will observe, contains not only Saloomoon's precise and particular statement of "the nature of man" still a live issue in the theological discussions of the day, but his understanding of what "Holy Spirit" or "the Holy Spirit" is or was in his day under the enlightenment and enablement which he had received by inspiration according to the record direct from God "the God of our fathers."

What clearer and more terse definitions of a prophet and how a mere mortal man can become such a divine instrumentality, and thus enabled, a mouth-piece and seer of the hidden things, can be found in the whole range of the inspired Word than we have here in this chapter?

This book of "wisdom" was just as much a part of the original Jewdaic canon as the five books of Moounces, and it is only a part of the Roman apostasy that it ever became uncanonical. It is high time therefore that we Protestants restored it to the canon and the Protestant world as truly inspired Scripture.

Conference Report.

Conference convened at Coat's Grove as previously appointed, on Friday, evening, Oct. 10. The officers were all present except the Vice President and Secretary. Brother and Sister Chase were there to begin the meeting with us; which was cause of great rejoicing with all. Sister Woodward spoke from 1 John iii. 8,—subject, Love.

Saturday morning all enjoyed a good social meeting after which Bro. Chase spoke on the subject, "Faithfulness." Lunch at the church at noon.

Business meeting from 1 o'clock to 2, after which Bro. Woodward addressed the congregation on "Diligent Earnestness."

At 7 p. m. Sister Lottie Barnum gave a very interesting Bible reading and then Bro. Chase spoke again exhorting the churches to earnest work, taking the lessons of the seven churches of Asia as warnings for us, believing we ought not to be looking too much to the Orient for signs of Christ's imminent return, but to the condition of the body of Christ, or churches of today as most certainly fulfilling the words of prophecy.

Sunday morning the usual social meeting had to be given up to give place to the Sunday School. Then Bro. Chase spoke again on "The Restitution." Lunch at noon.

At 1 o'clock Sister Woodward spoke on "What is True Conversion?" Sister Chaffee led the Social meeting on Sunday evening and Brother Chase finished the feast with a sermon from James iii. 5.

The attendance from abroad was not as large as we expected. Some were detained at home by sickness, and others from circumstances uncontrolable, and still those who were there enjoyed the meetings, and we are assured that good was accomplished. One Sister yielded obedience. Monday morning we drove to the river and saw her happy face as Bro. Woodward raised her from the watery grave, and rejoiced to clasp Sister Winifred Peck by the hand, and bid her "God Speed." O may she be faithful unto death, and then we are assured a crown of life awaits her. We were so sorry to know that Sister Emma Jackman could not be with us, on account of the illness of Sister Hoyt.

Report.

Brother Underwood:

The paper you sent me was received while at Sedan. After leaving that place held meetings at Augusta, Attica, and Canton. While at Augusta we assisted Mrs. Stella Darby to put on Christ, and at Canton Mr. Clark and wife and Mrs. Mable Coons. Our prayer is that these dear brethren may ever be found looking forward to the coming of our Savior, and that our heavenly Father will preserve them unto his heavenly kingdom. I would say to the brethren of Missouri and Kansas, that I want to visit as many places as I can during the year and especially points where they want meetings. I will commence a meeting at Yorktown, Kan., Nov. 1. Write to me at that place or address me at Ransom, Kan., and the letters will be forwarded to me. Your brother in hope of the soon coming.

New Facilities for Reaching the Pacific Coast.

The trans-continental lines have been making extensive efforts lately to improve their service to and from the Pacific Coast, the latest development announced being that the Personally Conducted feature of the Chicago & North-Western and Union Pacific service is to be extended to include personally conducted excursions to the Coast twice a week from Chicago via Omaha, Denver and Salt Lake City, in addition to the three a week now operated to the Coast via Omaha and Cheyenne. This gives the tourist a chance to enjoy the most beautiful scenery that Colorado affords, the route being through Colorado Springs, Pike's Peak and via the Royal Gorge, Glenwood Springs and Salt Lake City. This, with the two tours a week via Cheyenne and Ogden to Sacramento, San Francisco and Los Angeles and one a week to Portland, makes five personally conducted excursions per week from Chicago to California, Oregon and Washington.

This personally conducted feature has expanded wonderfully in the last few years. The service has steadily improved, so that Pullman tourist sleeping cars have all the conveniences of the standard sleeper and are particularly well adapted to the use of family parties and those who desire economy in travel. With the low rates now in effect to the Coast, this branch of the service promises to be very popular indeed, and will doubtless enable thousands to visit the Coast who otherwise would have been unable to go. These thousands will include a large percentage of people who hope to find on the sunny slopes of the Pacific a place where life's hard struggle may be made easier and where a competence may be gained with a small investment in fruit-raising or some similar occupation; to which class is added the invalid who finds in the far West the dry and balmy air and sunshiny days that bring health and strength that the East failed to provide.

Everlasting Joy.

ISAIAH XXXV. 10.

What mind can image joy like this,
What heart conceive its depth of bliss?
For, gladness, everlasting song,
No blight of sin, no taint of wrong.

No traitor-spirit mean, unblest,
To rob the trusting heart of rest;
No fruitless sigh or burning tears
O'er blighted hopes and darkened years.

No fevered bed or couch of pain,
No aching heart or weary brain,
No failing hands or earthward breast,
But deep, unbroken, endless rest.

No vacant chair or home-hearth lone,
No yearnings for the lost and gone;
No tireless sighed on ebbing breath—
Ah, no! there shall be no more death.

No sin, no curse, and no more sea,
Where tempests wild rave angrily.
No murmuring wave shall ever more
Break on that calm and peaceful shore.

Eternal summer, endless noon,
No need of sun or yet of moon;
No twilight dim or darker night,
For God himself shall give them light.

His gracious hand shall dry each tear
His loving voice shall cheer and bless,
He'll gently lead o'er steep and hill,
By pastures green and waters still.

Oh! blissful morn, when will thou break?
When, blessed Jesus, will thou take,
Thy children home? oh, come and reign,
Bring scattered Israel back again.

Our Father, hear us as we pray,
Oh! speed the coming of that day;
We're weary watching, tired and worn,
Oh! usher in the restful morn

An Incentive to Watchfulness.

"Watch therefore, for ye know not at what hour your Lord doth come." Matt. xxiv. 42.

The specific reason given as to why a constant attitude of watchfulness should be maintained, is the statement, "Ye know not at what hour your Lord doth come." Not having exact information as to just the time when the Lord will come, necessitates a constant watchfulness as to personal conduct in life, lest that event should happen at a time, when our walk in life may be contrary to the standard required to ensure an immediate transformation into the personal likeness of our Savior. That change cannot happen unless we are personally prepared for that longed for event. Not knowing the time, procrastination would be unwise.

To solve the problem of daily life in relation to eternity is much more important than the guessing at the symbolism of Daniel and Revelation. They doubtless will soon be made clearer by some future prophetic happenings which will correct much that is now evident merely guess work.

A correct personal walk in life cannot safely be postponed to some future time, but it must be an ever present experience hour by hour. The gospel is glad tidings or good news to only those who are zealously careful about their Christian experience.

This lesson is also strongly enforced in the teaching of the parable of the ten virgins. These ten virgins represent the whole company of those who are looking for the second coming of Jesus. When such announcement is made, "Behold, the Bridegroom cometh," one half of those who were looking for his coming were found to be unprepared; they may perhaps have thought that the time for his coming had not arrived yet, on account of having made an erroneous guess about the prophetic dates, as so many in the past have already done.

They had no oil. Lack of oil, signifies that they were not ready to go out and meet him. This lack of preparation may have been two-fold. Light was needed, because it was the hour of midnight. "Gross darkness covered the people." Half of these people who were looking for the second coming of Jesus, did not have the requisite light necessary to pursue their journey through the darkness to the point where they should meet the coming Bridegroom. Many people profess belief in the second coming of Jesus, (like half of the virgins) who walk in darkness. Take for example the great body of Second Adventists, who reject the Scripture teaching concerning the age to come, the pre-millennial reign of Christ upon the throne of his father David over restored Israel. Such people are in gross darkness as relate to the purpose of the second coming of Jesus. They lack light as to its real object, and the work that Jesus will accomplish when he comes. They perceive not the good news as revealed in the gospel of the kingdom. They have no gospel oil to put in their lamps, and hence they lack the gospel light so necessary to guide them through mid-night darkness unto the rising of the Bright and Morning Star. Nothing but gospel oil will give that light.

An enlightened understanding is the essential light necessary to enable one to journey through the present mid-night darkness until the glorious dawn of the Day Star. Eph. iv. 18, speaks of those "Having the understanding darkened, being alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them." Ignorance of what? If we can definitely ascertain from Holy Scripture the essential knowledge requisite to enlighten the understanding sufficient to give the life of God, then an ignorance of that knowledge of which we should know, will alienate from "the life of God." "The life of God" can only be secured through a proper alliance with Christ. A person who is without Christ can have no claim upon God as regards the life to come. This must be admitted by all right thinking people. Let me direct your special attention to a passage of Scripture which enumerates doctrines, which if not believed, [illegible] Christ, and as far as the future is concerned, such an one is in the sad and lamentable condition of being without hope. See Eph. ii. 11, 12: "Wherefore remember, that ye being in times past Gentiles in the flesh, * * * that at that time ye were WITHOUT CHRIST, (on account of) being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the COVENANTS OF PROMISE having NO HOPE, and WITHOUT GOD in the world."

I have above called attention to the fact that all the ten virgins were believers in the second coming of Christ, but half of them lacked the necessary light to guide them through their journey to meet the coming Bridegroom, and as I have before stated, that the sect of Second Adventists while they look for the second coming of Christ; yet they are in mid-night darkness concerning the teaching of God's Word as it relates to the "commonwealth of Israel;" they affirm that as a commonwealth, Israel will never again lift up her head as a nation among the nations; but as a nation they are now disorganized, and that they will always remain a hopeless ruin, as far as their future national return to the covenant land, and their existence as an organized nation. And also as far as the "covenants of promise" are concerned, where they relate to the covenants made to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and their Seed, the Christ, and as regards the everlasting possession of the land, they completely render such covenant of the land null and void, by affirming its destruction by fire before they can ever possess one foot of it.

What interest can any people have in a commonwealth they would condemn to a hopeless ruin? Or of the covenants of promise either, when they affirm contrary teaching, which would render them null and void?

The declarations of Holy Scripture are very explicit in regard to the future of the commonwealth of Israel, with regard to their future national existence. Listen: "Thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I will TAKE THE CHILDREN OF ISRAEL from among the heathen, (nations) whither they be gone, and I will gather them on every side, and bring them into their OWN LAND: and I will make them ONE NATION in the land upon the mountains of Israel; and ONE KING (not two) shall be KING to them ALL: and they shall be NO MORE TWO NATIONS; neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all." Ezek. xxxvii. 21, 22.

The "commonwealth of Israel" was suspended but not forever, for Ezekiel (xxi. 25-27) says: "It shall be no more, UNTIL HE COME, whose right it is; and I WILL GIVE IT TO HIM." Now whenever we truly preach "the cross of Christ," we emphatically preach the revival of that commonwealth, and point out him also whose right it is to reign by the declaration, "This is Jesus the KING OF THE JEWS." Matt. xxvii. 37.

It requires no depths of reasoning to know that Jesus could never reign as "King of the Jews," should the Jews forever remain a dispersed people, and disorganized as a commonwealth. Now, these Adventist people boldly affirm that God will not do as Ezekiel says: "I WILL bring them into their own land: and I will make them ONE NATION in THE land." Hence, they (the Adventists) must of necessity be classed as "aliens from the commonwealth of Israel," seeing they declare against the future existance of the said commonwealth, and also do not believe in the "preaching of the cross," because they boldly affirm that Jesus will never reign over restored Israel as "King of the Jews," as taught by the cross, and also in the declaration to Mary: "The Lord God shall give unto him the THRONE OF HIS FATHER DAVID: and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end." Luke i. 32, 33. These things our readers should pay close attention to, and "watch," because if we do not properly perceive them they may disqualify us from being ready to meet the coming Bridegroom, equally with an inconsistent walk in life. They both go hand in hand together. The virgins found that they must have light, to guide them through the midnight darkness. An empty profession of religion will not be sufficient.

"Not every one who saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that DOETH THE WILL of my Father which is in heaven." The phrase "doeth the will," covers both to believe what he teaches, and do what he says. "Many (religious teachers) will say unto me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied (taught) in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name have done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them, I NEVER KNEW YOU."

Now this language is nearly the same as that used to the unwise virgins, who lacked the oil to give the light necessary to meet the coming Bridegroom. We read: "Afterward came also the other virgins, saying, Lord, Lord, open to us. But he answered and said, I know you not." They were professed followers of Jesus, and they were looking for his coming again, but there was something wrong, and the solemn words will sting them to the heart, "I KNOW YOU NOT." Their trouble was that they lacked the necessary oil to give light.

Now, while we may profess to be virgins let us be warned by the lesson, and provide the requisite oil, before the cry rings out upon the air, "Behold, the Bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him." Now is the time, then it will be too late.

Be warned, do not procrastinate; for there is no time to spare, because that auspicious event may happen at any moment. "Watch therefore, for ye know not at what hour your Lord doth come."

A tremendous crisis is impending, people in general perceive it, politicians, statesmen, financiers, and men of the world, who know not the prophetic Word, say things are all heading up for that tremendous change, and what it is, they know not, but they say a crisis of some kind is rapidly approaching.

Beloved we are not in darkness, we know what it is, we know what is coming. We know that the ominous storm cloud will shortly burst, and shake terribly both heaven and earth. And after the storm will come the "King of the Jews," the revival of the commonwealth of Israel, the new age, and the new life, and the blessing of the nations in Abraham and his seed.

The great concern of all virgins should be, how about my "oil"? Have I a sufficient supply for my lamp? We have all received a sufficient warning that it will be everlastingly too late to lay in a supply after the word comes, "Go ye out to meet him." The supply must be laid in now or never. A plea of a religious profession will count for nothing. Remember the words, "I know you not." I entreat you as one who seeks only your own best interest, to consider well, and meditate seriously over the statements made in Eph. ii. 11, 12, they mean much, and they harmonize beautifully with the general teaching of both the Old and New Testaments.

The Gospel Recovered. No. 43.

DRAWBACKS AND HELPMEETS.

"That they all may be one.....that the world may believe that thou hast sent me."

In the preceding article mention was made of Eureka, and the supreme importance attached to it by the author and certain of his admirers. To this effect the preface to Vol. I. was quoted alleging also that no one had been able to expound the Apocalypse. Extracts were also given from Eureka showing that the author endorsed certain parts of Elliott's Horae transferring them with approval to his own pages.

Before giving some similar instances, it is desirable to quote from the Vols. II. and III. In the preface to Vol. II., the author asks when Deity signified the Apocalypse to the Apostle John, did he not intend it to be understood by his servants? Again he states that the Apocalypse was given by Deity to Jesus Christ that he might show it to his servants; and the reason why no exposition was extant is, that Jesus Christ, who is the Truth had not given [illegible] to the wise and prudent of the Laodicean Apostasy."....."Otherwise how could his servants watch and perceive the signs therein revealed, and be prepared for his coming." He named fourteen writers of modern times from Sir Isaac Newton downwards, among whom Mr. Elliott is one. He says, "Believers of this gospel (of the kingdom) can come to but one conclusion, which is, that all their attempts are signal and decided failures. And if this class of writers have failed, whither shall we look for an interpreter?.....Mr. Elliott says truly, 'The Apocalyptic subject is one altogether peculiar; being at once so important, so difficult, and so controverted; and the Dr. adds, "None of the guilty shall understand. This is the irreversible decree; who shall annul it? .....The appearance of this volume is well timed. The author believes that two years or so later would have been unreasonable, and possibly too late." This was written in January, 1866; we are now living in 1902, just thirty-six years and even thirty-three years since the appearance of Vol. III.

At the end of a list of works in Eureka Vol. II. A., which was republished at Birmingham in 1884, the following eulogium appears." Eureka III. Vol "An exposition" etc. A logical, clearly written, intellect-satisfying, and heart-building explanation of all the mysteries of Revelation, a careful, scientific analysis of a Divine enigma in the light and by means of the clues supplied by the Author of the enigma itself."

In Vol. III. the author names in the preface several of the "fathers" from Justin Martyr down to Augustine in the fifth century, as having written short expository notices or bewildering speculations. After these are named others reaching to A. D. 1100. "No more luminous".....than their predecessors. Then from 1100 to the Reformation eight names follow, special mention being made of Luther. Several of Luther's views are given, but I note that he takes no notice of Luther's opinion as to the drying up of the Euphrates. Rev. xvi. 12. This was not the decay of Turkey, but the exhaustion of the peoples that supported the Papacy. Eight more names of the sixteenth century are then given; and afterwards nine of later date down to Bishop Newton. Special mention is made of several of these, of [illegible] Mr. John Bicheno (Newbury, England) who published his Signs of the Times in 1793. The doctor says his writings were interesting, though abounding with many speculations proved fallacious by the lapse of time. Since Mr. Bicheno's time several writers on prophecy have risen up; of these may be mentioned Irving, Faber, Keith, Cuninghame, Frere, Bickersteth, Elliott, and others. But I am not aware that they have added anything that would at all increase the intelligibility of the Apocalypse. A perusal of a digest of their apocalyptic speculations has convinced me that none of them from Justin Martyr to Elliott understood the prophecy."

In Vol. III. p. 591 the author reiterating previous allegations, says:—"None can watch Scripturally who do not keep the sayings of the prophecy of this Book; for without an understanding of them it is impossible to know the signs of the Advent."

Under the heading, "Clerical Expositions" the author says:—"The reader is interested to know not how many views there are on our grand subject in general and detail, or in what their error consists, but what is its true and Scriptural and historic import," that is, as much as to say, the reader need pay no attention to any other expositions than that of the author.

Before passing to the seals, trumpets, vials etc. I give the following extracts on general character from Eureka. These will show that the author strongly approved of certain expositions by Mr. Elliot, etc., actually engrosses them in his work.

He says, "There can be no reasonable doubt of the Roman people symbolising themselves as a war horse; this is clearly shown by the Rev. E. B. Elliott A. M. in his work on the Apocalypse, both by quotations from Latin authors and from ancient Roman coins," Vol. II. p. 120.

Again, "the following is Mr. Elliott's summary of the phenomena of the vision.": The author then quotes upwards of half a page from Horae beginning "A pause ensues," Vol. II. p. 422.

With a similar remark Vol. II. 432 he quotes nearly a page of Horae and a dozen lines at p. 440.

Speaking of the locusts and their resemblance to the horse, lion, etc., the doctor says, quoting Daubuz from Horae to the extent of over a page, "And who know not," says Elliott, "if facts so notorious be worth mentioning that it is Arabia, still Arabia, that is regarded by naturalists as the original country of the horse; and its wilderness are the haunts also of the lion, the entomology" (zoology in Horae) "is all Arabian."

Again we find the doctor saying, "In Elliott's Repository of papal curiosities I have before me copies of medals which illustrate very forcibly the "great things and blasphemies" of the man, eyes, etc." He then gives a description of seven medals from the Horae, extending over two pages.

Speaking of the massacre of the Huguenots, A. D. 1517 to commemorate which a medal was struck, the author says: "A copy of it is before me in Elliott's work taken from Sir William Cecil's work on the Massacre," he then gives a description of the medal extending to ten lines. Eureka II. p. 648.

In Eureka the opening of the first six seals is applied to certain conditions which obtained in the Roman Empire, in the period from the time of John receiving the Apocalypse, A. D. 96, onwards to A. D. 324. This latter date is held to be that of the downfall of pagan Rome, and of the establishment by Constantine the Great, of a profession of Christianity as the religion of the Roman Empire. This is exactly the view given by Elliott in his Horae Apocalyptae, as well as by other expositors.

First seal. In Eureka this is applied to a time of prosperity in the Empire under five emperors, namely, Nerva, Trajan, Adrian, and the two Antonines, from A. D. 96 to A. D. 180. This period of prosperity had been given by Elliott with the names of the same five emperors. In Eureka and in the Horae the same passage from Gibbon's Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire is quoted as authority.

A difference of opinion occurs in connection with the "bow" carried by the rider on the white horse. Elliott considers it as an emblem of the provincial or foreign character of Nerva and his successors, he being of Cretan extraction, and the "bow" being characteristic of the Island of Crete, and they though not Cretans were, by adoption, of Nerva's family. Dr. Thomas gives another meaning namely, draw the bow, that is, sounders of truth, and finds scope for this idea in the fact that during the period of prosperity mentioned there was opportunity for such. This idea had been given in Anatolia where half a page is devoted to it. The author is so enamored of it that he speaks of Elliott making in his interpretation of this a step from the sublime to the ridiculous. Vol. II. p. 130.

Second seal. In Eureka this extends from A. D. 183 to A. D. 211. Bloody civil wars which were begun and carried on chiefly by a military body called Pretorian Guards, called by the author assassins, which had been recently largely increased. "The Pretorian bands whose licentious fury was the first symptom and proximate cause of the decline of the Roman Empire numbered about 15,000.", Vol. II. p. 159. In Eureka this section is elaborated to twenty one pages. In the Horae the same quotation from Gibbon is extracted, and the same interpretation given. In Elliott this section is condensed into seven pages.

Third seal. Extends from A. D. 212. to A. D. 295. Official corruption and oppressive taxation, farming of taxes, the struggle by the Emperor Alexander Severus against it. The author of Eureka is inclined to believe that the "voice" has reference to the rate of taxes. Mr. Elliot seems to assume that it applies to the market price. Both make reference to Hebrew and Greek measures of capacity.

Fourth seal. Both in Eureka and in the Horae, the period is given as from A. D. 295 to 303. Eureka has "war, famine, pestilence, and barbarian invasion sickly over the Roman horse with the pale cast of death and corruption; and discoursing much on death and hades. The "wild beasts of the earth" he interprets as the invasion of barbarians, which Elliott thinks to be literal.

Fifth seal. Eureka and Horae give the same period A. D. 303 to 313, the ten persecutions under Diocletian. In Eureka it is given as a period of great resistance unto blood on the part of the armorless bowman, devoting many pages to desertion, etc., and quoting Milner, Cyprian, Mosheim, Socrates, and Eusebius, showing the enormities of ecclesiastical rulers sunk in luxury and voluptuousness. He speaks also of Novatians, Puritans, and Catheri. Elliott says a persecution, the longest and most universal, and the fiercest that ever yet raged against the Christians. Some there were, nay, many faithless under the terrors of the persecution.....but the faithful were many also;

Sixth seal. Both Eureka and the Horae give the period as A. D. 313 to 324. The fall of pagan Rome in the reign of the emperor Constantine, a political earthquake.

The Time.

The time we wish to call attention to is "The time to awake out of sleep."

"And that, knowing the time, that now it is high time to awake out of sleep." Rom. xiii. 11-12.

Why? "For salvation is nearer than when you believed."

How long, dear reader, since you believed? Stop and think. Not alone the actual number of years, since you believed, should awaken you, but the rapidly succeeding events pointing directly to the coming of our King should stir you. Yes, it hastens, and we are rushing on to that great day. Yes, it is nearer than when we believed. "Night is far spent, the day is at hand."

What shall we do? Is there anything to be done in consequence of this event? The apostle adds "let us therefore," (for this reason.) What reason? For the reason that the day is far spent. He adds, "Let us cast off the works of darkness and let us put on the armor of light."

Is it possible, that we who have believed so long, have works of darkness?

What is uppermost in your affections? Is it,

The Lord is coming, let this be
The herald note of Jubilee;
And when we meet and when we part
The salutation from the heart.

And if this is first in your affections, will you not have a burning desire to spread the glad tidings of the kingdom? Will you not put forth every effort to spread the gospel? Won't you untie your purse-strings right now? and say, "I'll

Labor on, spend and be spent,
My joy to do the Father's will.

If you are isolated and have no church building, untie your purse-strings; send for some earnest spiritual-minded man, (not one who creates a roar of laughter) and hold up his hands while he tells the good news? Throw open your house, invite your neighbors in. Don't say, "I am afraid the carpet will be soiled." If you are you do not believe that the night is far spent. In fact you are not looking for the Master. There is something to be cast off, and something to be put on. "Let us cast off the works of darkness and put on the armor of light."

Is the sleep so deep that we do not realize that men are perishing all about us? Let us pray with the Psalmist, 'Deliver me from bloodguiltiness." Psa. li. 14. "Renew a right spirit within me. Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation, and uphold me with thy free spirit. Then will I teach transgressors thy ways, and sinners will be converted unto thee." Psa. li. 10, 12, 13.

NANCY BARBER.

Dear Brothers and Sisters in Christ:

For the faithful old RESTITUTION I will write a little about our conference. It has been some time since it was over; but nevertheless I can tell you what a good time we had. First, I want to tell you about Brother Wilson. He made his home at my house while here, and I never met any one I thought more of than of him. He is a very able man and a good, earnest worker, pleasant, and one we can soon learn to love. I hope we may see him in St. Paul again, but if not we hope to meet him in the resurrection, with all the other loved ones we had at our conference, some fifteen or twenty visitors being present. Other preaching brethren present were Brothers Shultz, Herriman and Adams, our Evangelist. We had a good meeting, so many good things were said, and we received strength to go on in the way of life. O what a joy it is to have a hope within us that is sure and steadfast, and an anchor to the soul, to keep us in the narrow way until our Savior comes. We do believe he will come soon to take us unto himself, that where he is we may be also. I hope we can say as Paul said, "I have fought a good fight, I have kept the faith." I do hope we will all have a crown to wear. Now, to all those brethren and sisters whom we have seen and those whom we have not, we love you all and hope to meet you in the blessed kingdom of God.

I remain your Sister in Christ.

MARY J. WILLIAMSON.

Selections.

The Second Advent.

This is angelic testimony concerning the second Advent: "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." This is a plain statement, incapable of being twisted to teach a spiritual coming. The coming must be in "like manner" as the going. It therefore must be a personal, bodily and visible coming. And with this agreeth another text: "The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout."

In view of this testimony it is almost inconceivable how any one could believe that the second coming of Jesus was a coming for the believer at death. Especially is this so as we consider the events that are connected with his coming. These events concern, not the approaching death of an individual, but the resurrection from death of those who are in the graveyard of life. Yea, more than that, they concern even the living believers. "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord." This is the joy, the hope, and the comfort of the church.

The doctrine of the personal and near coming of Jesus has certain manifest effects upon the life and character of the believer. First, it has a purifying effect. "When he shall appear we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is. And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure." 1 John iii. 2, 3. When one realizes his own unworthiness of eternal life he places himself by faith under the cleansing fountain opened in Israel for sin and unrighteousness.

Second, it has a separating effect. Such believers are marked everywhere as "peculiar people." They have nothing in common with the world. The world is crucified unto them, and they unto the world. Gal. vi. 14.

Third, it has a testing effect. It brings persecution—sometimes from relatives, friends, and even from professed Christians. But the trial of faith is precious, and will be "found unto praise and honor and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ." 1 Pet. i. 7.

Fourth, it has the effect of greatly exalting the name of Jesus in the mind and affections of the believer. His sufferings, his redemptive work, his teachings and his promises take on a new and more glorious meaning as one realizes that he is "the resurrection and the life," that he is "our life," that death is an enemy, and that consequently everything depends upon his return to complete the work as purposed from the beginning by the Father.

Work and faith are in harmony with the heart's affections. Love for Christ's appearing will be manifested in our conversation. If the heart is placed upon houses, land, or ambition for self, or for a doting child, the world will know it in spite of regular testimony at the prayer meeting. Set your affections upon things above and upon things to come. Rejoice in "that blessed hope," even the "glorious appearing" of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

The Shekel and the Dollar.

The world is very much concerned just now with the "Trusts" and "Combines" that are springing up, mushroom-like, in every quarter. And well it may be; for this new finance, with its Aaron's rod qualities, represents a leap into the dark and opens up an era of which no one can foresee the end. "Trusts" that extinguish the small trader set up in authority over us irresponsible money-kings—vice-regents on earth, as it were, of the god Mammon—destroy the old methods on which the commerce of the world was conducted, and intrude themselves into every department of humanity's existence, naturally form a portent that astonishes and bewilders us. Yet in these columns we may legitimately turn aside from the general rut of the discussion and ask who it is thus revolutionizes the business world and aspires to hold two continents in pawn. Who are the authors of this marauding finance, this predatory "millionairism" (if one may coin a much needed expression)? Not assuredly the Jews. The Carnegies, the Morgans, the Rockefellers are not grasping Israelites. The new finance which speaks with such a mysterious voice to humanity, is not "the voice of Jacob." It is a wholly Gentile phenomenon, bred in the Aryan and not in the hated Semitic brain. But that being so, should we not have heard the last of the Jew as the autocrat of the financial world? Is it not clear that the all-powerful Jewish influence in commerce and the money market is a gross and a palpable exaggeration? This is a matter that may well give the Hebrews' critics pause, and perhaps place the Jew in his proper perspective. Meanwhile we may fairly ask what would have happened if the new financiers had been Israelites. The answer is not far to seek. If it had been the Hebrew who had ostentatiously invaded the interests of different nations, strained after dangerous monopolies, and cornered the meat and other necessities of the people, the street of many a city would have run with Jewish blood.—Jewish Chronicle.

Announcement.

The first Quarterly Conference of the Church of God of Indiana, will be held at Plymouth, beginning on Thursday evening, Nov. 13, and continue over Sunday following.

We earnestly desire a large attendance at these meetings. It does us so much good to meet others who are also contending for "the faith." Let every Church and the isolated ones be represented. Come one, come all and help us to better know the needs of the State, so better work may be done in future than has been done in the past. You will be well cared for while among the brethren at Plymouth. Many good meetings have been held there, and let us make this one the best of all.

Programme will be announced later.

TO OUR PATRONS.

We want more readers for THE RESTITUTION. We want One Thousand new names on our list before January 1st, 1903, and can have them if you will help us.

In every Church of our faith in the land there are members who do not take our paper, who would be benefitted by reading it.

There are those who are isolated by circumstances from any Church fellowship, who would be kept firmer in the faith, helped and strengthened for the battles of life if they had THE RESTITUTION each week.

There are others interested in the truths we hold, who would often have their attention called to the principles of our faith by reading our paper. When no preacher can be heard, when you cannot talk to them, THE RESTITUTION in their homes would be ever a present visitor—a missionary that will do more than any other one thing to keep the interest alive.

There are those whom we wish were interested in the Bible and what it promises. Many of this class of persons have never had the opportunity, or have neglected the matter when it was before them.

You are surely known to people such as are mentioned, and you are surely interested in them. We are satisfied you are not unmindful of their eternal well-being. How much do you care for these people? Will you join with us in getting the gospel before them, and keeping it there a year? We have this to offer to you for consideration.

We will send THE RESTITUTION one year to NEW Subscribers for $1.00. We will start them as soon as received and give credit to the end of 1903.

With a little persistent effort in presenting the paper to those you know who are not taking it, you can induce them to try it for $1.00. If you want some sample papers we will gladly supply them to you, and our list can be increased by 1000 names by Jan. 1st. It can be done easily if you will act on this suggestion, and get those near you interested. If each reader would get a new name our list would be doubled at once.

It would seem as if every reader of THE RESTITUTION could exert influence enough to get one more new name if the effort was made. Will you try it? If the first person you suggest it to does not respond, do not be discouraged, but try some one else. Perhaps the one you least expect will answer quickest.

Did you ever stop to figure up how many words are contained in our paper in a year? You will be surprised at the number of sermons it contains. There is variety too. There is doctrine and the practical, encouragement and cheer, and comfort for the distressed. Each phase of teaching would make several good sized books during the year. You can do no work that yields as large a return for the money expended as by sending THE RESTITUTION to a friend for a year.

Will you not start right away and send one name, and next week when that person gets his paper some one else will hear of it and [illegible]

SUCCESS.

'Tis the coward who spits to misfortune,
'Tis the knave who changes each die;
'Tis the fool who wins half the battle,
Then throws all his chances away.

There is little in life but labor,
And tomorrow may find that a dream;
Success is the bride of Endeavor,
And luck but a meteor's gleam.

Discouraged, show traces of tire.
The battle is fought in the homestretch,
And won 'twixt the flag and the wire.

The Spirit of God. No. 4.

If the Holy Spirit is given to persons at this time, how is it given? Into what department of man does it enter? And what are the evidences of its possession? I will say, as I have intimated, that the gift of the Spirit for the guidance and assistance of God's children was not restricted to the days of the apostles. As Peter said on Pentecost, "The promise (of the Spirit) is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call." Acts ii. 39. This pertains to the pouring out of God's Spirit upon all flesh, mentioned in Acts ii. 17, 18; Joel ii. 30. On Pentecost it came as "a rushing mighty wind" (pnoes, spirit, breath). Acts ii. 2. By this Spirit the apostles were reminded of the things Jesus had previously spoken to them (John xiv. 26), and by it they spoke the truth to others "as the Spirit gave them utterance." Acts ii. 4. That Spirit, after Pentecost, was never withdrawn from the Church, but, according to the promise of Jesus, is to "abide for ever" (eis ton aiona) with the Church. Jno. xiv. 16. There is therefore no need of a repetition of the outpouring of the Spirit, as at Pentecost and at the house of Cornelius. Acts ii. 10-44; xi. 15. The latter case shows that God "puts no difference" between Jews and Gentiles (Acts xv. 9), but gives the Spirit to all true believers. God communicates his Spirit to men only on certain conditions. Jesus said, "He that believeth on me, as the Scripture saith, from his belly shall flow rivers of living water." The Evangelist said, in explanation of this, "But this spake he of the Spirit which they that believe on him should receive; for the Holy Spirit was not yet given, because Jesus was not yet glorified." John vii. 38, 39. Belief "on him," then, is at least one condition necessary to the reception of the Spirit. This principle was understood by the apostles, as their writings show. Paul wrote to the Ephesians, "In whom (Christ) ye also trusted, after that ye heard the Word of the truth, the gospel of your salvation: in whom also after that ye believed, ye were sealed with that Holy Spirit of promise." Eph. i. 13. The object of this "belief" was "the Word of the truth, the gospel." This, first of all, they heard, then believed it; then they were "sealed with that Holy Spirit of promise." Without hearing this "word" there could be no "belief," and without this no reception of the Spirit. But another condition is required—obedience. Peter, speaking of the raising up of the Lord Jesus, said, "We are witnesses of these things; and so is also the Holy Spirit, whom God hath given to them that obey him." Acts v. 32. This obedience must be as Paul said, "from the heart." Rom. vi. 17. But how is the Spirit imparted to men? In the first place, I wish to say that the Spirit proceeds out of the mouth of the Lord. "By the Word of God were the heavens made; and all the host of them by the breath (ruach, spirit) of his mouth." Psa. xxxiii. 6. The Lord will consume the wicked with the Spirit of his mouth. 2 Thes. ii. 8. "With the breath (ruach) of his lips shall he slay the wicked." Isa. xi. 4. A sword went out of the mouth of Jesus in John's prophetic vision. Rev. i. 16; xix. 15. "And (take) the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God." Eph. vi. 17. In order to the reception of the Spirit it is necessary [illegible]

"Out of his mouth cometh knowledge and understanding." Therefore "incline thine ear unto wisdom, and apply thine heart to understanding." Prov. ii. 2, 6. The Word proceedeth out of the mouth of the Lord. Matt. iv. 4. How does the Spirit come? Not direct from heaven without some conductor upon which to travel from the mind of God to that of man. "He that ministereth to you the Spirit"—say anything on this subject? Has anything been revealed? If so, we have something to say: if not, neither should we say anything. The Galatian brethren betrayed a tendency toward legality; they would be "justified by the law." Gal. v. 4. Paul reasoned with them about this matter. "He therefore that ministereth to you the Spirit, and inwardly worketh deeds of power in you, doeth he it by the works of law, or by the hearing of faith?" Gal. iii. 2, 5. What is the reply he wants? That the Spirit was ministered to them by the hearing of faith, and not by the works of the law. The vessel, so to speak, which contained, and in which this precious gift was ministered or served, was the hearing of faith. Of this ministration the apostles were the ministers. "Ministered by us.....with the Spirit of the living God.....able ministers of the New Testament, not of the letter, but of the Spirit." It was "the ministration of the Spirit." 2 Cor. iii. 3-8. They frequently referred to this "ministry." 2 Cor. iv. 1; vi. 4; 1 Tim. i. 12. It is plain that whatever of the "all things pertaining to life and godliness" (2 Pet. i. 3) God intends to convey to his people, was committed to the apostles, and nothing, including the Spirit, can be obtained that was not "ministered" by them. How vain, therefore, the thoughts of those who imagine that God communicates his Spirit to them without those means and agencies he has given for this purpose. "By the hearing of faith, even as Abraham believed God, and it was accounted to him for righteousness." Gal. iii. 6. What is faith? "Faith is the confidence of things hoped for, the conviction of things not seen." Heb. xi. 1. How does faith come? "Faith cometh by hearing." What must this "hearing" be? "The Word of God" (or, "What God has spoken."—Rotherham). Rom. x. 17. The confident utterance of things believed is termed "the spirit of faith." 2 Cor. iv. 13

Into what part of man does the Spirit enter? "And because ye are children, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts." Gal. iv. 6. "Who hath also sealed us, and given the earnest of the Spirit in our hearts." 2 Cor. i. 22. Whatever the "heart" is, this is the seat of the operation of the Spirit in the believer. We will proceed to examine what that heart is, and how the Spirit reaches the heart. We are not left in the dark in this matter. Much of the confusion, misunderstanding, and abuse of the Holy Spirit question arises out of false teaching, which leads men to disregard and ignore what God has spoken, and to imagine they are led by the Spirit, when, in fact, they do not even know, and therefore cannot follow, the directions of that Spirit. Without regard to the inspired (inspirited) Word, Spirit influence at the present time is impossible. The "heart," into which God sends the Spirit of his Son, is that department of man which evolves thought. "Out of the heart proceed evil thoughts." Matt. xv. 19. Before the deluge, "God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was evil only continually." Gen. vi. 5. The Word of God is said to be a "discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart." Heb. iv. 14. Men "reason" in their "hearts." Mark ii. 8. Out of the "heart" are "the issues of life." Prov. iv. 23. As a man thinks in his heart, "so is he." Prov. xxiii. 7. "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness." Rom. x. 10. With the heart men either understand or do not understand. Matt. xiii. 15. The "foolish heart" of some rejecters of the gospel was darkened. Rom. i. [illegible] Word, in the heart of the best [illegible] mentioned Scripture but "the eyes of the understanding," which, in the case of the Ephesians, were "enlightened." Eph. i. 18. In all these and many other ways the heart is the seat of the intellect, in some the seat of the desires, feelings, affections, impulses. Into this division of man God sends his Spirit. Is it not plain that the reception of the Spirit by the believer, and its operation in him, is an intellectual [illegible] and controlled by the Spirit to the extent of man's yielding to it.

The Sabbath.

"And he said unto them, the sabbath was made for man, and not man for the sabbath; therefore the Son of Man is Lord also of the sabbath." Mark ii. 27-28. Asserted by our Lord the sabbath was made for man, made in the beginning by him who knew the end from the beginning, and by him who from the first had a plan of the ages, and in this plan of the ages, the sabbath figures quite prominently. After six days of labor by the Creator, then came rest, the sabbath; which with the six days of labor formed the weekly cycle.

It is also written that the Lord blessed the sabbath day and sanctified it—set it apart. "Because that in it he had rested." We hear no more about the sabbath for a period of about 2500 years, when the Creator in his plan and purpose of the ages, is leading the descendants of faithful Abraham from Egyptian bondage, to make them his peculiar people, and the depository of his truth. In connection with the giving of the manna, the sabbath is enjoined. See Ex. xvi. [illegible] be sure what his requirements are before attempting to bind them on your fellowman. Under the law, and before the law in the days of Abraham circumcision was required of all the seed of Abraham, under penalty of being cut off for disobedience—but now circumcision or uncircumcision is nothing.

The advocates of sabbatarianism run into extremes, and say that the ten commandments are of universal application and that they are a transcript of the law of heaven. How absurd to apply to the angels and to those that the Master says, Neither marry nor are given in marriage, the law that says, "Thou shalt not commit adultery," and to the immortal and deathless inhabitants of heaven or of the kingdom of heaven, "Thou shalt not kill." Or do you think that there will be any need of a law to restrain the saints from stealing from their neighbors, If we keep our covenant made in baptism, to crucify the old man, and to walk in newness of life until death, or the appearing of our Lord, we need not be troubled about keeping a sabbath. The sabbath was the first of a number of sabbatical observances—the seventh month, the seventh year, and the year of jubilee. All of which have long since ceased to be observed.

If it had been the plan and purpose of the Deity, that those Gentiles who believe and obey the gospel, should observe the sabbath, why did not some of the apostles say so? No rules for its observance are given. Sabbath breaking is never included in any list of offenses. In the enumeration by the apostle of the sins of the last days, no mention of the sabbath is found 2 Tim. iii. 1-5. If sabbath breaking is a sin why is it not included here being almost universally disregarded?

Our Lord also said, "But if ye had known what this meaneth, I will have mercy, and not sacrifice, ye would not have condemned the guiltless. For the Son of Man is Lord even of the sabbath day." Mat. xii. 7-8. If the keeping of the sabbath by Gentile converts had been one of the things required under the gospel dispensation, what in the world prevented the apostles, and the Holy Spirit from saying so, when some of the believing Pharisee said at Antioch, "That it was needful to circumcise them, and to command them to keep the law of Moses? Acts xv. 5. Now what is the answer? Ver. 28. "For it seemed good to the Holy Spirit, and to us, to lay upon you no greater burden than these necessary things; that ye abstain from meats offered to idols, and from blood, and from things strangled, and from fornication; from which if ye keep yourselves, ye shall do well." This advice of the apostles is in line with the testimony of the "Faithful and true witness unto the church in Pergamos," concerning things, "Sacrificed unto idols, and of committing fornication." The sabbath, a sign, and a shadow, is foreign to the spirit of the gospel; therefore our Lord never taught its continuance by giving any directions for its observance, knowing that it would cease by statute limitation when he, the Seed, had come. The fathers were not required to keep a sabbath. The Israelite in bondage could not observe a sabbath. The Christian in Gentile nations could not without great disadvantage. "It seemed good to the Holy Spirit, and to us, to lay upon you no greater burden than these necessary things."

A Visit to Chicago.

Some time ago the writer visited Chicago, the occasion being the marriage of Bro. Martin E. Aslakson and Sister Anna Smerz. Both of these young people are members of the Church of God at Chicago. Bro. Martin is a son of Bro. and Sister Martin T. Aslakson, and Sister Smerz is an estimable young lady who recently came into the faith. They were united in marriage by the undersigned on Tuesday evening Sept. 23, 1902 at the home of the groom's parents. A few near relatives were present to witness the marriage. May God's blessing rest on the newly married pair, and may God ever be in their home, to sanctify the joys, lighten the burdens, and direct the way.

On the evening previous a number of the brothers and sisters of the Chicago Church gathered at Bro. Aslakson's home, and I spoke to them on Titus ii. 11-14. It was indeed a pleasure to meet those of like precious faith who amid the bustle of busy city life had time to hear an exhortation on practical Christian duty. I trust they have been benefitted, as I enjoyed their fellowship.

Yours in the One Faith,

A. H. ZULMER.

Editor Restitution:

While this is a very lonely day, dark and rainy, I thought I would write a few lines to the dear brothers and sisters in Christ. I want to say in regard to our conference at St. Paul, Nebraska, that it was one of the best meetings I ever attended. Oh, such a grand, good time we did enjoy all there together. We met our dear Bro. Wilson and Bro. Schultz, and Bro. Herriman and others whom we were glad to meet. The meeting continued ten days. I was in hopes our dear Brother Prime would be there. I love to hear him talk on the restitution. I would love to hear him once more this side of the kingdom. He makes it so plain and beautiful. Our people at St. Paul did everything to make us feel at home, and we surely did. We were very sorry when the time came to close the meeting. We felt sad indeed to say farewell, but we did it knowing that we have a promise of meeting again, in the kingdom of God, if we prove faithful. It was especially sad to say good-bye to Bro. and Sister Story. We have known them so long. I trust I may meet them soon again; but if not in this life, may we meet them in the kingdom, where there will be no death, sorrow, nor crying, and all will be peace and joy and happiness. Let us all strive to live better, and finally when we are done with this life, when we have sung our last song and prayed our last prayer, may we go down to our graves in peace, and in the morning of the resurrection may we be raised and crowned is my prayer.

Submitted in love

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief in the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, NOV. 5, 1902.

READ our special offer to send to all new subscribers the balance of this year and all of next for $1.00, as a trial.

THE only peace-maker is made known to us by David:—"The Lord of Hosts is with us; the God of Jacob is our refuge. He maketh wars to cease unto the end of the earth." Psa. xlvi. 9.

"UNLESS the law had been my delights," said the Psalmist, in reviewing his past conflicts, "I should then have perished in my affliction. I will never forget thy precepts; for with them thou hast quickened me."

THERE were five Wednesdays in last month, so the issue of Oct. 22 is the one preceding this of Nov. 5. We get this number out early in the week so the Indiana brethren will get the notice of Brother Zilmer regarding our Conference. Please read both it and the programme, and come to the meeting.

READER, a multitude of friends cannot save you, houses and lands cannot save you; money cannot save you; a good constitution cannot save you; a fine education cannot save you. There's only one thing can save you, and that is the keeping of the commandments of God, and the faith of Jesus Christ.

WE apprehend that our readers have discovered that it is much easier to talk about giving up the world than to carry the resolution into effect. That when they think they have done with it, it often appears in a different shape; or like a wounded serpent that has been trod upon, it presently shows signs of life again, and if great care is not taken it may sting them again although it seemed so harmless.

WE recently met with a paragraph which said: "A young converted Jewess is said to have spent much time reading the church histories, in order to find out at what time the Christians ceased to be like Christ." A caustic criticism this! If the poor girl had been acquainted with the 9th verse of Rom. viii. she would have discovered that if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his; and saved herself much trouble.

RICHTER says, "The whole spiritual universe is shattered and shivered by the hand of atheism into innumerable glittering quicksilver globules of individual personalities running hither and thither at random, coalescing and parting asunder, without unity, coherence, or consistency. In all this wide universe there is none so utterly solitary and alone as a denier of God. With orphaned heart—a heart which has lost the great Father—he mourns beside the immeasurable corpse of nature, a corpse no longer animated or held together by the great Spirit of the universe—a corpse which grows its own grave. And by this corpse he mourns until he himself crumbles and falls away from it into nothingness. The wide earth lies before such an one like the great Egyptian sphinx of stone, half buried in the desert sand. The immeasurable universe has become for him but the cold iron mask upon an eternity which is without form and void."

"Thy Word is Truth."

Better than a thousand think-sos, or wish-sos is one thus saith the Lord. The first of the one hundred and fifty Psalms, is to us a precious portion. Young's translation of it reads as follows, and may be helpful:—

"O, the happiness of that one, who hath not walked in the counsel of the wicked; and in the way of sinners hath not stood,—and in the seat of the scorners hath not sat; but in the law of Jehovah is his delight, and in his law he doth meditate by day and by night; and he hath been as a tree planted by the rivulets of waters that giveth its fruit in its season, and its leaf doth not wither, and all that he doth he causeth to prosper. Not so the wicked; but as chaff that wind driveth away! Therefore the wicked rise not in judgment, nor sinners in the company of the righteous. For Jehovah is knowing the way of the righteous; and the way of the wicked is lost.

"ASK for the old paths, wherein is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls."—Jeremiah. "In vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrine the commandments of men."—Jesus.

WE ask your special attention to the offer as given on the first page of this paper. A NEW subscriber gets the rest of 1902 and all of 1903 for $1.00. We feel that after reading our paper for a year they will want it for a longer time, hence make this trial offer.

"GREAT peace have they that love thy law, and nothing shall offend them." Psa. cxix. 165. The converse of this is, those who do not love God's law have little peace, if any; and very trifling things offend them. Those who do not love God's law are reproved by it, for doing their own will instead of God's; and those who remind them of what the law says are often regarded as enemies.

More About Russia.

Bishop David H. Moore, of China, Corea and Japan is in attendance at the great Methodist Convention in Cleveland. He came by way of the Trans-Siberian railway, and his observations on Russia at this time, when Russian aggression is a topic of world-wide interest, are valuable. He says the railway through Manchuria, Siberia and Russia will change the axis of the world's trade. It is to be the great military trunk line by which Russia will be able to maintain its present position in the East, and add to its strength. Russia is the greatest hypnotist among nations,—absorbing other nations so smoothly, so patiently, and with so little ado that they do not know they are being made victims. She digests everything she swallows, even though it be four times its size. She is like a snake swallowing and digesting what would give other nations fatal indigestion. Her getting out of Manchuria is all a play. She will have Mongolia, and there will be added to her dominions 120,000,000 people, who, if they will not fight for Russia, will be her hewers of wood and drawers of water, supplying her while others do the fighting. That is the way Russia assimilates.

If the nations continue to sleep they will find themselves in the grasp of this eternal power. The United States must lose its sentimentality, ally herself with Great Britain, the Germanic peoples and Japan to erect a solid wall of opposition to the encroachments of this great power. God means that we shall stand by our mother country. The United States will see that Russia's spirit of neutrality in the Civil War, and her much praised selling of Alaska were all a part of a scheme of diplomacy so deep and smooth that we have not yet awakened to its true significance. Russia hoped to make Alaska a bone of contention between this country and Great Britain that would sever the two countries. The American-Great Britain-Japan opposition to this policy of encroachment on the part of Russia will be kindly but immovable. If fighting must be done, Japan will do it, and the larger nations will lend their moral support that will make the issue successful.....He says Siberia is a paradise. The five months of summer are crowded so full of fructifying power that they have a good harvests as we do in our longer summers. Siberia will yet be the Egypt of the modern world. Over this railway route Pekin will soon be but two weeks from the European capitals. Russia threatens to absorb not only Eastern Asia but practically THE WHOLE WORLD. Nothing less will satisfy them. This has been the transmitted thought and ambition of the ruling classes." We are sure this will be interesting reading for the old line of prophetic watchmen. They know what the denouement will be.

An Anchor of the Soul.

God promised to give Abraham the land of Canaan for an everlasting possession—Gen. xiii. 15; Gen. xvii. 8; also to Isaac, Gen. xxvi. 3; and to Jacob, Gen. xxviii. 13; Gen. xxxv. 12. This promise was not fulfilled in the lifetime of these three great men, for they were strangers in it, according to God's own words. Ex. vi. 4. It was not fulfilled by the children of Israel occupying the land in the past (for they were only tenants on conditions) and sojourners, Lev. xxv. 23, for it was still a matter of promise after they had been in the land several hundreds of years. Micah vii. 20. It was still unfulfilled after Christ had gone into heaven. Acts vii. 5. It formed the substance of the gospel preached by Paul, Acts xxvi. 6, and is termed by him "The Hope of Israel" Acts xxviii. 20.

Abraham did not expect to inherit the land at once, for it was not till AFTER that he was to receive it, Heb. xi. 8; and being such a long way ahead, he saw the promises afar off. Heb. xi. 13. These three men had not yet possessed the land, Heb. xi. 39, and will not till the seventh trumpet sounds, and the kingdoms of this world become Christ's, Rev. 11. 15, 18, which is the time of reward for they without us (saints in Christ will not be made perfect, or immortal Heb. xi. 40.

There was a certain clause in the will that caused Abraham to know that the promises would not be fulfilled in his life time as a mortal being. He saw the promises AFAR OFF, Heb. xi. 13, and knew that as a mortal man he could not possess an estate FOR EVER. Therefore Paul says, God promised eternal life before times age-lasting in promising Abraham an inheritance as the dust of the earth.

The promise was also made to the seed first, Gen. xii. 7, which Paul says is Christ. Gal. iii. 16. Therefore Abraham knew he could not possess it TILL THE SEED should COME to whom the promise was made. Gal. iii. 19. But Jesus the Christ has not yet had a foot of the land of Canaan. He said the foxes have holes and the birds of the air nests, but the Son of Man hath not where to lay his head; yet he came to his own inheritance. John i. 11; Matt. xxi. 38.

His death was required to enable the heirs to rise from the dead at his second appearing, 1 Cor. xv. 23, to possess the eternal inheritance. Heb. ix. 15. His blood is the blood of the covenant, Mat. xxvi. 28. At his first appearing he confirmed or ratified the promises made to the fathers, Rom. xv. 8.

His birth was looked upon by Zechariah as a proof of God's remembrance of his promise to Abraham, Luke i. 72. If any one be ignorant and faithless of these promises they are without God in the world of which he is the heir, Eph. ii. 12, being Son of God and of Abraham, Psa. ii. 8; Rom. iv. 13. This epoch is called the Restitution or Regeneration, Acts iii. 20; Mat. xix. 28, when Christ shall reign on Mount Zion before his ancients gloriously, as the one ruler of the whole earth, Isa. xxiv. 23; Zech. xiv. 9.....

The word of promise and the oath, are the two immutable things, in the which it is impossible for God to lie, and they form an anchor of the soul to the righteous, keeping them securly fastened to Jesus within the veil, Heb. vi. 18, 19.

Abraham looked for a city with foundations, a constitution not set up on flesh and blood principles, but a Heavenly Country, that is the land of Canaan made heaven like by being ruled over by righteous and immortal rulers equal to the angels, Luke xx. 34, under a King from heaven, with heavenly laws, Isa. ii. 3. Judea will then be a Paradise, the Garden of Eden, Isa. xxxiii. 20; Ezek. xxxiv. 25.

The only way Jews and Gentiles can now obtain a part with Christ in this glorious inheritance is by believing the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, and being baptized into Jesus Christ for remission of past sins, Acts ii. 38; viii. 12; Rom. vi. 4; Gal. iii. 27, 29, begotten by the truth, James i. 18, and born of water, John iii. 5; essential to salvation, 1 Peter iii. 21.

Notes By the Way.

In my last notes I had left Blair, Neb., and was met by Bro. Wilsie at Dover, Minn., and conveyed to his hospitable home. Brother Wilsie is a man who is eighty-two years of age, but as lively as a cricket, as is evident when you see him chase all over a pasture to catch horses who did not want to be caught, and also climb up apple trees to shake apples down. His heart is alive to the truth, but the people of Dover turn a deaf ear to his efforts to show them the true way of life.

Among the professors of organized Christianity there are many varieties, as at Dover, they have the Sunday Christian species. Their whole duty is performed if they attend the church on Sunday; and during the remainder of the week they can be lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God. On Sunday I preached in the United Brethren Church both morning and evening, and had good audiences and good attention. I am told the attendance was much larger than their local pastor could draw. After service a number came to me to shake hands, and say how they appreciated the truths I spoke. Meeting was then announced for Monday night, but no audience turned up. The pastor said that was his experience, he could not possibly raise a week-night meeting. On Wednesday night it was announced that there would be a Harvest Festival, and supper in the church, and the house was filled.

Brother Wilsie is sound in the faith, and his whole heart is in it, and would do the people good if they would only let him. Beside him there is a Sister Southwick, and that is all that remains of the Household of Faith in Dover. There used to be a Christadelphian congregation there, but it is now extinct.

I next visited Omro, Wisconsin. I was sent for by our worthy Brother George Bradley. I wrote to him that I would be at Omro, at such a date, and requested that he meet me at the depot. On arriving at Omro, I stepped upon the depot platform, and became, but one came. "But hastily a lady came up to me and asked, "Is this Brother Wilson?" I said "Yes." She says "have you heard of our sad misfortune?" I replied that I had not. She says "my husband is dead," he died suddenly while at work upon his place which was altogether unexpected. He was rejoiced that I was coming, and was telling his neighbors about it. Oh, how sad! I know our dear Sister and family will have the sympathy of the entire household of faith. Won't some of you dear ones in Christ, write a comforting, sympathetic letter to this dear Sister? Address, Mrs. Geo. Bradley, Omro, Winnebago Co., Wis.

Seeing our dear Brother Bradley had fallen asleep in Jesus, our worthy Brother and Sister Daggett arranged for our meetings. The Methodist Church was secured for the services. We had satisfactory attendance and splendid attention. At my last service when I preached upon the topic "The Source of Eternal Life, is it through Adam or Christ?" the quiet attention was such, you might have heard a pin drop.

Such blessed results have come from my visit to this place. Three precious young people applied for baptism. On Thursday afternoon we went by carriage to the banks of the beautiful Fox River, and I buried, these dear young people in baptism with Christ. Their names are George Daggett, Earnest Bradley and Eva Bradley. God bless these dear, young people, and preserve them unspotted from the world. Eva is a model Christian, and such a comfort to her sorrowing mother.

The congregation here were scattered and not meeting, but the night before I left them they all gathered together and partook of the communion in memory of our loving Savior. They are now going to meet regularly after this. Don't it make your heart rejoice? Remember them in your prayers before the throne of grace.

I am now (Oct. 19) at Albany, Wisconsin. I find here a band of believers under the leadership of our Bro. C. W. Tompkins, familiarly spoken of by the members as "Uncle Charley."

These brethren meet regularly every first day of the week for worship and communion. I am now holding a series of meetings at the Town Hall. The audiences and attendance are better than was expected. Here, as in every other place they have to meet opposition from the apostacy, but "Uncle Charley" is enough for any of them. They know enough to let him alone. Brother Francis, who writes for THE RESTITUTION was taken from the Seventh Day Adventists. Brother and Sister Bartlett, who are well known in Albany were drawn from the Baptists by attending "Uncle Charley's" Bible Readings. Brother Bartlett is a prominent druggist in Albany. When they sent in their resignation to the Baptist church, they were visited by the pastor and church officials and every effort made to retain them but to no purpose. They were given full liberty to believe and teach what they thought was in the Bible if they would only stay, but it was all to no purpose, because "Uncle Charley" had instructed them too soundly. Another one lost by the Baptists was Miss Comstock, a sister, in the dress-making business in Albany. She is sound in the faith, and rejoices in it exceedingly. They have another worthy sister here by the name of McKahn, who was dug out of the so-called Christian Church. They also have an aged Brother by the name of C. Minert, 85 years of age, who is very much opposed by his wife and children because of his ability in the faith. There are others of the household here, that have been dug out of the various branches of the apostacy, but cannot mention them now.

My next point will be Lanark, Ill. Oh how precious this work of the Lord is. I am having a continual feast of good things all the time. There is so much work to be done for the Master. Sinners need the grand old gospel of the kingdom preached to them. The weak in the faith need strengthening. The sick and afflicted need comforting. An evangelist should be sympathetic enough to feel for other's woes. The household that are scattered need gathering together. The work is manifold. There are fields ripe for the harvest where only an isolated brother or sister live, who is not able to sustain the expenses of an evangelist, and our evangelists are not able to sustain the expense themselves and preach the gospel too. It hurts me to pass these places by, when only a little from each one which could not be felt, would enable me to carry the gospel there. How many want a share in carrying the gospel to the poor?

Yours, in the Faith.

Obituary.

Mary Jane Dickson was the daughter of John B. and Catherine Dickson, and was born in Union Tp. Marshall Co., Ind., on July 27, 1846. Her mother was the daughter of Henry Logan one of the pioneer preachers of this part of the country, and well known to many of our older brethren. She has always lived in this County, and was a successful teacher in the public schools for a number of years.

On May 28th, 1881, she became the wife of Mr. Emanuel Price of this city, with whom she lived till her death on Oct. 24, 1902. She was the mother of four boys—Fred, George, Lloyd and Miles, all of whom with the husband, one brother Elias Dickson of Argos, two half-sisters Lizzie and Dora Dickson, two step-sisters Mrs. C. F. Pontious and Mrs. T. McDonald, with a large circle of relatives and friends, are left to mourn for her.

At the close of the June meeting at old Antioch in the year 1874, she made the good confession, and with four others like-minded, she went the "same hour of the night" to the Wolf Creek, and was immersed by Brother Hugh Barnhill, since which time she has been a loyal and faithful defender of the faith, and died in full confidence that the Lord would raise her at his coming.

A the funeral held on Sunday at the family residence, a large concourse gathered to weep with the afflicted and show the high esteem in which our Sister was held. It was her request that Brother A. H. Zilmer preach at the funeral from John xi. 25, and that Brother Willis Logan offer prayer, all of which was done as she desired. The pall bearers were six of the Logan brothers who are cousins of the deceased. After the service was over Sister Price was laid to rest in Oak Hill Cemetery, there to await the resurrection morning. May the Father watch over and guide the motherless boys, that they way meet their loving mother in the sweet by and by.

Duncan McRae was born in Clark, Canada, Oct. 11, 1828, moved to Illinois in 1850, married Charity Patterson at Sycamore, Ill., July 3, 1857. In 1868 they moved to Iowa, and since coming to the state have resided nearly all of the time at Clarksville, at which place his death occurred Oct. 14 1902.

Deceased was a member of the Church of God, and Bro. Geo. Moyer preached the funeral sermon at the late home on Oct. 15. For many years Brother McRae has been in feeble condition, but had been able to be about and at times do some work. Some two weeks before his death he became ill with a complication of diseases, and nothing could be done to save his life. He passed away surrounded by his wife and six children, to whom he was able at the last to smile a farewell and indicate with a movement of the hand that it was God's will that he should go.

The foregoing is taken from a newspaper clipping sent to this office.

Our present life in Christ may be compared that of the seed; a hidden life, contending underground against cold and darkness and obstructions, yet bearing within its breast the indestructible germ of vitality.

Signs in the Heavens.

VOLCANOES IN THE SKY.

It was but a day or two before the California earthquakes that a most wonderful sight appeared in the sunset sky. Never in my somewhat lengthened life have I seen anything so strangely ominous of approaching wrath for a wicked world, and have looked week after week to see if some notice would not be taken of the matter by the press, but so far have seen nothing.

Our attention was first attracted to the regions of sunset by the lurid streams that at regular distances from each other, blazed up toward the zenith. It was a beautiful picture that they made with soft, contrasting colors between them; but as we stood gazing the scene swiftly changed, and seven or eight well defined mountains appeared, all in active eruption, and seemingly belching forth fire, smoke and lava. So true to nature was the panorama, that a little child of our party, drew back in terror, and tearfully asked "If it was not actual fire." We are not superstitious, but this certainly was no accidental grouping of sunset colors. God's finger was there. "We are in the last of the last days," as Brother Dwiggins said in a recent letter. It is time for the Lord to "show wonders in the heavens and in the earth, blood and fire and pillars of smoke." "The great and terrible day of the Lord" is soon to come, when the captivity of Judah and Jerusalem are again to be brought, and all nations are to be gathered and plead with in the valley of Jehoshaphat.

But, whatever signs appear, if we are watching and ready for the coming of our Savior, we need not be afraid. No volcanic eruption will overwhelm the children of God, as Mount Pelee overwhelmed the wicked inhabitants of Martinique.

Though "the heavens and the earth will shake, the Lord will be the hope of his people, and the strength of the children of Israel."

Poetry.

Softly Falls the Eventide.

Softly while the daylight dies
And the sunset closes,
Homeward swift the red-wing flies,
Furrowing the crimson skies;
And the low horizon lies
Overlaid with roses.

Widely o'er the woodlands all,
Clover fields and meadows,
Misty curtains slowly fall
Over vale and mountain wall,
While the night-hawks whir and call
Through the growing shadows.

Softly falls the eventide,—
Twilight gray deepening,
Dusky pinions reaching wide,
Brood above the country side,
Folding with the night to hide,
Gracious slumber lending.

Gently falls our glooming time
Without sound or warning;
Fading earth-lights mount and climb
Into starry heights sublime,
And beyond life's sweet-bine
Glow the gates of morning.

The Wisdom of Salvomoon. Chap. 8.

1. And she extendeth from end to end and directeth all things like a household in the most useful way.

2. This one I loved (as a friend) and from my youth I sought her out, and I sought to lead her to myself as a bride, and I became a lover (sexual love here) of her beauty.

3. Having God's associate life she glorifieth good-birth, and the sole Lord of all hath loved her; (the higher sacred love here).

4. For she is an initiate of the mysteries of God's exact knowledge (positive science) and a chooser of his works.

5. And if wealth be a desirable acquisition in one's life, what is wealthier than the wisdom that doeth all things.

6. And if thoughtfulness is working, who more than she is an artificer of the things that be?

7. And if one love (sacred love) righteousness the painstaking results of toil are virtues; for discretion and thoughtfulness she teacheth, and righteousness and manhood, than which there is nothing more truly useful in men's way of living.

8. And if one long for experience also, she knows how to image the ancient and the things destined to be; she hath an exact knowledge of turns of words (figures of speech) and solutions of enigmas; signs and prodigies she foreknoweth, and issues of periods and times.

9. I decided therefore to lead this one unto an associate life, knowing she would be a fellow-counselor of good things for me, and a solace for thoughtful cares and sorrow.

10. And for her sake, I should have glory in crowded multitudes, and though a young man, honor in the estimation of elders.

11. I should be swift in judgment, and in the sight of men of ability I should be wondered at.

12. That when silent they would wait for me, and when I gave utterance they would give heed; and though talking over much they would put their hand upon their mouth.

13. That for her sake I should have deathlessness, (immortality) and should leave behind me an age-lasting remembrance to those after me.

14. That I should administer the household affairs of laities, (churchpeoples) and nations would be subject to me.

15. That affrighted petty rulers, when they heard, would have feared me; that I should appear good to the multitude and manly in war;

16. That, when I entered into my house, I should find rest in association with her; for social intercourse with her hath no bitterness, nor living with her no woe, but rejoicing and joy.

17. Having thus reasoned with myself and thought it over with my heart, that there is immortality (deathlessness) in kinship to wisdom,

18. And in her friendship good delight, and in the painstaking toil of her hands unfailing wealth, and in the exercise of her society thoughtfulness, and true renown in a partnership (common-participation) in her words, I went about seeking how I might take her for myself.

19. And I was a well-grown young man and had attained a good natural organic life (soul).

20. And being rather good (morally) I had come into an unpolluted body.

21. And being aware that in no other way should I be a self-controller (lit. controlled from within) except God should give it, and this too, the knowing whose the grace was, belonged to thoughtfulness, I interceded with the Lord and I besought of him, and said with all my heart.

COMMENT.

This chapter as the reader will see is the explanatory preface to the most prevailing prayer of which we have any record in either sacred or profane history. The fact of the prayer is well attested in other places in the sacred record; but nowhere else is the prayer itself in its entirety given. This moreover claims to be an autograph by the author, and has all the earmarks of genuineness. No one but Salvomoon himself could have written this prayer or one like it.

It is still redolent with the divine incense of acceptance; and bears upon it the imprimatur of God's Spirit. The fact that the mortal man made divinely wise in the things of this natural world was unable to endure the test of so great glory and ultimately fell from his high estate and sacred with riches and honor became unfaithful to the bride of his youth and higher aspirations, simply emphasizes the weakness of the flesh or the natural man or the merely mortal however highly endowed, in its "struggle with the spirits and powers of the air," and makes evident the most important truths of Christianity, namely, that "the overcomer" must be endured with the entirety (or "fulness") of the spirit and must control an be empowered to impart the same to those who are to become like him, in short be willing in the divinely imparted aspiration for the higher, to utterly abnegate the lower even to the extent of the wonderfully endowed soul or natural or mortal or transitory or ephemeral life which we now have with all its human wealth and "wisdom of this world" in order to gain the eternal life and all that this implies; in other words that we must absolutely and literally die to the soul-life to get the spiritual life, that even while actually living the dual life in the soul-body or the natural organism, we are to account our old man dead and live for the remainder of our natural life in the aspirations of the new man Christ Jesus in whose image we have already been rebegotten but not born. I am perfectly aware how this statement flatly contradicts "the lie of Satan" "ye will not surely die" which has become the first premise of all our medieval theology, philosophy, poetry and ethical teaching in which we have been and still are being nurtured; but I am full convinced that this is the teaching of revelation and however revolutionary to ekklesiastical and constituted authority throughout the Christian world the assertion of this primal truth may prove to be, in the providence of God it must and soon will prevail to the utter and abject humiliation of the merely human wisdom which has asserted the opposite and exalted the mortal to immortality. The ethical however exalted, if merely human, is merely ethical and no more spiritual than the ethics of the mart or the bourse. We may be sure though that the spiritual ethics will include, utilize and to the remotest particular require all that is of value in the lower domain of the natural; but the canon that measures them and their utility will be found to be a spiritual canon also and not a natural one. If to think be good ethics then think the thoughts of God after him in the spiritual as well as the natural; if to reason and judge discriminately, then reason, judge and hold fast or "account the good" so far as you are able, knowing that all God's ways are judicial ways and that he is the judge and final court of appeal in the higher ethics of character and ultimate life and death. If charity be good ethics, remember that false religious concepts and idolatry are spiritual fornication and adultery in God's higher school of chastity. If subordination and loyalty to "the powers that be" and the recognition of any law to be better than anarchy, be ethical truisms, then remember that all the natural powers that be are ordained of God, and that spiritual subordination and loyalty to such a Spiritual Ruler implies a code of ethics as much higher as the Lordship of the heavens and the earth is higher than the lords of the earth and their subordinated domains. In short, if duty and obligation be written with the largest letters in the domain of natural ethical teaching, lift up the eyes of your understanding and see them emblazoned in the heavens of the heavens with letters of eternal light.

The Bereans Column.

[Under this heading the society of "Bereans" of Illinois, will supply the copy, and endeavor to fill the space once a month.]

On Sunday morning, Sep. 28, Charles and Elsie Geelu, members of the Adeline Berean society, were buried in the waters of baptism at Oregon. We welcome them into the family of our Christ, and as we see them putting on the Savior's name let us resolve anew to follow more closely in His footsteps.

A CLEAN MAN.

As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he.

We say that actions speak louder than words, but there is that which in the sight of God, counts for more than our actions. It is our thoughts and intentions, because, even though an action may be good, if the motive prompting that action is wrong, we get no credit for it; and on the other hand, if our intentions are pure, and we try to carry them out as well as we can, God will give us credit for the intentions, even though we fail. In many cases, no doubt, the reason for such failure is due to our surroundings and the opposition of the world. While we live we must necessarily come in contact with the world and its wickedness, and we feel, at times, an inclination to fall in with its impure motives and take part in its carnal pleasures. We feel all the weakness of our nature calling for recognition—pride, envy, lust, love of glory and wealth, and the cravings of the appetite.

This of course is the time for us to be on our guard, but with the help of Jesus our guide we need not fail. In fact, as the effect of a color is heightened by proximity to its opposite, so the virtues of a clean man will stand out more strongly when opposed to vice and impurity, and his influence for good will be correspondingly greater.

How can we know that we are clean? Is there an instinct within us that will keep us from going astray, or do we need a more reliable guide? In the gospel Christ says, "Now ye are clean through the word which I have spoken unto you." Hence we know that to be clean we must seek Christ and his teaching as our standard; and not only that, we must have his aid to uphold that standard.

EDWIN RENNER.

EFFECT OF SIGNING THE PLEDGE UPON MYSELF AND MY NEIGHBOR.

Why should I sign the temperance pledge?

1. For my own sake. Although I am a Christian, and in my covenant to Christ I made a pledge which covers every duty of my whole life, yet I may commit myself to smaller pledges such as the temperance pledge. This would help me to remember that my pledge to Christ means that I must abstain from the use of intoxicating liquors. It helps me to remember that Christianity has something to do with my every day life.

2. For the sake of my neighbor. He may need the pledge because he is intemperate. My signing the pledge may persuade him to do so. The pledge will help him because in it he has definitely committed himself to something better. He will, because of this fact, make more of an effort to be what he pledges himself to be.

Again by signing the pledges I enter into fellowship with all the signers, some intemperate ones. We must not always look out for our own selves if we want to follow in Christ's steps. We must take his teachings for our example, for we read in Matt. ix. 12—"They that are whole need not a physician but they that are sick." So let each one of us let our light shine that our good works may be seen. Always ready to help a fellow being on to better and brighter things of this life.

EDNA ANDERSON.

When we become the slaves of sin we fail to see the most solemn warning. When we get down into the steep part of the broad road that leads to destruction, it requires a strong effort for us to stop and turn.

When God gives us a command it is for our good. Read Prov. xxiii. 31, 32, 21; in the order I have given them: Look not upon wine, is enough without giving any reason, for God has a right to give a command without stating why. In this case the danger is so great and at the same time so hidden (just like the serpent ready to sting us to death, while we do not know it is so near) that God through love tells us why we should not even look at it, because at last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder.

If the curse greater than another, is strong drink. Men and women are being thrown down into the depths of unpardonable sin. The danger is in the looking.

Don't look upon or touch alcohol. Don't play with this adder, for God says it will sting you. Obey, because God speaks, and he will bless you for obeying. Jesus who obeyed his Father will always love you too. Then destroy every serpent you can, ask God to give you the wisdom and strength to help others, and you will be the means of drying many tears, binding many wounds, and shedding light and gladness in many homes.

In verse 21 we read "the glutton and drunkard shall come to poverty." He does himself an injury by the introduction of alcohol poison into his system, shortening his life. He injures his family by robbing them first of the means they need for their sustenance; second, he robs them of the example he should set before them, and then

He comes to poverty financially, morally, spiritually, intellectually and in every way. Be not among the wine bibbers. Better not. Total abstinence is the only safe way. Then keep thyself pure.

Don't live to eat and drink, but eat and drink to live. Do all to the glory of God, is the earnest prayer of your Sister in Christ.

EMMA LINDSAY.

A drunkard cannot inherit the kingdom of God. This seems to be true from two standpoints—that of the Bible and of common sense.

In the first place we all know that a drunkard is not and cannot be pure; and we read in Matt. v. 8, that "the pure in heart shall see God." From this we may reasonably conclude that those who are not pure in heart will not see God, and surely a drunkard is anything but pure.

It is very obvious that liquor is unclean, and we are warned in 2 Cor. vi. 17, not to touch the unclean thing or else God will not receive us. Thus in another point is the drunkard debarred from the kingdom.

We are told in 2 Cor. vii. 1, to cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, and surely drunkenness is a filthiness of the flesh. 1 Cor. ix. 25, tells us that in running the Christian race, temperance is one of the necessary virtues. A person cannot expect to inherit the kingdom of God unless he puts forth some effort in this life; and certainly a person who gives himself up so unreservedly to an appetite as to become a drunkard is not running the Christian race.

We have a very decided statement in Gal. v. 21, "Envyings, murders, drunkenness, revellings, and such like, of the which I tell you before, as I have told you in time past, that they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God."

This statement is repeated in 1 Cor. vi. 10, where we read, "Nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners, shall inherit the kingdom of God."

It seems to me that we need no other passages of Scripture than these conclusive ones just quoted, to prove that a drunkard cannot inherit the kingdom of God. Our own common sense also should teach us that God would not want in his kingdom of purity, a person who during this life has given himself up to such impurities as drunkenness and others that almost invariable accompany it.

Yours, for the promotion of purity.

MARY ASLAKSEN.

Editor Restitution:

On Saturday, Oct. 18, Brother W. H. Wilson arrived at Albany, Wis. None of the brethren had ever seen him except the writer, but all were acquainted with his writings in THE RESTITUTION. He spoke to us seven times and went to Lanark on Oct. 25.

The little company here feel that a good man, a servant of Christ, has been among us. The loving gentle spirit of the Master was manifest in his teaching from first to last. Thursday evening he spoke on the immortality of the soul—and the consequent eternal torment. He said that is impossible, for God in his mercy has prevented that by placing a cherubim with flaming sword to keep the way of the tree of life.

Brother Wilson has the faculty of making the truth appear so plain as to be fully understood, and you are impressed with the fairness and honesty of the man.

Not Worthy.

"And he that taketh not up his cross and followeth after me is not worthy of me." Matt. x. 38.

God in his infinite love has made rich provision for the human race in the many blessings that come to us through the gift of his only begotten Son. Though we are his by right of creation, and also by right of preservation—as "in him we live, and move, and have our being"—yet when man rebelled and went away from God, his love and mercy followed him and purchased reconciliation with the most precious gift he could bestow. He has also sent his Holy Spirit into the world to reveal to man his need of a Savior, and has given his Word to show the way of life, and by every possible means he seeks to lead mankind to accept his proffered blessings.

We do not wonder then, when we think of the infinite mercy shown us, and the great privileges of the Savior in our behalf, that he should pronounce unworthy of him all who refuse to take up the cross and follow after him. God asks sufficient appreciation of all he has done to lead us to strive earnestly after those things that will please him. He knows that the heart will not give this loving homage in return for all his wealth of love, will never develop a character fitted to praise and enjoy his blessings through eternity, for this is his purpose in saving man.

It is so little that we can do at the best. By yielding ourselves entirely to him, presenting our bodies a living sacrifice unto God, the apostle tells us we are giving but a reasonable service. Jesus said at one time, "When ye shall have done all those things which are commanded you, say, We are unprofitable servants; we have done that which was our duty to do." So we can do nothing toward meriting eternal life, it is the free gift of God over and beyond all we can possibly do.

The words of Jesus in our text come with solemn admonition, especially in these closing hours of time. It is to be feared that very many who profess to be followers of Christ shrink from the bearing of the cross. Thy cross means crucifixion—death to everything out of harmony with God. The apostle Paul sums it all up when he says, "But God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom the world is crucified unto me, and I unto the world." When we remember that the Captain of our salvation was made perfect through suffering, we cannot expect to be fitted for companionship with him and with prophets and martyrs, and still live a life of ease and gratification. The Savior speaks of a class who will be expecting a reward at his hands, but to whom he will be compelled to say "Depart from me, I never knew you"—not worthy!

But there are others who, though not worthy of themselves, will be accounted worthy because of their obedience. Paul in exhorting the Thessalonians to faithfulness, says "That ye may be counted worthy of the kingdom of God, for which ye also suffer."

Happy for us if we will faithfully bear the cross of Christ, being a partaker of his sufferings, for the brief moment of this life; that when his glory shall be revealed we may be glad also with exceeding joy.—Wm. Wolcott in Herald of Life.

Prayer.

Prayer is, to take a mundane simile, like opening a sluice between the great ocean and our little channels when the great sea gathers itself together and flows in at full tide.—Tennyson.

As we direct a letter to a friend at such a place, so must we direct our prayers to God as our Father in heaven, and let us always send them by the Lord Jesus, the great Mediator, and they will be sure not to miscarry. —Matthew Henry.

Sometimes unspoken prayers are the sweetest and most helpful of all the prayers that go up to God's throne from the weary ones of the world. Sometimes it is enough to simply kneel and say, "O God, thou knowest all! I need not confess anything; I need not ask anything, for thou knowest all and lovest all."

God often sees and knows what we cannot and need not speak. His ear is attuned to our speechless prayers, and there comes to us a most beautiful and helpful spiritual uplift from this silent communion with God. To say and to feel that "God knoweth all" is a source of the sweetest comfort to those who truly and tenderly love him.

Shortening.

There are other things besides pastry that need "shortening."

"Ah say, mister," said the Yorkshire man to the minister, "But you preached a goodish sermon tonight; but if it had been cut short at beath ends, and set afire in the middle, it wad a been us mare good."

"Lord, help me to pray," was the petition of a somewhat prosey and long-winded young man. "And the Lord help thee to give over," was the devout ejaculation of an older and perhaps wiser and more spiritual, brother.

Many times a short prayer will reach farther than a long one; and many a sermon could be shortened without injury.

"I wanted to do justice to my subject," was the plea of a somewhat tedious talker.

"Justice to your subject! but neither justice nor mercy to your hearers," was the prompt reply.

"The gift of continuance" is not mentioned by Paul as one of the best gifts which Christians were to covet, and a prayer or sermon, like a railway, may suffer from "lack of terminal facilities."

Be short and to the point—have something to say; say it, and then stop.—The Christian.

How to Believe the Bible.

If you would know whether the Bible is true in its teachings, you must do by it as you would by a chart. The chart is nothing but a piece of paper, and what good would it do for half a dozen captains to sit down on the sea shore and discuss its merits? How can they know whether its descriptions are correct or not? Let them take it on board and prove it by sailing it. That is a true chart on trial. If there is a rock where it says "rock," if there is a shoal where it says "shoal," if there is a current where it says "current," if it is safe where it says "safe," then it is a true chart, no matter who made it, or how, or when, or where it was made. As it is the sea that is the best test of a chart, so the human life is the best test of the Bible. Take God's Word, in which human life is charted down, and measure character and conduct by it; measure your own whole self by it; measure God's grace by it, and see if it is not true. Would you know the truth of the Bible? Become a Christian. "If any man will do his will," says Christ, "he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God."

Be Short.

Long visits, long stories, long essays, long exhortations, and long prayers, seldom profit those who have to do with them. Life is short. Time is short. Moments are precious. So learn to condense, abridge and intensify. We can bear things that are dull if they are only short. We can endure many an ache and ill if it is over soon; while even pleasure grows insipid, and pain intolerable, if they are protracted beyond the limits of reason and convenience. Learn to be short. Lop off the branches, and stick to the main facts in your case. If you pray, ask for what you believe you will receive, and get through; if you speak, tell your message and hold your peace; if you write, boil down two sentences into one, and three words into two.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the doners request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

Don't feel compelled to pommel every one who does not think as you do. Don't be a scolder. Some people think it a sign of smartness to berate some one. Any one can do that who is not smart at all. Folks that can be driven are not worth driving. The man who can be persuaded by argument or won by love cannot be browbeaten by abuse.

Obituary.

George A. Bradley was born Sept. 30, 1835, in Handby, Derbyshire Co., England, moved to America in 1846, and came to Rushford, Wis., in 1849. He was married to Miss Louisa Jaeger May 19, 1878, and died Sept. 11, 1902.

Brother Bradley became acquainted with the gospel of the kingdom and the name of Jesus Christ through the preaching of Brothers Stephenson and Reed, and being convinced of the truth of the grand message of salvation, became obedient by putting on Christ in baptism in June, 1867.

He leaves to mourn their loss a sorrowing wife, four children, four brothers and two sisters. Brother Bradley was very highly esteemed both as a man and a Christian; indeed to know him was to love and respect him. The large concourse of people at the funeral, the many beautiful floral tributes and the expressions of sorrow and regret by his neighbors and friends, all showed the esteem in which he was held.

His death came as a terrible shock to the dear wife and children, as he dropped dead by the roadside as he was returning home from his brother's where he had been to assist at threshing grain. He had not been feeling very well, but no one dreamed death was so near.

To the sorrowing ones what can we say only to point them to the great Father above who does not willingly afflict his children, but ever leadeth them in mercy, giving the blessed assurance that all things shall work for good to those who love God: May he indeed be a Father to the fatherless, and the widow's God.

The funeral was held at the North Rushford Church. Words of comfort were spoken by Eld. Decker of Eureka, from the text found written upon a slip of paper in Brother Bradley's Bible: "I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live."

Among the beautiful hymns sung by a quartette were "Going down the valley," and "Sweet by and by." On the same slip of paper upon which the above text was written were these words, "Search the Scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life, and they are they which testify of me.

Oh, how earnestly did our brother search the Scriptures. The Bible was not only his daily companion, but at times when coming in from work tired he would sit down and read from its pages while resting. How beautifully was his life guided and moulded by its teachings, causing him ever be so kind and pleasant.

During the summer, seeing in THE RESTITUTION that Bro. Wilson would visit this state, he wrote to him inviting him to come here, which he did and commenced meetings Oct. 11. He was hindered some on account of the rain, but still he was able to give five gospel discourses. Oh, how our hearts were warmed and encouraged to hear again the precious truths that he taught. Three young people, Earnest and Eva Bradley and George Daggatt desiring baptism, we drove to the Fox river and there they went down into the watery grave. May they indeed have arisen to walk in newness of life. May they fight the good fight of faith and lay hold of eternal life.

After evening service we went to the home of Sister Bradley and partook of the bread and wine in memory of the death and dying love of our precious Lord and Master.

The next day the young brothers in speaking to me of Brother Wilson said if there were more men like him there would be more Christians, and how warmly my heart responded yes, for Brother Wilson did indeed manifest the spirit of Christ. May God bless him in his labor of love.

How happy Brother Bradley would have been to meet Brother Wilson and to have talked over with him things concerning the kingdom of God. How rejoiced his heart would have been that his dear son and sweet daughter are added to the household of faith.

Dear brethren and sisters in Christ, let us be more faithful, so that when our Lord shall return we may be ready to meet him.

Yours in hope of eternal life.

S. S. & N. O. DAGGETT.

Died at Salem, Ohio, Sept. 25, 1902, Sister Etta Baker, the beloved wife of Mr. Oscar Baker. She was a young woman who usually appeared to be in perfect health. She had been slightly indisposed for several days, but suddenly became so ill that her life went out before her medical attendants could properly diagnose her case. This sad event once more demonstrates that our life is a vapor that appeareth for a little time and then vanisheth away; and warns us to hold the things pertaining to this life with a loose hand.

While living in Cleveland it was our privilege to outline to her the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, and having received the Word with gladness, she was baptized into the name of Jesus for the remission of sins.

Through the illness of her dear husband they were soon obliged to return to Salem, Ohio, where she entered heartily into the work of the household of faith, and demonstrated that she had been with Jesus and learned of him; and knew the blessedness of one whose "transgression is forgiven, and whose sin is covered." The prospect of having an evangelist among them to constantly hold up the lamp of life greatly delighted her; but before the arrangements were completed she dropped out of the ranks.

Bro. P. Neill went to Salem and spoke words of comfort to the household of Faith, and pointed out the way of life to those who were strangers to the covenants of promise; using as the foundation of his remarks, the words of Psa. cxvi. 15, "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints;" and those in Eccl. vii. 1, "A good name is better than precious ointment." A large number of sympathizing friends and neighbors were in attendance. The sweet babe in Christ was then laid away in the ground in full confidence that when he who is our life shall appear, she will "appear with him in glory." That he may soon come for those who are his, we pray.

Announcement.

The first quarterly Conference of the Church of God of Indiana, will be held at Plymouth, beginning on Thursday evening, Nov. 13, and continue over Sunday following.

We earnestly desire a large attendance at these meetings. It does us so much good to meet others who are also contending for "the faith." Let every Church and the isolated ones be represented. Come one, come all and help us to better know the needs of the State, so better work may be done in future than has been done in the past. You will be well cared for while among the brethren at Plymouth. Many good meetings have been held there, and let us make this one the best of all.

Programme will be announced later.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. C. Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

One Year $1.50. Six Months 75 Cents. Three Months 40 Cents.

TO OUR PATRONS.

We want more readers for THE RESTITUTION. We want One Thousand new names on our list before January 1st, 1903, and can have them if you will help us.

In every Church of our faith in the land there are members who do not take our paper, who would be benefited by reading it.

There are those who are isolated by circumstances from any Church fellowship, who would be kept firmer in the faith, helped and strengthened for the battles of life if they had THE RESTITUTION each week.

There are others interested in the truths we hold, who would often have their attention called to the principles of our faith by reading our paper. When no preacher can be heard, when you cannot talk to them, THE RESTITUTION in their homes would be ever a present visitor—a missionary that will do more than any other one thing to keep the interest alive.

There are those whom we wish were interested in the Bible and what it promises. Many of this class of persons have never had the opportunity, or have neglected the matter when it was before them.

You are surely known to people such as are mentioned, and you are surely interested in them. We are satisfied you are not unmindful of their eternal well-being. How much do you care for these people? Will you join with us in getting the gospel before them, and keeping it there a year? We have this to offer to you for consideration.

We will send THE RESTITUTION one year to NEW Subscribers for $1.00. We will start them as soon as received and give credit to the end of 1903.

With a little persistent effort in presenting the paper to those you know who are not taking it, you can induce them to try it for $1.00. If you want some sample papers we will gladly supply them to you, and our list can be increased by 1000 names by Jan. 1st. It can be done easily if you will act on this suggestion, and get those near you interested. If each reader would get a new name our list would be doubled at once.

It would seem as if every reader of THE RESTITUTION could exert influence enough to get one more new name if the effort was made. Will you try it? If the first person you suggest it to does not respond, do not be discouraged, but try some one else. Perhaps the one you least expect will answer quickest.

Did you ever stop to figure up how many words are contained in our paper in a year? You will be surprised at the number of sermons it contains. There is variety too. There is doctrine and the practical, encouragement and cheer, and comfort for the distressed. Each phase of teaching would make several good sized books during the year. You can do no work that yields as large a return for the money expended as by sending THE RESTITUTION to a friend for a year.

Will you not start right away and ...d one name, and next week when ...t person gets his paper, some one ... will hear of it, and you can send ...her subscriber.

VOLUME LI. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, NOVEMBER 12, 1902. NUMBER 42.

Poetry.

This Awful Volume.

Within this awful volume lies
The mystery of mysteries;
Oh, happiest they of human race
To whom our God has given grace
To hear, to read, to fear, to pray,
To lift the latch and force the way!
But better had they ne'er been born
Who read to doubt, or read to scorn.

The Spirit of God. No. 5.

The next question is, How does the Spirit reach or get to the heart? And again the process is a very simple one, as we shall presently see. "When any one heareth the Word of the kingdom, and understandeth it not, then cometh the wicked one, and catcheth away that which was sown in his heart." Matt. xiii. 19. Thus the heart is reached by way of the hearing, and by means of the Word. And this is precisely the process in the reception of the Spirit. "By the hearing of faith." "The Lord giveth wisdom." How does it come to us? "Out of his mouth cometh knowledge and understanding." Prov. ii. 6. Hence we must "apply" the "heart to understanding," as well as "incline" the ear "unto wisdom." And if we do put forth becoming efforts "wisdom" will "enter the heart," and "knowledge" be "pleasant to the soul." Proverbs ii. 10. And what else is this than "the Spirit of wisdom and revelation," which Paul wished for the Ephesians (i. 17)? The manner of supplying this "spirit" was said to be "in the knowledge of him" (not without such "knowledge"). This knowledge pertains to "his will" (God's will), and Paul desired, and prayed, and labored, that those to whom he ministered, might be "filled" with this knowledge, "in all wisdom and spiritual understanding." Col. i. 9. This understanding is impossible without "the entrance of God's words." "It" is the only channel through which "understanding" is supplied to "the simple." Psa. cxix. 130. What is the Word of God? In its final elements it is that which God has spoken. It is not the written or printed character on the page, as this only tells us what God has said. We can "let the Word of Christ dwell in us richly in all wisdom" (Col. iii. 16), but the printed Book we call the Bible, cannot "dwell" in us. God, by means of his Word, expressed his Spirit; the Word was prompted by that Spirit, as man's words are prompted by his spirit. When Jesus spoke to men, he spoke at the instance of the Spirit, which had been given to him "without measure" (John iii. 34); and those words of his, when understandingly and heartily received, are not the "dead letter" they are sometimes said to be, but are the conductor of God's Spirit to those so receiving them. No one can so receive them who does not, with them, receive the Spirit. "They are Spirit and they are life." John vi. 63.

What are the evidences of the presence of the Spirit in the heart of the believer? Does he "feel" that he has the Spirit? If so, how? When inquiry along these lines is pressed against those who claim direct and immediate Spirit influence (without means), they endeavor to ward off such inquiry by the remark that such questioning amounts to sacrilege. But this is a matter which can be, and therefore ought to be understood, and hence is not left for feeling to decide. The only safe criterion in regard to this matter is that laid down by the Lord, when he said, "By their fruits shall ye know them." Every tree produces fruit of its own kind, and to that fruit it imparts of its own life substance. If persons have and are governed by the Spirit, it will be manifest by the "fruit" that appears. "The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance." Gal. v. 22, 23. And, as previously pointed out, this "fruit" must appear "in all." Eph. v. 9. How does the Spirit bring forth this fruit? It is by means of "the Word of the truth of the gospel .....which bringeth forth fruit.....in you." Col. i. 5, 6. The same thought was uttered by Jesus in the parable of the seed. "But he that received seed into the good ground is he that heareth the Word, and understandeth it; which (Word) also beareth fruit, and bringeth forth, some an hundredfold, some sixty, some thirty." Matt. xiii. 23. That Word, when thus intelligently apprehended, becomes a power "which effectually worketh also in them that believe." 1 Thes. ii. 13.

Thus they "live in the Spirit" and "walk in the Spirit" (Gal. v. 16, 25) manifesting the "spiritual mind" which tends to life and peace. Rom. viii. 5-9. By this Spirit their intellectual faculties are "quickened" into action, which also exerts its influence upon their mortal (not dead) bodies (Romans viii. 11) bringing every member into subjection to the will of God, so that God is glorified in them. 1 Cor. vi. 20. "It is the Spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing; the words that I speak unto you, they are Spirit and they are life." John vi. 63. "The Spirit helpeth our infirmities." Rom. viii. 26. Why? Because "we know not what we should pray for as we ought." How can we learn "what we should pray for?" In the petitions indited by that Spirit. How does the Spirit dictate such petitions? By means of "words." "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." John xv. 7. What manner of words are to "abide?" "Spirit and life." Why are they spirit and life? Because dictated by the Spirit. Did the Spirit, speaking through Jesus, indite any prayers to "help our (human) infirmities?" I am glad to be able to give an affirmative answer to this question. We have been taught "how to pray." Illustration 2. "How" is it? "After this manner pray ye," said Jesus by the Spirit, and then proceeded to give instructions. Matt. vi. 9-13. Is it possible for us to pray for anything that is not comprehended in that prayer? Impossible! This is a very tangible and practical way for the Spirit to "help our infirmities." Thus we pray "IN the Holy Spirit" (Eph. vi. 18; Jude 20), according to the Spirit's directions; and every petition that so originates with the Spirit (which searcheth the deep things of God. 1 Cor. ii. 10), being thoroughly familiar and in accord with God's will, will not only be heard, but granted according to 1 Jno. v. 14, 15. Some years ago a number of young people in Cleveland, Ohio, conceived the idea to issue a call to the young peoples' societies of this country to pray, on a certain day, for the conversion of Mr. Robert G. Ingersoll. The day came, and thousands of prayers were made to God to convert the great agnostic; but Ingersoll died as he had lived: Without God. Were those prayers "according to God's will?" Were they "in the Holy Spirit?" If so, why were they not granted? For "if we know that he heareth us, we know that we have the petitions that we have desired of him." There was manifestly something wrong about this matter. Either those persons were not sincere, or God did not fulfil his part of the transaction; or else, with all their zeal and devotion, they did not pray "with the spirit and with the understanding." This is a matter which it is well worth our time to investigate and ponder deeply, because many injudicious prayers have been publicly addressed to God which could not be granted in the expected way, since they were not in harmony with God's will.

"Grieve not the Holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption." Eph. iv. 30. It is possible to resist its influence by acting contrary to the Spirit's directions. "Quench not the Spirit." 1 Thes. v. 19. The operation of the Spirit may be hindered by yielding to the flesh—a life of sin; and may be quenched or smothered by keeping silence when occasion demands that we speak. Such conduct would "grieve" that gentle, holy, Christ-like Spirit.

This Spirit is communicative, as indicated in the words of Jesus already referred to. "He that believeth on me (Jesus),.....from his belly shall flow rivers of living water." And this was spoken "of the Spirit which they that believe on him should receive." John vii. 38, 39. Jesus gives to the believer the water which shall be in him "a well of water springing up into everlasting life." John iv. 14. The Spirit, quickening all the powers imparts ideas, which in turn produce others, so that such a one finds an ever widening field of delight. Like a flowing brook, he sends forth to others streams of living water. "As the Scripture saith," the words of such a man's mouth are "as deep waters, and the well spring of wisdom as a flowing brook." Prov. xviii. 4. "The mouth of a righteous man is a well of life." Prov. x. 11. To him the Scriptures never grow old. Verses with which he was long familiar have an added charm at every reading, and others are constantly opening up and sparkle with increasing lustre. He is not a stranger to God, but enjoys communion with him, breathing his Spirit as he inclines his ears to the words of his mouth. As he has received the gift, so he ministers the same to others, as a good steward of the manifold grace of God. When he speaks, his thoughts are conveyed in the terms of "the oracles of God;" when he serves in any capacity whatsoever, doing a kind act, helping the needy, feeding the hungry, he does this as of the ability which God gives. 1 Pet. iv. 10, 11. In this way he not only enjoys the favor of God through the indwelling Spirit, but, as like begets like, also communicates it to others.

Jesus said that when the Spirit of truth should have come, "he will reprove the world of sin, of righteousness, and of judgment." John xvi. 8. How can this be done, except as the lives of those who are governed by the Spirit serve as a standing rebuke against sin? The world cannot see the Spirit (John xiv. 7), only as it sees "the fruit of the Spirit" in the conduct of those in whom the Spirit "dwelleth."

"And grieve not the Holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption." Eph. iv. 30. The work of the Spirit in the believer in this life is preparatory. "The day of redemption," here mentioned, is the time in which all God's children will be redeemed from the power of corruption, death, and the grave, and will be like the glorious body of Jesus, who no more returns to corruption, and over whom death has no more dominion. Then they will not only have the spiritual mind, but will be spiritual bodies, having been born of the Spirit. Now they are sealed by the Holy Spirit of God unto (eis, into, toward, for, with a view to) that day. This Spirit is "the earnest of our inheritance until the redemption of the purchased possession." Eph. i. 13, 14. Note carefully, the Spirit, as given to the believer, is not the finality of his expectations; it is not "the inheritance" itself, but "the earnest," the pledge of the inheritance; or, if I may so say, it is the first instalment of what God intends to bestow. It is the earnest "until the redemption of the purchased possession." This redemption is intimately connected with the second coming of Christ. Luke xx. 25-32; Mark xiii. 24-29. Since God has given us such exceeding great and precious promises, and has given us a pledge of good faith, we "groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption (sonship), the redemption of our body. For we are saved by hope; but hope that is seen is not hope: for what a man seeth, why doth he yet hope for? But if we hope for that we see not, then do we with patience wait for it." Rom. viii. 23-25.

Much more might be said upon this very prolific subject. But I fear I have already overtaxed the kind reader's patience, and therefore close with the sincere wish that some good may come out of this effort. Submitted in the love of the truth as it is in Jesus.

DRAWBACKS AND HINDRANCES.

"That they all may be one.....that the world may believe that thou hast sent me."

In a recent article certain interpretion of the Apocalypse given in Eureka and in Elliott's "Horae," respectively, were referred to. The opening of the first six seals passed under notice, and it was shown that, with few exceptions, Elliott had previously given substantially the same views concerning the seals, as are given in Eureka. His work Horae Apocalypticae was well known to the author of Eureka before Elpis Israel was published in 1849, as was shown in a previous article.

In regard to the seventh seal it is said in Eureka, (Vol. II. page 100), that "this seal covers the whole period from A. D. 325 to A. D 1905, an interval of 1580 years. It therefore contains the judgments specially allotted to the seven trumpets, seven vials, and seven thunders."

So in Elliott's Horae (Vol. I. page 113), without giving dates, we find, "The three Septenaries of seals, trumpets, and vials, will be interpreted by me consecutively:—the seventh seal as unfolded in the seven trumpet-visions, the seventh trumpet in those of the seven vials; and this with no intermission or interruption, save only that of the supplemental, retrogressive part," etc.

Taking now the first six trumpets it was noted in a previous article that Eureka contained several passages quoted with approval from Elliott's work. The first four trumpets are designated in Eureka, "wind trumpets;" to the same effect these four are termed by Elliott "Tempest Trumpets." Their mission, as described in both works, is to bring about the fall of the Western Roman Empire by the Goths; Vandals, etc. The fifth and sixth trumpets, called woe trumpets are, in both works, allocated to the fall of the Eastern Roman Empire by the Saracens and Turks, closing with the capture of Constantinople in A. D. 1453.

Taking the trumpets one by one we note the following points:—

The 1st trumpet, is stated in Eureka to extend from A. D. 395 to A. D. 410; "The first trumpet sounded. Fame," says Claudian, "encircling with terror her gloomy wings proclaimed the march of the barbarian army, and filled Italy with consternation." "The judgments of the trumpets were ordered with reference to the threefold division of the Catholic world." Alaric (a Catholic) was made king of the Visigoths," etc.

So Elliott, from whom a page on this trumpet, (Vol. I. 343) is quoted in Eureka (II. p. 418) with approval. He treats largely on the same threefold division mentioned in preceding paragraphs in Eureka. Referring to Alaric he says, "The Gothic chieftains elevated him on a shield and solemnly proclaimed him King of the Visi-Goths. And then the first trumpet sounded."

The 2nd trumpet. This is said in Eureka to refer to the invasion of Genseric and his Vandals. He says that "discord of Aetius and Count Boniface, two generals of the Western empire, was the fatal and immediate cause of the eruption of this Vandal volcano, which resulted in the loss of Africa and the islands."

Elliott is again quoted with approval here. He says, "Now is the visitation of the Western third of the Mediterranean Sea, and the islands and trans-marine provinces included in it." Vol. I. p. 340.

The 3rd trumpet. In Eureka this is placed from A. D. 450 to 453. An invasion of Huns under Attila. The author of Eureka says, "The following is Mr. Elliott's summary of the phenomena of the vision," and quotes a page from the Horae. Eureka Vol. II. p. 432.

The 4th trumpet. In Eureka Vol. II. p. 440 two extracts are given from the Horae as a brief sketch of the phenomena of this trumpet.

The 5th trumpet. The author of Eureka, referring to a Mahommedan symbol, the key of paradise, says, Vol. II. p. 454, it "was afterwards sculptured on the archway of the Alhambra, an engraving of which is given in Mr. Elliott's work." He also speaks of the poem Antar as quoted by Elliott.

The 6th trumpet. In this there is substantial agreement between Eureka and the Horae. A little difference is shown in calculating the period represented by the "hour, day, month and year." Both, however, adopt the year-day rule, but take 360 days and 365 days respectively. Mr. Elliott in another place (Vol. III. p. 398) seems to favor the alternate view.

The 7th trumpet. As has been mentioned this trumpet includes, according to Eureka and also as given in the Horae, the seven vials. There is some difference of view in regard to the "silence in heaven," but the incense offered by the 144,000 sealed ones is viewed in the same way in both works.

The vials. The first six vials are interpreted both in Eureka and in the Horae as having had their fulfilment, at least their pouring out commencing between the A. D. 1789 and 1820. The first date is the breaking out of the French Revolution and the latter the war against the Turks by Ali Pacha.

There is some difference of opinion between Eureka and the Horae as to the precise allocation of some of the vials. They are practically all one, however, as to the second vial. Eureka gives the date of the pouring at A. D. 1793, and consummated at Waterloo, that is, 1815. In Horae the date of pouring is A. D. 1793 and lasted for above 20 years.

The third vial according to Eureka extends A. D. 1790 to 1801; while in Horae the dates given are A. D. 1792 to 1805.

The sixth vial is dealt with over 200 years ago by a writer named Tillinghast, and quoted in Elliott's notes. He says, "by the river Euphrates we are to understand the Ottoman or Turkish Empire."

It will be seen from these brief references to the trumpets and vials that Mr. Elliott, so far from "not having added anything that would at all increase the intelligibility of the Apocalypse," as the author of Eureka stated in the preface to Vol. III. had really supplied a large portion of the exposition contained in Eureka. The reader has been provided with a small part of the material which should enable him to judge for himself.

Some further remarks are still considered necessary to a complete sketch of the situation.

The Nature of Man.

Faith is not a leap in the dark, but an acting on what we know. It is confidence based on absolute knowledge of the integrity of the Word of God. With every promise that I need, I act on it. If you believe the Bible to be true, that is all any one can do. You could not believe more, if you tried, so don't try. One does not need any feelings or emotions, but to know that the promise he pleads is for him, and as sure as it is, so sure will it be honored. It honors God for us to go at this in a cool, business like way. Satan would like to clothe it with mysticism, and so blind our eyes. It is simple as mathematics. Follow the rule, and get the answer. Read your Bible, as though you were the only person in the world, and act on it. Don't hunt for faith, don't insult God by asking for it. After Pentecost they knew, so could not help believing. Unbelief is a sure sign of ignorance. Get acquainted with God, and faith will be yours.—E. W. Kenyon.

In the late campaign in China, no nation, not even our own, carried itself with such credit as Japan. Her troops had faultless discipline, and courage second to none. The Russian appeared as barbarians beside them. The eminent Christian admiral (Serada), who recently died, was not the sole Christian in the military service of the "sunrise kingdom."

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the right-eous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, NOV. 12, 1902.

WE desire to thank those friends of our paper who have sent us so many new names. It is truly encouraging, and we thank you for the interest you manifest in this department of the Lord's service. Keep it going and the list can be doubled by Jan. 1st.

NEW truth like new gold, may not be new because it had no previous existence, but like the gold, may have been lately sifted and washed from the rubbish of ages, and newly prepared for present use.

THERE are some who treat the sacred writings as they would be ashamed to treat any other book. While they give the sacred writers credit for undoubted veracity, they will not receive their testimony.

AS the Thessalonians, when converted by the truth "turned to God from idols, to serve the living and true God, and to wait for his Son from heaven," how is it that Protestants and Catholics are waiting to be taken to God's Son in heaven?

AS the Bible says there is but ONE HOPE, Eph. iv. 4, and that, the hope of eternal life to be bestowed at the second appearing of Jesus, Titus i. 2; ii. 13; iii. 7, what right have any to teach that men have eternal life now, and that the coming of Jesus is something that does not concern his disciples?

BRETHREN and sisters:—In your reading, do not hurry through any portion of God's Word, but reflect and observe. Read, mark, learn and inwardly digest; that is, think about it until you have God's thoughts for your own. They then become yours. You should then endeavor to retain them in your mind that as wholesome mental food they may enable you to grow in wisdom and the knowledge of God, and so be edified by the Word of God's grace, which is able to build, on up and to give you, in the obedience of it an inheritance among all them that are sanctified.

The Wages of Sin.

By one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin, and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned. Rom. v. 12.

That ye henceforth walk not as other Gentiles walk, having the understanding darkened, being alienated from the life of God through ignorance that is in them; because of the blindness of their heart. Eph. iv. 17, 18.

"If our gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are perishing." 2 Cor. iv. 3.

"Man that is in honor and understandeth not, is like the beasts that perish." Psa. xlix. 6.

"O Lord, our God, other lords besides thee have had dominion over us .....They are dead, they shall not live; they are deceased, they shall not rise; therefore thou hast visited and destroyed them, and made all their memory to perish." Is. xxvi. 13, 14.

"In their heat will I make their feasts, and I will make them drunken, that they may rejoice, and sleep a perpetual sleep, and not awake, saith the Lord." Jer. li. 39.

"The Dead in Christ

Rise first." 1 Thes. iv. 16. By reference to the context it will be seen that the comparison implied in these words, is between the dead righteous and the living righteous, and not between the righteous dead and the wicked dead. The Thessalonians were apparently mourning the death of some of their number in a way that indicated a fear that the deceased had lost something by dying. Paul assures them that they were mistaken. "We who are alive, and remain unto the coming of the Lord, shall not prevent (or go before) them who are asleep, for the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then, (or second) we who are alive and remain shall be caught up," etc. Paul simply means to teach that the dead are restored to life before the living are changed and enter upon the inheritance, and therefore the dead lose nothing by dying. "Wherefore," says he, "comfort one another with these words."

ETERNAL life is a matter of promise. In I John ii. 25 we read:—"And this is the promise that he hath promised us, even eternal life through Jesus Christ." And in 2 Titus i. 2 we read, "In hope of eternal life, which God who cannot lie, promised before the world began."

An Infallible Tribunal.

"It is one of the finest sources of relief which the truth affords, the knowledge that the disputes, misunderstandings, and wrongs of the present maladministration of things, are destined in the purpose of God, to come before an infallible tribunal, at which every man shall have praise or condemnation. It is gladdening to know that there lies between this corrupt state of things and the perfection of the kingdom of God, an ordeal which will prevent the entrance of "anything that defileth," which as fire will try every man's work, and thin down the crowd who only say, "Lord, Lord." It is comforting to know that wrongful suffering will then be avenged,—that secret faithfulness will then be openly acknowledged,—that unappreciated worth will be recognized,—and that evil doing, unpunished, unsuspected, and unknown, will be held up for execration, in the face of so august an assembly as that of the elohim, presided over by the Lion of the tribe of Judah. This is part of the glad tidings concerning Jesus Christ.

Nature of Christ and the Saints.

For M. T.—There will be no difference between Christ and his saints as regards nature. But their rank will not be the same. The brethren of Christ reign on earth as subordinate rulers. Christ has been given all power, and he will reign as King of kings, and Lord of lords, the Supreme ruler and High Priest upon his throne. That Christ being made better than the angels does not refer to nature, is very evident. God is a Spirit. John iv. 24. Christ the Second Adam was made a quickening spirit, 1 Cor. xv. 45. Then we read: "Who maketh his angels spirits." Heb. i. 7. From these Scriptures, taken in connection with Eph. iv. 4, "There is one Spirit," it is evident that the angels, the Son, and the Father are all one Spirit.

The saints when glorified partake of the same nature, because it is testified of Jesus that "he shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious Body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself." Phil. iii. 21. Hence we are forced to the conclusion that the superiority of Christ to the angels (Heb. i. 4)—angels or messengers, whether human or divine, refers not to nature, but to rank or office. In this Christ is made superior to all,—the Father alone excepted—all power and authority is given to him both in heaven and earth; hence he is "before all things" in rank. And from being made "a little lower than the angels," (Heb. ii. 7), he is exalted "far above all principality and power, and might, and dominion and every name that is named, not only in this age, but also in that which is to come." Eph. i. 1. Being at the right hand of God exalted to be a prince and a Savior, he has been made so much better than the angels, as he hath BY INHERITANCE obtained a more excellent name than they. Heb. i. 4. This is explained in verse 9, where it says, "Thou hast loved righteousness and hated iniquity, therefore God, even thy God hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness above thy fellows. See also in Heb. ii. 5. "For unto the angels hath he not put in subjection the world to come, whereof we speak." But of Jesus it is said, "Thou hast put all things in subjection under his feet."

The Little Flock.

It is surprising how any one acquainted with the Scriptures can have the idea that the majority are certain to be right. An idea seems to prevail that people will go where they can hear the truth, and that the masses love truth rather than error. If that is the case we must class Jesus with false prophets, for he said, "Wide is the gate and broad is the way that leadeth to destruction, and many there be that go in thereat; because strait is the gate and narrow is the way that leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it." Matt. vii. 13, 14. We know that when Jesus uttered those words he spoke that which was true; and instead of men loving the truth, they hate it, and not only so, but they hated him who proclaimed the truth, and those who followed him. As Jesus said to the disciples, "If the world hate you, ye know that it hated me before it hated you; if ye were of the world, the world would love its own, but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you." Jno. xv. 18, 19.

The test to be applied to those who profess to know the truth and to follow Christ is not their popularity, or the crowds that speak well of them, and who flock to hear them, but it will be found that the believers of the gospel which Christ and his apostles preached,—are, like their Master, "despised and rejected of men," Is. liii. 3, and hated both by the "Christian" world so called and others. Mark xiii. 13. Instead of repining at this treatment the disciples of Christ are to rejoice. "Blessed are ye when men shall hate you, and when they shall separate you from their company, and shall reproach you, and cast out your name as evil, for the Son of Man's sake; rejoice ye in that day, and leap for joy, for behold your reward is great in heaven, for in like manner did their fathers unto the prophets." Lu. vi. 22, 23.

How absurd is it to taunt those who know the truth, that their numbers are so small, or that the sect is unpopular? The sect is now as it ever has been, everywhere spoken against, Acts xxiii. 22, and until the day of Christ's power and dominion it is likely to remain so. But we can wait, and amidst all the persecution and reproach which the profession of the truth brings with it, we have the assurance that in the future age we shall reign as "kings and priests on the earth," Rev. v. 10, and be made equal to the angels, and die no more. Luke xx. 36.

The few are generally on the right side as the Bible amply illustrates, and what was said to the Israelites might be said to the few who believe the truth in the present age, "The Lord did not set his love upon you, nor choose you, because ye were more in number than any people, for ye were the fewest of all people." Deut. vii. 7. Let not the illusion of numbers deter any from believing and obeying the truth, and associating themselves with those of "like precious faith," 2 Peter i. 1, and to wait in patient hope for the day when the salvation shall come. To such the words of Christ are addressed, "Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom."

Notes By the Way.

While on my trip throughout the northwest I have noted with pleasure the spiritual tone of the Household of Faith. I came home with a far more exalted opinion of my brethren and sisters in the Lord than I previously had. I cannot tell you of the many precious hours I have spent with these dear saints of God, in sweet communion together. I apprehend our experience was something like David's when he said: "My heart was hot within me. While I was musing the fire burned; then I spake with my tongue." I tell you, dear ones in the Christ, when the blessed hope once captivates the heart, the fire will burn, and then the tongue will speak, for "out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh," and the heart is made glad.

I found a great hungering for scriptural light, and every where I went I was asked to give light upon multitudes of questions. Oh, what a hungering there is for the bread of life. I remember with pleasure profitable interviews with Bro. Francis and Sister Bartlett of Albany, Wis.

I left Albany for Lanark, Ill. and on Sunday I spoke three times in the church belonging to the congregation. I made my home with Bro. Clotfelty, and had pleasant visits with Bros. J. Renner, Mitchell and Simon Renner and families. I also called on Sister Giddings, and visited some with her aged father, now 95 years old. He has been a zealous advocate of the old gospel of the kingdom. He told me that he still was firm in the faith. He is quite feeble, and cannot last much longer.

I next took the train for Rochelle, Ill. and enjoyed a pleasant visit with Bro. William Tilton and family, and from there I went to the old Antioch Church, and commenced meetings on Thursday evening which were continued until Sunday night. I made my home with Bro. Charles Williams, and called on Bro. Joseph Williams, Sister Hunt, Bro. [illegible] Tilton, and a Christian Church preacher, named Brown, who has come to a knowledge of the grand old gospel of the kingdom, and has embraced the doctrine of life eternal only through Christ, but as yet he has not seen his duty to cut loose from the apostasy, and unite with the Household of Faith. He says his Christian Church people do not use him as they ought to, because he is no longer in sympathy with the teachings of their church.

I sincerely hope that he will speedily cut loose from those who nullify the gospel of Christ, by their paganized teaching, and become obedient to the ancient faith of the gospel. God has use for his talents in the vineyard of the Lord. He has ability to proclaim the glad tidings, and should have courage enough to cut loose from a people who have no sympathy with him now. Be courageous, my friend. God has respect for men who have the courage of their convictions when in the line of truth.

On my way home I again called at Rochelle, and visited Bros. James and William Tilton and families. I arrived home on Nov. 4, and found my family well. On Sunday, Nov. 9, I expect to be with the Chicago Church. On Nov. 13, I will be with the Indiana Conference, and from that point I commence my eastern trip.

Sweet memories come to my mind as I recall my visits among the dear ones in Christ, at St. Paul, Columbus and Blair, Neb. Dover, Min. Omro and Albany, Wis. Lanark, Rochelle and Antioch, Ill. Beloved in Christ, "Be glad in the Lord, and rejoice, ye righteous; and shout for joy, all ye that are upright in heart."

Gracious Father, guard thy children
From the foe's destructive power;
Save, O save them Lord, from falling,
In this dark and trying hour.

W. H. WILSON.

The Wisdom of Saloomoon. Chap. 9.

1. O God of fathers and Lord of thy mercy, thou who didst create all things with thy word (logos).

2. And with thy wisdom fit up man to rule as sole lord of the colonies that have come to pass beneath thy rule.

3. And to sway the cosmos with holiness and righteousness, and with uprightness of soul to execute judgment.

4. Mayest thou have given me the wisdom that is seated beside thy thrones, and do not reject me for want of value from among thy house-servants.

5. Because I am thy bond-servant and a son of thy hand-maid, a man of weakness and little time and inferior in understanding of judicial procedure and laws.

6. For even if one be an adult among sons of men, the wisdom from thee being absent, he will have been accounted for naught.

7. Thou hast preferred me as a king of thy laity and a civil-judge of thy sons and daughters.

8. Thou hast said, Build an inner-sanctuary on thy sacred mount, and in a city in which thou mayest pitch thy tabernacle an altar for sacrifice, an imitation of a sacred tabernacle which thou didst previously make ready from the outset.

9. And with thee is the wisdom that knoweth thy works, and was present when thou wast creating the cosmos, and knowest exactly what is pleasing in thine eyes and what is upright in thy commandments;

10. Send her from out sacred heavens and from thy throne of glory send her, that she may be present with and toil along with me, and I may know what is well-pleasing in thy estimation.

11. For she knoweth and understandeth all things and will guide me discretly in my doings, and will watch to guard me with her glory.

12. And my works will be acceptable, and I shall judge in behalf of thy laity justly, and be worthy of my father's thrones.

13. For what man may know God's counsel? Or who will have become entbused with what the Lord willeth?

14. For the reasonings of mortals are cowardly and our thoughts of things are unreliable.

15. For a corruptible body encumbereth soul-life, and the earthy instrumentality, weigheth down the much-thinking mind.

16. And with difficulty we image the things upon the earth, and the things in our hands we find with painstaking care, and the things in heaven who hath traced out?

17. And thy counsel who hath known, unless thou hast given wisdom, and hast sent thy holy Spirit from most high ones?

18. And in this wise the paths of some upon the earth have been made upright, and men have been taught the things pleasing to thee by sight.

19. And have been saved by that wisdom.

COMMENT.

No wonder this prayer was acceptable to "The Lord of lords." It bears every evidence of being prompted and indited by the Spirit of God himself—and is an epitome of the revealed plan and purpose of God in his creation of mankind. The Sovereignty of God is fully recognized and confessed, and the character of God as the righteous Judge and beneficent Creator, the merciful and wise Controller of all his works are all clearly asserted, and man's ultimate attainment to his high calling of Lord under God of this natural creation or "the cosmos of the heavens and the earth" also clearly prophesied in this prayer, thus making it notably messianic and oracular in its general and specific import. The Holy Spirit of this prayer and this book is "the Holy Spirit" of the whole Bible and of all inspiration both Old and New so called; and however considered whether as person or power is anything but co-ordinate or co-equal with the Father of all life and the Controller of all things. As I have already said this book was a part of the Hebrew canon, and was made uncanonical by the Latin Christian apostasy.

Obituary.

Minerva Ann Denny, daughter of Martin and Sarah Denny, was born Dec. 26, 1850 and died Oct. 2, 1902, aged 46 years, nine months and six days.

Sister Denny came to Nebraska from Indiana with her parents in 1886. She was not only devoted to the cause of truth, but to the welfare of everybody especially her aged parents. She was beloved by all who knew her. Always kind, and her voice had in it the ring of goodness. How she will be missed by her aged father who looked to her for earthly comfort.

The esteem in which she was held by her neighbors was evidenced by the large number that attended the funeral at the residence of Mr. Elder, her brother-in-law.

The writer discoursed on the resurrection, a hope she had entertained for 20 years, after which we laid her to rest to await that glad day.

ALMUS ADAMS.

Susan Epperly was born on Jan. 1, 1843, in Pennsylvania, and was married to Jas. Epperly Jan. 6, 1870 and died Oct. 24, 1902.

Sister Epperly moved from Iowa to Nebraska in 1864, and united with the Church of God in 1891. She never allowed any one to become gloomy in her home, and when you left always felt the influence of her buoyant spirit. She leaves a husband and five daughters to mourn her loss.

The funeral took place from the M. E. Church, which was filled and listened to the writer tell that Job's question—"If a man die shall he live again?" had been answered; that Jesus demonstrated the resurrection from the dead, and holds the keys of death and the grave, and when he comes he will use those keys, and our sister will come forth clad with immortality.

Sister Epperly will be greatly missed and while this is true we sorrow not as others who have no hope. We laid her to rest on the hill to await the sound of the trumpet that is to awaken the sleepers in Christ.

ALMUS ADAMS.

Died at her home in Belle Plaine, Ia. Mrs. Alpha M. Greenlee, on Nov. 4th, 1902, aged 73 years, seven months and six days.

Last February she fell and sustained an injury of such a nature that she required constant care until her death. Her husband and herself were baptized by the writer July 2, 1890. Brother Greenlee died three years ago. They were both faithful unto death, and we trust they will receive the crown of life.

A sermon from Rev. ii. 10, 11, on the occasion of her funeral in the Baptist Church, and a burial service at the grave, where we laid her to rest.

The Bible's Trail of Light.

You can trace the path of the Bible across the world from the day of Pentecost to this day. Ana river springs up in the heart of a sandy continent, having its father in the skies; as the stream rolls on, making in that arid waste a belt of verdure wherever it turns its way, creating palm groves and fertile plains, where the smoke of the cottage curls up at eventide, and marble cities send the gleam of their splendor far into the sky—such has been the course of the Bible on earth. There is not a boy on all the hills of New England; not a girl born in the filthiest cellar which disgraces a capital in Europe, and cries out to God against the barbarism of modern civilization; not a boy or a girl all Christendom through but their lot is made better by that great Book.—Theodore Parker.

Plenty of Money, but for What?

During the yacht race last year, according to one of the New York papers, when the yachts were becalmed for seven days, the expense incurred was one million dollars per day or seven million dollars in all, whereas the whole contribution of Christian America for missions for 365 days was only about five and a half million dollars. A small section of the world spent more in one week on pleasure than the whole of the church in America spent on missions in a whole year. Such a fact should send the Christians to their knees in humble confession to God.—Christian Worker.

Examine Yourself.

Whenever you find yourself inclined to dwell with more than common severity of temper on the sins and shortcomings of other men and to be lax and liberal in judging your own faults, you will do well to inquire whether you are not in a backslidden state.

If you have in any measure overcome the world, the flesh and the devil, you are bound to know how hard the task is, and to entertain feelings of sympathy for all that are engaged in the same fight. The best people are ever the most charitable. Saintliness is tenderness. The immaculate Soul of Man had a kind word and a helping hand for all struggling souls. He did not and does not break the bruised reed nor quench the smoking flax.—Nashville Advocate.

Light at the End.

At the throb of Love eternal
Time began its course in night;
'Twas the evening and the morning,
First the darkness, then the light.
Let us not grow weary watching
In the shadows God may send,
Darkness cannot last forever,
And the light is at the end.
Go bravely through the darkness,
For the light is at the end.

On the paths we now are walking
Our great Master's feet have trod;
And each weary, faltering footstep
Brings us nearer to our God
Then in passing through the valley,
When the shadows o'er us bend,
Let us keep our courage steady,
For the light is at the end.
Go bravely through the darkness,
For the light is at the end.

We shall soon be called to leave
Through the vale of death's dark shade;
But we know who will be with us,
And we shall not be afraid.
We shall leave th way with gladness,
Walking with our Savior-Friend,
Leaning on his staff and gazing
At the light that's at the end.
Go bravely through the darkness,
For the light is at the end.

Selections.

God's Love for the World.

"God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." John iii. 16.

We have in the above words one of the best known texts of the Bible. It has been preached in every pulpit, from the highest to the lowest. It has been printed in leaflets, on cards, and on large sheets that are found hanging sometimes in our railway stations. It is known everywhere, and is deservedly popular. Many, if not all, of us have doubtless been familiar with it from our very childhood. This would deserve to be inscribed in every memory, and imprinted upon every heart.

But there is one danger which lies in their very familiarity, that which we have known from childhood, or learnt by heart as described, we are apt to repeat without much thought of the deep meaning which underlies the simple and beautiful words. It may be so in this case, our very familiarity with the words may be the reason that we have never thought to dive deep into their meaning, or to analyze their particular importance.

Let us now look more particularly into the meaning of these words, and I doubt not we shall find that the more we study them, the more meaning they will seem to reveal to our wondering gaze; just as when we gaze down into the clear water of a limpid stream, the longer we look the better we can see the bottom, or if not the bottom, the further down, deep in the clear water. So while we may never fathom the full meaning of God's Word, nor see all the beauties in the Gospel of Christ, yet the longer we look therein, the more profound will appear the glorious plan of our salvation.

The first thought, as the first word in this text, brings God prominently into our view. "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." John iii. 16.

The gospel of Jesus Christ, while it reflects glory on the Son of God as the means by which the grace of God came down to our earth, yet owes its origin to God. Jesus said—"I honor my Father." Now it has seemed to me that there is in this respect a defect in the character of the popular preaching of the day. We hear a great deal about Jesus, and of course I am not saying that we could ever hear too much, but while we hear in some quarters a great deal about the love of Jesus, God, as the author and origin of our life and hope, is too often left out of the consideration. But the gospel of Christ will rectify this.

The disciples were led to see that God was reconciling the world to himself, not imputing their transgressions unto them. We must come back to God if we would have the gospel as preached in the early days of the Church. "He that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him." Our repentance must be a repentance towards God, through our Lord Jesus Christ. "No man can come to the Father" but by him; and coming to Jesus, he would tell us that our hope of salvation is due to the Father's love.

God loved the world. What an astonishing statement! It was God who created the world. All power belongs to God; and when he made the world he looked upon all that he had made, and behold it was very good. Hence God was pleased with it. We can understand God loving the world when it was "good," but when man fell into sin, and God had to cast him out of Paradise lest he should eat of the tree of life and live forever, he still loved the world, and he promised fallen man a Redeemer. "The seed of the woman shall bruise the serpent's head."

Quite recently I was turning over the leaves of a Douay version of the Bible; and I noticed that this verse in Gen. iii. 15, had been altered from the original, and made to read as follows: "I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and thy seed and her seed: she shall crush thy head;" whereas it should read—"it shall bruise thy head." It, the Messiah. And thus the old Scriptures are altered, and "she" (the Virgin Mary) is put in the place of the Messiah!

What an overthrow it will have! "The seed of the woman shall bruise the serpent's head." A prophecy yet to be fulfilled, but as one part has already been fulfilled—"he shall bruise thy heel"—the other part will yet be fulfilled.

God then has loved the world, and the world has forgotten God—for the most part. Yet God still loves the world, and the proof of his love is that "he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life."

God's love must be seen in a variety of ways. We may see it in the beautiful adaption God has made in nature to the needs of man and animals. "His tender mercy is over all his works," says the Psalmist. "He makes the sun to shine on the evil as well as the good." He provides food for all. But the highest proof of his love is that he has given his well beloved Son, an only begotten Son, to redeem us from sin, and bring us back to God, and to all that is good. Men had wandered far from God, many nations had forgotten him and his laws; and even the people to whom he had given his law, instead of loving mercy, justice, and truth, had got into the mere formalism of ritualistic observances, as though a mere round of so-called "services" would save them.

This kind of thing is coming to the front again. Men in peculiar garments are acting religious services, and reigning with control over the minds of others, by leading them to believe that they cannot be saved without their personal intervention, and without pandering to their particular sect. Jesus came to show men a better way, as he said.

"I am the way, the truth, and the life, no man cometh to the Father but by me." Men may try to get back to the Father by their own doings, by their "services," by their ritual, by penance, or by any other way, but Jesus says distinctly—"No man cometh to the Father but by me." To this agree the words on which our theme is based: "God so loved world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

We must come to Jesus for instruction, for example, for cleansing. We must study his words, his life, and try to follow "in his steps," so that he may bring us back to the Father, to God, otherwise we shall be left to perish. "Whosoever believeth in him shall not perish, but have everlasting life." Then, having life is opposite to perishing. The Word says that those who do not obtain this everlasting life will perish. This cannot mean everlasting preservation. Peter says the wicked are like brute beasts; and Paul says that they shall be punished by everlasting destruction. Destruction that will last for ever seems to be the true meaning. "The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through our Lord Jesus Christ." Jesus said to the unbelieving Jews: "If ye believe not that I am he ye shall die in your sins."

Apart from belief in Jesus Christ there is no hope of eternal being—or life everlasting. We must give up the idea that our souls can never die, even though we reject, or refuse the mercy of God; for as our Lord says, though men are not able to kill the soul, God "is able to destroy body and soul in Gehenna."

Let others say what they will, I can find no hope of immortality within the covers of the Bible, outside of the atoning work of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Let us give the glory to God, through Christ, for the hope of life eternal.

Eternal life a gift. I know that this doctrine is a humbling doctrine; and it is as well that we should be humbled. But we have no life in ourselves, and if we would have eternal life, or live for ever, we must come to Christ that we may have life. The Pharisees of old evidently thought that they had eternal life, while refusing to come to Christ for it. As true guides let us point to the gospel of Christ—and the gospel of Christ alone—for the hope of life and immortality.

Christ brought "life and immortality to light through the gospel," says the Apostle! We may think that we are immortal without it, as I once thought, but it is a grave mistake, and robs Christ of his glory as the Lord and Giver of life. We must come to Christ for life as suppliants, as those ready and willing to receive it as a gift. Yea, more, as those who have broken the law of God, and therefore are guilty sinners, deserving of death, and knowing that apart from the mercy of God we cannot claim either life or immortality; then we shall have faith in Jesus through whom the Father gives this eternal boon.

We must believe in Jesus for life, very life; not merely the salvation of a life supposed to be already possessed. This will honor God; it will honor Jesus. And God seeing our faith in Jesus, as his divine Son and Messenger of life, will grant us this everlasting boon—endless life—with glory and honor added to it.

Do we now see anything more in these simple words? Do we see that they describe you and me as poor perishable creatures of ourselves? That without the gospel we are perishable, and must finally die, and die a second death, from which the Scriptures state there will be no resurrection.

Then let us thank God for his mercy, for his glorious offer, freely made to us through his Son—of the gift of eternal life. "Thanks be to God," says the Apostle, "for his unspeakable gift."

If we do not clearly see we are but mortal, we can never appreciate the life through Christ, offered to us in the gospel. In fact there can be no real "gospel" apart from this truth. "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth should not perish, but have everlasting life." Even through our Lord Jesus Christ "Who only hath immortality."—Lady Blount.

Some Thoughts and Suggestions.

In reading the article on John Calvin in the Encyclopedia Brittanica, some time ago, I was struck with this passage, "Nor was Servetus the only errorist whom Calvin endeavored at this time to confute. The Ana-Baptists of Germany had spread into France and were disseminating many wild and fanatical opinions among those who had receded from the Church of Rome. Among other notions which they had imbibed was that of a sleep of the soul after death.

To Calvin this notion appeared so pernicious that he composed and published a treatise in refutation of it, under the title of Psychopannychia. In this work he chiefly dwells upon the evidence from Scripture in favor of the belief that the "soul retains its intelligent consciousness after the separation from the body."

I would like to submit this passage to the consideration of the brethren, as I think it demonstrates that the truth of God has probably always more or less shone in some parts of the earth and that the heavenly Father has ever had his witnesses for the salvation of his people as well as the condemnation of the heedless world. Here we have as early as the 16th century A. D. (the Psychopannychia was published 1534 at Orleans) a clear record of "baptized believers in the gospel," for it is certain that if these people rid themselves of the doctrines of natural immortality they must have caught on with more or less clearness to the true teaching in regard to life only in the Christ. It would perhaps be interesting to see a copy of Calvin's pamphlet but we all know about what it would be—Thiel on the Cross, Dives and Lazarus and so on, no doubt such as we all have so often listened to. The article in Encyclopedia Brittanica is written by a sympathizer with Calvin who even attempts to justify his conduct in regard to the burning alive of Socrates for heresy.

We have many instances of quotations from reformers and celebrated men in regard to their individual opinions concerning man's mortality, but this is the only instance I have met where a whole "sect," and evidently of considerable number and influence, maintained the "wild and fanatical opinions" that we rejoice also to hold.

Later in history we have the wonderful story of Priestly and his work. [illegible] belongs to the 19th century, he is more generally known as "Father of modern chemistry" his discovery of oxygen and his attemps to analyze the atmosphere, opened out the vast new fields of discovery that have made possible all the wonders of the modern world. He was a friend of Benjamin Franklin and a correspondent of President Jefferson. His name was set with Geo. Washington as an honorary citizen of the French Republic at the time of the first revolution.

Priestly was an all-round philosopher and wrote on nearly every subject—agriculture, electricity, education, etc., but his pet theme was always and ever the coming kingdom of Christ, literal and actual, the restoration of Israel and the bodily resurrection of the dead "according to the Scriptures." He claims to have written more on Bible themes than any man of his time. He utterly refuted the doctrine of inherent human immortality and went all over the arguments of its supporters. A complete copy of his works is to be found in the Peabody Library in Baltimore and they are really like an Encyclopedia. He must have been an indefatigable writer as well as worker. His life was as it should have been, a meek and quiet spirit. He preached as a Congregational minister in different parts in England until during the excitement of the French Revolution the mob in Birmingham burned his house down with all the instruments and appliances that he used in his chemical discoveries. After this he emigrated to America and settled in Pennsylvania.

There is no way now of course of finding out how much of a following Priestly had or what was the extent of his influence. His name has been maligned and his teaching in regard to religion traduced by representatives of the hierarchical systems, but his writings show him to be a man away ahead of his time, he made mistakes, no doubt, who of us dont? but the general sound of his trumpet was certain. He leaned rather toward future probation and universalism, and this in my opinion was the strong reaction against the "damnationalism" of his time and all excess is wrong.

He died in the full hope of immortality. It is narrated that he called his grand-children round him on his death-bed and told them that death was a quiet sleep from which we wake up refreshed in the morning of the resurrection.

There is nothing it seems to me so encouraging to the Bible student as the persistency of the truth through the ages how here and there it crops out like a beautiful wild flower in a chink of the rock, an earnest that the living God is still there. We in our time have it comparatively easy. We are spread far apart and each of us have individual troubles and difficulties, but the revelation of the promise of God has been made particularly clear to us, in this our day and the peculiar stamp of the divine recognition is manifested—it seems to me, more than anything else in the little wide spread groups that spring up all over the face of the round plane and united and unorganized by human skill.

As it was in history so now it is in geography. It is true we cannot see eye to eye and sometimes a persistent and verboso "knows it all" leader carries many away off at a tangent on a hobby. But underneath all there seems to be the Spirit of Truth and Unity growing and developing among believers of the gospel and the whims and the fads that have invaded the "one body" are scaling over and shuffling off, for growth comes from the inside from underneath from the quiet, subtle and secret workings of the wonderful hand of the Creator of all.

J. F. GELLETLY.

"For the Son of Man came to seek and to save that which was lost." Luke xix. 10.

What was lost?

The human race was lost. Nearly four thousand years before Christ's appearance to man, the race had been tested, and man failed to stand the test. The death sentence was passed on all; for all have sinned, was born under sin. The Creator was not under obligation to provide a sacrifice for sin. This He might have ended all as far as you and I are concerned; but his love for poor fallen man could not stop there. He provided a sacrifice, that through him we might be redeemed from the bondage of corruption, be born into a higher life; partake of the divine nature; be like the angels that could not die. If the man had stood [illegible] in the Garden of Eden how many more he might have had, and what they might have been we know not. The record of creative work simply tells us how frail we are. How uncertain our life is, how much we are in need of that higher life, but in order to bestow that life on us it was necessary, in God's wisdom, that we do something on our part. He then made a law of pardon that pleased him. Then the great scheme of redemption is in operation. Then man is placed on probation, another trial is given him. Sixteen hundred and thirty-five years had passed away. God's requirements were ignored, and man grew worse and worse. God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth and that every imagination and thought of his heart was only evil continually. Gen. vi. 5. "And the Lord said, I will destroy man." The startling announcement was made to good old Noah, "Come thee, and all thine house into the ark" and a great flood covered the earth.

It would appear that the great scheme of redemption failed, but no, Noah emerged from the ark. The earth is peopled again, God commenced to deal with man again. A covenant is made with good old Abraham for all the land which thou seest to thee will I give it and to thy seed forever. Gen. xiii. 15.

In Gal. iii. 16, this Seed is Christ. 432 years later God made a covenant with the children of Israel, that he had led out of Egypt. This covenant was the ten commandments; other laws were added because of transgression. The sacrifices that were placed on Jewish altars typified the sacrifice that was made on Calvary. The Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world. Finally the time came, the child was born. "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace good-will to men." That was the song the angels sang. A song of praise and thanks in the highest. It was midnight in the land of Judea. Never to be forgotten night, the radiance of whose after-dawning shines down through the mist of more than 1900 years. A glorious promise had been made, a splendid prophecy was fulfilled. Christ selected his disciples, organized his church, preached the gospel, was crucified, rose on the third day with that grand declaration of independence, "Behold, I am he that was dead and am alive forevermore. I have the keys of death and of hell. Go in all the world and preach the gospel. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." These are the conditions we must comply with in the gospel dispensation, and while the gay world moves on, Christ is picking out his faithful ones that will help him govern the nations in the restitution age. We simply get an inkling of that grand and glorious work. What the law of pardon will be we know not. The coming of Christ means far more than the most of the human race ever conceived of. Yes, Christ is coming to this sin-cursed earth, where human greed has held away, bringing destruction, disappointments and death. With a new order of things. It is Christ and only Christ that can do this work. The only name given under heaven whereby man can be saved, the Nazarine who warmed the earth with his blood and made it sacred by his foot-steps, and vibrates its air with a voice that was pure, peaceable and forgiving, would bring about a state of glory and victory that would bless mankind. To those who are watching the eastern skies the signs of the times tell in thundering tones, Yes, he is coming. Just a few more trials, a few more heart-aches and the testing time will be over. Our vile bodies will be changed like unto his glorious body. Then we will bask in the sunlight of an endless day in a garden made fragrant with undying flowers. Oh blessed thought, let us be faithful.

Yours awaiting his coming,

Conference Report.

The First Annual Conference of Southern Illinois, convened at Moriah, Clark County, Oct. 10th to 20th, at our new church. The building is 32 by 44 feet and cost about one thousand dollars.

The preachers present were L. E. Conner, A. H. Zilmer, John Claypool, J. F. Wilcox, Zimri Braut, W. L. Crowe and last but not least our Berean delegate, Miss Anna Drew of Dixon.

Brethren and sisters from adjacent parts drove over and some remained all through the meetings. We had a good hearing from the neighbors around, especially at the evening services. The last Sunday there were 200 seated in the building, and 50 or more who stood outside, whom we could not furnish with seats.

Every sermon given seemed to be the best, and all who love the truth were edified and strengthened. There was good order throughout, and nothing to mar our love-feast.

The offices appointed for the ten days conference were W. L. Crowe, President, J. R. Landsberry, Secretary, Lewis Weaver, Treasurer.

A Southern Ill., Conference was organized, and Board appointed for the coming year, Zimri Braut was appointed President, and Lewis Weaver Secretary and Treasurer. The Board decided to employ W. L. Crowe as Evangelist for the coming six months, if sufficient funds could be raised.

Three trustees were then appointed for the Moriah Church and a Sunday School was organized.

I am sorry to say that the assistance sent to the struggling church at Moriah from distant brethren to build their church was less than I had hoped for. I had told the Moriah brethren that I thought an appeal for help through our papers would bring in $100.00 to $200.00. But we received only about $100.00 from a distance, and half of this came from our liberal Chicago church. Brother Weaver, who had subscribed $200.00 had to put in about $450.00 besides two months work, and his wife cooking for the carpenters. While he asks for none of this back, I feel that he and other brethren here who have subscribed liberally on the building, should not be expected to pay for all the evangelistic work that should be done here. There are three men in this vicinity who ought to be supported in the work in Southern Ill. So if our readers have any of the Lord's tithes rusting, they may produce interest and bear fruitage here. I have many calls around here for meetings, and we have an able Brother at Waldron, Ill., Dillon Lemon, who ought to be in the Lord's work, and is willing to leave a good position, as Station agent there, if the living for his family can be assured him. Send offerings to Lewis Weaver, Moriah, Clark County, Ill., for Evangelistic work here.

Am I Right?

This is a serious question that no honest man or woman can afford to evade, as it implies a possibility that we may be wrong. It is my impression for many years that Second Adventists believed and taught that this earth would be burned up and destroyed, when the Lord comes to reign. And knowing that some deny this charge, possibly we have been misled, if so, it is high time that we set ourselves right, so that we can observe the Golden Rule. Now who can and will lend a helping hand? We want facts from head-quarters, and not fiction or impressions merely as they are a dangerous commodity, leading and lulling millions down to the ditch of death and destruction. We eagerly wait and watch for the light of life, the truth which makes free.

Israel.

At the beginning of any perusal it is half the battle, when a reader feels the absolute importance of the subject in hand. To begin a page with the impression that it makes no difference whether its matter is real and true, if only entertaining, is often fatal to the acquisition of truth by labor and patience.

One mark of the importance of a person or a people whether good or bad—though, to be sure, it is not the only mark—is the prevalent frequency with which that person or people is mentioned. The frequent mention of Satan himself, though a foe, would prove him a foe of no non-essential caliber.

In the Bible, unless I have miscounted from Young's Concordance, there are 2167 prints of the word Israel, 74 of which are in the New Testament, 51 of them designate Jacob himself. The Bible being, of all books, our accepted and acknowledged guide, can we ignore the incalculable consensus of these 2113 allusions to the "Israel of God," (and there was never but one Israel of God,) to whom Paul says the promises pertained, (Rom. ix.) with whom alone God made the New Covenant, (Heb. viii.) out of whom exclusively are the 144,000 who "follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth," and over whom the Sun of David shall reign forever (Luke i. 33)? Shall we pull up forever the only good olive tree, the tree whose root bears every believing, grafted-in Gentile, and shares with him its own fatness? Rom. xi.

Shall we regard as disorganized that ancestral institution of 3700 years, that commonwealth of Israel, (Eph. ii.) outside of which Gentiles have been hopeless, Godless, "aliens and strangers from the covenants of promise," but inside of which they have become fellow citizens of the saints and of the household of God? Shall we relegate to the bygone that literal nation of whom God, by Ezekiel (chapter 37) said unconditionally, "I will take the children of Israel from among the heathen ...And bring them into their own land...neither shall they defile themselves any more with any of their transgressions, but I will cleanse them...and David my servant shall be king over them...and they shall dwell in the land, that I have given unto Jacob my servant...they and their children and their children's children forever. I will make an everlasting covenant of peace with them and...set my sanctuary in the midst of them forevermore?

Do we, in the face of Jacob's forecast, (Gen. xlix.) that the sceptre should not depart from Judah of Israel till Shiloh (rest) should come, dare to declare that it has departed from him, though that rest has not yet come?

Shall we throw away that people of whom God sang by Isaiah, (65) "I create new heavens and a new earth .....I create Jerusalem a rejoicing and her people a joy, and the voice of weeping shall no more be heard in her, nor the voice of crying. The wolf shall dwell with the Lamb (11) They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea"?

What people are they to whom Jehovah told Ezekiel (36) to say, "A new heart will I give you.....and I will put my Spirit within you.....and ye shall dwell in the land that I gave to your fathers.....and they shall say, This land that was desolate is become like the garden of Eden"?

Where is the great nation whom God said He would make of Abraham? Are they dead? Have they dwindled? Has the indomitable Shemitic spirit of Jacob, who served fourteen years for Rachel, and later would not let the wrestler go, failed? "Hath God cast away his people? God forbid." "The Redeemer will come to Zion." Isa. lix. 20. There was never but one Mount Zion, the literal hill of David in Jerusalem. By figure of speech the people to whom the hill pertains are also called Zion. To this mount and this people the Redeemer will come. He came once to announce his kingdom, and to sacrifice himself for the sins of the world. But of his second coming to Zion Isaiah sang (60), "The Lord shall arise upon thee .....thy sons shall come from far..... thy gates shall be open continually .....I will make thee an eternal excellency. The Lord shall be unto thee an everlasting light.....the days of thy mourning shall be ended.....thy people shall be all righteous.....they shall inherit the land forever.....thou shalt no more be termed forsaken .....as the bridegroom rejoiceth over the bride, so shall thy God rejoice over thee..... and as the new heavens and the new earth shall remain before me, so shall your seed and your name remain."

Announcement.

The first quarterly Conference of the Church of God of Indiana, will be held at Plymouth, beginning on Thursday evening, Nov. 13, and continue over Sunday following.

We earnestly desire a large attendance at these meetings. It does us so much good to meet others who are also contending for "the faith." Let every Church and the isolated ones be represented. Come one, come all and help us to better know the needs of the State, so better work may be done in future than has been done in the past. You will be well cared for while among the brethren at Plymouth. Many good meetings have been held there, and let us make this one the best of all.

Programme will be announced later.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Woodruff, Elizabeth, N. J.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

TO OUR PATRONS.

We want more readers for THE RESTITUTION. We want One Thousand new names on our list before January 1st, 1903, and can have them if you will help us.

In every Church of our faith in the land there are members who do not take our paper, who would be benefited by reading it.

There are those who are secluded by circumstances from any Church fellowship, who would be kept firmer in the faith, helped and strengthened for the battles of life if they had THE RESTITUTION each week.

There are others interested in the truths we hold, who would often have their attention called to the principles of our faith by reading our paper. When no preacher can be heard, when you cannot talk to them, THE RESTITUTION in their homes would be ever a present visitor—a missionary that will do more than any other one thing to keep the interest alive.

There are those whom we wish were interested in the Bible and what it promises. Many of this class of persons have never had the opportunity, or have neglected the matter when it was before them.

You are surely known to people such as are mentioned, and you are surely interested in them. We are satisfied you are not unmindful of their eternal well-being. How much do you care for these people? Will you join with us in getting the gospel before them, and keeping it there a year? We have this to offer to you for consideration.

We will send THE RESTITUTION one year to NEW Subscribers for $1.00. We will start them as soon as received and give credit to the end of 1903.

With a little persistent effort in presenting the paper to those you know who are not taking it, you can induce them to try it for $1.00. If you want some sample papers we will gladly supply them to you, and our list can be increased by 1000 names by Jan. 1st. It can be done easily if you will act on this suggestion, and get those near you interested. If each reader would get a new name our list would be doubled at once.

It would seem as if every reader of THE RESTITUTION could exert influence enough to get one more new name if the effort was made. Will you try it? If the first person you suggest it to does not respond, do not be discouraged, but try some one else. Perhaps the one you least expect will answer quickest.

Did you ever stop to figure up how many words are contained in our paper in a year? You will be surprised at the number of sermons it contains. There is variety too. There is doctrine and the practical, encouragement and cheer, and comfort for the distressed. Each phase of teaching would make several good sized books during the year. You can do no work that yields as large a return for the money expended as by sending THE RESTITUTION to a friend for a year.

Will you not start right away and send one name, and next week when that person gets his paper, some one else will hear of it, and you can send another subscriber.

Poetry.

Unfinished Things.

Unfinished things! They crowd upon
In ringing tones and free;
Yet had each one its work to do,
By some word spoken of me.
The books—the books to help mankind,
To enrich each one's meetings,
Abandoned in the daily grind—
The pathos of unfinished things!

The sermons broke off too soon,
Before the kindly words were said;
The words that might have been a crown
Where now affection made the bier.
The plans outlined—plans that might
Have made of white-lipped, crimsoned tongue,
So day goes by but brings to light
The pathos of unfinished things!

The songs unsung! What mellow strains
Have lent their gladness to our life!
What cadences to soothe our pains
And hush our petty strife and strife.
If to some little measure faltered not
With kindly touches swept the strings
Which now—now rapture knew forgot—
The pathos of unfinished things!

"Behold! the Bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him."

WHY STAND YE GAZING UP INTO HEAVEN?

"This same Jesus who is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." Acts i. 11.

Who is he that cometh? The same Jesus who was taken up, even he who, having first descended into the lower parts of the earth, ascended far above all heavens, that he might fill all things. He shall come again. We thought it had been he who should redeem Israel; and we are not mistaken, for the Redeemer shall come to Zion and turn ungodliness from Jacob. He has gone to receive a kingdom, and when he receives it most assuredly he will return. The heavens do not retain him for ever! No, but they must retain him till the times of the restitution of all things, and then he shall come, the Conqueror with many crowns, the Restorer, as also the Redeemer, the Lord, the Savior, the Son of God, the Son of Man, the Christ, the Priest for ever. He shall make an end of sin. He shall bring in everlasting righteousness. The innocency of Eden shall come back. Man's lost dominion shall be recovered. Paradise shall bloom again, and the tree of life that is in the midst of the Paradise of God. Selon may he come again! soon may he come!

SOUND SPEECH.

"The grace of God.....teaches us that ... we should live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world, looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ." Titus ii. 11-14.

Sin has ruined this world. The trail of the Serpent is over all. The blight and barrenness of the curse rests on it all. Till now it is appointed unto men once to die. But the Son of God, in whom was no sin, was manifested to take away our sins, commanding us to do righteousness, even as he is righteous. Therefore, do we (denying ungodliness and worldly lusts), wait for the time when the power of sin shall be destroyed—that sin whose cruel dominion coerces us towards unrighteousness, and for our service pays us death as wages. Therefore do we wait in that blessed hope, the hope of eternal life, which God, who cannot lie, hath promised. And waiting for it, we look for him who is to put us in possession of it, being diligent, that we may be found of him in peace, without spot and blameless, at his appearing.

BE MINDFUL!

"The scoffers of the last days say, Where is the promise of his coming?" 2 Peter iii. 1-4.

"It is the evil servant who finds comfort and security in the thought—My Lord delayeth his coming." Matt. xxiv. 48.

These are two weighty reasons why we should be the more mindful of his promise to come again to receive us unto himself. The scoffers say plainly in our hearing, Let him make speed and hasten his work that we may see it; and let the counsel of the Holy One of Israel draw nigh and come, that we may know it! Now the scoffers have nearly all their own way, whereby we know it is the last time. And many who call themselves servants of the Lord are plainly saying in fact—by their actions towards their fellow-servants—that they believe in fact (whatever they may say in words), that the Lord delayeth his coming. Brethren, my brethren, beware! As the flood came on the scoffers of old, so shall the day of the Lord come swiftly and suddenly, terribly and unexpectedly, both on the scoffers who say the Lord will not come, and on the evil servants who live not on the watch for his appearing.

WATCH!

"As the days of Noah were, so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be. For as in the days before the flood, they knew not until the flood came, and took them all away; so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be." Matt. xxiv. 37-39.

As time groweth evil ripeneth. The force and entanglements of sin increase as the world grows older. The sleight of men, and cunning craftiness whereby they lie in wait to deceive, culminate in the power and signs and lying wonders of the Wicked One which he puts forth in his own time, so as if possible to deceive even the very elect. Anti Christ comes, but the elect are forewarned to believe in no Christ that cometh not as the flood came—as the lightning cometh. For no other do we look, on none other do we place our hopes. We wait for his coming, and waiting, we also watch. We know not when the time is; but those who watch do not need to be told the time, for they are always ready. Waiting is our Christian attitude, and watching another. We must maintain both if we would obey the gospel.

WATCH, AND BE SOBER!

"For yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night." 1 Thes. v. 2.

By the grace of God we know these two things perfectly—that the day of the Lord will come, and that it will come as a thief in the night. O let us not receive this grace in vain. Knowing these things, let us watch and be sober like sentinels at the outpost. "And take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be over-charged with surfeiting and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares. For as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the earth. Watch ye therefore." Luke xxi. 34, 36. Similar to this is the exhortation of 1 Pet. i. 13, "Wherefore gird up the loins of your mind, be sober, and hope to the end for the grace to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ."

A DAILY PRAYER.

"Watch ye therefore, and pray always that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of Man." Luke xxi. 36.

The coming of the Lord should be an object of faith and hope, a ground of obedience, sobriety, watching, and of prayer. So may we be saved in that day. It is not every prayer that suits all times. Some prayer suitable for the day of adversity may not be suitable for the day of prosperity. But "the Lord grant that we may obtain mercy in that day," may be prayed every day. The hour of temptation comes, and he who would be kept from it has no need to pray what Christ enjoins as a standing prayer for continual use. The scoffers of the last days scoff at the promise of his coming; and in direct opposition to this, Jude says—"But ye, beloved, building up yourselves on your most holy faith, and praying in the Holy Ghost, keep yourselves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life." Daily, hourly, may we pray, "Thy kingdom come," and "Lord remember me when thou comest in thy kingdom."

FOR LITTLE CHILDREN.

"Abide in him, that when he shall appear, we may have confidence, and not be ashamed before him at his coming." 1 John ii. 28.

When the human race was in its infancy, our first parents clutched at the semblance of wisdom, and the reality itself slipt from their hands. Their safety lay in disregarding the words and allurements of the wicked one—in knowing God, whom to know is life eternal; and in waiting for the development of God's purpose, in God's way, and in God's time. Our safety consists in doing what they failed to do. Should we not do that? The extended revelation of God's purpose should help us to that, if only we be careful and prayerful, and watchful to abide in him, who came, and still yet is the coming one. We are in him who died unto sin once, that God's gift of righteousness might come upon us unto justification of life. He hath loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood. In this faith of what he has borne and suffered, and accomplished for us, and of his priestly service for us in the heavens, where even yet the feeling of our infirmities touches him, let us abide in him, showing forth the Lord's death until he come. While we rest on the past coming, let us not forget the future coming; and while we joy in the future coming, let us not forget to rejoice for the past coming, nor in the holy boldness we have now in him. Thus shall we abide in him so lovingly and absorbingly, that when he comes we shall not seek to run and hide ourselves, but joyously go forth to behold his glory, and, beholding it, be ourselves changed into the same glory.

ARE YOU LOOKING?

"Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many, and unto them that look for him, shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation." Heb. ix. 28.

If we loved Christ we would love his appearing, and if we loved his appearing we would look for him. He has by his own blood entered into the holy place in heaven, and once offered himself that we might have eternal redemption—the Lamb of God, that taketh away the sin of the world. In that holy place he has appeared for us, as the high priest of old appeared for Israel in the hidden presence of God, and we now wait without till he appears to us as did Israel wait for the coming forth of the high priest to bless them. This Scripture encourages us to wait for him in these remarkable words—Unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation. Therefore are we waiting and looking for his appearing.

THE HIGH CALLING.

"We look for the Savior, from heaven, the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself." Phil. iii. 20, 21.

Therefore should we shrink from all wickedness and unholiness. Therefore should our bodies be kept uncontaminate and untainted with evil. We are bought with a price; therefore let us glorify God in our body and in our spirit, which are God's. Christ died to redeem our bodies, and we now wait for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body. This will be truly a work worthy of the God who has so loved us, for it will visibly manifest us as his sons in his glory. To the glory of God and to his kingdom we are called, and those vile bodies of ours shall be fashioned like unto the glorious body of our Lord. The vision of the transfiguration will be reenacted for us, and the glory which then transiently enshrouded our Lord will be bestowed on us, and for ever! How holy persons should we therefore be, yielding ourselves unto God as those will yield themselves whom he makes alive from the dead, and the members of our body as instruments of righteousness unto God.

COMFORT IN TRIAL AND HEAVY SORROW.

"The Lord himself shall descend from heaven, with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we who are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we be ever with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words." 1 Thes. iv. 16-18.

With such hope of life and blessedness, we need not fear anything or grudge anything in the service of Christ, or for those for whom Christ died. Our labor will not be in vain in the Lord. Those for whom we labor may fall asleep in Jesus: our labor is not in vain and our reward is with God. We may fall asleep, although rather desiring that we may be among those who are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord, whose mortality will be swallowed up of life. But whether sleeping or waking we are the Lord's, and when he descends we shall be caught up to meet the Lord in the air, and so be ever with him. Death parts us, but the coming of the Lord gathers us altogether. If we be partakers of Christ's sufferings, when his glory is revealed we shall all together be gladdened with exceeding joy. Oh, blessed union! happy time! what glorious comfort! It is the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and our gathering together unto him!

BE PATIENT!

"Be patient, therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord. Behold the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receive the early and the latter rain. Be ye also patient; stablish your hearts; for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh." James v. 7, 8.

See how every Christian grace finds appropriate exercise in regard to this coming of the Lord. It is the unfailing comfort in sorrow, the strengthener in heavy temptation, and the strong motive to holiness and virtue. This is no broken reed that Christ and his Apostles so frequently, persistently, place in our hands. Here it is used to encourage us to have patience under manifest injustice and wrong. Be patient, the Lord is coming. Be meek, and continue meek, as your Lord was, and you shall inherit the earth. The time cometh for the poor of this world, rich in faith and heirs of the kingdom which he hath promised to them that love him. This will be when Christ comes. Rest in the Lord and wait patiently for him. A little while and the wicked shall not be, and the just by faith shall live.

HOLD FAST!

"For yet a little while, and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry." Heb. x. 37.

To support us under all the ills of life, those we have in common with all men, and those we have as Christians, we have laid hold on the hope of the Lord's coming, as set before us in the gospel. Sometimes, when buffetted by the world, and fatigued with long waiting, we may be ready to let go our hold, and sink in despair. Then we hear the voice—Hold fast! Hold fast! And various good reasons are given why we should hold fast. How great is our misery if we let go! How great our bliss if we hold on! He that is in us is greater than he that is in the world; and the time is short! How stoutly would we bear up if we knew the Lord would come to-day, to-night, to-morrow. We do not know when he will come, but we know he has promised to come soon; and if we have ears, we may hear his voice calling, "Behold I come quickly, hold fast what thou hast, that no man take thy crown."

IS THE CROWN YOURS? DO YOU LOVE HIS APPEARING?

"There is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, will give unto me in that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also who love his appearing." 2 Tim. iv. 8.

Thus did Paul, having fought the good fight, and finished his course, and kept the faith, confidently appeal from Cæsar to that higher, righteous Judge, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom. The imposing grandeur of Nero's tribunal, and the terrors of Nero's judgment, faded into passing shadows as he gazed by faith on the throne of God, and him that sitteth thereon, and heard him reverse Nero's judgment of death by a welcome to glorious immortality, and saw him bestow on his Apostle a crown of righteousness which shall be his for ever. But Paul does more than this. He testifies that the righteous Judge will bestow the crown of righteousness not only on Paul, the Apostle, but upon all those also who love his appearing. Here then is a condition by which we may know whether this crown be ours. If we love his appearing, we will be wishing his appearing; and if we love his appearing, we will certainly obtain the crown; and if we love Christ truly, we shall truly love his appearing.

"He who testifieth these things saith—Surely I come quickly. Amen. Even so come, Lord Jesus." Rev. xxii. 20.

The Lord direct your hearts into the love of God, and into the patient waiting for Christ. Amen.—Messenger of the Churches 1868.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

"Zionism and the World."

A magazine called "The New Paper," (London, England) under the above heading has a most remarkable allegation. The writer says, "The Jewish Parliament or Fifth Zionist Congress, now sitting at Basle, is a remarkable phenomenon to which the world might well direct its attention" ....."Through Judgment to Redemption." This is a wonderful and terrible thing. Wonderful because of the long delayed but exact present fulfilment of that word in Ezek. xxxvii. 21: "Behold, I will take the children of Israel from among the heathen, whither they have gone, and will gather them on every side, and bring them into their own land." "Terrible because of the approaching and equally long delayed execution of the judgments which 'this rebellious nation' called down upon their own heads when they shouted at the crucifixion and betrayal of their King, Jesus of Nazareth, HIS BLOOD BE UPON US AND OUR CHILDREN!' Professing Christians, alas! as they gloss over judgment in their own case, are also so prone here to keep in the background the awful fact that the Jews are going back first to JUDGMENT, and then to 'comfort and consolation,' then to triumph and praise, and honor, then to world-wide salvation and blessing, 'AFTER they have received the double of all their sins.' Or, as the Word which is thus brought nearer its dread fulfilment, says:—"And the Word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Son of Man, the house of Israel is to me become dross: all they are brass, and tin, and iron, and lead, in the midst of the furnace; they are even the dross of silver. Therefore thus saith the Lord God; Because ye are all become dross, behold, therefore I will gather you into the midst of Jerusalem. As they gather silver, and brass, and iron, and lead, and tin, into the midst of the furnace, to blow the fire upon it, to melt it; so will I gather you in mine anger and in my fury, and I will leave you there, and melt you. Yea, I will gather you, and blow upon you in the fire of wrath, and ye shall be melted in the midst thereof. As silver is melted in the midst of the furnace, so shall ye be melted in the midst thereof; and ye shall know that I the Lord have poured out my fury upon you." Ezek. xxii. 17-22.

Solemn and awful words are all these—for not only do they show how "impregnable is the Rock of Holy Scripture," how it is all hastening to "be all accomplished" but they are a mighty warning to all Gentile Christendom in its "high-minded" apostasy, but to every soul of man who continues in this unbelief, that as "God spared not the NATURAL branches neither will he spare thee." —Selected by J. Cameron.

M. JOBLIN, SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, NOV. 19, 1902.

WE desire to thank those friends of our paper who have sent us so many new names. It is truly encouraging, and we thank you for the interest you manifest in this department of the Lord's service. Keep it going and the list can be doubled by Jan. 1st.

OUR Conference meeting is over, and a report will be ready for next week's issue. We have only time to say that it was full of good work, both in the business meetings and the preaching services, and the kind Christian spirit manifested by each to the other was remarked upon by all. We will endeavor to give some little notes by next week.

"YOUR heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things." Matt. vi. 32. Precious for those to whom addressed. How they should lull all misgivings,—silence all murmurings, lead to unquestioning submissiveness—"My heavenly Father knoweth that I have need of all these things."

READER, do you complain of your languid spirit, your drooping faith, your fitful affections, your lukewarmness? May you not trace much of what you deplore to an unfrequented closet? The treasures are locked up from you, because you have allowed the key to rust. Without prayer! It is the pilgrim without a staff—the seaman without a compass—the soldier going unarmed to the battlefield.

For J. T., 1 John v. 7.

In regard to the passage 1 John v. 7, we may say, this is the only passage in the whole Book of God which distinctly teaches the Trinity. It says sure enough: "For there are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost, and these three are one." We say without fear of successful contradiction that this passage has no right to be in God's Book at all; because it is spurious,—because if the Bible be God's Book it makes him contradict himself, who declares himself as follows:—"Hear, O Israel; the Lord is our God is ONE Lord." Deut. vi. 4.

"Fear ye not, neither be afraid; have I not told thee from that time, and have declared it? Ye are even my witnesses. Is there a God beside me? Yea, there IS NO GOD; I know not any." Is. xliv. 8.

"Look unto me, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth; for I am God, and there is NONE ELSE." Is. xlv. 22.

Remember the former things of old; for I am God, and there is NONE ELSE. I am God, and there is none like me." Isa. xlvi. 9.

"I will execute the fierceness of my anger, I will not return to destroy Ephraim, for I am God, and not man; the Holy ONE in the midst of thee." Hosea xi. 9.

I am the Lord; that is my name, and my glory will I not give to another." Is. xlii. 8.

"Hear, O Israel; the Lord our God is ONE Lord." Mark xii. 29. Jesus here says precisely what Moses says. Deut. vi. 4.

"But to us there is but ONE God, of whom are all things, and we in him." 1 Cor. viii. 6.

"There is.....ONE Lord,.....ONE God and Father of ALL, who is above all, and through all, and in you all." Eph. iv. 5, 6.

Will you now agree that 1 John v. 7 is spurious? If so, you will not be again disturbed in regard to it.

The Diaglott has a foot-note which says, the words "for the three who bear witness in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Spirit, and these three are one," "were not contained in any Greek manuscript which was written earlier than the fifth century, and were not cited by any of the Greek ecclesiastical writers, nor any of the early Latin Fathers."

Dean Alford the above words were omitted by all Greek MSS. till the 16th century, all Greek fathers, all the most ancient versions, and most of the Latin fathers.

The term Trinity occurs first in the third century in Tertullian, adversus Praxean.

Jamieson, Fausset and Brown say Vigilius, at the end of the fifth century is the first who quotes the disputed words in the text; but no Greek MS. earlier than the fifteenth is extant with them.

We have long concluded that the disputed words were added for a purpose. We find the words "By Jesus Christ" have been added to verse 8 of Eph. iii. doubtless to be in keeping with 1 John v. 7. The Diaglott, Revised Version, Rotherham's and Syriac omit these three words.

"Be Ye Transformed."

This is a most solemn injunction from the great Apostle of the Gentiles primarily to those who had already believed in the Christ of God,—and had obeyed the first principles. But the truth here, is so vital and far reaching, and so essential to the well-being of the race, that we feel constrained to say that if it was then, or if it be now, needful to exhort the believer to enter more fully into the renewed life for the truth—still more needful is it to warn those outside of the household of faith or the fold of Christ, to so study and exercise themselves with revealed truth, as to enter into its spirit, and become imbued with its character,—in short, transformed into the ideal image it unfolds.

"Nothing is more plainly marked in the Bible, or stands out in bolder relief in the teachings of Jesus and his apostles, than the fact that man needs to undergo a radical change before he is fit for the associations of the divine family. The inherent corruption of the human race is such as to unfit it for divine companionship, and incapacitate it for intercourse with heaven. Man has estranged himself from God by his sin, and unless there be some means of removing that sin,—of changing the sinner into a saint—of making the evil good,—of bringing man from his wanderings in the wilds of wickedness into the and truth,—in short, unless man, now far off from God by his folly and transgression be brought nigh, and so changed in character as to correspond in some degree with the holiness of God, and to find in God the spring of his life, and the source of his joy, and that environment, in which he delights to live, and move and have his being,

HE IS NOT A CHRISTIAN,

and has no hope in the world. All our experience and the whole history of man since creation, tend to show his waywardness, and his ever advancing debasement. The impetus has been given to evil, and with an appalling rapidity it increases in volume and velocity as the ages grow, and every advance in knowledge seems to increase man's capacity to sin. What Paul says of our nature and its life capacity is true also of its moral and

SPIRITUAL LIFE FORCE.

It bears the impress, and is the likeness of its progenitor, 1 Cor. xv. 48, "As is the earthy, such are they also that are earthy; as is the heavenly, such are they also that are heavenly." Like produces like. The earthly can only produce earthly. The natural can never of itself evolve the spiritual. The producing cause will leave its effect behind it; and every character, having no higher element than that which evolved from the natural sphere, which corresponds only with the natural, partakes only of the destiny of the natural. If we wish to partake of the destiny, we must now make ourselves to correspond in character to the heavenly—we are out of harmony with the divine element of life so long as we live merely in the flesh; and in proportion as we realize this, will be our anxiety and striving after a new life. Paul experienced the agony of this struggle, and felt keenly that he must either conquer the weakness and wickedness of the flesh, or otherwise and bring him to an eternal death. Rom. vii. 5, "When we were in the flesh, the motions of sins, which were by the law, did work in our members to bring forth fruit unto death." Ver. 18, "For I know that in me, (that is in my flesh) dwelleth no good thing; for to will is present with me; but to perform that which is good I find not." This inability of the merely natural to expand beyond its sphere, and manifest other than the character of the natural, is a scientific, as well as REVEALED TRUTH.

IT WOULD CONQUER HIM,

If we draw only on our natural environment for our life force, we shall exhibit only the natural life,—conformity to the present age. We feel with Paul that as mere men [illegible] life forces is very limited, and that our natural environment does not afford us the scope, nor impar[illegible] live the Christ life. [illegible] that we must break our [illegible] to the world, and slacken our hold on the mere natural in order to an assimilation to the environment of the Spirit. We must become transformed. We are all inheritors of the Adamic nature and of the effects of the

not only as regards the future, but in the limitations of the present. We feel conscious of our weakness,—of an ever-present downward tendency; an inbred propensity to sin, which ever strives for the mastery. It is the conquest of this, which is the Christian's life work. The forming of creeds, the belief of dogmas, the confessions of faith are worthless, if there is no power accompanying the belief or confession to help one to a new life. A new life is the great desideratum—the for "as is the heavenly, such are they also that are heavenly." And only such as correspond to the heavenly now will partake of the heavenly nature and its attendant joys in the age to come. But we have no excuse, we are not left to doubt as to how, or by what means this change is to be effected. "Be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind." The word rendered mind properly denotes the intellect, as distinguished from the will and affections. Here the Apostle reveals the true seat of authority in life, and restores the intellect to its true position, as the Guide, the ruler of all religious lives.

GOD IS NOT HONORED

by mere sentiments, or blind credulity or ignorant sincerity. God has supplied us with the means of knowledge and he expects from us intelligent service. We cannot worship him in spirit and in truth except under the direction of a sanctified intellect. We must be transformed, but this transformation must be wrought within, and upon us, through the renewal of the mind. The brain, thinking and acting of itself produces that is concerned only with the present and imbued with selfishness. The brain operated upon, and influenced by the Spirit of God by means of his Word, (James i. 18) produces the spiritual mind, which leads the individual upward to God and divine things, and to the practice and daily

THE CARNAL MIND,

EXHIBITION OF GODLINESS.

In Rom. viii. 5-10 we are told that they "that are after the flesh do mind the things of the flesh; but they that are after the Spirit the things of the Spirit. For the minding of the flesh is death; but the minding of the Spirit is life and peace Because the mind of the flesh is enmity against God; for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be. So then they that are in the flesh cannot please God. But ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, if so be the Spirit of God dwell in you. Now if any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of his. And if Christ be in you, the body is dead because of sin; but the Spirit is life because of righteousness." From the foregoing words of the Spirit it is evident that the mind of man has no within itself. It must be assisted from without. This outside help comes to it in the Word of God. By it man is transformed by the renewing of the mind, and is thus made a new creature in Christ Jesus by the Word developing within him the mind of Christ—the Spiritual mind, which becomes, henceforth, the dominant principle and power of his life."

Communicated.

Notes by the Way.

After concluding a series of meetings at the old Antioch church, some ten miles from Rochelle, Ill., I was conveyed by Brother Charles Williams to Chana, Ill. I there spent about an hour with Brother and Sister Booth. Brother Booth is well known to many in Illinois, he being the father of the present Secretary of the Illinois Conference. I then took the C. B. and Q. R. R. train to Rochelle, spending the day and evening with the Tilton Brothers. On the morning of the 4th of November, I took the train on the Northwestern Road, for Austin Station, Chicago, arriving there before noon. I was rejoiced to find my family well, and glad to see me at home once more.

On Sunday morning I was welcomed home by the Church at Chicago. By request I gave a brief account of my trip in the Northwest. On Sunday afternoon and evening [illegible] of the household of faith [illegible] our home in Austin, and enjoyed rich fraternal greetings, and a social intercourse which will long be remembered.

On Wednesday evening quite a large audience gathered in the parlors of our well beloved Brother and Sister Thompson, and on this occasion by request I gave a discourse entitled: "The Present Conflict between Labor and Capital a sign of the soon coming of Jesus." I then parted with these dear ones in Christ with many well wishes for myself personally, and that I may have good success in preaching the gospel of the kingdom.

On Thursday Brother Charles Elvey escorted me to the train, when I took my departure for Plymouth, Indiana. On arriving, I was met at the depot by Brother Underwood, and taken to his home, and was warmly welcomed by Sister Underwood.

Conference assembled in the neat brick Church owned by the congregation at Plymouth, and was addressed by Brother Zilmer, the President of the Indiana Conference. His remarks were well appreciated by all present.

On Friday afternoon I addressed the Conference on the following topic: "The Coming Change in Human Governments," and this was followed by Brother Austin in the evening, after an enjoyable social meeting. Other meetings were addressed by myself, and brethren Hatch, Winer, and Wagoner of Indiana, and Bro. P. Neill of Salem, Ohio, interspersed by very enjoyable social meetings.

The last meeting on Sunday will long be remembered. Brother Austin occupied the morning in an excellent address on the Signs of the Times, showing that when a time arrived in which money would be king, to which crowned heads would make obeisance, then we may speedily look for the coming of Jesus.

In the afternoon I again addressed the Conference on the subject of "The Blessed Hope."

The evening service opened by a social meeting, followed by an address by Brother Zilmer, on the Sabbath Question. After he got through there was not one inch left of the platform on which Gentile Sabbath keepers stand, he made a most complete wreck of it.

I must say a word as to the spirit of the Conference. The spirit was truly lovely, there was not a single incident to mar its enjoyment, it was harmony and peace from beginning to end, the brotherhood seemed to love each other. Praise the Lord! Such meetings are truly heavenly in their effect.

The Conference received me with open arms, and have also granted me a ministerial certificate, recognizing me as a minister in the State Conference of Indiana, for which I thank them kindly.

I commence a series of meetings at Piqua, Ohio, on Sunday morning Nov. 23.

I have invitations to visit Burr Oak, South Bend, Circleville, Argos, and Noblesville, Indiana. I will visit these places at the conclusion of my Eastern trip. Should any other church in Indiana desire my services at that time, they may notify me at my Chicago address, 420 N. Willow Ave. Austin Station, Chicago, Ill.

Editor Restitution:

It may be that some of the dear ones would like to hear what I have been doing.

I left home Oct. 3, and went to Bosworth, Mo. Had a good meeting, and gave six discourses on God's plan of salvation, house crowded every night, all seemed well pleased and wanted another meeting, so we will be with them, if alive and and all well Saturday before the first Sunday in December, to continue over the second Sunday in Dec. 1902. A special invitation to all the brethren and sisters and outsiders too. On the 10th day of October we left for Bush, Mo., to our annual meeting, at Fredericktown Mo., there we met Brother Cooper and Jasper Graham and three or four others ready to convey me to Bush, some six and a half miles. Landed at Brother Grahams in the evening. Sister Graham had prepared a fine supper to feed the outer man; after we had partaken freely of a good substantial supper, then we went to the schoolhouse, to find a crowded house, full of living souls, who were very attentive listeners. We preached seventeen sermons in all, two each day until the close of the meetings on the 19th inst. Five very intelligent souls put on Christ by being planted in the likeness of Christ's death, burial and resurrection. They consisted of three sisters and two brethren. One Baptist preacher confessed the truth, but did not render obedience, but I think he will do so soon. This closed one of the best meetings that I have conducted for a long time. If I am alive and well I expect to be with them again in 1903, if the Lord don't come before that time. We then bid all farewell, and started for Morse Mill, Mo., at which place we had a good meeting and excellent attendance. This seemed to me to be the best meeting held not only at this place, but also of the others above mentioned. The brethren did not forget the needs of an aged and almost worn out evangelist, and one who has endured the heat, cold, rain and storms while in the service of the Master, and have also suffered in common with other brethren in Missouri and Kansas, the privations caused by rain, drouth and grasshoppers. I also feel that I have labored more for the cause of Christ than any other evangelist in the West, and at the same time have received the least financial support. I have long since reached the top of the mountain, and have now nearly reached the valley below. I am now old and gray haired, but am still out in the field as an unhired evangelist. I am ready to go and do all I can where-ever I am called upon to go, and I never ask what will you pay me? When they ask me what I believe, I tell them just what Peter and John believed: that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, that there will be a resurrection of the dead, both the just and the unjust. May God bless us all, and preserve us unto his heavenly kingdom, is my prayer.

In love to all the brethren and sisters in Christ Jesus.

Dear Household of Faith:

Now I wish we could meet in one great congregation to admonish each other and rejoice with each other in the knowledge of the true faith which was once delivered to the saints. We few here in Blackwell feel so isolated it makes us long to be among those of like precious faith, where we could meet with the dear ones and enjoy their company and hear their admonitions and the precious promises taught over and over again, though after all it is the same old story, but how grand it sounds to our anxious ears every time we hear it, for by this precious Word we are built up to gain an inheritance among all them which are sanctified and be presented faultless in the presence of his glory with exceeding joy, and how many times do we long with aching hearts for the ushering in of this time when the Lord will change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body and be arrayed in fine linen, clean and white, for the fine linen is the righteousness of the saints. I long to do something in the Lord's vineyard that will hasten this time when the crowns will be placed upon our heads at the appearing of the chief Shepherd. But surely the time has come when the Word cannot be taught as it is written, for they will not endure sound doctrine but turn away their ears from the truth to hear fables, and this is proof that the words of Paul are being fulfilled, and that we are in the last days of this age, and we are anxiously waiting to witness those angels coming with a great sound of a trumpet, and be gathered together with his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other; and dear household of like precious faith, could it not be that we might have a prayer meeting naming a certain hour, and every one who is longing for the return of our Lord, (which I know will include all who expect to enjoy living with Jesus when he sets up his kingdom and rules and reigns upon this earth) and that the time may speedily come that the angel's words will be fulfilled, where they said, "This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." It does seem to me that God has promised to answer the prayers of the faithful. He says: "For the eyes of the Lord are over the righteous and his ears open unto their prayers. And again, but in everything by prayer and supplication, with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God. Again, the effectual, fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much. Now, this has been on my mind for some time, wishing that I could talk with the sisters and brothers upon this subject to make the coming of the Lord the subject of prayer, naming a certain hour each day, and attend to having a prayer meeting of the whole household of faith every day. Brothers and sisters, will you think upon this and write short articles on this subject, and let us hear from you through THE RESTITUTION; tell us your faith on prayer and on God's answer to prayer, give us information that will build us up in most holy faith. We must be [illegible] in all our works, for without faith [illegible] impossible to please God, for he that cometh to God must believe that he is and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him. Faith is the substance of things hoped for, then let us now put faith and works together. Jesus said, "Ask and it shall be given you, for every one that asketh receiveth." Now may the Lord's blessing be upon this effort, as it has been written with a longing for the return of our dear Redeemer.

Rise Above the Clouds of Doubt.

It is said that the eagle of the Alps is sometimes beaten down by the tempests into the narrow defiles of the mountains. The clouds in black and angry masses sweep between the mighty bird and the sunny heights where she builds her nest and basks in the full day. For a while she dashes to and fro, buffeting the storm with her strong wings and waking the echoes of the mountains with her wild cry, vainly endeavoring to find some way out of her dark and high-walled prison. At length she dashes upward with a scream of triumph into the midst of the black clouds, and in a moment she is above them in the calm sunshine, with the darkness and the tempest all beneath, the light of heaven shining in full blaze upon her conquering pinions, and her loved home in full sight waiting to receive her. It is through the darkness that she rushes into the light. It is by a mighty effort to ascend that she leaves the clouds and storms of earth beneath. So by a firm decision and a mighty effort must we rise above all the clouds of doubt and fear to the serene heights of faith and peace in God. So through the darkness of trouble and conflict and death must we pass into heaven's eternal day.

Dear brothers and sisters:

I have just returned from a Tippecanoe County, Ind., by request, where I immersed into the all saving name of Jesus Christ, the Anointed One, Gibson Stingley and his wife Julia. To God be all the praise. Returned home in my usual health.

Your brother in Christ.

He Will Return.

"Unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time, without sin (offering) unto salvation." Heb. ix. 28.

Lift up, lift up your longing eyes,
Ye shall behold him soon
Forthcoming from the bending skies,
Far brighter than the moon.

Not slowly, like the rising sun,
But like the lightning's blaze,
The glorious Son of Man shall come,
And all his foes amaze.

O glory! glory! part ye skies,
And let the wide world see,
Those that reject him, and despise
The Christ of Galilee.

For "this same Jesus" shall return,
And every human eye,
Yes, they that pierced him, shall discern
His glory in the sky.

And we who love him fond shall sing,
With rapture now unknown,
Hailing our ever blessed King,
On his eternal throne.

The Devil.

As the devil is spoken of in the Scriptures as an adversary and an enemy to the human family and whom we must resist and fight against, it is very important and necessary that we understand who and what this foe is. If we want to fight this foe successfully we must understand who or what this devil is. Some people may think that this subject is not very important but when we read the Scriptures bearing on this subject we shall find that it is of great importance. James iv. 7. Resist the devil and he will flee from you. Eph. iv. 26, 27. Be ye angry, but sin not; let not the sun go down on your wrath, neither give place to the devil. 2 Cor. ii. 10. 11. To whom ye forgive anything I forgive also, for if I forgave anything, to "whom I forgave it for your sakes I forgave it in the person of Christ lest Satan should get an advantage of us, for we are not ignorant of his devices. 1 Peter v. 8, 9, Be sober, be vigilant, because your adversary, the devil, as a roaring lion walketh about seeking whom he may devour, and whom resist steadfast in the faith. Eph. vi. 11. 17, Put on the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil. This shows very conclusively that we have got a very powerful enemy to fight against. The apostle Paul has beautifully described this armor, and as it is to be had without money and without price, there is no excuse for a person, neither male or female, for being without it. This armor will protect and fit both sexes, either large or small, and whenever this armor is worn it is warranted to quench all the fiery darts of the enemy and we are bound to come out more than conquerors. This enemy that we have to contend against is very wily and very deceptive, and has the power of transforming himself into a messenger of light, but come in whatever form he may when seen in his true character he is a liar and the father of it. Man stands related to two bodies—the present earthly body which dies and returns to the earth which it was taken from, and the spiritual body which the righteous attain to by resurrection from the dead or a change from mortality to immortality, which will take place at the coming of Christ. The flesh we now have is of the earth and earthy, and is possessed naturally of certain principles and inclinations from the day Adam was created out of the dust, which are spoken of in the Scriptures as sin in the flesh. Rom. vii. 3. Paul also states in the vii. 18, I know that in me dwelleth no good thing. The desires of the flesh are called lust. Paul says, I had not known sin but by the law, for I had not known lust except the law had said, Thou shalt not covet. Jam. iv. 5, Do ye think the Scripture saith in vain, The spirit that dwelleth in us lusteth to envy. James i. 14, Every man is tempted when he is drawn away of his own lust and enticed, then when lust hath conceived it bringeth forth sin; when sin is finished it bringeth forth death.

The prophet Jeremiah speaking by the Spirit of God says that the heart of man is deceitful above all things and desperately wicked. Jesus says, Out of the heart proceed those things which defile a man. Matt. xv. 18 20. This principle of sin in the flesh is called by various names, lust, the motions of sin in the flesh, the carnal mind, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience. This is what is primarily termed the devil. The origin of the devil commences with the creation of man and his dwelling place is in flesh and blood, and his territory is co-existent and bounded by the utmost limits of Adam's posterity. This principle of evil within us so long as it is restrained and kept under and directed in lawful channels will do us no harm, for sin is a transgression of law. 1 John iii. 3. Rom. iv. 15, where there is no law there is no transgression, but when lust unrestrained conceives it brings forth death. The forms in which sin that dwelleth in us gives expression to itself is through the lust of the eyes, the lust of the flesh and the pride of life. 1 John ii. 16. Observe for instance its operations in the first transgressors, when roused into action by a talking serpent, the most subtile of all the beasts of the field, that is when the woman saw that the tree was good for food, (the lust of the flesh) and that it was pleasant to the eyes (the lust of the eyes) and a tree to be desired to make one wise as the gods, to know good and evil, (the pride of life) then she took thereof and gave to her husband, and he ate of it. The serpent's lie they accepted as truth, thus disbelieving and disobeying God. Lust had conceived and brought forth sin and death, thus involving the whole race, as we were in the loins of Adam on the same principle that Levi paid tithes to Melchizedeck, being in the loins of Abraham when Melchizedeck met him. Heb. vii. 10. And so we sinned in Adam. Rom. v. 12. This act of transgression against God's law being completed the penalty was pronounced, which consists of a multitude of evils and sorrows terminating in death, all of which is chargeable to sin in the flesh, or in other words the devil, for the devil sinneth from the beginning. 1 John iii. 8. Jesus says that he was a murderer from the beginning and abode not in the truth because there is no truth in him. When he speaketh a lie he speaketh of his own, for he is a liar and the father of it. This principle of evil in Cain slew his brother Abel, and all the way down the stream of time this same principle of evil exists. Jesus when he chose his twelve apostles said, Have I not chosen you twelve, and one of you is a devil? referring to Judas who betrayed him, and even Peter in his blind zeal when opposing the right way of the Lord stood as an adversary or devil, for Jesus said to him, Get behind me Satan, for thou savorest not of the things which be of God but those of men. Matt. xvi. 22, 23. The false doctrine which men invent in their ignorance and blindness is called doctrine of devils. 1 Tim. iv. 1. Even gods are called devils because they are prompted by sin in the flesh. Lev. xvii. 7; Deut. xxxii. 17; Psa. cvi. 34-38. And those that worship them are called worshipers of devils. 1 Cor. x. 17-21. The various forms of insanity, lunacy, infirmities and sickness, whose names indeed are legion are called devils, and the instantaneous curing of these diseases is called casting out devils. Matt. viii. 16, 17; ix. 32, 33; Luke xi. 32, 33; Luke xi. 14; Matt. xvii. 14-18; Luke xiii. 10-17. Paul says to the saints at Rome, (Rom. vi. 10-14, Let not sin reign in your mortal bodies, for sin shall not have dominion over you. Sin therefore reigns in sinners and has dominion over them; they are the servants or slaves of sin, or sold under sin. Sin is styled the prince of this world. Jesus said, The prince of this world cometh and hath nothing in me: he came in his vassals, the chief priests and scribes to compass his death. John iv. 30. Jesus said, Now shall the prince of this world be cast out. John xii. 31, 33. Referring to his own death, for he died unto sin once. Rom. viii. 3. Again he says, The prince of this world is judged. John xvi. 11. This was accomplished when Jesus died and rose from the dead and accomplished the victory over sin and death. See Col. ii. 15. Paul says to his Ephesian brethren that in times past they had walked according to the prince of this world, that is according to the prince of the air, which is explained to be the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience, which he further declares to be the lusts of the flesh or desires of the flesh, and of the mind. Eph. ii. 1-3. Again sin is called a god, as it is said, If our gospel be hid it is hid to them that are lost, in whom the God of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not. 2 Cor. iv. 3, 4. The devil is the god of this world and all persons who know not the truth are his devotees and worshipers, and all he has to pay them with is death. When we have believed and obeyed the truth we are translated out of the kingdom of Satan into the kingdom of God's dear Son. Col. i. 13; Acts xxvi. 17, 18. This is also shown forth in the parable of the net, also the parable of the sower. The devil is not immortal as his worshipers believe and affirm for Christ took upon himself our nature that through death he would destroy the devil who has the power of death. Heb. ii. 14. When the righteous rise from the dead incorruptible, they say death were as thy sting, grave were as thy victory. The sting of death is sin. Sin then is the power of death, so sin and the devil are one, and the same terms are used by the inspired writers as being interchangeable terms. 1 Cor. xv. 54-56. Christ was manifested to destroy the devil and his works. Heb. ii. 14; 1 John iii. 8. The works of the devil are sin in all its manifestations. Paul calls them the works of the flesh. Gal. v. 19-21, and the consequent sorrows, sickness and death that result from sin. This destruction will be accomplished when the righteous dead are raised immortal and the living righteous changed from mortality to immortality, and all the ungodly destroyed, and when it shall be said of them they are not. Psalm xxxvii. 36. The last one my will then have to be destroyed, which is death. 1 Cor. xv. 26. When this takes place the devil will be destroyed, for this is the last enemy to be destroyed, and all upon the earth will be praising God. Thank God that the time will surely come when there will be no more sin, therefore no more death, no more devil.

S. Pyrs.

Come for all Things are Now Ready.

This invitation was first made to the Jews, but it seems to have a peculiar appropriateness to ourselves. God in creating the earth and all things thereon certainly showed a foresight too wonderful in magnitude to be comprehended by the most intelligent human mind. God has always had all things ready in the proper place and in due season. The readiness of everything on God's part is the argument why men should come and partake of his grace, the readiness of the feast of mercy. Why not come at once? God has always had all things ready, not only for human beings, but also for all manner of creatures he has created. It was so in the creation. God never created a blade of grass upon the earth until the soil and atmosphere had been prepared for it, and the sun had learned to look upon the earth. He never created an animal, fowl or fish until he had prepared its habitation and made ready its appointed food. There were no cattle until there were blades of grass for them. No birds until there were trees for their nests and food in readiness. Even the insects had food prepared when they were ushered into creation. Animal life was not called into existence until after the vegetable life was created. When God came to create Adam, the last and noblest work of creation, all things were ready. The garden was laid out on the banks of flowing streams, the fruit was ripe for his diet, flowers for his delight. God's thoughts run wonderfully accurate before man's creation. God thought of us long before we ever thought or knew of him. Come for all things are now ready. He does not say all things will be ready, but "all things are ready." The invitation is now, and is open yet for a little season, though we know not how short the season may be. The Bridegroom may appear at any moment, and go in and shut the door. Our entreaties will be then not heard, except the command, "Depart," etc. "Never think, oh sinner, that thou canst outstrip the love of God." "He is at the end of the race before thou art at the beginning." "God hath completed before thou hast begun." Come for all things are now ready. Remember to emphasize the word "now." The trials of this life especially when toiling in the evils of wickedness, must invariably be borne by ourselves, with no help, no promise of a better future. But toiling for Jesus, we have help. Ah! a help, a wonderful help, a help far superior to any other—the help of Jesus. He hath said, Come for all things are now ready, the feast is waiting for us. He has even come out to hunt us and has offered his hand to lead and guide us to the reward. We need power to help us. Most churches seek to get as members men of influence and position and wealth. What the Church needs is men of power. Paul and Silas had not influence enough to get them out of prison, but they had power sufficient to pray down the prison walls, and throw open the doors. Nicodemus was an honored member of the Sanhedrin and a circumspect man, but in his heart there was sense of need which prompted him to seek Jesus. If therefore there is today a sense of need which this world does not sat-

[illegible] shall be ... lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God ... having a form of godliness but denying the power thereof." Does it say, "Believe such people, stay with them, for they are all right?" No, but "From such turn away." The question was asked the Elder not so very long ago, "Eld. Woodward, can't I go to dances, if I want to?" "Why, yes;" he said, "and you can go to the devil, if you want to, but it is not a good thing to do." The young lady laughed and turned away, saying, "Well, I must dance." O dear young convert, God wants you to stay with him, and you cannot do it and go where the libertine, the vile woman, the blasphemer, the infidel, all of Satan's tools, are gathered to ruin those who are foolish enough to court his favors. Remember the social dance is only the prelude to the ball, or worse yet the bowery dance in the woods, where the vilest libertine's arm encircles the form of the innocent and only too unsuspecting girl, who has perhaps been made to believe she could dance and still be a Christian. "Come out from the world," was given us as admonitions as well as a warning to the child of God, for he knew so well the danger signals of the world. But one says, "O I love to dance so well, I cannot give it up." If you love that more than the approbation of God, he will let you have your choice, but if you want to be an overcomer, that is the very thing God wants you to give up, if it is the thing you love best. So much the greater blessing will come to you if you get above it and do as the Book tells you. "Present your bodies a living sacrifice." Why do we try to drag things into our Christian life? If dancing or card playing, or any dangerous worldly amusement is more to us than eternal life, God will let us have our choice. But do not let us try to serve Christ and Belial. We cannot serve two masters. More anon.

Yours working that others may gain eternal life as well as myself.

The Ten Virgins, Matt. xxv.

In a foot note in the Binglott we have the following, "An eye witness of a Hindoo marriage, gives the following striking illustration of this custom: The bride lived at Serampore, to which place the bridegroom was to come by water. After waiting two or three hours, at length, near midnight, it was announced in the very words of Scripture, 'Behold the bridegroom cometh: go ye out to meet him.' All the persons employed now lighted their lamps, and ran with them in their hands to fill up their stations in the procession; some of them had lost their lights, and were unprepared, but it was then too late to seek them, and the cavalcade moved forward to the house of the bride; at which place the company entered a large and splendidly illuminated area, before the house, covered with an awning, where a great multitude of friends, dressed in their best apparel, were seated upon mats. The bridegroom was carried in the arms of a friend, and placed in a superb seat in the midst of the company, where he sat a short time, and then went into the house, the door of which was immediately shut, and guarded by sepoys. I and others expostulated with the door keepers but in vain. Never was I so struck with our Lord's beautiful parable as at this moment, "And the door was shut."

Now if we can discern by the parable the movements of those represented by those virgins, then can we learn the lesson as taught by the Master. And it is evident that they are the ones that are looking for the return of our Lord. The ones that see the necessity of his return to raise the sleeping saints; otherwise "They that are fallen asleep in Christ are perished." And it is equally evident that they that have lost sight of the necessity of the resurrection, and teach that Christ comes at death, that they have no part in this movement represented by the ten virgins. In both cases it was the coming of the bridegroom that moved them to action, to take their lamps and to go to meet him. In the case of the virgins they took literal lamps; but in the case of those looking for the return of our Lord, they took the Word of God, which David says "is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path." The virgins that had oil in their vessels were admitted to the marriage. But those that had not the oil were too late, and failed of admittance. Therefore the importance of having oil in their vessels with their lamps.

It is now our province to find out what is represented by the oil in the vessels, the lack of which proved so disastrous to the foolish virgins. Under the law, the [illegible] Aaron and his sons, when being set apart to the service of God, were anointed with the holy anointing oil. Ex. xxx. And in Psa. xlv. 7, it is written, "How God anointed him with Holy Spirit and power." Diaglott. Therefore we conclude that oil is the Holy Spirit, and that the foolish virgins were not sanctified by the truth; they had not the spirit of Christ, and consequently were not his. He says, "My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me." John x. 27. It is reasonable to conclude that the foolish virgins sought the crown, but refused to bear the cross. Therefore he who said, "I know my sheep," said to them, "I know you not." Ver. 5 reads, "While the bridegroom tarried, they all slumbered and slept." If I understand the parable, we are now in the tarrying time, and have been for years. This slumbering and sleeping time will ere long arrive at its midnight; when the watchers will see the darkening of the sun and the moon, and the falling of the political and ecclesiastical stars, and the shaking of the powers of the heavens. Then will the cry be heard, "Behold, the bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him." Then the virgins will arise and trim their lamps; something prevented the lamp of truth from giving to the watchers a clear light; therefore the trimming of the lamps as noted in the parable. This time the Lord comes. Signs having been seen in all nations of the earth: not confined to a small portion of the United States, as was the case with those who thought they saw the signs of the Lord's coming prior to 1844. Now is the time to procure that that is represented by the oil—the fruits of the Spirit. The faithful and true witness has faithfully warned us, saying, "Therefore be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh." The desire of all nations. He that shall speak peace to the heathen; he whose dominion shall be from sea to sea; and from the river to the ends of the earth.

Obedience.

Religion is obedience. The Bible says concerning Christ, "He is the Author of eternal salvation to them that obey him." Our Lord says, "Ye are my friend if ye do whatsoever I have commanded you." "If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love, as I have kept my Father's commandments and abide in his love." Prayer is good. Worship is good. Giving alms is good. But obedience is better. "To obey is better than sacrifice." The king thought he might be justified in disobeying the commandment of God if he should devote the cattle and sheep, which he had spared, to the Lord for sacrifice. This would answer for a pagan. Heathen religious regard sacrifice as better than good morals. Righteousness may be dispensed with if the temples of the gods are filled with fat victims.

The Bible teaches a different religion. Sacrifice which is not accompanied by obedience is an abomination in the sight of the Lord. Obedience is the way of life. There is no exception. No excuse for disobedience will be accepted. There is no justification for transgression. The majesty of the transgressor is no palliation. The offering made to the poor make no atonement. The pressure of public opinion furnishes no justification. Obedience is the way of life. Transgression leads to death.—Christian Advocate.

God Given Power to Love.

Loving as we are loved is delightful and human; loving whether we are loved or not is not easy, but it is godlike. In the full-heartedness of youth our love goes out in return for kindness and love received. Loving those who love us seems as natural as breathing, and so, indeed, it is. But as we advance in life the Master sets us harder lessons and puts our loving power to fireproof tests. It seems a hard doctrine that loving infallible and unlovely men should be as the test of our love for a pure holy and all-loving God; yet any love worthy of the name, and the only one which will bear testing, is God derived. Only when we look to him for power to love men do we gain that affection for and sympathy with our fellows which enable us to love others with no thought of their attitude toward us, and which he would have us show toward all men. —Sunday School Times.

2. And gave unto him strength to control all things (within his sphere of course).

3. And when an unjust one stood away from her in his wrath, he perished in fratricidal passions.

4. On whose account when an earth was flooded wisdom again saved the justified one piloting him through the instrumentality of well-perfected wood.

5. She also, in a concensus of wickedness on the part of nations who had comingled together, found the justified one, and watched to keep him blameless for God, and with guardianship make him strong with tender-feelings for a child.

6. She, when irreverent ones were perishing, delivered a justified one fleeing a fire that was descending on Pentapolis (the five-city country).

7. In testimony of whose wickedness it still standeth a smoking waste, plantings unfruitful with unperfected seasons, a pillar of salt standing as a memorial of an unfaithful soul.

8. For by disregarding wisdom, not only did they injure their comprehension of the good, but they also left behind them a memorial of their life-time of folly, that men might not even be able to ignore the ways in which they were tripped up.

9. But wisdom delivered from their painful trials those who had served her as courtiers.

10. She guided a justified one, a fugitive from a brother's wrath in straightforward paths, showed him God's kingdom, and gave him a comprehension of sacred things, prospered him in his toilsome labors, and multiplied the results of his painstaking care.

11. When strong ones were oppressing him she stood by and enriched him.

12. She guarded him successfully from enemies, and rendered him secure from those who lay in wait, and as umpire judged a mighty contest for him, that he might learn to know that true-reverence (piety) was greater than anything else.

13. She did not forsake a justified one when sold, but delivered him from sin.

14. Went down along with him into a pit, and in bonds did not leave him, until she had brought him a sceptre of royalty and official-power over his petty rulers, and had showed those who had blamed him to be liars, and had given him age-lasting glory.

15. She delivered a holy (not sanctified in this case, because as a priestly nation they were accounted holy) laity from a nation of those who were causing tribulation.

16. She entered into the soul of a courtier of the Lord and he resisted fearful kings with prodigies and signs.

17. She gave unto holy ones (not sanctified ones here also) wages (not "rewards") for their weary labors; she guided them in a wondrous way, and became for them a shelter by day, and a flame of stars by night.

18. She conducted them on foot through a red sea, and led them through much water.

19. But their enemies she deluged with water and brought them up as scum from out the depths of an abyss.

20. Therefore justified ones spoiled irreverent ones, and hymned thy sacred name, O Lord, and with one accord praised thy conquering hand.

21. Because wisdom opened the mouth of the dumb and made the tongues of children speak plain.

COMMENT.

This chapter is a historical epitome of the leading events of the world from the creation of Adam down to the Red Sea deliverance under the leadership of Mouses; and contains a series of character-sketches which for clearness, conciseness and forcible expression are unequaled in all literature.

To assist the hasty reader and the one not as familiar as he or she ought to be with Scripture history and biography I will name the persons here referred to in the order of their sequence as here given. The first mentioned of course is father Adam, and the descriptive epithet of "protoplast" (or first-moulded) here applied to him makes the scientific term "protoplasm" as used and defined to mean in the phraseology of modern scientists the ultimate something in which organic life germinates automatically or is self-germinating—seem ludicrously inappropriate to say the least, as the word "protoplasm" simply means the thing moulded by its author or the person who moulded it.

The second mentioned is Kain (Cain).

The third Noos (Noah).

The fourth Habraam (Abraham).

The fifth Loot (Lot).

And Loot's wife.

The sixth Jakoob (Jacob).

The Seventh Joaseph (Joseph).

The eighth Moouseca (Moses) who is appropriately here as elsewhere in the whole Bible socalled designated as "the courtier of the Lord" clearly indicating the different kinds and degrees of service the Lord recognizes.

In what is said here of Jakoob wrestling with the angel and wisdom presiding as "umpire" of the unequal contest, we have an inspired interpretation of what enabled him "to prevail." Read it again and see for yourselves. Among many other interpretations herein given we have an interpretation of the true significance of Israel's triumphant song of deliverance from "Aegypt" and the Red Sea led by Mouseca and Mariam—an ode of victory, national and world-wide in its import of course.

The 11th chap. continues wisdom's inspired teaching as the reader will see peculiarly fitting and timely just now in this period of doubt and widespread desire to know what God has really revealed of his dealings with mankind.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again:" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship." "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind:" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages 8¢ per 100 post free; or in assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

"The World to Come and the Life Everlasting," is the name of a book of over 400 pages. The title page describes it as a Symposium of Writers on eternal life from the Bible Basis, and is selected from the works of a goodly number of Bible Students who have written during the past few years. It is compiled and published by Bro. John O. Woodruff, of Elizabeth, N. J., of whom it may be ordered. The paper and print are excellent, as is the durable cloth-binding. The price is $1.00, and considering the work as a whole it is very low, and we urge all who need a book on this subject to procure one without delay.

We need what is due us on subscriptions, and trust all who know themselves to be in arrears will remember us. We appreciate the favor.

TO OUR PATRONS.

We want more readers for THE RESTITUTION. We want One Thousand new names on our list before January 1st, 1903, and can have them if you will help us.

In every Church of our faith in the land there are members who do not take our paper, who would be benefited by reading it.

There are those who are isolated by circumstances from any Church fellowship, who would be kept firmer in the faith, helped and strengthened for the battles of life if they had THE RESTITUTION each week.

There are others interested in the truths we hold, who would often have their attention called to the principles of our faith by reading our paper. When no preacher can be heard, when you cannot talk to them, THE RESTITUTION in their homes would be ever a present visitor—a missionary that will do more than any other one thing to keep the interest alive.

There are those whom we wish were interested in the Bible and what it promises. Many of this class of persons have never had the opportunity, or have neglected the matter when it was before them.

You are surely known to people such as are mentioned, and you are surely interested in them. We are satisfied you are not unmindful of their eternal well-being. How much do you care for these people? Will you join with us in getting the gospel before them, and keeping it there a year? We have [illegible] consideration.

[illegible] THE RESTITUTION one year to NEW Subscribers for $1.00. We will start them as soon as received and give credit to the end of 1903.

With a little persistent effort in presenting the paper to those you know who are not taking it, you can induce them to try it for $1.00. If you want some sample papers we will gladly supply them to you, and our list can be increased by 1000 names by Jan. 1st. It can be done easily if you will act on this suggestion, and get those near you interested. If each reader would get a new name our list would be doubled at once.

It would seem as if every reader of THE RESTITUTION could exert influence enough to get one more new name if the effort was made. Will you try it? If the first person you suggest it to does not respond, do not be discouraged, but try some one else. Perhaps the one you least expect will answer quickest.

Did you ever stop to figure up how many words are contained in our paper in a year? You will be surprised at the number of sermons it contains. There is variety too. There is doctrine and the practical, encouragement and cheer, and comfort for the distressed. Each phase of teaching would make several good sized books during the year. You can do no work that yields as large a return for the money expended as by sending THE RESTITUTION to a friend for a year.

Will you not start right away and send one name, and next week when that person gets his paper, some one else will hear of it, and you can send another subscriber.

Poetry.

The Watchman's Call.

"Awake, thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light." Eph. v. 14.

The watch towers gleam, the hills are bright,
The day of Christ appears:
Throw off the fetters of the night
And banish all your fears.

Rejoice today, lift up your voice,
Proclaim the precious word:
Exhort the nations to rejoice
And serve the coming Lord.

The fields are white, the harvest time,
The reapers—where are they?
The Master comes; Oh, hope sublime!
Awake and watch and pray.

The Bridegroom comes; the King draweth near—
Go, repent the call.
The Lord in single his voice we hear;
Arouse, ye servants, all.

He comes to fill the earth with joy;
He comes to banish pain;
And all that owns his empire
To reign in glory shall.

The Spirits in Prison.

1 PETER iii. 19.

Lucy W. Hoover in THE RESTITUTION asks for an explanation of this verse. Verse 18 says that Christ was "Put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit." Vers. 19, "By which also he went and preached to the spirits in prison." Vers. 20, "Which sometimes were disobedient, when once the long suffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing." Upon an erroneous view of this Scripture the Roman Catholics have founded in the minds of their people the doctrine of purgatory; from which the release of imaginary souls by the prayers of the clergy yields to them an immense revenue; this fulfilling [illegible] Peter, "And through covetousness shall they with feigned words make merchandise of you." 2 Pet. ii. 3. Two parties are brought to view in this verse; first, He (Christ) went and preached; second, to the spirits in prison." Now if we can find out when he did the preaching, and who the prisoners were that he preached to, our task is done. Please turn with me to Isa. xlii. 6-7, and read, "I the Lord have called thee in righteousness, and will hold thine hand, and will keep thee, and give thee for a covenant of the people, for a light of the Gentiles; to open the blind eyes, to bring out the prisoners from the prison, and them that sit in darkness out of the prison house."

The next testimony is Isa. lxi. 1, "The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me; because the Lord hath anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek; he hath sent me to bind up the broken-hearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound." These testimonies by the prophet are to the point, as to what Christ was to do. Now turn to Luke iv. 16, and hear what Christ himself says on the same subject, "The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor; he hath sent me to heal the broken-hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised." Luke iv. 18.

Now to sum up the matter: Isaiah says of Christ that he was to, "bring out the prisoners from the prison, and them that sit in darkness out of the prison house.....to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound." And Christ after quoting from these Scriptures cited, says, "This day is this Scripture fulfilled in your ears." Lu. iv. 21. The erroneous doctrine of the immortality of the soul, and the pre-existence of Christ, is the cause of the misunderstanding of this Scripture. The Protestant seer [illegible] this text pre-existence, and the Catholic his pagan purgatory. The persons in the prison being called spirits, leads those who believe in the existence of disembodied spirits, away from the truth. I will now give a few passages of Scripture to show that the term of spirits is applied to living persons in the flesh. "Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils; speaking lies in hypocrisy, having their conscience seared with a hot iron." 1 Tim. iv. 1-2. It will be evident that these spirits are real men, because you could not sear with a hot iron the conscience of a disembodied spirit, if such a thing did exist. But again we read, "Beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God: because many false prophets are gone out into the world." 1 John iv. 1. In this chapter John gives directions how to test these spirits, or false prophets; and in the message he writes to the church of Ephesus, he says, "Thou hast tried them which say they are apostles, and are not, and hast found them liars." Rev. ii. 2. Notice that the same ones that he calls in his epistle, spirits and false prophets, are in the Revelation called liars and false apostles. The term prisoners is frequently applied to those in a state of sin, as seen in Zech. ix. 11-12, "As for thee also, by the blood of thy covenant, I have sent forth thy prisoners out of the pit wherein is no water. Turn you to the stronghold, ye prisoners of hope." But the question is asked, How could the prisoners that Christ preached to, be said to have been disobedient in the days of Noah? The answer is, They are of the same disobedient class of persons or spirits. The principle is the same as in Matt. xxiii. 39, where our Lord says to the disobedient Jews, "Ye shall not see me henceforth, till ye shall say, blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord." The personal pronoun "ye" first used in this verse, does not refer to the same individuals as it does in the second instance; but does to the same [illegible] class of individuals. In the first place it is the disobedient Jews then and there, about A. D. 33. But in the second instance it refers to the Jews that will be alive when the Lord returns, which is yet in the future. Again let us suppose that God should now anoint with the Holy Spirit, and with power one of his messengers, and send him to preach to the Jews in Bulgaria (spirits in prison) and should add, "Which some time were disobedient, when once the long suffering of God waited in the days of Jesus Christ, while the anti-typical ark was a preparing, wherein many souls are being saved by water. I think there would be no difficulty in understanding the language. This is the way I read about the spirits in prison.

Yours in hope of eternal life when the Lord returns.

The Wisdom of Saloomcon. Chap. 11.

1. She prospered their works at the hand of a saintly prophet.

2. They made their way through an uninhabited desert, and in trackless wastes they pitched their tents.

3. They resisted warring people and warded off enemies.

4. They thirsted and called on thee, and water was given them out of a precipitous rock, and healing for thirst out of a hard stone.

5. For they, though perplexed, were benefited by the circumstances.

6. Whereby their enemies were cut off.

7. And while these were terrified with gory blood instead of a fountain of a perennial river,

8. In reproof for a child-slaying edict thou didst give unto thy people abundant water in an unhoped for way.

9. Thus showing through the thirst of that time how thou hast cut off the adversaries.

10. For when they were tried, although they were being chastened in mercy, they comprehended how the irreverent when they were being judged in wrath were put to the final test (the touch-stone or fire-test or "hell"-test).

11. For these as a fostering Father thou didst try, but those as a precipitate king who is bringing to judgment didst thou search out.

12. And away from home and at home they wasted away.

13. For a double sorrow laid hold of them and a sighing over memories of the past.

14. For when they heard that these people were being benefited through their own deprivations they perceived the Lord.

15. For the one whom they had long ago denied and cast off with rejection in a trifling way they wondered at in the outcome of the issues—wondered that they had not thirsted for things like to the justified.

16. And in return for their unrighteous reasonings without understanding, whereby they were led astray and superstitiously worshiped unreasoning creeping things and monstrous reptiles, thou didst send unto them a multitude of unreasoning (illogical perhaps would be better, incapable of reasoning from a premise to a conclusion) living-creatures in the way of requital.

17. That they might comprehend that through the ways that one sinneth is one being punished.

18. For thy omnipotent hand and thy hand that produced the cosmos from amorphous matter, was not without a way of sending against them a multitude of bears or fierce lions.

19. Or newly generated, unknown beasts of prey full of passion or lightening with sparks of fire.

20. Whose power to injure enabled them not only to crush them but whose appearance even by frightening could destroy.

21. And without these indeed with a spiritual breath could they be made to fall pursued by the right, and winnowed by a breath of thy ability; but thou hast arranged all things by measure and number and weight.

22. For to be strong in a great way is always present with thee, and thy controlling arm who will withstand?

23. Because all the cosmos in thy sight is an inclination of a pair of scales, and as a morning drop of dew that cometh down upon the earth.

24. And thou art merciful to all, because thou hast all ability; and thou dost look one side of men's sins on unto repentance.

25. For thou lovest all the things that be, and thou dost abominate nothing of the things which thou didst originally create; for not even wouldst thou have fixed anything up if thou hadst hated it.

26. And how could anything have continued to be if thou hadst not willed it? or had it not been summoned by thee how would it have been watched to be kept?

27. And thou art sparing of them all, because they are thine, thou soul-loving absolute Lord.

COMMENT.

We have in this chapter along with very much else of spiritual import and value a very ancient interpretation of the spectacular leading and chastening of Israel, and God's punitive judgment of their oppressors; and a commentary on miracles in general, as well as the specific "signs and prodegies" here enumerated, a commentary so different from most of our mediæval theological comment that the up-to-date scientist and moral philosopher even will be surprised to see how very modern Saloomcon was in his reasoning as well as in the use he makes of specific terms in physics not a few—for instance what God has done and can do with "amorphous matter," or what he can do and has done in the way of "evolving" species of "living-creatures" and "monsters" of the earth, air and water from already created "genera." If the Bible does not directly teach "science" or "physics" the student will find that the terminology when used is intelligent and correct as one would expect the Word of God to be. For instance the Bible in the Greek nowhere speaks of "life" or what can be known of life, organic life [illegible] means as "Biology" which is derived from the two Greek words "Bios" and "Logos" the first meaning primarily "a life-time" and derivitively the way such a life time is spent or "getting a living" or the result of so spending it, namely "a livelihood," and does not at all define or have to do with the abstract principle of "life" expressed by the Greek word "Zooee." Modern science will have to reconstruct and restate much of its terminology and modern theology and moral philosophy much more when the light of God's revealed truth thoroughly illuminates them. The terminology of both is far more heathenish than divine in its origin and evolution. Observe also what is said of "measure, number and weight" here in this chapter.

HOW DOES FAITH PURIFY THE HEART. ACTS xv. 9.

Let us first get the Apostle's thought concerning the mode of heart purifying. He does not mean the fleshly organ we call heart, but rather the faculties of the mind, the understanding, and how is this done? In Psalm xix. 7 it reads, "The law (or as the margin reads doctrine of the Lord) is perfect, converting the soul. By this law or doctrine, God makes known his purpose concerning man, thus reaching the understanding. He instills the thought of love in the heart and the result is a converted, purified life follows. For says the Psalmist again, Psa. cxix. 130, "The entrance of thy Word giveth light." The question was, Shall we abide by the law of Moses with circumcision, or leaving their yokes which had been a grievous burden to them, accept the purifying influence of the Holy Spirit and gage our lives by its teachings? The Pharisees could not drop the old idea of being saved by their works. Peter was trying to teach them, "By the works of the law should no man be justified." Gal. ii. 16. It took more than that. 1 Pet. i. 22, purifying your souls in obeying the truth. Where would they find this truth? 2 Tim. iii. 15. If the Holy Scriptures could make the child Timothy wise unto salvation it can surely do the same for us. The question with Peter was, Will you have faith in Christ and thus accept his gospel, which will purify your souls, or will you remain where you are, "Shut up under the law?" It was not by the law they were to live, but the just shall live by faith, faith in Christ, for Peter says, "We believe that through the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ we shall be saved. For in Christ Jesus neither circumcision availeth anything nor uncircumcision, but faith which worketh by love. Faith can purify only as it works the work of God. Abraham's faith (Rom. iv.) was counted unto him for righteousness because he trusted God and worked with him. Faith in God and his promises gives us a hope which nothing else brings, a desire to be right and do right. 1 Jno. iii. 3. We read, "And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself even as he is pure."

RUTH SMITH.

Dear Bereans:

I know you will be interested in a report of my visit to the Southern Illinois Conference at Moriah, Oct. 10-20. I left home the morning of Oct. 10. Arrived at Casey at 4:16 p. m., where I was met by Bros. Crowe and Brant. After a pleasant ride of eight miles, we reached the home of Bro. Lewis Weaver. Here I met Brother and Sister Weaver, and several brothers and sisters who had driven from Hazel, forty miles distant. As is characteristic of the people of our faith, I was heartily welcomed and made to feel right at home. After supper we walked to the new church, about a quarter of a mile from Bro. Weaver's. They have a nice building, pleasantly located, with a seating capacity of about 280 people. The church was well filled, and we enjoyed the sermon delivered by Bro. Crowe. As we had no service the next day until evening, I spent the time in talking with the friends in regard to the work of the Bereans. The hour from 6:30 to 7:30 of each evening had been given to the young people, the first meeting being held on Sunday evening. A topic was assigned the evening previous, and the hour was filled with the reading of Scripture references, and comments on the subject. Though the work was entirely new, each evening showed improvement on the part of the young people, to participate, and the hour was a profitable one. Bro. Crowe and Bro. Zilmer each gave a talk in regard to the object and benefits of the Berean society. On Saturday afternoon we had a business meeting, Sister Bertha Weaver of Moriah was elected 2nd vice president of the State society, and will have charge of the work in Southern Illinois. A society for Moriah was also organized, with Myrtle Fears, President, Eliza Gross, Secretary, and Allen Weaver, Treasurer. There are many young people in this vicinity, whom we think will take an interest in the work, and that a large class can be worked up. Sister Stella Claypool and Letitia Murphy, of Marshall, were in attendance and took an active part in our meetings. They will endeavor to organize at that point. Sister Rogers of Hazel and Sister Lulu Kepley of Ingraham enrolled themselves as members of the State Bereans. Though there are very few young people at these points, they will do what they can to start the work. Bro. A. O. Lenz and wife of Lecgootee, Ill., are alone in the faith at this point. They will take up the study of the Berean topics, and be enrolled as State members. We have reason to feel encouraged over the interest manifested by the young people of Southern Illinois in this work. Though most of them are young in the faith and young in years, they are capable, and show a desire to do their best. On Sunday afternoon we had an interesting Bible reading, led by Sister Bertha Weaver. Bro. Conner was present and assisted in the service. His words of encouragement in the work begun, were gratefully received. On Sunday morning we had the pleasure of seeing Sister Letitia Murphy, who has been one of the Illinois Bereans for several months, put on Christ by baptism. Should we not rejoice, for ten of the Bereans in the past five months, have taken the step which makes them children of God and members of the household of faith. The good sermons we heard from Bros. Crowe, Wilcox, Zilmer, Conner, Claypool and Brant will be long remembered, and I am sure this Conference was a profitable one in many ways, to all present. There is a good field for work in this part of the State, and I trust an evangelist will be maintained for this purpose. The church was well filled each evening and the best of attention given to the Word of Truth preached to them. Surely, some of the seed will fall into good soil. Now, dear Bereans, help this work on with your prayers and letters of encouragement to these young people. May our heavenly Father guide us all that we may be faithful and earnest workers in his vineyard.

Since writing my report, I have received word that a Berean society of twelve members, was formed Oct. 28, at Marshall, with Sister Letitia Murphy, whose post office address is Clark Center, President, and Brother George Claypool, Marshall, Secretary and Treasurer. They meet each Tuesday evening and have taken up the outline of study in the Berean booklets. We commend them for the promptness with which they began work. Only a few days over a week after Conference, they had their first meeting. With such a spirit they will surely succeed. May God's richest blessings be with them.

Your President,
ANNA E. DREW.

NOTICE.

I wish to say to the brethren that the second edition of my pamphlet—"The Reasons of My Withdrawal from the Evangelical Association," is just from the press and ready to send. 25 pages, at 5 cents per copy. Send orders to A. H. Zilmer, Plymouth, Ind.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him as the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, NOV. 26, 1902.

WE desire to thank those friends of our paper who have sent us so many new names. It is truly encouraging, and we thank you for the interest you manifest in this department of the Lord's service. Keep it going and the list can be doubled by Jan. 1st.

LUTHER once said, "Tyrants are bad, heretics worse, but false brethren worst of all."

"MANY brethren and sisters seem to think they are unable to do anything for the truth, and consider that there is no work for them to do. If the prayer of their hearts is, 'Lord, what wilt thou have ME to do,' a work will very soon be found, if only they are willing to do it. There are oceans of seeds to sow, and remember that he who sows sparingly will surely reap sparingly. Scatter seed, Scatter Seed."

IT may look strange, but we are assured that the following is or was an article of faith of the Presbyterian church: We assuredly believe.....that the Lord Jesus Christ will come suddenly from heaven with power and great glory; and we look for this second appearing of our Savior as the blessed hope of his church for which we ought always to wait in sober watchfulness that we may be found ready at his coming.

Mr. Harris Weinstock a prominent Californian Jew has published a book entitled "Jesus the Jew," in which he claims Paul, not Jesus, was the founder of Christianity, because he knew nothing about the Trinity, vicarious atonement, election and predestination, and because Jesus said, "Think not that I am come to destroy the law or the prophets, I am not come to destroy but to fulfill," which was pure Judaism.

Important Questions.

"What is a man advantaged, if he gain the whole world and lose himself, or be cast away?" Luke ix. 25.

"How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?" Heb. ii. 3.

"How long halt ye between two opinions?" 1 Kings xviii. 21.

"Who may abide the day of his coming?" Mal. iii. 2.

"Who shall stand when he appeareth?" Mal. iii. 2.

"If the righteous scarcely be saved, where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear?" 1 Pet. iv. 18.

Future Events.

Christ is to come again, Acts i. 11; raise the dead, John vi. 54; and overthrow all the kingdoms of this world, Daniel ii. 44; vii. 13, 14; the saints shall reign with him, Dan. vii. 27: Israel will be restored to their own land, Ez. xxxvii. 21, Luke viii. 29; the Gentiles shall come to a knowledge of the Lord in that day; Ez. xxxix. 21, 29; Rev. xiv. 6, 7; the Babylon that now exists shall fall, Rev. xviii. 1–24; the present state of things, both political and ecclesiastical shall vanish and a new and heavenly state of things exist, Rev. xxi. 1–5, 10.

"FOR thus saith the Lord; like as I have brought all this great evil upon this people, [of Israel] so will I bring upon them [Israel] all the good that I have promised them," [Israel] Jeremiah xxxii. 42.

"The Gates of Hell."

In Matt. xvi. 18, Jesus says:—"The gates of Hades shall not prevail against my church." The figure is that of a beleagured city whose gates prevail against the invading army, or whose inhabitants cannot get out because of the hostile forces surrounding it. Here the notion of the traditional hell is obviously excluded; the church of Christ can neither be supposed to have been in THAT HELL, and wanting to get out, or out, and wanting to get in! Understood as a prophecy of the resurrection, Christ's words are intelligible enough. The gates of the grave would be powerless to prevent their escape from its dominion, when the time came for him to call forth his sleeping saints."

Pride.

Solomon says pride "shall bring its possessor low;" "that it goes before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall." It was so in the case of Adam, for it brought about his fall; of Uzziah the king, for it made him a leper, to the day of his death; and in the case of Nebuchadnezzar it cost him his kingdom; and if allowed to go unchecked and unconquered in us, it will cost us a place in the kingdom of God. Pride is hateful to God; and it causes the possessor to think more highly of himself than he ought to think; and to rely upon his own knowledge and wisdom more than upon the knowledge and wisdom which proceed from God. His mind is well nigh filled with exalted ideas of his own greatness and importance, leaving little room left as storage for the teaching of the Spirit."

Importance of Baptism.

The importance of baptism is recognized by people of nearly all denominations. A form of service for baptism is contained in the Prayer Book of the Episcopal church and it is taught that those who die unbaptized are eternally lost. Its importance is clearly seen by a study of many passages of Scripture. Christ himself said, "except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." John iii. 5. And when he was baptized of John the Baptist in Jordan, he said, "Thus it becometh us to fulfil all righteousness." Matt. iii. 15. And Paul wrote to the Galatians, "As many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ.....And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise." Gal. iii. 27, 29. Clearly, then, those who had not been baptized had not put on Christ, and so were not connected with the promises which are yet to be fulfilled in him. Peter cites the salvation of Noah by means of the ark as a figure of the salvation that is through baptism. Only those who were in the ark were saved; therefore only those who have been baptized can be saved, for Peter speaking of the ark, says, "Wherein few, that is, eight souls were saved through water; which also after a true likeness doth now save you, even baptism." 1 Pet. iii. 20, 21. R. V. And it may be seen by the case of Cornelius that a man may be a devout worshiper of God, yet if he be not baptized, he is not an heir of salvation. Cornelius was a devout man, and one that feared God; but Peter was sent to expound to him the way of God more perfectly, and he and his household were baptized. And it is important to note that they were baptized after, and not before the Holy Spirit had fallen upon them. And in the present day, even, though a man may devoutly believe that he has received the Holy Spirit, this will not lessen the necessity for baptism.

Passing Events in the Light of Prophecy.

From Glad Tidings we cull the following:—"In reply to a question put by a member of the House of Commons, the Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs stated that his Majesty's government had received a communication from the Russian government proposing that direct relations should be established between Russia and Afghanistan with regard to frontier matters. The government had replied that it would be impossible for them to take into consideration any change in existing arrangements, or to frame proposals to be brought before the Amir, without some more precise explanation in regard to the method w[illegible] Russian government would desire to see adopted for the exchange of such communications between the frontier officials, the limitations to be placed on them, and the means of ensuring that those limitations would be observed."

The Daily Chronicle says: "Russia's traditional plan is to ask an inch and take an ell. How are we to ensure that the moderate language of the present request, once were it conceded, might not lead to active aggression on the part of the frontier officials concerned? We have not yet forgotten the sinister Penjdeh incident which led Mr. Gladstone to the verge of war. Our safest policy is to keep Russia at arm's length as long as possible. We do not see what we are to gain by any change in the status quo, and therefore we hope that the government will not make any without very strong reasons for their action.

The Times correspondent at Pekin describes a journey he has just made through Manchuria to inspect the Russian railway—1200 miles long—and he an eye witness of the marvelous energy that has in five years transformed Manchuria from a Chinese possession to a virtually Russian province. He saw thousands of solid buildings for permanent occupation being built simultaneously by armies of Chinese workmen along the entire length of the railway. Thriving towns filled with a civil and military Russian population are springing up along the track. Manchuria is absolutely dominated by Russia. All the officials are absolutely in her power. None can be appointed without her approval, and evacuation cannot alter a domination which is fast becoming as effective as that of Britain over the native states of India.

Conference Notes.

The pleasure of having a visit with Brother W. H. Wilson during and on after Conference, will not soon be forgotten by us. Brother Wilson is an old friend of our family, and we hope and pray that his visits among the people of God as he travels about may be full of profit and pleasure, both to himself and the brotherhood.

It was a surprise to the Indiana Conference to have Brother Neill and Sister Knowles visit us. Brother Neill has only recently moved from Cleveland to Salem, where he will now labor. If earnestness and zeal count for anything his sojourn with them will be a source of comfort and profit, as it would be hard to find a more zealous man. May he bring much fruit to the Master's table.

It was said "It would not seem like Conference without Brother Alexander," and sure enough, he came. Earnest, faithful, always cheerful, with a kind word for all. Truly it is good to have him with us.

A week before the Conference it did look as if the Plymouth Church was in poor shape to entertain people. Removals have cut our numbers, and it seemed sickness would hinder; but when visitors came and the warm and hearty joy at meeting thrilled each heart, places seemed to spring up, and while in point of visitors it was the largest gathering we ever had, the universal verdict is that had more been here they would have been cared for.

The friends will be interested to learn that Sister Barnhill is perhaps somewhat improved, and Brother Barnhill is no worse than during the Conference.

A Difficult Text.

"Please explain Luke vii. 28. 'Among those that are born of woman there is not a greater prophet than the Baptist; but he that is least in the kingdom of God is greater than he.'"

The difficulty in understanding this passage arises from a mistaken idea of the phrase, "The kingdom of God." If the kingdom of God is held to be the church of Christ on earth, it then follows that the least member in that church is greater than John the Baptist, and so greater than all the prophets. Enoch who walked with God three hundred years; Isaiah, whose lips were touched with holy fire; Samuel who called on the name of the Lord; David, who struck his harp of wonderous melody; Elijah, who sailed heavenward on his car of fire,—are all eclipsed by the weakest and most foolish saint who finds admittance to the church of Christ.

The simple fact is, the church is not the kingdom of God, and the kingdom of God is not the church. "It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God." Matt. xix. 24. Is that the church? What church is it, into which it is so hard for a rich man to enter? We have known of churches where it was hard to get a rich man out, but not so difficult to get them in!

"Except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of God." Jno. iii. 3. Is that the church? What church is it?

"Ye shall see Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and all the prophets in the kingdom of God." Luke xiii. 28. Is that the church? What church is it? We have heard of a community of Shakers who claimed that they were the kingdom of God. It was our privilege to halt in one of their villages where we were kindly entertained for the night. We looked all about, but we could see nothing of Abraham, Isaac, or Jacob, so we concluded that that could not be the kingdom of God, and decided to still wait and pray, "Thy kingdom come."

The fact is, the kingdom of God is an everlasting kingdom which shall never be removed, which the God of heaven shall set up; and this kingdom and dominion and greatness of the kingdom, under the whole heaven, shall stand forever, and shall be inhabited by an immortal multitude of the sons of God. Dan. ii. 44; vii. 14, 15, 22, 27.

John the Baptist, the preacher and forerunner of the Messiah, had his head cut off and presented to a dancing girl; but the least man in the kingdom of God where they shall die no more, will be greater than John the Baptist, and can defy Pilate and Herod, and death and hell. Made immortal by the resurrection power of Christ, he shall shine as the stars forever and ever, and shall be like the Savior and see him as he is; and so shall have privileges and blessings and honors which John the Baptist never had, and which kings and prophets waited for, but died without the sight. Luke x. 24; Heb. xi. 13, 39, 40; 1 Peter i. 10-12.

Whence once the seal of immortality is set upon the redeemed of God; when they shall be made unto our God kings and priests, and shall reign on the earth; when God's kingdom shall come and his will be done in earth as it is done in heaven; when the glory of the Lord shall be revealed and all flesh shall see it together,—then it shall be plainly seen that he that is least in the kingdom of heaven shall be greater than any child of Adam in this sinful, transient, mortal state.—H. L. Hastings.

Waiting for the Bridegroom.

Fiction has painted the picture of a maiden whose lover had left her for a voyage to the Holy Land, promising on his return to make her his beloved bride. Many told her that she would never see him again; but she believed his word, and evening by evening she went down to the lonely shore, and kindled there a beacon-light in sight of the roaring waves, to hail and welcome the returning ship which was to bring again her betrothed. And by that watch-fire she took her stand each night, praying to the winds to hasten on the sluggish sails that he who was everything to her might come.

Even so that blessed Lord, who has loved us unto death, has gone away to the mysterious Holy Land of heaven, promising on his return to make us his happy and eternal Bride. Some say that he has gone forever, and that here we shall never see him more. But his last word was, "Yea, I come quickly." And on the dark and misty beach eloping out into the eternal sea, each true believer stands by the love-lit fire, looking and waiting and praying and hoping for the fulfilment of his word, in nothing gladder than in his pledge and promise, and calling ever from the soul of sacred love: "Even so, come, Lord Jesus."

And some of these nights, while the world is busy with its gay frivolities and laughing at the maiden on the shore, a form shall rise over the surging waves, as once on Galilee, to vindicate forever all this watching and devotion, and bring to the faithful and constant heart a joy and glory and triumph which nevermore shall end.—Joseph A. Seiss, D. D.

A Christian.

Is there enough in the Christian religion to meet the demands for which humanity in all the vicissitudes of life stands in need? If this question can be answered in the affirmative, then the teaching of Christ will reveal the fact.

Christ said to his disciples, "Ye are the light of the world, a city that is set on a hill cannot be moved." This light means, "one who is conspicuous, noteworthy, model or an example." The admonition of Christ was, "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works and glorify their Father which is in heaven."

The Christian religion regulates our social, our spiritual, and all other relations of this life. The world says, love thy friend and hate thine enemy. The Christian religion says love thine enemy and do good to those who despitefully use you and persecute you. Do not kill, do not bear false witness, do not swear, lie, cheat or steal. When you give alms do not blow a trumpet, let not your left hand know what your right hand doeth. Judge no man, and whatsoever ye would that men should do to you do ye even so to them. If your enemy hunger feed him. If he is thirsty give him a glass of pure water to drink. Lay no stumbling blocks, to give him occasion to fall in his way. If he is destitute of this world's goods and you have them, and do not attend to his needs if you know about them, how can the true religion of Christ and the love of God, dwell in you?

The Christian has no need of secrecy in the performing of his good will to men. Jesus said to the high Priest, "I spake openly to the world; I even taught in the synagogues whither the Jews always resort; and in secret have I said nothing."

If there is any good for the general brotherhood of man, why should there be oath-bound societies to keep that good thing a secret; for he who spake, spake as never man spake, and did it openly. There has never been another society that has equalled the religion that Jesus of Nazareth taught. While perhaps some one would lay down their life for an especial friend, Jesus laid down his life for wicked men.

No societies or lodges have ever embodied in their rules the requirements that governs or commends to us the rules of the Christian religion. It makes good men, loving families, true companionship, honest business men, farmers and merchants; it has no defaulters, or sanctions the stealing of trust money; it commits no thefts, murders, or grants divorces; it is the one place where an infidel can [illegible] without a pistol in his hand or [illegible] or the fear of death staring him in the face before morning. Drunkenness, saloon and tobacco shops have no place in its Constitution or By-Laws. The Christian religion is open and free to all. "Whosoever will come let him take of the water of life freely."

The benefits of the Christian religion are a hundred-fold in this world, and in the ages to come life everlasting, and a home such as "eye hath not seen nor heard."

O the heavenly hills,
Where the blest shall tread,
In the years when the earth's made new;
By faith we gaze on the fields of God,
From the vales we are journeying through.

Obituary.

Died, near Sidney, Ind., Nov. 21, 1902, Claire, infant son of Rezin and Mary Clover Miller, aged four weeks.

The little one was the child of love, and is sadly mourned by us all.

The sore place will never be mended till Jesus comes, and death, sorrow and crying be no more. Then this dear bud of affection, will be given back to the mother's arms, nevermore to be taken away. Rejoice in hope of the resurrection dear ones.

AUNTIE WINCE.

Died, at Arkansas City, Kansas, on the evening of Nov. 14, 1902, Delbert, the 26 months old child of Chloe M. and Robert Sims, of New Kirk, Okla. The sudden death of little Delbert was a sad affair indeed. He with his mother and little sister Erma, came on the morning train from New Kirk, Okla., to Arkansas City, Friday morning, intending to take the evening train for Ozuda Springs, where they expected to visit for a few days before going on to Missouri, where they were going in search of a new location, as they had recently sold their home in Oklahoma.

While they were waiting at Arkansas City, Mrs. Sims and children went to Dr. Guin's office, on a matter of business, and while there the little boy, child-like, wandered into another room, he had seemingly been gone but a moment, but however it was long enough for him to climb up to a table and get a bottle containing morphine tablets, and had eaten all that were in the bottle. They were not aware of what he had done until he began to act strange, and the Doctor hastened into the next room when he found the empty bottle lying on the floor. Another physician was quickly summoned and for five hours all was done that could be done to save his life, but he died just five hours after he had eaten them. It was so sad, so sad, he was such a large, bright little fellow, and when he lay in his little white casket, with a spray of half open roses in his hand, and surrounded with sweet flowers, he looked like a little one simply tired with play and gone to sleep. So he is sweetly sleeping in his quiet resting place in the Ozuda Springs Cemetery, beside his little sister, until the last trumpet sounds, when he will awake.

Brother J. S. Miller conducted funeral services at the Methodist church, where a large gathering of sympathising friends met to pay their tribute of respect, and follow the little darling to his resting place. The mother of the child is the only daughter of Brother Rolando Chaplin of Wichita, Kansas.

We watched you as you faded,
Like a rose blown in the blast;
The storm it gathered o'er you,
You withered as it passed.

We tried so hard to keep you,
But God he knoweth best,
And darling he has let you sleep
In an unbroken rest.

Long long days we will miss you,
Miss you evening, noon and dawn,
But we will meet you little loved one
On the resurrection morn.

Farewell darling, till that morning,
Gathered round the great White Throne,
We will meet again and greet you,
In our Father's home, sweet home.

Dear Brothers and Sisters in Christ:

How my heart goes out to you this morning. I do not come to God doubting, fearing, but believing, knowing that he will bless you. The precious hymn,—"Showers of Blessing," has all the week been ringing in my ears. I have heard you sing it so many times; you will sing it at this meeting as you never sang it before, "Showers of blessing" will indeed be poured out upon you, for our God is a God of mercy and love, who keepeth truth forever. He has gone forth for the salvation of his people, and they may rejoice though the fig-tree blossoms not, though no fruit be in the vines, though the labor of the [illegible] fail, and the [illegible] flock be cut off from the [illegible] herd be in the stalls, for he is the strength and the God of their salvation. "Bought with a price," and "not their own," they may always joy in him, and know that he is indeed with them and will perform all that he has promised. Bow reverently trustingly before him. Let not your hearts be troubled. The Master cometh soon. Be patient, be faithful a little longer, comforting, exhorting one another, supporting the weak, teaching the ignorant. I would I could be with you, but the dear God whom we serve, has given to me today, to "weep, with one who weeps" over the corpse of her young husband, and to comfort another who is momentarily expecting the death of her infant son. I shall be with you in Spirit, and I know that our God will be there, for he "is nigh to all that call upon him in truth." In his hands I leave you, both young and old.

Poetry.

The End is Near.

Clouds of darkness gathering o'er us,
Awful tidings with them bear;
Scenes of misery spread before us—
Dearth and pestilence and war;
All in one loud, piercing chorus,
Tell us that the end is near.

Hearts of men within them failing
For the coming woes they fear;
All their efforts unavailing—
No propitious signs appear;
Sin increasing, crime prevailing,
Tell us that the end is near.

Selfishness in all abounding;
Gold the idol everywhere,
Worshiped by a host confounding,
Gold for all that's good or fair;
Crowds the mammon God surrounding
Tell us that the end is near.

Fervent godliness increasing;
Power denied and forms held dear;
Christ and fashion conversing,
Forming now the character;
Rites so popular and pleasing
Tell us that the end is near.

Lawlessness, no vestly spreading,
Void of reverence, awe or fear;
Sacred things beneath it treading,
Stamped with God's own signature—
Never once his vengeance dreading—
Tell us that the end is near.

Saints of God all evil hating,
Faithful to the name they bear,
For their coming Savior waiting,
To be caught up in the air;
Hence their rest and blessing dating,
Tell us that the end is near.

Sinner, wouldst thou in the glory
Of that "cloudless morning" shine?
Wouldst thou have this hope before thee,
Wear the crown saints then will wear?
Oh, believe redemption's story;
Look to Christ. The end is near.

Let not earth thy thoughts engrossing,
Christ thee of that portion fair!
Look to Christ, on him reposing
Thou shalt happy be, nor fear;
Sinner, hasten the day is closing;
Look to Christ the end is near.

Gospel of the Kingdom of God Endangered in Scotland.

"We ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard lest at any time we should let them slip." Hebrews.

"With one mind striving together for the faith of the gospel." Paul.

Some readers of THE RESTITUTION will remember that some four or five years ago certain articles which had appeared in the Messenger (Glasgow) under review by the present writer, and that certain queries arising out of said Review (which had been proposed in private letters to the writer) were inserted with replies in THE RESTITUTION. The drift of both articles and queries seemed to be to minimize the "gospel of the kingdom" in its vital character as a fundamental element of saving faith.

There still seems to be need for "earnest contending" on the same lines, as will appear from an article in the Messenger for September of this present year entitled "An anxious question and what it implied—Wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?" This article of four pages is intended to buttress and supplement what the same writer (G. G. M.) had advanced in one of the articles already named. This writer and the author of the queries mentioned had evidently been active promoters of certain resolutions adopted by the church in Edinburgh as far back as 1894, as also of a second edition of the Resolutions of even a more lax character this year (1902) but which have failed as yet in securing adoption. Of all this more anon.

To place this matter fairly before the readers it may be well, with the Editor's permission, to recall one or two of the more material points of the articles and queries referred to, before giving extracts from the Resolutions of the church in Edinburgh.

It may be mentioned here for the information of the readers in America that the church in Edinburgh was formed in 1868. It was founded on principles identical with those in the United States in connection with THE RESTITUTION. Its numbers increased to upwards of a hundred, and it maintained from the outset annual aggregate gatherings of brethren from various parts of Scotland, and sometimes even from England. A few sentences culled from various sources will show its close connection with the "gospel of the kingdom."

A few weeks before its formation a letter written by a brother to a free communion meeting in the town shows the basis then proposed, as follows:—"So far as we can judge, a restoration of the apostolic or primitive Christian doctrine and practice could only be properly effected by an imitation of them in their imitable points. This necessitates, among other things the enforcement of that old adage, "They that gladly received the apostle's Word were baptized." Also that the Apostle's word is defined as "the gospel of the kingdom of God."

A sentence or two may be quoted from a letter of date Edinburgh, 18th of March, 1863, which was addressed to the editor of the Herald of the Kingdom....."The truth is gaining ground here gradually, as an illustration of which I may mention that a congregation is now in course of being formed on the principles historically set forth in the Acts of Apostles in such language as, 'They that gladly received his word were baptized, interpreting the word by Peter's speech in the light of his commission and the teaching of Jesus and the first preachers, as the Word of the kingdom (Matt. xiii. 19) as the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ,' which Philip gospelized or announced as glad tidings. Acts viii. 12. See Greek. We are made up mainly from three sources—first, wandering believers of the kingdom's gospel; second, some who have left the meeting in South Bridge Hall (the 'Reformation;' Third, the majority of a meeting in High Street, for some years conducted on what are called free communion principles, and who have for a considerable time believed and preached the gospel of the kingdom, and have been baptized. The number in all may be nearly thirty." Herald of the Kingdom, Sep. 1853.

A few extracts from an article entitled "The things most surely believed amongst us" will show in more detail how the church in Edinburgh stood in 1864. This formed the basis of two public lectures given in the church's place of meeting by one of the members:—

The.....Almighty Creator shall establish a kingdom upon earth which shall destroy and supersede all other kingdoms.....

This.....shall be entrusted to Jesus of Nazareth.....

The throne.....shall be established on Mount Zion, and the city of Jerusalem shall be the metropolis of the world.

The twelve tribes of Israel.....shall be gathered.....and placed by God in the territory promised to Abraham and made chief nation.....

The throne.....[illegible] throne of David (Luke i. 30-32).

In consequence of this being anointed .....Jesus is termed the Messiah.

The race of man is mortal, and..... under the sentence of death; and God .....has appointed that those alone who believe in his Son as the Christ, the Son of the living God, shall have everlasting life.

God requires of those that thus believe in his Son that they be immersed in water into his name.

That all who believe in Jesus as Lord and Christ.....are joint heirs with the Messiah of his eternal kingdom and glory.

That the resurrection and glorification of the saints and the establishment of the kingdom of God takes place at the second coming of Christ.

That these declarations regarding the kingdom of God and Jesus the Christ constitute the gospel.....announced to Abraham and preached by the Apostles among all nations to be believed for salvation.

So far as known to the writer of this, these extracts indicate the position maintained by the church in Edinburgh down to the date of the Resolutions referred to, namely, 1864.

The articles and queries mentioned above will now be briefly noticed.

In Messenger for Oct. 1896 an article by a brother of upwards of forty years standing appeared with the heading, "What did the personal converts of Jesus believe?" This was reviewed in RESTITUTION for Jan. 20, 1897. Referring to the "primitive faith" the author said, John "dwelt more" on the coming one as the sin-bearer as when he said, 'Behold the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world.'" The reviewer remarked "This was a gross perversion of fact.' John's casual statement was only made on two occasions, whereas his public proclamation of the "gospel of the kingdom" was made "in Jerusalem and in all Judea and in all the region round about Jordan." He thus fulfilled truly his office as the forerunner of our Lord who also preached the same gospel. Again, the author said, "If perfect accuracy of belief in the true realization of the Messiahship is affirmed to be quite vital to discipleship, it is difficult to see how they (the apostles and first disciples) possessed it." The reply was, "This difficulty can only have a semblance of reality through a gratuitous importing into the definition of the Messiahship a complex idea maintained in the article, but utterly foreign to the divine record."

Another writer in Messenger for April 1897 in article entitled, "Our true Model of Belief," says, "We (the church) have nowhere declared, and God forbid that we should anywhere declare, that any truth is essential to salvation.....I find much in the Bible .....but little or nothing as to the exact amount of truth the knowledge of which is requisite for admission" (into the kingdom.) This writer admits that a "little" is said on this vital subject. But surely that "little" must be of supreme importance. What is "requisite" is the gospel preached by Christ and his Apostles as recorded in Matt. xxviii.; xxiv. 14; Mark xvi. 15, 16, etc. as also 1 Cor. xv. 1-4. All this may be called "little or nothing," but is it not worth volumes to the human race if they only knew and understood it.'

The former writer (G. G. M.), by way of supplementing his former statements on "What did the personal converts of Jesus believe?" contributed to the Messenger (Sept. 1897) a long article of seven pages, entitled "How did the Lord Jesus view his Messiahship? One of the statements was "Their (the Apostles') minds had to be schooled to relinquish the immediate gratification of a fondly cherished dream, and to patiently acquire the full spiritual perception of a Christ and kingdom not of earth-born conception."..... There is abundant evidence to show that he [our Lord] was well aware of his terrible task to preach a Christ and kingdom to a large extent neither looked for nor wanted" [of this "abundant evidence" none was offered]. The review had the remark "If the spiritual kingdom of popular theology be not here meant, the language seems well fitted to give expression to it, and in the absence of any explanation, to mislead." The Review of this article occupied three numbers of THE RESTITUTION, namely, Jan. 20, 1898; May 18, 1898; May 25, 1898.

So far as I am aware these articles published in the Messenger had not been there subjected to any adverse criticism of a corrective character, either by the Editor or by any contributor. It has been known for years that as regards the belief of the "gospel of the kingdom" as a necessary antecedent to baptism the church in Sanchiehall street Glasgow, of which the Editor of the Messenger is a member, does not insist.

Conference Report.

Pursuant to the call, the first quarterly Conference of the Church of God in the state of Indiana, met at Plymouth, Nov. 13-16.

The meeting was opened with a sermon by A. H. Zilmer,—subject, "The Churches of God in Christ Jesus."

No meeting had been announced for Friday during the day, but owing to the number present from a distance, they met at 2:30 p. m. and listened to a discourse by W. H. Wilson on the "Coming changes in the governments of the world."

Friday night at 7:00 the social was led by A. H. Zilmer, after which D. T. Halstead was to have spoken, but as he was absent on account of sickness, F. L. Austin spoke on the subject of Righteousness.

Saturday morning at 9:30 business meeting convened with President A. H. Zilmer in the chair. Meeting was opened by reading, prayer and singing. Minutes of last meeting read and approved.

The committee on Ways and Means reported, and after discussion the report was referred back to them to be amended, and brought up at afternoon meeting.

It was moved and carried that a Minister's Certificate be granted to W. H. Wilson of Chicago, Ill.

At 11:00 o'clock J. S. Hatch spoke on "In heaven—from heaven." At the close of this meeting an invitation was given and one sister came forward for baptism.

At 2:00 in the afternoon business meeting was again called. Committee on Ways and Means again made report, which was adopted, and is as follows:

WHEREAS: Knowing that by the co-operation of the Churches wider dissemination can be given to the gospel, and better results made to follow such united effort: Therefore be it

Resolved, That it shall be the duty of each minister of the gospel belonging to the Conference, at his last meeting with each church prior to the annual Conference, to make an appeal to said church for means to carry forward the work of evangelizing. That it shall be his duty to deliver a discourse setting forth the utility of co-operation on the part of the churches and showing that the love that moved God to give his Son as a ransom for sinners, places every member of the Christ's body under obligation to aid by his means the proclamation of this message of love; and further, that each minister shall be required by the Conference at its annual session, to make report of his faithfulness or failure to carry out the foregoing resolution.

Resolved, That each minister caring for and preaching to one or more of the churches shall remind each of these of their obligation to choose a delegate or delegates to each Conference, and especially to the annual Conference, and insist on this being done in his presence at each last visit prior to the Conference to which they are to be sent.

WHEREAS: Feeling the need of more funds in addition to the amount in the hands of the Conference treasurer, and with the view of putting an efficient evangelist in the field to work up to the time when Brother Zilmer, our regular evangelist's contract with certain churches expires, leaving him free to enter on the work, therefore be it recommended, that each church proceed at the earliest possible date to chose a solicitor, whose duty it shall be to appeal to each individual member for money, sending amounts thus raised direct to the Conference Secretary.

Signed J. L. Wince, H. F. Cordill, J. F. Wagoner, R. C. Railsback.

A Minister's Certificate was granted to James L. Muncrief, of Bear, Arkansas.

At 2:30 it being not time for the next regular appointed meeting, the time was well spent in listening to P. Neill on the subject of Peace.

At 3:00 J. L. Wince spoke on the subject "Ye are bought with a price."

At 7:00 W. H. Wilson gave a Bible Reading on the subject "A good foundation," followed by a sermon by J. F. Wagoner, on "Faith as related to the gospel."

At 9:30 Sunday morning R. C. Railsback led a social meeting, which was followed by a sermon on "The signs of the times," by F. L. Austin.

At 2:30 in the afternoon W. H. Wilson spoke on "The blessed hope," and then came the Communion service by J. L. Wince.

At 7:00 o'clock a social meeting led by W. Tuttle, followed by a sermon by A. H. Zilmer on "The abrogation of the Mosaic covenant."

These meetings were well attended, a goodly number being present at the beginning, and others arrived on nearly every train thereafter. The roll call of the churches Saturday morning showed the following to be represented by delegates, viz: Argos, Bracken, Burr Oak, Inwood, North Salem, Plymouth, South Bend and Scircleville. There were also a number of isolated ones and others came, also members from other churches.

Besides those from our own state we had the pleasure of having with us W. H. Wilson and daughter Jessie and G. M. Alexander of Chicago, Ill., and P. Neill and Miss Mary E. Knowles of Salem, Ohio. The Church at Cleveland sent greetings to our Conference, and report that they are earnestly contending for the faith.

The subjects discussed during the Conference were all well and ably handled, and it was surely a feast of good things. Many expressed themselves as to the good meetings and the good will among the people.

On Saturday afternoon we had the pleasure of witnessing the baptism of Sister Barnes. May she go on her way rejoicing, and be faithful unto the end. The people of Plymouth certainly did their part well in entertaining the visitors, and we feel truly thankful for the kind care that we received at their hands.

May we all be faithful and meet in that blessed Kingdom when Christ comes to claim his own.

The Prize of the High Calling.

We are all aiming for the kingdom of God; the kingdom with its joyful associations, and its long train of told and untold glories, is the object and aim of us all. In the kingdom the saints are to be rewarded according to their works; he who in this life has sown bountifully will reap bountifully. There is to be a great distribution of prizes, and there is no gradation of ranks. In the present life men enjoy what they call the "sweets of office;" in the world to come they shall also be thus blessed. The posts of honor will be occupied by those who have distinguished themselves by zeal and industry in the cause of Christ.

In the present kingdoms of men there are posts of honor and emolument, but these are not always occupied by the most deserving. It often happens in the kingdom of men that he who sows bountifully reaps sparingly, while he who sows sparingly reaps bountifully. History records innumerable instances of this kind; but not so in the kingdom of God. He who searcheth the hearts and trieth the reins of the children of men will send his Son, and "make him of quick understanding. He will not judge after the sight of his eyes, neither reprove after the hearing of his ears, but with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and reprove with equity for the meek of the earth; righteousness shall be the girdle of his loins and faithfulness the girdle of his reins."

Whither shall we turn among the kingdoms of men to meet with righteousness and faithfulness like this? "Put not your trust in princes," is the solemn warning which all men would do well to observe. Alas! how many who have neglected to observe this injunction have been left in old age to the winter of adversity as their only compensation for long years of service. And if favor has been shown, how fickle and uncertain it is.

We have a noticeable instance of this in the reign of one of the kings of England, in the person of Cardinal Wolsey, a man who had risen by his services to a state of affluence and splendor surpassing royalty itself. At length, however, a change of fortune overtook him, the tide of royal favor receded, the old man was expelled from his paradise. And as he brooded over his fall, and called to mind the long life of service which he had consecrated to the king, he gave expression to those memorable words—"If I had served my God as diligently as I have served my king, he would not have cast me off in my old age." We have another instance in the fate of Earl Stafford, a man of great ability in the court of Charles the First. That ability he exercised in endeavoring to establish absolute power for the king. But that perfidious monarch, getting tired of him, frowned upon him, and at last signed his death warrant. "Put not your trust in princes," were the dying words of the fallen minister.

It would be easy to multiply such instances. We only add one—"John Milton, the poet, the statesman, the philosopher, the glory of English literature, the champion and martyr of English liberty—what was the end of this man? He survived his health and his sight, the comforts of his home, and the prosperity of his party; neglected, old, poor, sightless, and disgraced, he retired to a hovel to die." What a return for a long life of valuable service in his country's cause, and in the cause of humanity! How profitless to exhaust the energies of a valuable life on worldly objects! If Milton had sown as bountifully in the cause of Christ as he did in the cause of men, what a bountiful harvest might he have reaped in the kingdom of God. In this life, it is true, he might have suffered all the evils enumerated, but only to be crowned with the riches, and glory, and honor, of the kingdom of God.

"God is not unrighteous to forget your work and labor of love which ye have shown toward his name, in that ye have ministered to the saints, and do minister." Heb. vi. 10. What a happy and encouraging thought is this. Men may forget your work and labor of love, and men do forget; but God will not. Brethren, if we have confidence in our God, we may unreservedly throw ourselves away in his service, we may exhaust our energies, our substance, our all, and be happy in the thought that every service rendered is carefully entered to our account. "Behold, I come quickly, and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be." Rev. xxi. 12.

I have often thought that it is not to be wondered at that men labor so zealously for the things that perish to the neglect of things imperishable. What is there in popular theology to make it otherwise? where are its charms? It has none; it in no way meets the wants or aspirations of humanity; it lacks motive power.

The late Dr. Chalmers very eloquently expresses himself upon this point—"The common imagination that we have of paradise on the other side of death is that of a lofty aerial region, where the inmates float in ether, or are mysteriously suspended upon nothing; where all the warm and sensible accompaniments which give such an expression of strength, and coloring to our present habitation are attenuated into a sort of spiritual element that is meagre and imperceptible, and utterly uninviting; where every vestige of immateriality is done away, and nothing left but certain unearthly scenes that have no power of allurement, and certain unearthly ecstasies with which it is felt impossible to sympathize." In the same strain an eminent preacher discourses to the poor—"O my friends, what a glorious exchange would heaven be for these—to fly through regions unconfined as air, to bask in the sunshine of eternal bliss, and to carol over endless hymns of praise." Now, with all the eloquence of this passage, we entirely fail to see anything very inviting in all this. To minds of a particular cast it might be, but certainly not to the generality of men.

Sir David Brewster and other scientific men have imagined that the chief pleasure of heaven would consist in the revelation of all the hidden mysteries of nature. If so, it might be a heaven for them, but it would thus be no heaven for other people, for, while these can find exquisite pleasure in such studies even at mid-night, mankind at large have fallen fast asleep. Preach this as gospel to the poor, and what power has it to charm them? Nay, preach it to the wealthy savans, and how many of them would it allure?

Mr. Spurgeon proposes to himself a tour through the length and breadth of heaven spending a century with each of the angelic host, as a suitable occupation for the ages of eternity, while Professor Edwards says, that in heaven we shall derive pleasure from witnessing the agonies and miseries of the damned.

What a labyrinth of mist and uncertainty there is in all this! What vagaries, what speculations! Each one making a heaven for himself. And it must be so, when the Book of God is silent. But let us now turn from fiction to fact; let us look at the kingdom, and what a fascination there is here! all the higher and nobler wants of our nature. All nations, kindreds, people, and tongues, are longing after immortality; the kingdom meets their wants and supplies their craving—"I give unto my sheep eternal life." All men desire riches. What dangers do men brave by sea and land in order to become rich. The kingdom meets the want—"The wealth of the sinner is laid up for the just." What shall we say about fame, power, honor, or dignity. Where and how are these to be had in this life, and if they are, how unreliable are they; but the kingdom meets the wants of each and all of them. "Thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

All the objects which to men are so dear, all the good which they desire to have, and for which they seek, the kingdom crowns with fullfruition. All men are ambitious more or less; and the Word holds out every encouragement to the ambitious. It offers high prizes in the kingdom for high services here. Let our ambition then be rightly divided. Not ambitious to lay up treasures upon earth, but to lay up treasures in heaven, where moth and rust do not corrupt; and where thieves break not through to steal. To obtain a prize, the high prize, brethren, let us labor with all our powers of body, soul, and spirit; let us throw into the service of Christ all that we have and are, let us spend and be spent for him; counting all things but dross that we may win Christ and be found in him. Mark with what zeal the man of the world labors to obtain a corruptible crown, and even less than that. Self-denial and self-sacrifice are his companions through life. He wears himself out to obtain the prize, and what is its worth when obtained? what is its value? Look at the highest post of honor which it is possible for a subject of this realm to attain to.' Is it worth thirty years of labor?

What labor in vain, what spending of strength for nought, what misdirected zeal, what worthless ambition! Brethren, we have made a wiser choice; wisdom has been our choice; and "happy is the man that findeth wisdom; and the man that getteth understanding; for the merchandise of it is better than the merchandise of silver, and the gain thereof than fine gold. She is more precious than rubies; and all the things that are to be desired are not to be compared to her. Length of days is in her right hand, and in her left hand riches and honor." Crowns and coronets, what are they when compared with the crown of everlasting life!

Brethren may these thoughts move us to increased zeal. May we so run that we may obtain the prize.—J. Wallis in Messenger of the Churches.

Is it Right to Pray to Jesus Christ?

An intelligent friend, a leading member of a prominent orthodox church, is tried because it is a habit in his church to pray to Jesus Christ. He said to the writer, "We have no more right to pray to Jesus Christ than to the Virgin Mary." Some among our people are troubled on the same subject. It is hoped that the following texts will help such.

The wise men worshipped him. Mat. ii. 2, 11.

Then came a leper and worhipped him. Matt. viii. 2; Mark i. 40; Luke v. 12.

A certain ruler worshipped him. Matt. ix. 18; Mark v. 12; Luke viii. 41.

Then they (his disciples) that were in the ship came and worshipped him. Matt. xiv. 33.

Then came she (a Canaanitish woman) and worshipped him. Matt. xv. 25.

The mother of James and John worshipped him. Matt. xx. 20.

The blind man restored to sight, said, Lord, I believe, and he worshipped him. John ix. 33.

They (the women going to tell his disciples) came and held him by the feet and worshipped him. Matt. xxviii. 9.

And when they (the eleven disciples) saw him, they worshipped him. Matt. xxviii. 17.

After Jesus was carried up into heaven, his disciples worshipped him. Luke xxiv. 52.

Jesus did not forbid worshipping him. As God said, Let all the angels of God worship him. Heb. i. 6. It is not idolatry to worship Jesus, but seems very becoming in us who are redeemed by his blood, and dependent on him for salvation.

After such a life, such a death, such a resurrection as his, and since he is gone into heaven, and is on the right hand of God, angels and authorities and powers being made subject unto him, (1 Pet. iii. 22,) it must be that God is pleased that we should reverence his Son.

We need not try to adjust the relative diguity of the Father and the Son, nor to decide just what we should ask either for. They are one in interest though two in person. Of course we shall be safe in honoring the Father as Jesus honored him, and in praying to the Son, as in the examples cited. We respect the Son's "all power," as given him by his Father, and respect him for his earnest and perfect obedience to his Father. And we glorify God that he so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth into him may not perish, but have eternal life. But this is a big field. These are only hints.

O. R. L. CROZIER.

Editor Restitution:

It has been some time since I have written for the paper. I do not hear the "Blessed Hope," preached very often. I am the only one here that believes it. Brothers and Sisters, let us all be obedient to God; for he is watching us and will reward us for it. May we all hold out faithful and not turn off our way. May we become enlightened more and more in the true faith. In Prov. x. 30, 31, we read, "The righteous shall never be removed; but the wicked shall not inhabit the earth. The mouth of the just bringeth forth wisdom; but the froward tongue shall be cut out." Let us all be ready and prove faithful to the end is my prayer.

Yours in hope of eternal life.

MRS. LUTISHIE MITCHELL.

Editor Restitution:

As I am not able to write much will simply say to the brotherhood, Let brotherly love continue. We are still looking for our Lord Jesus from heaven, as all the indications proclaim his coming very near.

Yours truly, in the faith, hope and love.

JOHN W. & SUSAN SIBBLE.

Brother Underwood:

I have been wanting to write you for some time, but have been quite sick for five weeks. I certainly enjoy the many good things in the grand, old RESTITUTION, and I want to see if I cant get a few subscribers. I wish I was able to meet the calls from different parts of the country, wanting me to preach the glad tidings concerning the kingdom of our Lord. We have sown the seed and many hundreds have heard, and we hope in the great harvest that some sheaves will be gathered. Let us have our lamps trimmed and burning, and may God bless THE RESTITUTION, and all of its co-workers. I desire an interest in all your prayers.

S. R. CLINKENBEARD.

Bearing the Cross.

God gives everybody, I think, a cross when he enters upon a Christian life. When it comes into his hands, what is it? It is the rude oak, four square, full of splinters and slivers, and rudely tacked together. I see some men carrying their cross just as rude as it was at the first. Others, I perceive, begin to wind about it, faith and hope and patience. And at last their cross has been so covered with holy affections, that it does not seem any more to be a cross. They carry it so easily, and are so much more strengthened than burdened by it, that men almost forget that it is a cross by the triumph with which they carry it. Carry your cross in such a way that there shall be victory in it. —Henry Ward Beecher.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

TO OUR PATRONS.

We want more readers for THE RESTITUTION. We want ONE THOUSAND new names on our list before January 1st, 1903, and can have them if you will help us.

In every Church of our faith in the land there are members who do not take our paper, who would be benefited by reading it.

There are those who are isolated by circumstances from any Church fellowship, who would be kept firmer in the faith, helped and strengthened for the battles of life if they had THE RESTITUTION each week.

There are others interested in the truths we hold, who would often have their attention called to the principles of our faith by reading our paper. When no preacher can be heard, when you cannot talk to them, THE RESTITUTION in their homes would be ever a present visitor—a missionary that will do more than any other one thing to keep the interest alive.

There are those whom we wish were interested in the Bible and what it promises. Many of this class of persons have never had the opportunity, or have neglected the matter when it was before them.

You are surely known to people such as are mentioned, and you are surely interested in them. We are satisfied you are not unmindful of their eternal well-being. How much do you care for these people? Will you join with us in getting the gospel before them, and keeping it there a year? We have this to offer to you for consideration.

We will send THE RESTITUTION one year to NEW Subscribers for $1.00. We will start them as soon as received and give credit to the end of 1903.

With a little persistent effort in presenting the paper to those you know who are not taking it, you can induce them to try it for $1.00. If you want some sample papers we will gladly supply them to you, and our list can be increased by 1000 names by Jan. 1st. It can be done easily if you will act on this suggestion, and get those near you interested. If each reader would get a new name our list would be doubled at once.

It would seem as if every reader of THE RESTITUTION could exert influence enough to get one more new name if the effort was made. Will you try it? If the first person you suggest it to does not respond, do not be discouraged, but try some one else. Perhaps the one you least expect will answer quickest.

Did you ever stop to figure up how many words are contained in our paper in a year? You will be surprised at the number of sermons it contains. There is variety too. There is doctrine and the practical, encouragement and cheer, and comfort for the distressed. Each phase of teaching would make several good sized books during the year. You can do no work that yields as large a return for the money expended as by sending THE RESTITUTION to a friend for a year.

Will you not start right away and send one name, and next week when that person gets his paper, some one else will hear of it, and you can send another subscriber.

Poetry.

The Supreme Test.

There are friends who come in, when black sorrow's your guest,
To weep with you over your dead;
Friends who seem, in the midst of your heart-ache's unrest,
To know just what ought to be said.
But the prince of them all, when grim Trouble stalks by,
And your heart can do nothing but bleed,
Is the fellow who comes when there's no one else nigh
And whispers, "How much do you need?"

Father, tenderly bless all the friends I have known
Who came in the depths of my woe,
Just to stand by my side when I felt so alone,
That I might their sympathy know.
Oh, I love every one for each hand clasp and tear,
And aye, I shall wish them God speed!
But a crown for one who, when none else was near,
Said softly, "How much do you need?"

The Authorship of the Bible.

The Bible exists, but now the enquiry arises, what was the cause which produced that effect? Whatever it may be, the cause and effect must harmonize. If the cause was a perfect one, the effect will be just the same. If the cause was evil, the effect will be also.

Were good men the cause, if not, can it be the work of evil men; and if neither of these can it be traced to divine origin?

It certainly was not the work of BAD men. Why? because they would have made it to suit their inclinations and passions. They would not be likely to severely denounce evil ways, which they so prefer to practice and love, such as is found in the Bible. They would not be so very jealous for the honor and glory of God, and exalt purity, truth, piety and goodness, which is so characteristic of the teachings of the Holy Scriptures. Neither could we imagine that it would be at all likely that they would sacrifice their worldly interests, prospects and lives in the interests of the Bible, when they were considered they were producing something which was not what it claimed to be, which would be the fact, if they were producing a fraud. Bad men do not labor to produce the greatest possible good, and then endure persecution and even death to sustain that which they were conscious was a fraud.

Neither were good men the cause of the effect we call the Bible. The writers of the Bible do not claim to be its author. They were merely the channel through whom the message came. They were no more its author than is a telegraph operator the author of the message he receives.

This is what they claim: "Holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." "The Word of the Lord came unto me saying." "Thus saith the Lord." "I certify you brethren, that the gospel which was preached of me is not after man."

Now, if the message of those writers was not indited by the Holy Spirit as they claim, then they were not good men, but were practicing a stupendous fraud. In that case both the cause and effect would be fraudulent, and no good could possibly follow such a cause.

NOW, WHAT IS THE MAKE-UP OF THE BIBLE?

We find it to be a library of sixty-six books, some forty different people were chosen to receive the message, as indited by the Holy Spirit. They frequently prefaced their messages with this introduction: "Thus saith the Lord," which signifies that the message was not of their own volition. If they spoke falsely, they could not be good men. These men were chosen at different times, stretching over a period of some fifteen hundred years between the first and last choice, and many of these people lived in different parts of the world, so a charge of collusion or a pre-arranged plan agreed upon by themselves could not be true. They could not possibly have known who were going to be their successors in receiving God's message, nor what the message to them would be. Now when these sixty-six books were completed, and bound together as one volume, what do we find? We find as complete a harmony running through the whole as though they were the product of one man, at one time.

We have several connected lines commencing in the first book and running through to the last. Take for instance the various titles of the Christ. Commencing in Genesis we have the Seed of the woman, the Seed of Abraham, the Seed of David, the Shiloh, the Rock, the Branch, the Son of David, Emmanuel, King of kings, the Man of Sorrows, Prince of Peace, Bread of Life, King of Israel, Corner Stone, the Door, the Faithful Witness, High Priest, Good Shepherd, King of the Jews, Lamb of God, Law Giver, the Light, Lion of the Tribe of Judah, Lord of glory, Morning Star, Nazarene, Our Passover, Prince of Life, Mediator, Redeemer, Root of David.

Another line is the covenants of promise. In Genesis we have the covenant with Abraham. In Exodus the covenants to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, also in Chronicles, Deuteronomy, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Psalms, Micah, the Gospels, Acts, Romans, Galatians, Hebrews, Ephesians, etc. If this matter had not been controlled by one Master Mind, how could men living in different parts of the world, and at different times have harmonized completely with regard to these covenants of promise? They tell the same story, have the same promises, hold out the same hope, and do not conflict with each other in one single instance with regard to these promises.

Suppose forty uninspired men under the same circumstance, living at different times, and in different parts of the world, should undertake to write upon religious topics, and at the end of 1600 years should pile them one upon another and bind them in one volume like the Bible, what a senseless jargon we would have?

To show the harmony which exists in the Bible just make a comparison between the first three chapters in Genesis, and the last three in the book of Revelation. On this point I quote from Hastings as follows: "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth." At the end of the Bible we find a new world: "I saw a new heaven and a new earth; for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away." At the beginning we find Satan entering, to deceive and destroy; at the end we find Satan cast out, "that he should deceive the nations no more." At the beginning we find sin, and pain and sorrow, and sighing and death, find entrance to the world; at the end there shall be no more pain, nor sorrow nor sighing, and no more death. At the beginning the earth, for man's transgressions, is cursed; at the end, "there shall be no more curse: for the throne of God and the Lamb shall be in it." At the beginning we find the tree of life in paradise, from which the sinner is shut away by a flaming sword, lest he eat and live forever; at the end, we find the tree of life again "in the midst of the paradise of God," and the blessed and blood washed ones have a right to the tree of life, and "enter in through the gates into the city." At the beginning man was brought beneath the dominion of death and the grave; at the end, "the dead, small and great, stand before God," the sea gives up its dead, and death and hell are destroyed in the lake of fire. At the beginning the first Adam lost his dominion over earth, and was driven out of the garden of Eden in shame and sorrow; at the end we find the second Adam victorious over sin and death, and enthroned as King and Lord of all, and reigning in triumph and glory forever."

Does not this look as though one Master Mind controlled the subject matter of the entire Volume of Inspiration. In the beginning a specific plan is revealed, at the end we have the glorious consummation of that plan.

The Old and New Testaments are one compact whole. The Old Testament is sifted through the New, and entangled with it like a web. There is said to be eight hundred and thirty-two references and quotations in the New Testament from the Old.

Again, there are three hundred and fifty prophecies in the Old Testament concerning Christ that receive their fulfillment in the New. It is not possible that prophecies made in the Old Testament, and fulfilled in the New, could be of human origin, seeing many of them were made hundreds of years in advance of their fulfillment. As for example, Isaiah predicted 750 years in advance, the birth of the Son of God. Besides many of these prophecies have so many details attached to them, which completely removes them from the law of chance.

Another, and important evidence confirming the New Testament is the testimony of enemies as to New Testament facts, and the conduct of early believers.

The Roman historian Tacitus, who lived very close to the time of the rise of Christianity. Although he was an enemy to the cause of Christ, yet he calls attention to the central facts of the New Testament. In the fifteenth book of his Annals, writing the history of Nero, speaking of the Christians and their Lord and Master, Jesus the Christ, A. D. 64, he says: "The author or originator of that (sect or) name was Christus, who in the reign of Tiberius, was put to death by the procurator Pontius Pilate. This pestilent superstition though checked for awhile, broke out afresh, not only in Judea, where the evil first originated, but even in the city of Rome."

It is well known that the historian Gibbon, was an opponent of the Bible, and consequently would say as little as possible in its favor. Yet with regard to this passage from Tacitus, he says: "The most skeptical criticism is obliged to respect the truth of this extraordinary fact, (the persecution of the Christians under Nero), and the integrity of this celebrated passage of Tacitus."

The historian Lucian bears a similar testimony to that of Tacitus, he says, speaking of Pesegrinus, who was then imprisoned as a Christian: "There came Christians, from many cities of Asia to relieve, encourage, and comfort him. For it is incredible what expedition they use when any of their friends are known to be in trouble: they spare nothing on such occasions. For these poor creatures are firmly persuaded that they shall one day enjoy immortal life; therefore they despise death, and even surrender themselves to suffering and punishment. And besides, their first lawgiver has taught them that they are all brethren, when once they have turned and renounced the gods of the Greeks, and worship that Master of theirs who was crucified, and engage to live according to his laws, they have a sovereign contempt for all things of this world, looking upon them as common, and trusting one another with them."

Do not we like them profess to believe that we "shall one day enjoy immortal life?" But do we have the same tender care, and love for our brethren? are we trustful to one another? do we have the same "sovereign contempt" for worldly things? Such conduct is an evidence of a real live faith.

W. H. WILSON.

The Wisdom of Saloomoon. Chap. 13.

1. For inutile have all men been by nature, in whom there was present ignorance of God, and who from the good things seen have not been strong enough to perceive the Being, nor by heeding the works have recognized the workers.

2. But whether it be fire or wind or swift air or a circle of stars or violent water or light-bearers of the heavens, chief-deputies of a cosmos, have supposed them to be gods.

3. If delighted with their harmonic beauty they inferred them to be gods, they should have comprehended that the sole Lord of them was by so much better than they were; For he as the generic-author of beauty had created them.

4. And if astounded at force (dunamis) and energy (energeia) they should have apprehended therefrom how much more forceful (able) was the One who fitted them up.

5. For the generic-worker of these is brought into view analogously by the greatness of the harmonic beauty of created things.

6. But nevertheless there is little blame for these; for they are quickly led astray while seeking and desiring to find God.

7. For environed with his works they search them through, and are persuaded by their sight that the things looked at are good; (harmonic good not moral good).

8. Again however, neither are they pardonable.

9. For if they were strong enough to try to find out the animate-age ("aion") how did they not find the absolute Lord of these things more quickly?

10. But wretched and among the dead are the hopes of these who have called the works of men's hands gods, a gold and silver thing, a meditation of art, and imitations of living creatures, or a most useless stone, a work of an ancient hand.

11. Moreover if some wood-cutting carpenter also hath sawed out a mobile growth of wood and scraped off in a skillful way all its bark, and devised and appropriately fitted up a useful utensil for the service of life.

12. And the refuse of his employment hath lavishly used and supplied himself with for the preparation of his food;

13. And of the refuse perchance the absolutely useless remnant, a crooked stick, and grown together with knots, he hath taken and carved in the meditation of his leisure and with the experience of understanding hath shaped it, hath conformed it to an image of a man.

14. Or likened it to some well-perfected living creature, by having rubbed it with ocre and reddened its surface with anchusa, and smoothed over every blemish in it;

15. And having made for it a dwelling worthy of it, he hath placed it on a wall securing it with iron.

16. That it might not fall down; he hath provided for it, knowing that it could not help itself; yea, indeed, for it is an image, and hath need of help.

17. And is not ashamed to talk to and offer votive-prayer to the soulless thing concerning property-matters and weddings and children, and he invoketh the weak thing for robust-strength.

18. And he asketh the dead for life and entreateth the most inexperienced for protection; and concerning a journey the thing that cannot even use itself in walking.

19. And concerning progress and employment and success of hands he asketh the thing least capable of action with its hands for activity.

COMMENT.

This chapter which seems to treat of the grosser forms of idolatry when closely scanned will be found to cover the refined and more subtile modern phases of merely speculative reasoning and false concepts, that is false as tried by the canon of divine inspiration and revelation. The image of one's worship does not need to be graven or depicted and the shrine one worships at does not need to be such a shrine as described in this chapter. Once men worshipped the goddess of Chance under various names and at various shrines, and built temples for these shrines that were the wonder and admiration of the intelligent world of those days. Now under the false concept that there is such a thing as chance that in some way dominates all the affairs of life, men of all classes and degrees of intelligence bet from a cent to a million on the throw of the dice or a turn of the wheel or something else just as uncertain in its result, and call it "backing up their judgment," while inspiration and revealed wisdom has been telling us from Moosees on down to the present moment that there is no such thing as chance or "a doctrine of the chances," and that not even a sparrow falleth without God's agency and supervision, and that the hairs of our heads even are numbered, much more our acts, in all our congenital and ethical correlations to one another and the world at large.

With what a blinding conviction Paul became aware of this great truth and discovered that he was like the ox kicking against the goad of God's mastery and all-controlling providence, and how he bowed his neck and from that time forth drew patiently in God's "most useful (not "easy") yoke" of subjective destiny, or the Christian yoke as proclaimed in the gospel. There is a vast difference between "speaking with authority" and "speaking with qualification." It was the voice of qualification that answered Paul's submissive inquiry, "Lord who art thou?" And he recognized it as such. It was not merely God's authority that spoke. Paul had long ago accepted that; but the qualification summons from his Lord who had also qualified for his official work. His previous conception of God had been erroneous and idolatrous. He thought he saw and knew before; but now with the blinding scales still over his eyes and natural vision he really saw and was prepared to do his life-work

Editor Restitution:

I wish to say through the paper that since the death of my dear husband, I have received so many kind and sympathizing letters from the dear brothers and sisters in Christ, and wish to answer them in this way. They should have been answered long ago, and I hope they will excuse me as I have not been very well, and lame in my right arm. Three months ago today since we laid him away to wait the resurrection morn, and no one but those that have passed through the same affliction can tell the heartaches and loneliness of ours. My dear husband has been subject to appendicitis for about twenty-six years, but had not had a hard spell for ten or eleven years, till on the night of the 4th of July, which lasted all night, and part of the next day, and he never got entirely over it, until the 9th of August he took another hard spell, although he got so he could work after the first attack, and got all ready to go to see his aged mother in Ill. I had taken him to town on the 7th of August to take the train. His nephew was going with him, but he could not get any one to take his place at the Express Office, so they could not start that day, so he came home with me. On Saturday in the afternoon he went to town feeling as well as he had for several days. He came home a little after sun-down, ate supper and went out to do some of the chores, was not gone but just a few minutes until he came in, and was in so much agony that I sent for a doctor as soon as he would consent to having one. He never got out of misery except when we gave him morphine. Every thing was done that could be. The last thing that gave any hope of saving his life was to perform an operation but soon found that that was all in vain. But soon he was taken again on Saturday evening, and died on Monday morning. He lived a little over a week. I did not think Saturday night he was any worse than he was through the day until he told me he wanted me and the children to stay with him, he wanted to talk over business matters with us. After telling the children what to do in regard to this life, he told them that he wanted them to live good Christian lives and meet him in the kingdom, and not to take preacher's word but to believe the Bible. He bid us all good-bye and asked us to sing something. Quite a number were present but they did not feel like singing so I took the book and Clara Reed and I sung "Some Sweet Day." When we sang the last verse

"Then the kingdom will have come,
And God's will shall then be done,
We shall all rest at home,
Some Sweet day, Some Sweet day," he said, "Would'nt that be nice?" He told me to send for Brother Crowe or Brother Zilmer to preach the funeral. I sent them telegrams but it did not reach them in time.

Pray for me dear brothers and sisters, that I may be faithful till Jesus comes.

MRS. WM. HANCKE.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

SHALL WE?

The year 1902 is near its close. For several years past we have had at this season our "Christmas Love Feast," being short letters of encouragement and cheer—a sort of "Social Meeting" where all who wished could have a chance to talk. This little feature of our paper has been very enjoyable in the past, and we are asked if it is to be again this year. In reply we most cheerfully say, Yes.

Let us have "New Year's Greeting" from some hundreds of our people, for the first issue of January, 1903. It will help many who are struggling on the pathway to the Kingdom of God to have a word of cheer and good will from a fellow traveler. 'Twill be as a cup of cold water to the fainting one, and in giving it the giver will also get added strength to continue his journey. In giving you get—so let each one have a short letter of greeting by the last week of the old year, and we will have such a testimony meeting as will not only encourage our fellows, but will give joy to the angels in heaven, who ever rejoice at our manifestations of love for each other. Not long letters short ones, full of love and hope.

It seems that Venezuela has been given her ultimatum by Great Britain and Germany, and must settle or her ports will be siezed.

"EVERY contradiction of our will, every little ailment, every petty disappointment, will, if we take it patiently, become a blessing."

"Oh how great is thy goodness, which thou hast laid up for them that fear thee, which thou hast wrought for them that trust in thee." Psa. xxxi. 19.

A NOTE from Brother W. H. Wilson states that he is still at Piqua, Ohio, holding meetings, with good audiences and interest. He will go to Fidelity from there.

DISPATCHES indicate that times are hard in Russia. We quote from date of Dec. 6th: "Lack of employment is causing unprecedented distress in the interior of Russia. In Saratoff, as a fair example of the prevailing conditions, workmen eagerly accept about 17 cents per day. Hosts of beggars literally invade the shops and houses, and the streets are filled with sick and starving. Similar details come from other cities."

WE dislike to find fault with a correspondent for our paper,—it is also disagreeable to be complained at. A printer is supposed to be able to read anything that comes to hand, and can usually do so on "straight matter." Occasionally an article comes which contains a lot of proper names, taken from some work the author has at hand. While the article is easily read the author seems to have given no thought toward making the letters spelling the proper names distinctly. He also often writes them without referring to his book, and gets the same name spelled two or more ways. Not all writers are careful to look at their Bible and spell the names correctly. This is not fault-finding—only a hint. The printer, after worrying about so much, begins to argue—well if the one who wrote does not care, why need I bother.

A SOCIETY has been organized in France to start a campaign favoring a policy of peace and mutual disarmament. They point out that 54 per cent of the French national budget this year was devoted to preparation for war, and that what France needs is not more soldiers, but more hard-working, industrious citizens. It also calls for a federation of all European states on a commercial and industrial basis, as the only remedy in which Europe can hold her own against the competition caused by the "American peril" and the "Yellow peril" This is another "Peace and safety" cry, and the louder the "cry" the more sure and "sudden" the "destruction" that will come. There is no peace in sight so far as human efforts are concerned; but as they fail the light of the rising Sun of Righteousness appears, and then will come peace that is peace—eternal peace under the reign of our Lord Jesus Christ, in the kingdom of God.

F. W. ROBERTSON says, "Do right and God's recompense to you will be the power of doing more right. Give and God's reward to you will be the spirit of giving more; a blessed spirit, for it is the Spirit of God himself. God will repay you with the capacity of more love; love is God within you."

A DISPATCH from Calcutta regarding the durbar to be held soon states that Lord Curzon, the Governor General of India, has after long research found the ancient throne of King Solomon, and that he will sit on this throne during the coronation durbar. This event is to be very elaborate, and in richness of jewels and decorations will outdo even the coronation of King Edward.

ON last Monday the ceremonies connected with the formal opening of the great Assouan dam in Egypt, took place. A dispatch says "The Assouan dam and the Assiout barrage are monuments to British engineering skill and progressive policy. These great works which have cost between $100,000,000 and $125,000,000, will systematize irrigation, impart security to crops, and stability to harvests, and widen the area of Nile lands under cultivation. The annual flood with its fertilized silt and soil, already has passed, and the sluices of the Assouan dam are now closed for the storage of water till the 1st of March. They will then be opened gradually, and for four months there will be a good head of water in the Treery irrigating canal for the use of cultivators. The scarcity of water caused by the low Nile will be avoided, and a great increase in the agricultural resources will be brought about. The Nile will be held up by a dam one hundred feet thick at the base, and the valley above it will be flooded for fifty miles. The experts are making a striking comparison. They calculate that the reservoir will hold enough water for a year's supply for every town and village in the united kingdom. The engineering works also include an open weir or barrage at Assiout, a long way down the Nile, by which the distribution of the water from the reservior is secured over a large area."

Short Articles.

We would like to make THE RESTITUTION for 1903 better than in the past. One of the best ways to attain this end is to secure more short articles. We are well aware that some subjects demand much consideration, and that one-half, or a full column is not sufficient to bring out what an author should say to be understood; but while this is so, and we want such articles always, yet there are thoughts that come to the mind when reading or studying, that will read well if written out in short, concise style, without long introduction and longer ending. Such brief sayings are sure of early appearance in our paper, while long drawn out and continued articles are always held for further examination, and so subject to delay.

Brothers and Sisters, try this awhile and see if we cannot make our paper even better than it has been. When something good comes to mind, write it out for the good of others. Tell it briefly, with the point clear and plain to be seen. Do not be afraid you will say what some one else has said. Bible truths will bear repeating.

Cost of War.

An article in the Home magazine, written by Robert G. Butler, shows the cost of the principal wars of the 19th century to figure up to a total of $17,922,000,000. The most expensive single war was our own American Civil war costing $5,000,000,000. This is followed by the Napoleonic wars costing $3,289,000,000, after coming the Franco-German with a cost of $2,500,000,000. Next comes the Crimean war with a bill showing $1,520,000,000, followed by the Russo-Turkish war with $1,210,000,000. Our Spanish-American war shows it cost $1,000,000,000. The horror and terribleness of the Boer war has been told over so often that we would expect to find it well up in front, but it comes after all these with a bill of expense amounting to $800,000,000.

With such an array of figures showing the vast cost in money which can not show the loss of life and anguish of heart that accompanies the horrible trade of war, no wonder monarchs and statesmen shrink back, and look for other ways of settling their difficulties. But awful as it is we know it will be no better under the present arrangement, but will get worse as we near the day when a new order will be established by the appearance of our Lord Jesus Christ who will break the power of the quarrelsome kings of this age, and inaugurate his peaceful sway over all the earth. Let us all then pray for the Lord to come quickly.

Foundation of Christia[nity]

According to Rev. C. H. Platter[burgh], the new pastor of the Frank[lin] Circle Church of Christ (Disciples) Christianity is built upon historical facts. If that be so, it he has any hope, what is it based upon? And what about the covenants of promise, ignorance concerning which left the Ephesians Godless, Christless, hopeless? Eph. ii. 12. And what of the exceeding great and precious promises which Peter (2 Per. i. 4) says are given unto us, that by these (promises) ye might be partakers of the divine nature? Have those promises become facts since Peter said that? If not, what facts does he refer to as the foundation of Christianity? Does the gentleman know what promises Peter speaks of? If not how can he ever partake of divine nature? If he knew and believed those exceeding great and precious promises, would he not hope for their realization? Does he know that Paul was in hope of eternal life, which God who cannot lie promised before the world began, or the time of the ages? Titus i. 2. Has the gentleman some facts which antedate this promise of eternal life? Or, does he disfellowship Paul? A stream can rise no higher than its source. We are well acquainted with the source of that doctrine.

Faith and Hope.

Reader, Is your faith built upon the foundation of the Apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ being the chief corner stone, Eph. ii. 19, 20, or is it built upon the traditions of men as represented by the great apostasy. 2 Thes. ii. 7-12. It is taught that if we simply believe that Jesus died for us, and lead good lives, that our immortal souls will go beyond the bounds of time and space. But is this so? Is it according to the law and the testimony? Is it in accord with the miracles of God? 1 Peter iv. 2. Paul said concerning the preachers of any other gospel than that he preached, "Let him be accursed," or cut off. Gal. i. 89. Let us then see what constituted the gospel preached by the apostles and Jesus Christ, and then it will rest with you, whether you can remain with those who preach

ANOTHER GOSPEL.

It is a fact that the idea of a never dying soul is a pagan fiction. It is a fact that although the word soul occurs over 700 times in the Bible never once is it said to be immortal; thus showing that popular theology is wrong. Immortality is something to be sought for and put on at the resurrection of the dead, Luke xiv. 14; Acts xxvi 6-8; Rom. ii. 7, 16; xv. 4. Why it is a matter of hope, 1 Thes. iv. 13-16; Rom. xv. 13; 1 Cor. vi. 14; xv. 12-23; John vi. 39, 40, 44. What, then, is the gospel? Paul said, Rom. i. 16 that "the gospel is the power of God unto salvation," and as there is only one faith, one God and one hope, Eph. iv. 4-6 it is very important to know what the gospel is. If you read Luke ix. 2-6 you will find that it is the news concerning the

that constitutes the gospel. It cannot be the death and resurrection of Christ, merely, for we find that although the apostles previous to the crucifixion preached the gospel, they knew nothing at that time of the death and resurrection of Christ, and therefore could not have preached it. See Luke xviii. 31-34. Paul said the gospel was preached unto Abraham. Gal. iii. 8. And in Gen. xiii. 14-17, we find that God promised Abraham the land upon which he stood, for ever. Isaac and Jacob had the same hope. Gen. xxvi. 3, 4; xxviii. 13, 14. It is a fact that they have never yet realized the fulfillment of the promises. Heb. xi. 8, 9, 13, 39, 40. All the prophets of God had the same hope and faith. Isa. ix. 6, 7; xi. 1-4; ii. 2, 3. speaks of a time when the knowledge of the glory of the Lord shall cover the earth (xi. 9-26.) Ezek. xxxvi. 24; xxxvii. 21, 22, speaks of the restoration of Israel, when they shall divide the land to inherit it, xlviii. 13, 14. Dan. ii. 44, informs us that the God of heaven will overturn the kingdoms of men, or of the world; and in the 7th that the saints shall

RULE THE EARTH.

Joel says that the kingdom of God would in the future be established on this planet, iii. 1, 2, 16, 17. Zechariah saw the Messiah reigning over all the earth. vi. 12, 13; viii. 22; xiv. 9, 16. In Matt. v. 5 we find Jesus saying, "Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth." And that Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and all the prophets should be in the kingdom of God, also that people should come from the north, south, east and west [the kingdom. Luke xiii. 28, 29. Christ also speaks of]

HIS SECOND COMING,

Luke xxi. 27, and Mark viii. 38. He also told his twelve apostles that they would sit on twelve thrones ruling over the twelve tribes of Israel. Luke xxii. 29, 30; Matt. xix. 27, 28. It is a fact according to the Scriptures that Christ is to come again to this earth, where after the resurrection he and his saints will reign over the nations of the earth for a thousand years. Rev. xx. 4, 6, 10; ii. 26, 27. Considering, then, that there is not one passage in the Scriptures of divine truth, that states we have immortal souls, or that heaven is the

it will, we hope, be seen how necessary it is to seek and know the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ. The disciples were told to go into all the world and "preach the gospel to every creature, he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." Mark xvi. 15, 16. So baptism is necessary, then? Yes; for Christ said, "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." John iii. 5. Read also Acts ii. 38, 41.

What a glorious hope! the hope of the true Christian! Is it not worth having? A resurrection, eternal life, an inheritance with all the saints in the kingdom on earth, for 1000 years, after which there shall be no more sin or death—God will be all in all. Rev. xxi. 2-10.

Religious Declension.

For many months we have been taking notes from reports in religious papers respecting what they call the "state of religion;" and we find that the most devout leaders of religious thought throughout the country, and indeed throughout the world are thoroughly alarmed, and are making most pathetic, and we may say frantic appeals, to stir up their respective bodies to a realization of the fact that the "Church is on the verge of a crisis," and they define a crisis to be a turning point in the progress of events,—a critical moment,—a juncture on which depends a transition to better or worse; and it is plain to see they apprehend it will be worse. In an article in the Homiletic Review by Dr. D. S. Gregory, D. D. L. L. D. he shows an impending crisis, 1st, in the attitude of the churches toward the Bible as the Word of God. 2nd, In the views of Christian living. 3rd, In the views of Christian stewardship. 4th, In the work of home evangelism. 5th, In the work of world evangelism.

He then gives what is claimed in the Outlook by Mr. T. D. Bacon respecting Higher Criticism as being universally received by the younger generation of scholars. 1st, That the Bible can no longer speak with unquestioned authority. 2nd, That at best it is only what was conceived by some God-inspired man. That we no longer have the ipsissima verba of the Deity; that is to say, we no longer have the very words of God to deal with, as we read it. 3rd, That we no longer believe in miracles. 4th, We have moral relief in not having to believe him guilty of awful cruelty. 5th, The divinity of Jesus depends on tests of doubtful interpretation. 6th, The atonement is one of the universal truths of life which finds its most glorious expression in him. 7th, Poor old Adam disappears, but the fact remains that we come into the world with a brute and savage inheritance which must be subdued [But how?] 8th, The church does not obtain its warrant and commission because of historical connection with Christ but because it is a company holding to what it believes to be the highest revelation from God to man." 9th, The Church makes no exclusive claims to sanctity, but believes it has hold on the truth that makes for righteousness, and is self-propagating. 10th, There has been a cooling of interest in foreign missions since we see our own short comings. 11th, It is when we come to the question of future life that the negative results of Higher Criticism make themselves most deeply felt. Here we are beyond the realm of experience, and where once we seemed to have reliable information, we find ourselves left very much in the dark. 12th, We count it a great gain for our religious life that we no longer regard going to heaven as the center of our interest."

It is true, solemnly true, awfully true, that only those who believe the gospel Jesus and his Apostles preached, and are baptized shall be saved, if he has his expressed will carried out; and while these Higher Critics are about as near to the kingdom of God as ever they were; still, it makes one shudder to realize that vast institutions of learning are manufacturing preachers who will be paid to ROB THE PEOPLE of the only unadulterated truth that has come down to them, viz., The Bible is the veritable Word of the living God; and ROB THEM of the only hope they had, false though it be, and nothing to offer in place of it.

Notwithstanding the piety and zeal it makes us tremble to study the remedies he prescribes for the existing condition of things. He has a profound reverence for God and his revealed will, so-called,—but which really reveals but little to him. They, that is, he, and all in sympathy with him have been teaching for some two hundred years that the world of mankind was to be converted by human instrumentality; and they have at last awakened to the fact that the world's conversion is farther off than ever it was,—that the population increases a hundred times faster than conversions. And Higher Criticism is to be blamed for it. The Bible warrants no such results as they have promised. They ought never to have taught it. And, sad to say, they have of Christ which Paul says is the power of God unto salvation. The gospel of the kingdom is what he preached. (Mark i. 14) and it was the gospel of the kingdom he sent his disciples into all the world to preach; and it was the gospel of the kingdom they did preach. Acts viii. 12, and Acts xxviii. 31. The gospel of the kingdom offers the kingdom of God on earth to all who believe it and live in reference to it. And Jesus has gone to a far country to obtain the kingdom and return. He has also informed us that when he returns he will find the world in the same condition as it was in the days of Noah—and scarcely any faith on the earth. The doctor's reverence for the Word of God will benefit him little, if he does not believe and do what it says. He thinks this state of things results from the lack of funds. He says the Protestants of the United States were worth year before last $23,000,000,000, and they added to this last year $725,000,000, and yet only gave one-fourth of a tithe of a tithe of a tithe of their wealth. The average contributions of members of the Presbyterian body was,

NOT CONVERTED,

88 CENTS PER CAPITA,

while ten years before it was $1.19—a decrease of 31 cents per capita. In writing and pleading for money and promising the conquest of the world for Christ, they teach the opposite of what Jesus said the state of the world would be when he comes again. It cannot be converted and at the same time be found in the condition of the Antediluvians.

Not only have they lost God's converting agency, but also the conditions of pardon, reconciliation and peace. Prayer and praise from a believing soul glorifies God; but no amount of praise or prayer will procure remission of sins for one who disregards the published

LAW OF PARDON.

Men and women have religious faculties; when they are aroused they feel happy,—when the excitement dies out they do not feel pious and happy. They cannot be justified by faith for they believe nothing in particular. They are sinners still, and need converting, and baptism for remission of sins, if the Bible be true. And not as it was with the Jews, blindness in part; complete blindness is the condition of the Gentiles. But while Gentiles in the flesh are struck with astonishment at this condition of things, it does not come upon those of the Abrahamic faith unawares,—they anticipated it, and naturally enough their faith is strengthened and their hope is confirmed by it,—it betokens the dawn of a better day.

We presume the author of the article quoted from could not be made to see that he, devout and zealous as he is, has helped to pave the way for the present "attitude of the churches toward the Bible." He and all his class make the penalty for sin, instead of death; they teach the inherent immortality of every man, when the God of the Bible says, "He that hath not the Son hath not life,"—they have amended the law of pardon to suit themselves,—they have made choice of heaven as their home, while God has declared the righteous shall be recompensed in the earth,—and Jesus has said the meek shall inherit the earth. We do not see that Higher Criticism can be much further away from God than the above indicates.

LIFE IN MISERY

Yes; they are surely approaching a crisis. The numbers, the wealth, the learning so long depended upon, is failing them, and so their hearts are failing them for fear of what is coming.

Brethren and sisters scattered abroad, let us praise and magnify the name of God because his goodness led us to repentance; because his love causes us to love him; because we have been called according to the eternal purpose revealed in his Word, and because we have a hope that anchors our souls, while the hearts of others are failing them for fear because their schemes have failed.

WE desire to thank those friends of our paper who have sent us so many new names. It is truly encouraging, and we thank you for the interest you manifest in this department of the Lord's service. Keep it going and the list can be doubled by Jan. 1st.

Russia and the Holy Land.

The Jewish Chronicle reviews an article from the Pall Mall Gazette warning Zionists, and calling their attention to a great competitor that is fighting against the accomplishment of their hope. It tells them not to suppose that Palestine is a derelict land under Turkish rule, that it can be bargained for, be possessed and ruled by Jews—that the European Powers are all disposed to aid their efforts—give pledges of neutrality, and guarantee their independence. Russia is their dangerous rival. Jewish residents feel the deepest concern about the action of that Empire. The Muscovite, having persecuted and plundered the Jew, would also deprive him of his future. For a long time Russia has been setting herself to acquire by lease or contract, places for strongholds. She has driven the Jew from Russia, and advances with greed upon the land of the children of the chosen seed. Yet there is this consolation, that her efforts will fail ultimately, for as predicted by Ezekiel, "The king that cometh out of the North shall fall on the mountains of Israel."

The great Russian monastery at Jerusalem is a strong place to which munition of war is constantly being brought in small and unobtrusive quantities. A few years back one of the grand dukes inaugurated with much imposing ceremonial a church upon the Mount of Olives, with a tower singularly disproportionate. From its summit, signals can be made to the Mediterran. The Russian policy is not proclaimed from the house-tops. The Greek ecclesiastic before quoted points to a throne and footstool near the shrine, where the holy fire leaps forth, which are kept for the Russian triumph, and upon which the Russian eagle and arms are carved. The Russian press tells its readers continually of the manifest destiny of the Empire; that there are no points on the long southern border where Russian aspirations are concentrated with such force as the road that leads southward to the Land of Promise. On to the Golden South is the watchword of Russian politics.

The Pall Mall writer describes a scene at the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, in Jerusalem, on Easter Day, a frienzied multitude pressing forward to light their candles at the holy fire, which, as the priests say, was brought from heaven by the Archangel Michael. In answer to the inquiry, "Why encourage this?" it was said because high political considerations make it impossible to discontinue it. To do so would injure the Church, and even shake the throne of the Czar. The keynote of Russia's political religion is the ultimate protectorate of Palestine. The Russian is taught to hope to see the Czar in the Church of the Holy Sepulchre crown himself King of Jerusalem and the East, whence he will call upon all nations to disarm, and proclaim a universal peace. So the Russian Government encourages pilgrimages to the flame of the Archangel, and supports the orthodox society of Palestine, financially. The Russian politicians do not expend roubles on religious fantasies, without a motive.

The writer then asks, "Why should the Jews deceive themselves with hopes of an impossible restoration? They cannot emerge victorious from a collision with the Russian Tsardom. The golden dream of Zionism is a vision haunted by the Cossacks' jackboot and Holy Synod. It threatens to exchange an oppression with its center in Eastern Europe for an oppression with its lever in Asia Minor, to transfer the pale from Russia to the Land of Promise, to plant a feeble, impoverished Jewish state in the center of fierce European rivalries, and make it a shuttlecock between German and Russian ambitions."—Bible Standard New Zealand.

Poetry.

To Maude, and Others.

Be careful of the friends you choose.
This motto guard with care;
That only those whose lives are pure
Shall in your friendship share.

Beware of those who hold to you
The cup of soothing balm,
Which lulls to sleep your finest thoughts,
And bids you go with them.

Yes, go with them to the lower hall,
To places where evil doth reign;
Go, see the crowds that gather there,
In revelry's domain.

Surround yourself with this motley crew,
The lowest types are here,
The drunkard with his bleared eyes and breath
Will clasp your hand so dear.

Will clasp your hand—oh pardon—you will
Accord a circle to me and me,
To the loving souls dear friends will touch
A—an, and on, you see.

The poet young, so with his engaging smile,
When found you would be to know,
He claims his rights to trip with you
The light fantastic toe.

The sneerer and hard Loser,
To you in your pleasures share;
They leave the best to come among society,
Its gutter and its glare.

Many who perhaps were free from stain,
Spotless as driven snow,
Have entered this dangerous path and sunk
To the lowest depths below.

The rose is beautiful to see,
Its fragrance sweet and rare,
But underneath its petals bright
Thorns unsuspecting lurk.

So dangerous pleasures may entice,
They, like the rose, look fair,
But thorns will pierce the heart they possess,
Deeper than wounds they are.

Deeper, because a wound will heal,
Time will erase the scar;
But your good name, once lost to you,
Time seldom doth repair.

Dear friends I advise you not to go
In folly's path so broad,
But choose the path that leadeth home,
To rest and peace and God.

Drink at pure pleasure's fountain deep,
Oh, guard thy life with care;
Be careful of the friends you choose,
Of pleasure too, beware.

The Kingdom of God, What is it? No. 4.

I have stated that since the death of the testator, the promises made to the fathers, have been in process of development. That the covenant made with Abraham, ratified by the death of the Christ, has since then been in force, and that in the order of progression. Beginning as a grain of wheat in the ground, and continuing in growth, even unto the present time, and that this process of growth and development will culminate eventually in a kingdom possessing dominion and glory, when it shall be given, as "the kingdom prepared," to the Son of Man and his fellow heirs, the saints, a perpetual inheritance. That these truths comprise "the things concerning the kingdom of God." The gospel of the kingdom preached by John the Baptist, the Christ and his apostles and believed in by the early, primitive church.

Paul in his epistle to the Galatians assures them, that the covenant which was confirmed by God concerning the Christ, "the law 430 years after could not annul," that it should make the Abrahamic covenant of none effect, emphasizing the truth that the covenant made with the children of Israel under Moses and Joshua, Exod. xx. 1; Joshua xxi. 43: 1 Kings viii. 56, was a covenant added until the promised seed should come.

Consequently, the promises made in the Abrahamic covenant, such as the blessing of the nations, the promised increase of his seed as the sand of the sea shore, etc., the possession of the gate of their enemies, the redemption from the curse of the law, could not possibly begin to take place until after the death of the testator, neither can any good reason be given why they should be delayed some 1900 years afterwards.

With these truths before us we can more readily understand the apostle's meaning, Gal. v. 8, where he says, "The Scriptures foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith preached first the gospel to Abraham, saying, In thee shall all nations of the earth be blessed."

In other words, the Scriptures prophecying forward to the death of the testator foretold that God would then justify the heathen (Greek nations) through faith, that in him all nations of the earth would be blessed. That in the desire of the nations (people) to share in the blessings promised to, and then enjoyed by, the kingdom of God, it would suffer violence and the violent take it by force, and all men would press unto it, even as it is this day, men of all nationalities press unto it in order to enjoy its blessings.

Concerning those things pertaining to the life in Christ by faith. They, the kingdom of God as it exists today, and them only, have in their midst the church, having the words of eternal life, which is not the kingdom, but rather the winepress, the high-tower in the vineyard. The winepress, through which every one must pass, as did the beloved Master, if they like him would become perfect, and inherit eternal life. The high tower, whose summit like Jacob's ladder, reaches the very courts of heaven, the city set on a hill, which cannot be hid, whose conversation is in heaven, from whence they look for the Savior.

The belief that these temporal and spiritual blessings, to the extent named, have to place, until after the second coming of the Christ, has arisen from the desire to make the Scriptures harmonize with the mistaken idea that the kingdom of God, and that of his dear Son are synonymous and contemporaneous. The term spiritual kingdom meaning thereby the kingdom of God in the hearts of men is an idle imagination without foundation in the Scriptures. There is but one kingdom mentioned in the Scriptures, and that is the kingdom of Israel, called also the kingdom of heaven, which shall eventually become the kingdom of God's dear Son.

The Mosaic covenant was added until the promised Seed should come. The promised Seed came 1902 years ago, who immediately gave evidence of Sonship and authority in healing the sick, raising the dead, forgiving sins, and in preaching the glad tidings of the kingdom of God, and that it was at hand. In confirmation of which Paul affirms, Behold, now is the accepted time, Behold, now is the day of salvation. It was the day of visitation, the day of redemption, the day of the building up again of the kingdom of Israel, which the Christ declared he came to seek and to save, affirming that for that purpose was he sent, instructing the disciples to go to the lost sheep of the children of Israel, and "as ye go preach the Kingdom of heaven is at hand. Repent and believe it."

Not only was the present age heralded as the day of the redemption of the overturned kingdom, but in addition, there was the proclamation that those who believed this heralded announcement, they of faith, would be blessed with faithful Abraham, would be justified from all things from which they could not be by the law of Moses, that with Abraham they would, on condition of this belief become heirs, joint heirs with Christ, and eventually become possessors of that same everlasting kingdom, its territory, and its people, its glory and dominion, with life everlasting.

The whole of the epistle to the Galatians is a concise and persuasive argument in proof that he (God) had visited and redeemed his people Israel, and that the fullness of time had come for the beginning of the blessing of the nations, confirming the testimony previously presented by Zecharias. James certifies to the same great truth at the memorable convention of the apostles at Jerusalem. Acts xv. "How that God had made choice amongst them, that the nations (amongst whom Israel had been sown as grain in the earth) should by his mouth, hear the words of the gospel, and believe.

James continuing says, "To this (the declaration of Peter) agree the words of the prophet, After this I will return and build again the tabernacle of David which is fallen down," etc. It was the then building again of the tabernacle of David, etc., from his own people Israel, scattered amongst the nations which James affirms, agrees with the declaration of Peter, and that God was then agreeably with the teaching of the prophet taking out of the nations a people to his name.

It could not be said of the heathen (as commonly understood) they could be built again into a tabernacle of David. This tabernacle was to be built again by none other than his own people, (and those who may join themselves to them) brought again from the wilderness, the field, Babylon, where during the past centuries they have been in course of preparation for the glory yet to be revealed.

Let us not confound the work and prerogative of God the Father with that of the Christ the Son, nor the kingdom with that of his dear Son, the present with the future. The prophet Amos ix. 8, 9, 11, says, "The eyes of the Lord God are upon this sinful people. Lo, I will sift the house of Israel amongst all nations. In that day (when sifted amongst nations) will I raise up the tabernacle of David that is fallen down, and close up the breeches thereof, and will raise up its ruins, and I will build it as in the days of old.

Please notice the important fact, that it is the Lord God who sifted the house of Israel amongst all nations, and as Peter declares God had visited and redeemed his people, that the tabernacle of David may be again set up as in the days of old. It was always spoken of as the kingdom of God. The Christ invariably spoke of it in parable and otherwise, as being the kingdom of God, the kingdom of his Father and when distinguishing between the then existing kingdom of his Father, and his own he says, My kingdom is not of this world. For that reason Peter declares that it was God who had chosen him to declare the glad tidings of the kingdom to the nations, and that for the purpose of rebuilding of the tabernacle of David. To all which the other apostles agreed, stating that such was in harmony with the teaching of the prophets.

"Thus saith the Lord, as I have watched over them, to pluck up and throw down, so will I watch over them to build and plant.....In those days I will forgive their iniquity and remember their sins no more." That we are now living in the days of the building and planting, when the sins and iniquities of Israel were to be remembered no more, read as follows: "Even when we were yet sinners Christ died for us."—"Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law;" "Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, for he hath visited and redeemed his people." I will build it (the tabernacle of David) as in the days of old." Amos ix. 11. How was it built in the days of old? The Lord God gathered them together from the loins of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, from a small beginning, into the land of Egypt. Hence delivered them from the hands of the oppressor, bear them through the wilderness unto the promised land.

The Christ explains in parable that from a small beginning, even as the smallest of seeds hath the Lord set his hand again the second time to recover the remnant of his people, and that this small seed like beginning would eventually become as a great tree filling the whole earth.

In literal fulfillment of the prophecy of Isa. xxvii. 6. "Israel shall blossom and bud and fill the earth with fruit." As the Lord God in the days of old brought them through the wilderness into the promised land, so have they the kingdom of Israel, the tabernacle of David, been led into the wilderness, the nations, Babylon the field and are now being delivered, and will ere long reach the land promised "as in the days old."

Table Talk.

OUR FATHER, THE ALMIGHTY.

When we consider the great and marvelous works of our Heavenly Father, we are made to exclaim, "O Lord, how great are thy works, and thy thoughts are very deep." When we contemplate the heavens, how he has fixed the sun in her daily course, and the moon for a light by night, and the numberless stars that move in harmony; we are constrained to say, "O, our Father, who can fathom thy mind, or render praise to thee, as we should? Thou hast laid the foundations of the earth, that it should not be removed forever. Thou hast set a bound for the waters, that they may not pass, and calleth for the waters of the sea, and poureth them out upon the face of the earth. The Lord is his name."

These are a few of the wonders our Father has wrought. When we think of all these things, and also the many blessings he daily bestows upon us, and that he permits us to call him "Our Father, who art in heaven," we wonder at his great love for us. He has in love to man given instruction whereby we can obtain a hope of eternal life, namely a firm belief in the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, repentance of past sins, the same washed away by being baptized into him, and rising to live a Godly life, then, and not until then, can we truly say, "Our Father," then we can at all times approach him through his Son Jesus, and saith our Father, "Ye shall be my people, and I will be your God." Our Father has been pleading with men and women from the beginning until the present time. Not willing that any should perish, but rather that all should come to him and live. Some six thousand years have rolled round, the earth still abides and our Father is still mindful of us, and stretching out [illegible] over will obey the [illegible] the time of restitution is co[illegible]us will leave his Father's throne and come to earth to gather his saints. We say "Blessed be God, even our Father, and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. Father of all mercies, and God of all comfort." Moses knew Our Father, and left his royal home, "choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season." Abraham, the friend of God, knew Our Father, and looked, in faith, for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God. Paul a chosen vessel unto our Lord, also knew Our Father, and in Heb. xii. speaks in these glowing words, "Ye are come unto Mt. Zion, unto the City of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, to an innumerable company of angels, to the general assembly and church of the first born, which are written in heaven, and to God the Judge of all, and to the spirits of just men made perfect, and to Jesus the Mediator of the New Covenant, and to the blood of sprinkling, that speaketh better things than the blood of Abel." Again, Paul to the church of God at Corinth, speaks comfort, saying, "Eye hath not seen or ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him. But God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit. Grace be unto you from God our Father, and the Lord, Jesus Christ."

O, beautiful city of our God,
With sure foundations given:
Thy walls are laid with precious stones,
Built by our Father, God of heaven.

ELIZABETH KNOWLES.

OUR MEDIATOR.

Jesus the Lord of life and glory is our Mediator. As Moses was the Mediator between God and the children of Israel, for they rebelled and went astray from God, turning away from his commandments, and forgetting or forsaking the covenant they had made with him by their Mediator, Moses. He found them down in Egypt, as slaves, under cruel bondage by the Egyptians. God heard their groanings, and had compassion on them, considering his promises to Abraham, and sent his servant Moses as Mediator to deliver and lead them out of the land of bondage, into the land of Canaan as he had promised their fathers. By this Mediator God showed them great signs and wonders in their deliverance. "And the Lord said unto Moses, Charge the people, etc.," Ex. xix. "And the people said unto Moses, Speak thou unto us and we will hear, etc." So Moses was the Mediator. After his death, the Israelites sinned and forsook the Lord so often, and when God sent his only begotten and well beloved Son, our Mediator, they refused him, and because of that sin he said, "Behold your house is left unto you desolate." Moses sleeps, our Mediator has been rejected, but the time is coming when they shall be gathered from every land to take possession of the land of promise. God's Word will not return unto him void. But what of the Gentiles? Our Mediator has prepared a way for us, a true and living way, which the law could not give; for he is the Mediator of a better covenant. He came as was written of him, we all know how he was received, but he is now alive, and alive forevermore, and sits at the right hand of God, our Mediator, the Mediator of the New Testament, that they which are called might receive the promise of the eternal inheritance. Yes; our Mediator gave his life to redeem us from death, and if we are faithful, he is able to keep us from falling in this time of great darkness, and abounding iniquity. Let us cherish his Words, for he spake as never man spake. Let us always trust in God through the Lord Jesus Christ, our Mediator.

ELLA KNOWLES.

Brothers and Sisters:

Our paper just came to hand and while I was reading and looking it over, my eyes fell on our dear Sister Woodward's article, which I was very much pleased with, now I can be with her. I have been thinking for some time about dancing and other worldly pleasures, and it is too true, I am sorry to say, that some of the people of God are mingling with pleasures of this life; but oh, my dear brothers and sisters, may we not be found among that class. I care nothing about any thing pertaining to this life in worldly pleasures. There are many things to draw us away if we allow ourselves to think that they are not wrong, such as ball games, playing cards and dancing, and all other games of [illegible] from such turn away. We will have all we can do if we leave out all the above things mentioned. Now, I do not want to hurt the feelings of any one, but write these few lines to show where I stand. I know there are many, and in the church today, I am sorry to say, that think it all right to dance; but I would not feel justified in dancing. I think that time has come where it says, "In the last days men shall be lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God." May we throw aside all things that will tend to wrong us and keep us from doing that which we ought not to do, and may we strive to enter the kingdom of heaven is my prayer.

I remain your Sister in Christ.

MRS. ALMUS ADAMS.

Eternal Torment.

In the excellent discourse by Rev. Kirkus, printed in a recent issue of the Journal, his conclusion in regard to hell is that it "is to be left alone with your bad passions, your selfishness and your laziness." Now isn't that a tremendous load down from the hot-stuff they used to give us in our younger days? The definition is not exactly correct; in fact it won't accord with either grammar or etymology, but there are times when we ought to be thankful and not too critical. It's not always judicious to drive truth to the wall and strip her—better sometimes to be content and glad for a glimpse of her back hair behind the battlements she disrobes shame-facedly from the ragged and filthy habiliments that her foes have clad her in.

Within the last decade there has been a marvelous change of sentiment in regard to this subject. I sprung a question suddenly about "hell's torments" on a Methodist clergyman friend lately. It took him a-back a little but he looked me straight in the eye and answered like a man: "I don't like it." Another Methodist clergyman was more reticent as to his personal opinions but told me that the people were so bad they had to have that sort of thing to keep them decent. Over in England they have been having a time recently in the case of Dr. Beet, who was professor of the chair of theology at Richmond College for seventeen years. They put the doctor on trial for repudiating eternal torment and other things and voted him out of his position, though only by ten votes. Here is an extract on the subject from a Scotch publication. "The discussion waxed warm. One speaker accused Dr. Beet of having outraged the church, while on the other hand Professor Slater spoke of a 'reign of terror' in the church and pleaded for a greater freedom of opinion and expression. An old layman bewailed the fact that he seldom heard a sermon on heaven and hell now-a-days, though as a local preacher of twenty-five years standing, he had striven to persuade men by the terror of the Lord. The climax was reached when another local preacher declared that if he were asked did he preach Methodist doctrine he would reply 'I preach it but I can't say I believe it,' and he added that he believed that there were a good many others in the same position."

And so the war goes on on both sides of the Atlantic, and in fact all round the world—the war between darkness and light, between truth and error—a war that involves the hallowed name of "Our Father who art in heaven," as well as the mental and moral development of humanity. Only think of feeding such spiritual pabulum to the infancy of this generation that was served to us gray-heads in short pants.

Gleaming out luridly from among the "memories beyond the tomb" is my recollection of playing round mother's feet on the kitchen floor and asking her some question about hell. What the nature of the question was I cannot remember but the solemn terror of her reply burned into my memory as she said slowly and impressively: "Jeemie, I dinna like to hear you say that word, Jeemie." Now my question, whatever it was, was perfectly innocent and I resented such treatment of it. "But, mother," I said, "a' words are guid, if they're used right, are they no'; did I no' use that one right?" There was another long pause during which she pounded vigorously on the shirt front she was ironing and the answer came again, if anything, more awfully impressive: "I dinna like you to say the word, Jeemie; it's a bad word." But I have since learned that the subject has "stumpt" a good many more besides my good mother.

That little word hell is the epitome of all the superstitions of all the nations of all the ages. The meaning that attaches to it stupifies the intelligence and degrades the morals. It is the synonym of all that's contemptible in rage, hate, malice and vindictiveness, and hence the ready foil in the mouth of the vulgar, the profane and the blackguard.

Who's responsible for all this dreadful misconstruction? Who but the self-appointed or rather mutually appointed ministers of Christ and their vast institutions called religious that have undertaken to lead men to purity and righteousness? To the ancients this word held no terrors. Old Jacob in his grief for Joseph exclaimed: "I will go down to hell to my son mourning." Job cried out in his pain: "Oh that thou wouldst hide me in hell," and the Psalmist, joyful in his trust in God, sings: "If I make my bed in hell behold thou art there."

The time has passed for the large mouthing of generalities behind which ignorance or duplicity may hide. The spread of education lifts the people to a higher standard of intelligence than that of half or even quarter of a century ago and it is useless for the vast spiritual trusts and combines in the light of the twentieth century to stand aloof on their monopolistic dignity and arrogantly inform us like the other fuel magnates that they "have nothing to arbitrate."—J. F. Gellethy in Denton Journal.

Obituary.

Died, Emily Childs Gilbert, at Marshalltown, Iowa, November 25, 1902.

Sister Gilbert was born at Morrisville, Vt. Mar. 23, 1814. Her husband died at Burlington, Iowa, in 1868. A few years after she came to Marshalltown and made her home with her daughter, Mrs. Johnstown, until the time of her death.

Another true soldier has fallen in our ranks. With her the battle of life is ended. She has kept the faith and the crown of life will surely be given to her when our Captain shall return to reward the faithful ones. The ten shining talents have gained ten more beside them.

Her sweet Christian life, has always been a continual inspiration to all about her. She died as she has lived, quietly and peacefully, after a full, useful and exemplary life, in the 89th year of her age, or more accurately 88 years, 8 months and 2 days.

About 20 years ago I first met Sister Gilbert. I have been connected with the Iowa State Conference of the Church of God since its organization, either as President, Secretary or Treasurer, and Sister Gilbert has been a regular contributor of her means to the evangelistic work in the state. Her letters always contained a word of encouragement, and hope.

A Mother in Israel has fallen. She possessed strength of character to a remarkable degree. No one could look upon that face—even in death—without being impressed with her moral worth.

The manner of her death was in harmony with her prayer that she might be spared a lingering and helpless sickness. She seemed to be in her usual health even up to the day of her death, —eating supper and retiring at night as usual. Death came to her about 11 o'clock P. M. and she passed from the sleep of rest to the sleep of death, perhaps unconsciously. We laid her to rest in the beautiful cemetery at Marshalltown, on the bank of the Iowa River, there to sleep until the Life Giver's voice shall awaken her to that life everlasting.

Reconciliation.

Reconciliation is a restoring to favor or making those friends who before were at variance. Man when he was created bore the image of God his Creator, and they were friends till man sinned against his God and Creator, then they were no longer friends and God drove him out of the garden wherein was the tree of life, and placed cherubims with a flaming sword which turned every way to guard the tree of life, lest he should put forth his hand and partake of the tree of life and live forever. God had told him that if he disobeyed him, "Dying he should die, and return to the ground from which he was taken." God had to take this action in order to be truthful, as it is impossible for God to lie. We may learn a lesson from this action, of the goodness and mercy of God. That he does not intend that sinners shall live forever. There was a time when there was neither sin nor sinners, and God intends that it shall be so again. So we see that it was by this act of disobedience that made Adam a sinner and not only himself but all of his posterity, as recorded in Romans 5th chapter, so that all the human family naturally are at variance with God and stand in need of being reconciled to God that they may live forever. In order to bring this about man must be placed in that condition where he is no longer a sinner. God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him might not perish but have everlasting life. The purpose for which the Lord Jesus Christ came into the world was to save sinners. 1 Tim. i. 15. "This is a faithful saying and worthy of all acceptance that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners." The Apostle John in his first epistle 3rd chap. 5 v. "And ye know that he was manifested to take away our sins" and in Paul's letter to the Hebrews, says that Christ appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself, so Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many, and unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation. The Apostle Peter states that Christ bore our sins in his own body on the tree, for Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God being put to death in the flesh but quickened by the Spirit. The Apostle Paul in his first letter to the Corinthians, xv. 3, "For I delivered unto you first of all that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures." Jesus after his resurrection appeared unto his disciples and opened up their understanding that they might understand the Scriptures concerning himself, and said unto them, "Thus it is written, and thus it behoved Christ to suffer and to rise from the dead the third day, and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name, among all nations beginning at Jerusalem, and ye are witnesses of these things." Acts ii. we find the apostles preaching to the people in Jerusalem, "And they cried out, Men and brethren, what shall we do? Repent and be baptized, every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins." Acts viii. 38, 39. "Be it known unto you, men and brethren, that through this man is preached the forgiveness of sins and by him all that believe are justified from all things from which ye could not be justified by the law of Moses." Acts v. 29, 32, "The God of our Fathers raised up Jesus whom ye slew and hanged on a tree, him hath God exalted with his right hand a Prince and a Savior, for to give repentance to Israel and forgiveness of sins and we are his witnesses of these things." Acts x. 34 to end, "And he commanded us to preach unto the people and to testify that it is he which was ordained of God, the Judge of quick and the dead, and to him give all the prophets witness that through his name whosoever believeth in him shall have remission of sins," and when the blood of Christ is applied it washes away all sin, we are clothed with the righteousness of Christ, and are reconciled to God, which will be made manifest at the appearing of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, for when he comes we shall be like him. Amen.

NOTICE.

I wish to say to the brethren that the second edition of my pamphlet—"The Reasons of My Withdrawal from the Evangelical Association," is just from the press and ready to send. 25 pages, at 5 cents per copy. Send orders to A. H. Zilmer, Plymouth, Ind.

A Dark Outlook.

Henry A. Stinton, writing in the Outlook, says: The time of crisis is upon our churches. Men are becoming more and more absorbed in business and amusements. The commercial horizon is rapidly widening. Competition at home and opening opportunities abroad incite men to new enterprise, with the immediate effect of making business more interesting and exacting in its demands both upon time and thought. Politics and sport have each "grown to be a business." Therefore it is not strange that men are finding that they have very little time to devote to religious affairs. This brings a crisis in religious work. It was never harder to support churches and never more difficult to get Christian work efficiently performed, than it is today.

To the Ministers in Indiana.

I sent a certified list of the ministers in Indiana, and also two marked copies of THE RESTITUTION, showing the relation of the preaching brethren of the Indiana Conference, to Mr. F. C. Donald, Commissioner of the Central Passenger Association. The brethren may refer to these in making application for Half Fare Permits, for 1903, and need not send RESTITUTIONS.

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Woodruff, Elizabeth, N. J.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

TO OUR PATRONS.

We want more readers for THE RESTITUTION. We want One Thousand new names on our list before January 1st, 1903, and can have them if you will help us.

In every Church of our faith in the land there are members who do not take our paper, who would be benefited by reading it.

There are those who are secluded by circumstances from any Church fellowship, who would be kept firmer in the faith, helped and strengthened for the battles of life if they had THE RESTITUTION each week.

There are others interested in the truths we hold, who would often have their attention called to the principles of our faith by reading our paper. When no preacher can be heard, when you cannot talk to them, THE RESTITUTION in their homes would be ever a present visitor—a missionary that will do more than any other one thing to keep the interest alive.

There are those whom we wish were interested in the Bible and what it promises. Many of this class of persons have never had the opportunity, or have neglected the matter when it was before them.

You are surely known to people such as are mentioned, and you are surely interested in them. We are satisfied you are not unmindful of their eternal well-being. How much do you care for these people? Will you join with us in getting the gospel before them, and keeping it there a year? We have this to offer to you for consideration.

We will send THE RESTITUTION one year to NEW Subscribers for $1.00. We will start them as soon as received and give credit to the end of 1903.

With a little persistent effort in presenting the paper to those you know who are not taking it, you can induce them to try it for $1.00. If you want some sample papers we will gladly supply them to you, and our list can be increased by 1000 names by Jan. 1st. It can be done easily if you will act on this suggestion, and get those near you interested. If each reader would get a new name our list would be doubled at once.

It would seem as if every reader of THE RESTITUTION could exert influence enough to get one more new name if the effort was made. Will you try it? If the first person you suggest it to does not respond, do not be discouraged, but try some one else. Perhaps the one you least expect will answer quickest.

Did you ever stop to figure up how many words are contained in our paper in a year? You will be surprised at the number of sermons it contains. There is variety too. There is doctrine and the practical, encouragement and cheer, and comfort for the distressed. Each phase of teaching would make several good sized books during the year. You can do no work that yields as large a return for the money expended as by sending THE RESTITUTION to a friend for a year.

Will you not start right away and send one name, and next week when that person gets his paper, some one else will hear of it, and you can send another subscriber.

Poetry.

Omnipresence.

Dost wonder where thou'lt find thy rest?
Would'st choose it, tired one,
Under the lindens by the Rhine?
'Neath palms in a land of sun?

Shalt die unknown and soon forgot
In some strange desert land?
Or toss, the sport of ocean waves,
Upon a coral strand?

Come not! All encircling
God's heaven round me lies,
And, like silent, watchful eyes,
Watching stars are in the skies.

The Wisdom of Saloomoon. Chap. 14.

1. Again some one when sending out a ship and about to make his way through wild waves calleth for aid on a wooden thing more rotten than the ship that carrieth him.

2. For an ardent desire for voyages designed that an artisan with wisdom constructed it.

3. And forethought thy (wisdom's) father piloteth it, because thou hast given a way even on the sea and a safe path in the waves;

4. Showing that thou art able to save from everything, that even without skill one may walk upon it. (the sea).

5. But thou dost desire the works of thy wisdom not to be without effort; therefore men entrust their souls (lives) to even a least wooden affair, and passing through waves have been saved by a light raft.

6. For even when haughty giants of old were perishing, the hope of the cosmos escaping upon a light-floating-thing left behind generic seed when piloted by thy hand.

7. For a wooden [illegible] righteousness come to pass was blessed.

8. But the thing made with hands and the one who made it was accursed, because he wrought the corruptible thing and named it a god.

9. For in like manner is the irreverent man and his irreverence hateful to God.

10. Yea, both the thing done and the doer will have been cut off.

11. Therefore there will be a visitation on the idols of the nations also, because they have become an abomination in God's generic creation, and a stumbling-blocks for men's souls and a snare for the feet of the thoughtless.

12. For a beginning of harlotry is one's thought of idols, and the finding of them a corruption of life.

13. For neither was it from the outset nor will it be in the aeonate age.

14. For men's vain glory entered into the cosmos and therefore was their short-cut end despised.

15. For a father pining with an untimely sorrow for the child quickly taken away, hath honored as a god now the man then dead, having made him an image, and hath offered to things made with hands mysteries and perfecting rites.

16. After that in time the irreverent custom laid hold of hath been watched to be kept as a law, and by the decrees of petty rulers the graven things have become superstitiously worshiped.

17. And men who, because of their living far away were unable to honor such by seeing them, having procured a copy of the distant one's looks, made a manifest image of the king who was being honored, that they might speedily flatter him though absent as present.

18. And the ambition of the artist to please stimulated even those who were pure in their purpose unto an increased devotion to false worship.

19. For the one who desired to please the controller elaborated the likeness with his art to an excess of beauty.

20. And the fulness breaking out into an ulcerous scab, because of the charm of the workmanship, they came to account the one honored a little before as a man an object of worship.

21. And this hath become a snare in one's pursuit of a living, because men have been made bond servants of circumstance or tyranny and have invested stones and sticks with a name that hath nothing in common with them.

22. Then to be led astray concerning one's knowledge of God hath not sufficed, but even while living in a great war of ignorance they have called such calamities peace.

23. For while conducting child-murdering perfecting rites or hidden mysteries or frantic revellings of strange ordinances,

24. They neither watch to guard the usual ways of living nor pure marriage-rites any more; but each one lieth in wait to destroy the other, or by promoting bastardy causeth distress.

25. And blood and murder, theft and deceit, corruption, unfaithfulness, disturbance, cumulative oath-taking, tumultuous murmuring of the good,

26. Forgetfulness of favor, pollution of souls, interchange of generic-origin, disorder of marriages, adultery and licentiousness, lay hold of all in a pele mele confusion.

27. For the false-worship of the nameless idols is the beginning of every evil and its cause and end.

28. For whether they rave when rejoicing or prophesy lies or live in an unjust way, or quickly add oath to oath,

29. Trusting forsooth in soulless idols and having sworn in an unjust way they do not expect to be injured.

30. But both the assertions of right will overtake them, because they have thought in an evil way concerning God in giving heed to idols, and because by swearing in an unjust way with deceit they have despised holiness.

31. For not the power of those who swear but the righteous penalty for those who sin cometh out always upon the eyesight of the wrong-doers.

COMMENT.

This chapter is Saloomoon's philosophical disquisition of what idolatry really is and why it is the deadly sin that inspiration so clearly denominates it; and he makes it evident that the subtler forms and not the grosser are the most demoralizing to the individual or the nation. The whole thing is a lie and its generic author "the father of lies." The reader will observe that the argument is really one of utility and that idolatry in its general and specific result is the worst thing man can do because even worse than useless. While true worship is the best thing man can do because by doing it he is promoting his own best interest in this life and the life to come. In the light of Saloomoon's whole argument so far we see why John calls "the Holy Spirit" "the Spirit of the truth" quoting this as the specific teaching of Jeesous.

Summed up in a word true worship is "the truth" and idolatry is "the lie," and John makes God the Father of one and Satan the father of the other. Loyalty to one therefore is disloyalty to the other. The main question then today as since time began is, Choose ye whom ye will serve, God or Satan, truth or a lie, life or death, utility or worse than wasted energy.

CHAS. GARDNER.

"Take Heed What You Hear."

The apostle bids us give heed, earnest heed to the things we have heard. Why give earnest heed? "Lest at any time we should let them slip." That little word slip means so much. The promises of God nor the added graces ever leave us all at one time. No, there is not and never has been a single individual who left off the Christian graces all at once. They are not acquired at a single bound; neither are they lost as a whole. No, no; they slip from us one by one as the grains of sand would slip between our fingers. What have we heard? We have heard of the promised seed when man first fell, the promise was that the seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head. This promise runs through the Bible like a golden thread. And we have been spoken to in these last days by his Son, (this seed) whom he hath appointed heir of all things. Even the angels are not permitted to sit at the right hand of the Father as is this his Son, while waiting for his enemies to be made his footstool. Yes; these are the reasons; we should give heed, earnest heed, Lest we should let them slip. If the Word spoken by angels was steadfast, and every transgression and disobedience received a just recompense of reward, how shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation, which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him. We are indeed compassed about with a great cloud of witnesses, shall we give heed? When Barnabas came to Antioch, the exhortation he gave the brethren was grand, "He was glad and exhorted them all, that with purpose of heart they would cleave unto the Lord." This is cheering, and helping us to hold out faithful while waiting for our Master to leave the Father's throne, and bid us sit with him in his throne. Rev. iii. 21. Barnabas left Antioch and went to Tarsus to seek Paul, and bring him to Antioch. And it came to pass they (Barnabas and Paul) assembled a whole year with the church and taught much people. Besides teaching the people, they exhorted the church to exhort one another. Paul says on one occasion, "Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering, (for he is faithful that promised). And let us consider one another, to provoke unto love and good works. Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together as the manner of some is, but exhorting one another and so much the more as you see the day approaching."

Dear brother and sister, If we are not considering one another, and if we forsake assembling and exhorting one another, does it not look like our faith is wavering? Then again he says, "Let us draw near with a true heart, in full assurance of faith," yes, with a true purpose of heart cleave to the Lord. How can we draw near or consider one another when we do not assemble? The importance of meeting to commemorate the Lord's death till he comes is inestimable. It rivets our minds on the death that brought life. It requires an examination of ourselves to see if we are worthy.

Pardon me for again telling the experience of the little band in Salem, Ohio. For many years they have met each first day to commemorate the Lord's death and exhort one another. This they are doing with "True purpose of heart." They now have the assistance of Brother and Sister Neil, of Cleveland, who have made a complete sacrifice for the gospel. Their exhortations come to us like those of Paul and Barnabas. They have organized a Sunday school at 9:30, after which Bro. Neil preaches a good sermon, for truly he is a "workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word." Immediately after the sermon we partake of the bread and wine, which shows the Lord's death. After this a paper is read by some brother or sister on a subject announced the previous Sunday, so all may think and talk on the same, and exhort one another as commanded. I tell the arrangement of our meetings for the encouragement of isolated brethren.

Dear isolated ones, do not deprive yourselves of these rich blessings because you are few in numbers. Remember where two or three meet "with true purpose of heart" there you will be acknowledged and blessed. "God who is rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith he loved us; even when we were dead in sins hath quickened us together, and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus." Why? "That in the ages to come he might show the exceeding riches of his grace, in his kindness toward us, through Christ Jesus." While waiting may we "give earnest heed to the things which we have heard." And let us sing with the Spirit and understanding.

Awake my soul, stretch every nerve,
And press with vigor on;
A heavenly race demands thy zeal,
And an immortal crown.

Scriptural Humor.

"He that sitteth in the heavens shall laugh. The Lord shall name them in derision."

Perhaps there is nothing more distasteful to a thinking person than the "simpering idiot" that continually giggles in an atmosphere of strained and artificial humor, turning every thing into an incessant and wearisome joke and, on the other hand, the sad and solemn personage who never sees the humorous side of things is almost as great a calamity. Humor is a good thing, a great thing, as we see by the quotation at the headline, a divine quality. Without the balancing sense of humor we would have no mental perspective; no power of "focusing," as it were, between the vast ranges from the sublime to the ridiculous.

There was a very intelligent article published some time ago in one of the monthly magazines on the literary value of the Bible, in which it was stated, among other things, that every sentiment of humanity was treated in the Scriptures with, perhaps, the sole exception of humor. This seems also to be the generally accepted idea of the matter, and there are some reasons why such an error has been made.

No doubt the quaint and archaic construction of language used in the common version, has contributed something toward the mistake, but possibly the main cause is the very solemn nasal monotone in which the Word is usually read in public meeting, in which all expression is conscientiously omitted and the meaning blurred in the blending reverberations along the hallowed aisles.

We have Bible humor beginning as far back as Genesis. In the beautiful story of [illegible] and his brethren (a literary marvel in the art of story telling, by the way) there is a quaint humor runs all through, as well as the narration of the first practical joke on record—hiding the cup and money in the sacks. That the denouement was most pathetic does not alter the fact of the humor. Bible humor sometimes—nearly always—treads on the heels of tragedy. The parable of the aspiring bramble bush that summoned all the trees of the forest to "come and put their trust in its shadow" is a humorous sarcasm all the more marked because it gleams out suddenly from the murder of a whole family. Judges ix. 15. Then there was the genial Samson—the much misunderstood Samson that the theologians usually damn as one "fallen from grace," but whose name still stands among the worthies "of whom the world was not worthy." Heb. xi. 32. Samson the jovial, the soft hearted and the true, who battled for Israel—alone. But the record of Samson as a humorist is too long for present consideration—some time later may be. Then there was David, who cut off Saul's skirt (coat tail), and regretted having done so to the "Lord's anointed" when he saw the ridiculous figure he cut. Still he played a trick on him again when he took his spear and his jug (cruse).

Then the Proverbs are studded all over with bright bits of humor—of the fool that "holdeth his peace" and has himself counted for wise, and so on. Elijah the prophet, mocking the prophets of Baal, was something of a humorist; but perhaps the masterpiece of all is to be found in Isa. xliv.—the manufacture of the home-made god—note the details of the smith and the carpenter; the hewing the thing out and the pinning of it down with the odd chips to bake and to broil and to keep warm with. Oh, there is plenty of humor in the Bible if you know how to look for it.

Speaking with a clerical friend one day on the subject of humor I asked him what he thought of the Savior as a humorist. After a pause sufficiently long for him to recover from the shock he answered in a subdued and solemn tone that "he certainly had never thought of him in such a light as that." "Well, now, listen to this," I said. "Cast out the beam out of thine own eye, then thou shalt see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye.' Now a beam," I continued, "is a log of wood measuring anywhere from 20 to 30 feet long, 8 to 12 inches wide and 2 or 3 inches thick—don't you see something funny in a fellow carrying round such a thing as that in his eye?" "Come to think of it," said my friend, suddenly catching on, for he was a very bright m[illegible] have the same sort of thing in 'straining at a gnat and swallowing a camel.'" "Exactly so," I said, "the meaning is made all the clearer from the rank absurdity of the illustration." Now this deft use of illustration in which the recoil makes the hit is very frequent in the Bible and the Son of Man often made use of it. Unfortunately, some of the witless expounders have taken such sayings straight and solemn: for instance the camel that crawls through the "Needle's Eye" gate, at Jerusalem, where, of course, the impossibility—the real point—is entirely lost.

But, perhaps, of all the witless interpretations of the Lord's sayings the very worst is the story of the "Rich man and Lazarus." A horrible tale it is; wierd, cruel, merciless, utterly at variance with all the characteristics of the "Gentle Nazarene"—torment in flames after the manner of classical mythology, with no pity in it and no God. It is the only place in the Bible that is at all in touch with the heathenism of the neighboring nations. Even then it has a Hebrew flavor about it. Abraham is substituted for Pluto, and the Elysian fields and Tartarus are called by other names, but the general plan is the same. I know some people utterly reject the whole story as a palpable interpolation, but there is not the slightest historical evidence of that. The explanation is easy—it was addressed to the Pharisees "who derided him," Luke xvi. 15. This is a satirical picture sketched from their own superstitions (see Josephus' Antiquities of the Jews), borrowed from classical mythology. There are several side-cuts running through it, such as the enthronement of Father Abraham, compare Matt. iii. 9; Luke iii. 8; John viii. 39; but the main point made, the climax, is in the last verse: "If they believe not Moses and the prophets they will not believe even if one rose from the dead." All the detail in the background is sarcasm, biting sarcasm—fitting answer to Pharisee derision.

English literature is full of parallels to this story, and which are, in fact, unconscious innovations. Byron's "Vision of Judgment" is a notable case. No one accuses the poet in this case of narrating his own sentiments or beliefs, and so "Peter at the Gate" has passed into the common parlance of the street. . . is the privilege of the iconoclast to invade the territory of the idol. His bowing down before it is no act of worship; he is getting a better grip on it to throw it.

In the modern estimate of Jesus of Nazareth, among other things that many have forgotten is the fact that he was a genial gentleman. Some of the gross misunderstanding of his teaching is caused by not making an allowance for the smile that accompanied the delivery of the words.

Read the story of the rich man and Lazarus with a smile as a hit, with just a tinge of sarcasm in the controversy across the gulf (answering roughly to Styx) and accent the iteration on Father Abraham, and it needs no expounding. It reads itself to any one acquainted with satirical literature.

Is it not strange that he who is allowed by all (believing and unbelieving) to be the most merciful of mankind stands out alone as the introducer of eternal torment. Only from his words is this foul doctrine construed and principally from this one story. The reason is that his words have either been read with the scowl of the mediæval monk or the frown of the bigoted Puritan, or else, perhaps, drowned in the ecclesiastical drawl.—J. F. Gellatly in Denton Journal.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, DEC. 17, 1902.

MRS. U. S. Grant, widow of ex-President Grant, died at Washington Dec. 18th.

"God's love—forget it not, sorrowing one, lowest one, forgotten one, —God's love is over all, enduring through all."

HARE says, "To form a correct judgment concerning the tendency of any doctrine, we should rather look at the forms it bears in the disciples than in the teacher, for he only made it—they are made by it."

"WHEN a man of Paul's character and work, felt the possibility that he might fall away, and was filled with anxious watchfulness and care lest he should fall short of his reward, what ought our positions and our feelings to be?"

F. W. ROBERTSON says, "Happy the child who is suffered to be, and content to be what God meant it to be,—a child while childhood lasts. Happy the parent who does not force artificial manners, precocious feelings, premature religion."

PARENTS,—Richter says that "every first thing continues forever with the child; the first color, the first music, the first flower, paint the foreground of his life. The first inner or outer object of love, injustice, or such like, throws a shadow immeasureably far along his after years."

THE British and German warships are enforcing their demands on Venezuela, bombarding forts, sinking ships and blockading harbors. Meanwhile the United States has warned these powers that she will consent no nothing but a "peaceful blockade," whatever that may mean.

A GRACIOUS invitation this:—"Come my people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut the door about thee. Hide thyself as it were for a little moment, till the indignation be overpast, for behold the Lord cometh out of his place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity; the earth shall disclose her blood and shall no more cover her slain." May we all hear it, brothers and sisters.

QUITE a good many new names have been added to our list, and we wish to thank our kind friends for favors in this line. We can still take more. We do not think there is another way to work in the Master's vineyard that will yield better fruit for one dollar expended than by sending THE RESTITUTION to some one for a year. Consider what it does, and we think you will agree with us. Let us have all the names you can get. We send back paper to each one, so all get more than the year's papers.

READ the proposal in last week's paper for a "New Year's Greeting." Do you not want to take part in sending a word of cheer to your brother? Let the response be hearty and with gladness. Surely our hope is a blessed hope, and we can well afford to give voice to our heart's affection to God and for each other. Let those who are in the habit of writing be heard in this "social meeting," and those who seldom write, thinking they can give nothing worth while. The excuse that others can do so much better, is not a "good excuse" this time. Let each join in making this feature of our paper a great blessing to the hearts of the children of the Father's household. Let the young folks of the Berean Societies, as well as the older ones enter into this matter. We invite each and all.

Abide With Me.

"A person must proceed from or be grafted into the True Vine, before he can possibly obey this exhortation, and this can only be done by exercising faith in the gospel, and being baptized into Christ's body, Gal. iii. 26, 27. Such are thenceforth "bone of his bone, and flesh of his flesh," and are therefore in Christ as the True Vine. To such alone Jesus says, "Abide in me," or live upon me, and dwell upon me, do not become severed "because the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine." This continued union with Christ is essential to the bringing forth the fruits of the Spirit enumerated by Paul in writing to the Galatians, v. 22, 23. None but healthy branches can produce such results, which will form the believer's passport into the kingdom of God. On the other hand, "Every branch in me that beareth not fruit he taketh away," that is, every immersed believer who continues not to sow to the Spirit, such will reap corruption at the coming of the Lord, as so many "tares gathered into bundles to be burned." They are not allowed to continue longer their unprofitable connection with Christ and the fruit-bearing branches, but are considered as offending brethren, and will be weeded out of the kingdom."

JUST now there seems to be a pause, an awe-inspiring lull before the storm bursts. Soon the whole world will plunge forward with an accelerated momentum, to the climax of her glorious historical drama. Individuals and nations will mingle in bloody wars in the final frightful scenes of royal revolution, of priestly tyranny, and superstition, of famine, pestilence, flood and fire of quaking earth and lowering sky, all of which shall usher in the dawn of a new civilization and crown the era of universal happiness, peace and good will, and all worship one God of righteousness.

An Explanation.

Since our offer to new names, one brother writes saying if we cannot give old subscribers the same rate, we may erase his name when his time is out. We are inclined to think that the brother does not understand this matter, or he would not write so, and for his benefit and others who may not fully understand, we make this explanation.

Some years ago THE RESTITUTION was $2.00 per year, and but three-fourths the present size. It was contended by some that the price was too high, and when the present publisher assumed control the price was reduced to $1.50 and the size increased as it is now.

Every one knows that there are many papers much larger that are sold at $1.00 per year. The reason of this is that they have a large income from advertizing, and the great number of subscribers they have make it possible to do so, and the business is profitable.

The number of subscribers to THE RESTITUTION is of course limited to a few hundreds, while theirs run into the tens of thousands. It is just as much work to prepare the [illegible] and make all things ready for the less number as for the greatest issue, and in this lies the chief cost in printing. Now, after all is prepared the expense of a few more hundreds of sheets of paper, with printing, postage, etc., is not so great as to prepare a new issue with new matter.

We therefore thought to ask our friends to solicit others to take the paper, and to send it to new names where able to do so, that such persons might thus try it, get acquainted with it, and may be become attached to it, and wish to become permanent subscribers. At the same time making it possible for us as publisher to join with you in thus doing some missionary work in spreading the gospel to others.

With this in mind we offered to give what we could to induce this co-operation with our friends, and accept $1.00 as a trial for one year. We cannot see wherein this is an injustice to our older patrons, and we do feel that there is no cause for them to think they are discriminated against. Had we 10,000 subscribers we would most gladly give the paper to all for $1.00 a year. Consider this, brethren, and do not look at it only as it is. We are willing to trust it to your good judgment.

Hope.

What is our Hope? Hope to be of value should be grounded on substantial evidence, and should have a well founded expectation of good. Hope is of little value unless it has as its base the solid rock of truth. Life without hope is indeed sad. The most menial and humdrum life is not without hope of some sort. Cut off from hope, what wonder men and women seek the suicide's grave and put violent hands upon themselves! When hope dies out of the human heart and blank despair reigns supreme what wonder the mind becomes unhinged and insanity ensues?

How often, even in the case of those who are plentifully supplied with this world's goods, is it that they find the object upon which they had set their heart and hope crumbles at the touch and their long cherished desire fades before their eyes, leaving life a blank, hopeless and valueless. Recent years have witnessed some remarkable suicides of a class the least likely according to this world's estimation of 'good [illegible]' affected thereby. What is gold, or what are possessions to a man who knows not, or will not make a right use thereof? What is wealth without health? What is fame with a shattered constitution, and disease gnawing at his heart-strings, and the hand of death with icy fingers standing on the threshold waiting to grasp its victim? It is true that hope cannot live without an object. That object gained, if a legitimate one, so far so good; but if the object prove delusive, or a mere thing of the imagination, what then? What if memory proves "Delusive Hope's most fell destroyer?" Thousands have experienced the bitter mockery of a delusive hope, and memory has stung to the quick the hearts thus blighted. Delusive hope has tempted the unwary traveller out into the waste and sandy desert, and the mirage thus held up has proved a mockery and a snare. Instead of listening to the divine records that declare life a vapor, a shadow that passeth away, men listen to the voice of the tempter that declares life a pleasure and promises happiness and contentment to its votaries.

Paul writing to the Ephesians, ii. 12, reminds them of the time when they had no hope; and presently in the fourth chapter he speaks of the ONE hope offered by him and accepted by them, and in which they stood, and in which they rejoiced. In writing to Titus, ii. 13, he discloses what that one hope is—calls it the "Blessed Hope, even the appearing of the glory of our Great God and Savior, Jesus Christ, who gave himself on our behalf, that he might redeem us from all lawlessness and cleanse for himself a peculiar people devoted to good works." Again, in Acts xxvi. 6, we find him saying as he stands before Agrippa, speaking of the hope, as "the hope of the promise made of God to the fathers," and for which hope's sake he says he is accursed of the Jews." And on another occasion we find him saying that it was "for the hope of Israel he was a prisoner." This, to a stranger would appear to be three hopes. But no! Everything depends upon the coming again of Jesus,—it is at that time they obtain their life, which at present is hid with him in God, Col. iii. 3, enabling them to appear with him in glory; and his coming in glory thus, depends upon the fulfillment of the promise made to the fathers of the Hebrew nation, which embraced a kingdom and dominion world-wide in extent and everlasting in duration,—all the faithful reigning with him till the earth is filled with the glory of God. The one hope of the gospel embraces all this and vastly more. And, as in apostolic times, so now, this hope is an anchor to the soul of every believer, God having in infinite love and condescension confirmed his promise with an oath to give them strong consolation. Heb. vi. 13–20. We will give God the glory if some one should be led to investigate the foundation of the popular heaven-going hope,—or rather, search and see if it has any foundation in Truth; and be led to lay hold of the hope set before us.

Scientific Notes.

The Western Electrician says that an electrical invention for shearing sheep was successfully tried at Flagstaff, Arizona. It required 16 men to operate it, but it sheared 75,000 in three weeks, which would have taken a force of 48 men twice that time. The clippers are carried over the sheep by hand, but are operated by electricity. It only takes three minutes to shear a sheep, in place of eight minutes or more by hand.

The New York Sun says that on Nov. 1, a wireless message was received off Sydney Harbor on board a war ship from the station at Cornwall, England. This is by far the longest yet transmitted by wireless telegraphy.

The Electrical World and Engineer, however says that it was not successfully used during the British naval maneuvers in the Mediterranean; although it says these experiences scarcely constitute a technical failure of the method. The attacking squadrons could not make effective use of their outfits because the defence persisted in sending confusing messages.

A recent bulletin of Minnesota Agricultural Department, says: "The opinion entertained by many people that whole wheat and graham bread is more nutritious than that made by standard patent flour, is erroneous. When milk was used as a ration with bread, butter, beans, eggs and potatoes all the protein of the milk was digested, and in addition, 4.91 per cent. more of the protein of the other foods with which it was combined was digested than when the milk was omitted. Experiments with butter showed that it has a high degree of digestibility, 98 per cent of it being available to the body. Cheese should be used regularly in small quantities. It is one of the cheapest and most nutritious foods. It is possible to secure a large amount of digestible nutrients and available energy from cheese. Oatmeal, like cheese and beans is slow of digestion, requiring much intestinal work for the digestive process, but if well prepared and thoroughly cooked, it is a suitable food for persons of all habits.

Dr. J. M. Hirsch, of Chicago, places kissing and handshaking in the same category as a means of spreading contagious diseases, such as colds, catarrhs or consumption.

On the subject of right-handedness many writers have claimed that the exclusive use of the right hand is due to wrong training, and that it tends to make the whole organism one-sided. But in his Huxley memorial lecture at the Anthropological Institute, London Oct. 1, Prof. D. J. Cunningham pointed out that as far back as we can trace man it has been found that the clavicle and the long bones of the right arm were distinctly heavier and more massive than those of the opposite side, proving that man was preferentially right handed. And added that all the evidence at our disposal goes to show that right-handedness is due to a transmitted functional pre-eminence of the left brain, and this functional pre-eminence was not a hap-hazard acquisition picked up during the life-time of the individual, it rested upon some structural foundation transmitted from parent to offspring. The prominence of the left brain is explained by the crossing of the motor impulses, the left cerebral hemispheres controls and regulates the muscles of the right side."

"The human will," says F. Legge in the Academy and Literature, London, Nov. 8, "is simply the power of deciding which of two or more courses to take; in other words, it is identical with the judgment, and is controlled by the corresponding brain-centers. When these centers are undeveloped, as in infancy, or diseased, as with some persons, the will becomes defective because the power to choose is [illegible] lost." To speak of the will as a separate entity is according to Mr. Legge, to use a mere antiquated figure of speech, as far out of date as the theory that placed the soul in the pineal gland." We are glad to meet with instruction of this character because it may clear the way for some to seriously study the man whom God formed of dust, and so organized that he could be justly held to account for his conduct.

Catholics in America.

The New York Independent's correspondent at Rome, Signor Salvatore Cortesi, in speaking of the growth of Catholicism in the United States says, "After 112 years, the Roman Catholics claim 14,000,000, (which others limit to 11,000,000) with one cardinal, 17 archbishops, 77 bishops, governing 14 ecclesiastical provinces, comprising 82 dioceses, and 5 apostolic vicariates. The 33 priests of 1790 have now become 12,429, and the few chapels of that time have developed into 10,689 churches, some of which are cathedrals, which can stand comparison for richness and architectural value with the best buildings of their kind in Europe; besides 5,248 country chapels.

The one college of Georgetown has expanded into seven universities, 81 seminaries, 163 boys' colleges, and 629 girls' academies, while there are 3,857 parishes with schools, 244 orphan asylums, and 877 charitable institutions.

The population of the United States in 1790 was 3,929,214, and now has become 19 times as much, but the Catholics have multiplied 300 times, as while they were then 1-90 part of the people, they are now somewhat less than 1-5.

The largest center of the Roman Church in America is the archdiocese of New York, with an estimated Catholic population of 1,200,000—that is to say nearly 1-10 of all the Catholics in the United States, while its numbers surpass those of all the most crowded centers of Italy, including Rome, Naples, or Milan; and only the principal archdioceses in Europe, such as Cologne, with 2,528,000 people, and Vienna with 1,900,000 people, go beyond it."

We give the bare statement only, and leave our readers to make whatever deductions may suit them.

Notes By the Way.

The Conference at Plymouth, Ind., having ended, I remained a few days the guest of Bro. and Sister Underwood, and also visited with Bro. and Sister Zilmer, who did all they could to make my stay among them pleasant; being escorted by them to make brief calls upon other members of the Plymouth Church.

While I remained at Plymouth Bro. James W. Logan fell asleep in Jesus. He was the brother of Sister Chaplin, the last one of the older Logan family. Brother Zilmer addressed a large congregation at the funeral.

Brethren Underwood and Zilmer escorted me to visit Brother and Sister E. K. Barnhill, who are both sick. May the Lord be with these dear ones and restore them to health.

They also escorted me to visit Sister Chaplin-Wickizer, the widow of our much esteemed Bro. Chaplin, who now sweetly sleeps in Jesus. Her health is not good. Trust in the Lord, dear Sister, who doeth all things well.

On Thursday evening I addressed the Plymouth Church upon the topic entitled the "Thinking part of man." After service I bid farewell to the members of this church.

On Friday morning Brother Underwood escorted me to the train, when I started for Piqua, O. On Sunday morning I commenced services in the neighborhood of Sister Eidemiller and husband. The meetings continued for two weeks. A good deal of the time the weather was stormy and nights very dark, which made the congregation less than it otherwise would have been, but nevertheless the audiences were larger than we might expect under the circumstances. On favorable nights the audiences were good, and interest fine. A number are quite interested, and I see no reason why a nice little congregation cannot be planted at this place. Brethren Waggoner and Austin have previously conducted meetings at this place.

I also visited with Bro. and Sister Westfall, who are anxious to have the gospel proclaimed in their neighborhood. A goodly number of the Household of Faith from Bush Creek, (about a mile from Fidelity) visited the meetings at different times, riding some twelve or thirteen miles. Misses Edna and Carrie Burnside, from [illegible], rendered good service in leading the singing. They have a talent in that line they owe to the Master, and may the Lord lend them to consecrate their lives and talent to his service. It is a beautiful sight to see young people consecrate their lives to the dear Savior, who loves them so dearly. The frivolities of life wont count for anything in that auspicious day when the Lord shall be revealed from heaven in power and in great glory.

God's blessed book says, "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them."

During these services I had the pleasure of baptizing one precious jewel into the name of the Lord Jesus. The Lord is going to make up his jewels soon, and may this one shine as a brilliant gem among his jewels.

"Then they that feared the Lord, spake often one to another; and the Lord hearkened and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written before him for them that feared the Lord and thought upon his name; and they shall be mine saith the Lord of hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels; and I will spare them, as a man spareth his own son that serveth him."

Now dear readers, let us meditate seriously a moment, and ask ourselves the question, Am I a jewel? am I a gem, fit to grace the Savior's crown? If we should judge ourselves that we are not, how can we expect the Lord to count us as a jewel, if we are self confident that we are not? A pure, holy, and self-sacrificing life is a gem in his sight. If we had many such lives, the poor would have the gospel preached unto them. Your evangelists would not have to pass by neighborhoods where he is entreated to go, but cannot because he is unable to sustain the costs.

The meetings at this place closed on Sunday night, with a good sized audience, and splendid interest. Sister Eidemiller and husband have invited me to return next fall, and hold a series of meetings in the city of Troy, which I will endeavor to do.

On Monday morning Sister Eidemiller, by means of carriage, conveyed myself and the two young lady singers to Bush Creek, about a mile from Fidelity.

On Tuesday evening I commenced a series of meetings at this place. The first meeting opened up good. I may continue here about two weeks, and one week in Bro. and Sister Westfall's neighborhood, and then I go to Springfield, Ohio, and after that to Cleveland, next to Canada, and so on filling many other appointments in the east, and then I shall work a while in Virginia, etc.

Praise the Lord! This service of the Lord is so beautiful. I find warm-hearted brethren and sisters everywhere. While they are all strangers to me in the flesh, yet we need no formality in getting acquainted. There is no band of union so strong as the "Blessed Hope," and the fellow-feeling that we are all fellow-citizens in the commonwealth of Israel. The old Abrahamic covenants of promise are ever new.

Every place without exception where I have visited, sweet memories are left behind.

The Lord be with you all. Amen.

A Conference Echo.

Dear Restitution:

It is somewhat late, but, I think, not yet amiss, for a few remarks on the Indiana State Conference held at Plymouth. By the favor of God, through some brethren, I had the pleasure and profit of being present on Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 15th and 16th. Sister Mary Knowles of Salem, had like myself, a desire to be present at a Conference, and opportunity being made for us we went together, and arrived Saturday at ten a. m.

Went to Bro. Underwood's where Sister Underwood made us kindly welcome, and we felt at home at once. In a few minutes met Bro. W. H. Wilson, and soon after Bro. Underwood, who added his kindness to that of Sister Underwood. At 11 o'clock Conference claimed our attention. I will not attempt to give every detail. Before I went, and for several years, I did not have the best opinion of Conferences, and wished for the experience of just one, that I might judge for myself. Believing that I knew our Brother Zilmer thoroughly well, and the names on the programme were also of great interest to me from the work and reputation of the brothers; I was pleased to think I might meet them. I met them, and speaking of them as I found them, I found valiant soldiers of the cross. Men who had and who were willing to endure hardness for righteousness' sake. Men who were not ashamed of their Lord and Master—who are willing to endure the cross, so as to gain the crown. Men, young and middle aged, who poured out the gospel stream in burning words with determined earnest energy. Men who still older, and even aged, when speaking of the way of salvation, and that blessed hope, were woke up by the glow of the words they spoke, once more renewed the energy of youth, and seemed neither to know nor feel weight of years.

The brethren present had a rare treat of good things, and those who knew not the gospel never had it more earnestly, clearly, and convincingly presented. The spirit of unity and affection of the gospel seemed to prevail everywhere and all the time we were there. Those present, who had attended other conferences, agreed that this one of all, was the most pleasant and successful—in short, a success.

We had much pleasant and profitable conversation with those of like precious faith we met at the homes of those who kindly invited us. We were one happy family, and the time seemed wonderfully short.

Monday morning many were gathered at the home of Bro. and Sister Underwood for a little further enjoyment of each others' society. But time, restless time, called us to part, and we left Plymouth with many a kind and tender good by, with loving messages for the little flock in Salem, and the larger one in Cleveland, from whom I carried a kind greeting to the Conference.

I also had many affectionate words for Bro. Joblin, with whom I was associated for years in the gospel.

We left Plymouth believing that the gospel had been preached, that God and his Son Jesus Christ had been honored, and if the good dispensed at the Conference has been carried away and scattered by those from abroad, good must result. I came away with a more firm desire than ever to use all that God had given me to his glory. To spend and be spent for the cause of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Your brother waiting for him.

Is All Well?

Watchman, what of the night? Watchman, what of the night? The watchman said, The morning and also the night Isa. xx. 11, 12.

Goes the watchman through the night;
Hark the bell!
Are the people safely dwelling?
Are the angels good news telling?
Are the hymns of gladness swelling?
Is there nay foe in sight?
Is all well?

Ah! the moon and stars above,
What see they?
Do the workers who are weary
Lose in sleep their troubles dreary,
And awake to hopes more cheery?
Do they know the power of love
For each day?

Watchman, what of this late night?
Hear the knell!
Do you know men tired of trying?
Can you hear prayer and in sighing?
Do you see the people dying?
Is the haven yet in sight?
Is all well?

And the watchman smiled, and said,
Will you tell?
All the sad hearts in the city
Are quite safe in God's great pity;
And the sorrow and the sadness,
Shall with morning change to gladness;
God, and love, are overhead:
All is well.

Gospel of the Kingdom of God Endangered in Scotland. No. 2.

"We ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard lest at any time we should let them slip." Hebrews.

"With one mind striving together for the faith of the gospel." Paul.

In the preceding paper mention was made of certain articles printed in the Messenger [Glasgow] which were passed under review by the present writer in THE RESTITUTION. The drift of the articles was shown by some selected sentences which were quoted, and which, with notes from the Review of the same, were given insertion in THE RESTITUTION.

Brief notices of certain queries will now be given. These queries with answers were contained in RESTITUTION, July 14, 1897; July 21, 1897; Aug. 18, 1897; and Sept. 1, 1897.

The first query was, "What was the gospel of the kingdom?" Answer, Fully stated—The glad tidings concerning the approach of the restored government of Jehovah over the twelve tribes of Israel, gathered to their own land." This answer was followed by certain items of Israelitish history, giving quotations from Exod. xix. 6; xxiv. 1-8; 1 Sam. xvi. 3; 2 Sam. ii. 4; v. 3; Ezek. xxi. 26, 27; Dan. vii. 13, 14, 27; also items as to the preaching etc. in New Testament. Matt. iii. 1; iv. 17, 23; Acts i. 6, 7; ii. 30; iii. 19, 20; viii. 12; Heb. ix. 28.

Another query was, "Were the teachings in Matt. v. 3-12 (the Beatitudes) John iii. 14-16; the parables of the sower, the talents, and prodigal son, included in the gospel of the kingdom? If not, were they gospel at all?" Answer, "The gospel was a public proclamation by our Lord and his apostles; not a discourse on religious subjects. There is no record that the teachings referred to formed part of any such public proclamation in which the apostles were engaged. They were only used by our Lord."

Another was, "Why must teachings which in their nature are gospel or good news, and which have express reference to the kingdom (such as the beatitudes and many of the parables) be excluded from the gospel of the kingdom?" Answer, "The question that suggests itself here is, why should such things be included?.....Whatever may be the intrinsic character of such teachings.....there is no evidence that they are even spoken of as The gospel."

These are but samples of nineteen queries, and the reader will observe that their drift is to cast doubts on the simple character of the proclamation of our Lord and his apostles, and to mix it up with his general teachings. The tendency of this is to lessen the relative importance of the "gospel of the kingdom" as an element of "the faith once delivered to the saints."

We read in the writings of the apostles about the "obedience of faith." In Rom. xvi. 26, this is said to have been the principal purpose of preaching the gospel among all nations. A very pointed allusion is made to this term in the Acts of Apostles vi. 7, where it is said "a great company of the priests were obedient to the faith." Can there be any doubt that this expression meant that the persons referred to rendered that obedience which the Lord required when he issued his commission—"He that believeth and is baptised shall be saved?" Again, it is written, "Without faith it is impossible to please him" (God) and that "faith is the substance of things hoped for," that is, certain blessings belonging to the future. Heb. xi. Again, "There is one faith, one hope, one baptism."

Keeping these things in mind, we may glance at some facts in the religious world around us.

The mass of the professing Christian world have been sprinkled in infancy, of course destitute of intelligence, not to speak of faith. It will not be denied that "the obedience of faith" is here totally absent.

In the present day many grown up persons have been dipped in water, with the formality of a religious ordinance, professing to believe the gospel, thereby expecting salvation; but whose belief falls infinitely short of the gospel preached by Christ, being absolutely ignorant of that gospel of the kingdom of God he was sent to preach. Does any one allege that here we have the "obedience of faith," the "one faith," the "one hope," or the "one baptism?"

An illustration may be offered. The "Reformation" of Walter Scott, and Alexander Campbell in the United States, may be said to have come near to the belief of the gospel. As a first principle they proclaimed that "Jesus is the Christ," but really failed to understand it from ignorance or from the denial of the Bible meaning of the title, The Christ. They possibly were "not far from the kingdom of God," but yet quite far enough to incur the doom of our Lord's dictum, "If ye believe not that I am he, ye shall die in your sins." If the commission of Christ is unintelligible it cannot be carried out either in personal "obedience of faith," or in the formation of a church, which were nothing short of will-worship. If it is intelligible, as is here maintained, will not faithfulness to the Lord give due effect to it in both respects mentioned. It was so carried into effect by the Apostles, ergo, it was intelligible. Scott and Campbell were educated men, scholarly and zealous, both having been trained for the ministry of certain popular branches of the professing Christian church, and yet came short of the truth.

By a wonderful Providence some half century ago some light was shed on our Lord's commission by John Thoinas, M. D. of the United States. A number of persons have been immersed believing that gospel of the kingdom of God which Christ preached, as well as what was appended thereto after his ascension. 1 Cor. xv. 1-4. It is really a simple matter of Christ's own words, understood in their plain, natural sense, versus human reasoning, human ignorance, or human perversity. There stands his words—"This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world".....
"Preach the gospel.....he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." Is not this commission paramount over all human opinions?

It is well known, and the religious world is evidence of the fact, that anything can be explained away, or have a different meaning imposed upon it by human ingenuity. The Jews were charged by our Lord with "making the Word of God of none effect through their tradition." Is not the commission of Christ made of none effect through the traditions of men? In our Lord's time when "he came to his own his own received him not," probably many. And these had the benefit of his personal teachings. Even among those who rendered the "obedience of faith," some made "shipwreck" of their faith. If such was the case in the first century, it need not be wondered at if the same should occur in the twentieth. The warning is still necessary—"We ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard lest at any time we should let them slip."

It is hoped that what has been advanced in the foregoing articles has no application to the readers of THE RESTITUTION, or to any of the churches connected therewith. At the same time the remarks may be useful as a note of warning, and in that respect, they are offered for the careful consideration of all.

Selections.

The Drift of the Times.

"This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come."

Is there an apostasy? To this question all who see the situation and understand the signs of the predicted falling away, must answer, "Yes." Many who recognize that the difference between much of the teaching of the modern churches and that of those who founded them is so radical as to amount to the entire abandonment of their old positions, consider it the evolution of a purer faith. Others see that at last the teachings of Thomas Paine and other infidels, who denied the truthfulness and infallibility of the Bible, have come to be accepted in most of the seminaries for the preparation of ministers of the gospel.

There are many, however, who perceive that the movement has gone much farther than to attack the Bible on which the faith rests, and has assailed the fundamental doctrine of the Christian religion. That which distinguishes the gospel from pagan and apostate religions is the fact that it is not a system of morals, but glad tidings of redemption, expiation, and forgiveness of sins. It is now common to encounter preachers and teachers who reject the doctrine of the blood of Jesus, and many of those who accept it intellectually never preach anything but salvation by character. The result is that a large portion of the Christian churches are led back to the same place in which the gospel found our pagan ancestors—condemned by their consciences, but without a Savior. One who recently visited, on successive Sunday evenings, the principal churches of one of our large cities, testifies that he did not hear one preacher emphasize the finished work of Christ, or say one word that would have given light to a sinner seeking the way of salvation. With the abandonment of the doctrine which marks the fundamental contention of Christianity with heathenism, it is not surprising that belief in the salvation of the heathen is gaining ground.

Plain as are the evidences of the departure of the professing people of God from the truth, it is even more evident that holy standards of life are being set aside. No one believes that Wesley would tolerate the worldliness of the institution founded by him. Who of the Puritans would recognize the churches which proudly claim a Puritan ancestry? They would turn in disgust from the Unitarian doctrines which are now preached, the silly papal holidays, and the vanities of the modern church.

It is our growing conviction, however, that the apostasy is deeper than all these things. Sin, unbridled, save by the demands of respectability and fear of publicity, unrebuked by pulpit or pew, is in the religious life of this land an incurable sore that is surely and rapidly bringing the professing church to utter ruin.

The most open and unblushing sin of the churches is the love of gold. Even preachers in their home missionary sermons might be accused of obtaining money under false pretenses, when they ask the poor to contribute to the work of sending the gospel to the abandoned people of the frontier, then apply it to their own allowance from the society, or when it is spent to make a $600 salary mount up to $800 or more. Covetousness, the idolatry of our day, is hardly dealt with at all.

But perhaps no sin is so universal as lasciviousness in its various forms, thriving as it does on secrecy. Every physician knows some chapters of the disgusting story, and the crimes connected therewith. Most preachers know little about it, because they deal scarcely at all with sinners. Wicked customs of society are winked at, and parents allow their sons and daughters to drift into solitary vice unwarned, and to be exposed to temptations in the midnight ride and the pleasure party, as well as in their own homes behind closed and often locked doors, which are a peril to the strongest and most virtuous character. Any preacher of the gospel who deals faithfully with sin in the lives of even the better class of people in his congregation finds it difficult to believe the revelations which come to his view.

Without question the time has come when men "will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables." Then for the sake of God's true children who have not had their eyes opened to the perils of our times, we will not cease to sound the alarm.—Gospel Message.

Civilizes Men?

There are people who believe that civilization and education will meet the world's need, and that the Bible and Christianity are not requisite for the redemption of lost humanity. But how are men to be civilized, educated and enlightened without the Word of God? Infidelity has never done it, and never will do it. The culture of the ancient nations was but a thin veneer over unspeakable barbarisms, cruelties, debaucheries and idolatries; and in modern times though savages have been regenerated, it never has been done by infidel theorists and philosophers. The world may be defied to point out an instance where a language has been written down, a literature created, or a tribe of savages civilized by infidels. This is the work of Christian people and Christians only.

James Chalmers, a veteran missionary, said in an address delivered before the London Missionary Society: "I have had twenty-one years' experience among natives. I have seen the semi-civilized and the civilized; I have lived with the Christian native, and I have lived, dined and slept with the cannibal. I have visited the islands of the New Hebrides, which I sincerely trust will not be handed over to the tender mercies of France. I have visited the Loyalty Group; I have seen the work of missions in the Samoan Group; I know all the islands of the Society Group; I have lived for ten years in the Hervey Group; I know a few of the groups close on the line, and for at least nine years of my life I have lived with the savages of New Guinea, but I have never yet met with a single man or woman, or with a single people, that your civilization without Christianity, has civilized. Wherever there has been the slightest spark of civilization in the Southern Seas, it has been where the gospel is preached; and wherever you find in the island of New Guinea a friendly people, or a people that will welcome you there, it is where the missionaries of the cross have been preaching Christ. Civilization! The rampart can only be stormed by those who carry the cross."

The gospel, and the gospel alone, is the power of God unto salvation, and nothing else can lift up men out of the darkness of a lost race into the light and joy of peaceful salvation and temporal prosperity. In this world; and nothing else can give them hope of endless life and glory in the world to come.—The Armory.

Be Still and Know.

Nothing is more fundamental in life than the knowledge of God. Our imperfect acquaintance with him lies at the root of all our troubles. We do not know him, therefore we misapprehend both what he does and what he says. It is because we know him so little that we dread him so much, that we run from, instead of to him. If we knew him more, and with that trust would come deliverance from unworthy fear, surcease of sorrow, emancipation, empowerment.

What, then, will make our knowledge grow? God says: "Be still and know." Stillness is the attitude and atmosphere of the learner. Truth makes little impression on that mind which will not hold itself steady and quietly absorb the impressions which seek to fasten themselves upon it. Only a transitory effect can be produced by a transitory contact. Permanent results are secured only by long-continued juxtaposition. If we are bustling about, we cannot be in the frame that takes in. It is the ship at the wharf that receives the cargo, not the one tossing on the billows. The picture can be made only on the canvas or sensitive plate at rest. Be still; that is, cease from self, for self is ever restless and turbulent; cease striving and begin abiding. How can we know God unless we listen to him? And how can we hear his voice if our ears are filled with earthly noises, voices of men, voices of our own warring appetites and passions?

Inward stillness means a great deal. Vast numbers of Christians have not compassed it yet, nay, have hardly conceived what it can be like. They are easily disturbed and agitated. Like Martha of Bethany they are "distracted about much serving, anxious and troubled about many things." They need to realize that only one thing is needful—a heart wholly stayed on God. Such a heart is kept in perfect peace. Though the storms roar without, they do not penetrate within. Restfulness is there, for refuge has been reached and nothing can harm. He who knows God will trust him, and he who trusts him will know him. He who is still from the commotion caused by the swing of worldly ambition and strife, he who has ceased from self-centered plannings and pushings, is in the right frame of mind to take in all that is meant by the grand declaration, "I am God." Such a one knows, and greatly rejoices to know, that Jehovah reigns, not chance or fate, or fortune, or Satan, or wicked men, or good men, but the wise and loving Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. Such a knowledge hushes all murmurings, quiets all repinings, disperses all gloom, fills with serenity, tranquility, perfect peace.

Calm me, my God, and keep me calm,
Safe resting on thy breast;
Soothe me with holy hymn and psalm,
And bid my spirit rest.

—Michigan Christian Advocate.

What Next?

The query standing at the head of this article came to my mind as I was thinking of the multiplicity of false doctrines of these last days, and the wonderful zeal and activity displayed by the devotees of the same.

If we are to submit to all the changes in the old Book called for, and to have all the passages which are objectionable to the many, who claim they are interpolations, eliminated, and when Professor Harper gets through cutting out the brambles with his jackknife, and all the others are done, if they ever finish, I feel constrained to ask the question, How much will we have left of the dear old Book? Or indeed will we have any? and, if so, what kind of book will they think it is then? Will it suit any better then than now?

If I should take a notion that certain parts of the Scriptures are spurious, and yet cling very tenaciously to some other part, or parts, which to me might teach some very precious truths, do I not by this method introduce a very unsafe precedent by which others may be encouraged to act accordingly, and so, following my example, may proceed to rule out my most highly cherished doctrine? And if this principle should be generally recognized and pursued we would all be sufferers. Such a policy would soon accomplish what the infidel and skeptic and other enemies of the Bible have been laboring so hard, but with such poor success, for ages to do, viz., to destroy the blessed Book.

If men were willing to be led by the Spirit of God in the study of his Word, rather than by and under some other influence, there would not be such a divergence of opinion and faith regarding its teachings. I do not believe that I have overdrawn the picture, but have presented the case as it would be if all the different objections, and changes, and eliminations were submitted to, i. e., that we would have no Bible left.

But shall we submit? Not now, at this late day, since the dear old Book has stood the storms of many centuries, and all the assaults of the great variety and shades of opposers of the past ages to the present time. We can not now surrender the Bible or any part that has stood unaffected by the crucial tests through which it has so often passed, but we will continue still to cling to the Bible.—James Howie in Herald of Life.

With Nothing to Show.

"In the course of a talk one day a gentleman told the following brief but suggestive incident:

"'I was standing one day in a smithy, which stood very close to a new building that was being erected. While I stood watching the smith at his work, a long stout wire was let down from the building with the request that he bend the end of it into a hook, and attach to it some article the workmen needed. He put the end of the wire into the fire to soften it, but turned away to some other work and left it too long. When he took the wire out, it was spoiled, and he was unable to do anything with it. And so the wire had to be drawn back, spoiled and useless.'

"The talents and opportunities that come to us are not unlike that bit of wire. They are not ours to keep, but to improve and make of service. If we neglect them, they go back to the Giver, not laden with treasure, as they should be, but empty-handed, carrying nothing."

Oh, there are some who want to get away from all their past; who, if they could, would fain begin all over again. But you must learn; you let God teach you, that the only way to get rid of your past is to get a future out of it. God will waste nothing.—Phillips Brooks.

WALKING IN TRUTH.

John said, "I rejoice greatly when the brethren come and testified of the truth that is in thee, even as thou walkest in the truth." This truth that is spoken of is the truth of the gospel. The power of God unto salvation, and they that walk in this truth shall receive manifold more in this present time, and in the world to come life everlasting. Then what a glorious thing this truth is. It not only makes us better and happier in this life but gives the promise of a life in the age to come. "Blessed are those servants whom the Lord when he cometh shall find watching (or walking in the truth.) Whoso walketh uprightly shall be saved, but he that is perverse in his ways shall fall."

One proverb says, "He that trusteth in his own heart is a fool, but whoso walketh wisely he shall be delivered." Then let us study to show ourselves approved unto God. Workmen that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth. And ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free. Buy the truth and sell it not. For the truth of the Lord endureth forever. I have chosen the way of truth. Thy judgments have I laid before me. God is a God of truth and without iniquity. Just and right is he. The question is asked, "Who shall abide in thy tabernacle? Who shall dwell in thy holy hill?"

The answer comes, "He that walketh uprightly, and worketh righteousness, and speaketh the truth in his heart."

'Tis by faith of joys to come,
We walk through deserts dark as night;
Till we arrive in peace at home,
Faith is our guide and faith our light.

So Abram by divine command
Left his own house to walk with God;
His faith beheld the promised land,
And fired his zeal along the road.

Obituary.

Elias B. Dickson died at his home in Argos, Ind. Dec. 7, 1902, aged sixty-one years, two months, and five days.

He was the son of John B. and Catherine Dickson, who at the time of his birth lived near what is now Rutland, Ind., and he has lived all of his life in Marshall County.

He was united in marriage with Miss Elizabeth Acker on April 17, 1869. To them were born three daughters—one Cora died in 1878, Hattie is the wife of Mr. Sylvester Bryan, and Miss Dora who lives at home. Sister Mary J. Price who died at Plymouth six weeks ago was his sister. Besides the widow and daughters he leaves to mourn for him two half-sisters Misses Lizzie and Dora Dickson of Plymouth, two step-sisters Mrs. Nina Pontious of South Bend, and Mrs. Jennie McDonald of near Plymouth, and many other relatives and friends.

Brother Dickson united with the Church of God on July 22, 1888, and truly of him it is written "he has lived a consistent Christian life ever since." He moved from a farm to Argos in Nov. 1900, and at the time of his death was Elder of the Church there. He has been afflicted for several years but when able to be out was always at his post doing faithfully his duty. His death was in a measure unexpected, having been confined to his bed only a few days before, but being quite weak, he was unable to withstand the disease that had attacked him, and died quietly of heart failure, conscious to the last.

The funeral service was held at the Church in Argos, on Dec. 9, conducted by Brother A. H. Zilmer, after which he was laid to rest in the old Pisgah Cemetery, there to await the summons of the angel that will call the loved children of the Lord to rise and inherit the blessings promised the faithful.

On the Lookout.

The Master has set us upon the lookout. We remember sailing over a beautiful lake in Switzerland, journeying to the village at its opposite end. Again and again, as the circling hills shut in about us, the further shore seemed close at hand and our destination nearly reached. But rounding a projecting point, the aspect would change; the mountains would part once more, and another broad expanse of water lie stretched out before us. Thus by a singular peculiarity of the landscape, the journey's end seemed almost imminent, yet constantly receding. It was striking to observe how this feature of the journey affected the voyagers. Not a passenger was found at the ship's stern gazing backward. Every one was on the lookout. All eyes were bent forward in eager expectation. All the commands and promises of Christ put us on the lookout.—A. J. Gordon.

Communicated.

"Is It Well With Your Soul?"

My friend wrote me a few days ago, "I am sorry to hear that you are threatened with long trouble, but if it is well with your soul it is not so serious."

Twenty years ago my friend passing by my spitting of blood and other bad signs of lung trouble, treating it as of little amount, so it is well with my soul, I would not have thought strange of the inquiry of my friend. No, I have been used the greater part of my life, of separating myself into two distinct persons. My mind having been thus formed, I was prepared to believe, that while my body was in great distress, with no prospect of relief, my soul might be in perfect rapture at the thought of escaping from this old castle-thunder-prison, and take a furnished mansion way up somewhere in my Father's house. (I did not have to wait for judgment.)

This theory which is still taught in nearly all the churches, as the destiny of the righteous, don't appear to be sustained in the Old or New Testament Scriptures.

The Bible treats death as a reality, that the immortal life is withheld until the return of the Prince of Life.

The first thing that spoiled my belief in the dual nature of man, came about in this way. J. F. Gellatly and myself were listening to a sermon in the M. E. Church on the rich fool who said to his soul, "Take thine ease, thou hast much goods laid up in store," etc. The preacher, aside, said, "The idea of the soul eating corn." Bro. Gellatly whispered in my ear, "That depends on how the soul has been raised. Americans like hominy, but I being raised in Scotland, prefer peas." This remark started me to study what the term "soul" meant in the Scriptures. I was surprised that "immortal souls," are not mentioned there. David asks, "Why art thou cast down?" etc., but in concluding the sentence "For I shall yet praise him," shows that he was talking to himself, when he addressed his soul.

Our Lord Jesus, when thinking of the ordeal he was to pass through said, "My soul is exceeding sorrowful" but in finishing the sentence proved that he meant himself, "Yet not my will but thine be done." It would be a serious loss to some of the churches if trading with the dead was suddenly stopped. Rome's dead often pay up better than the living. Mickey Free, on account of the hard times in Ireland, did get some sort of a rebate on what he was assessed for the repose of his father's soul.

Coming back to myself, I regret to say that my soul has been terribly afflicted for the last five months by a persistent cough, spitting blood and other bad symptoms. No, it has not been "well with my soul," and going to church or engaging in any other religious service will not improve it.

When my Doctor says he can do no more, I will just reach out my hands to my invisible but ever present Savior, and say, "Lord remember me when thou comest in thy kingdom."

During mortal life, good souls, as well as bad souls, are subject to sickness, pain and death, but the souls that are raised from corruption to immortality, will be sick no more. It will be well with them forever.

ISAAC MCCURRY, SR.

A True Story of an Indian.

In a busy town in Oklahoma, many Indians come to trade with Mr. F. Some good ones and some not so good. One of the latter chanced to buy some goods of Mr. F. The Indian saw an opportunity to take a pair of side curtains from a new buggy. A few days later Mr. F. sold the buggy, but failed to find the side curtains. Search and inquiry was made, but no curtains were found.

Long after, something like a year, Mr. F. received a letter from the Indian, stating that he had stolen a pair of buggy curtains from him, and that he was trying to live a Christain life, and wished to pay for the curtains. Mr. F. wrote him a kind letter commending his noble spirit.

It would be well to emulate such a turning about. Make restitution as did the reformed Indian. Pay all back debts, if such there be, owing no man any thing but love. The Master bids us be honest, and see that we bring no reproach on the cause.

TO OUR PATRONS.

We want more readers for THE RESTITUTION. We want One Thousand new names on our list before January 1st, 1903, and can have them if you will help us.

In every Church of our faith in the land there are members who do not take our paper, who might be benefited by reading it.

There are those who are isolated by circumstances from any Church fellowship, who would be kept firmer in the faith, helped and strengthened for the battles of life if they had THE RESTITUTION each week.

There are others interested in the truths we hold, who would often have their attention called to the principles of our faith by reading our paper. When no preacher can be heard, when you cannot talk to them, THE RESTITUTION in their homes would be ever a present visitor—a missionary that will do more than any other one thing to keep the interest alive.

There are those whom we wish were interested in the Bible and what it promises. Many of this class of persons have never had the opportunity, or have neglected the matter when it was before them.

You are surely known to people such as are mentioned, and you are surely interested in them. We are satisfied you are not unmindful of their eternal well-being. How much do you care for these people? Will you join with us in getting the gospel before them, and write to us for consideration.

We will send THE RESTITUTION one year to NEW Subscribers for $1.00. We will start them as soon as received and give credit to the end of 1903.

With a little persistent effort in presenting the paper to those you know who are not taking it, you can induce them to try it for $1.00. If you want some sample papers we will gladly supply them to you, and our list can be increased by 1000 names by Jan. 1st. It can be done easily if you will act on this suggestion, and get those near you interested. If each reader would get a new name our list would be doubled at once.

It would seem as if every reader of THE RESTITUTION could exert influence enough to get one more new name if the effort was made. Will you try it? If the first person you suggest it to does not respond, do not be discouraged, but try some one else. Perhaps the one you least expect will answer quickest.

Did you ever stop to figure up how many words are contained in our paper in a year? You will be surprised at the number of sermons it contains. There is variety too. There is doctrine and the practical, encouragement and cheer, and comfort for the distressed. Each phase of teaching would make several good sized books during the year. You can do no work that yields as large a return for the money expended as by sending THE RESTITUTION to a friend for a year.

Will you not start right away and send one name, and next week when that person gets his paper, some one else will hear of it, and you can send another subscriber.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LI. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, DECEMBER 24, 1902. NUMBER 48.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and, holy life as essential for final salvation.

CHRISTMAS.

The silent skies are full of speech
For who hath ears to hear;
The winds are whispering each to each;
The ocean is calling to the beach;
And stars their sacred wisdom teach
Of Faith and Love and Fear.

But once the sky its silence broke,
And song swept down the earth;
The midnight air with glory shook,
And angels mortal language spoke,
When Jesus human nature took
In Christ the Savior's birth.

And Christmas once is Christmas still.
The gates through which he came,
And footsteps wild, and murmuring rill,
And wayside field, and breezy hill,
And all that else the wide world fill,
Are sacred with his name.

Shall we not listen while they sing
This latest Christmas morn,
And music hear in everything,
And faithful lives in tribute bring
To the great song which greets the King
Who comes when Christ is born?

The Soul and Spirit Life.

The soul and spirit life are not by any means the same.

The soul is received by natural generation, but the Spirit by re-generation. That which is born of the flesh (soulical) is flesh, Latin, (animal-animal) and that which is born of the Spirit, (n'shaumah) is spirit, not soul-flesh. Paul says: "The natural (soulical) man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, because they are spiritually discerned." There is a natural (soul-ical) body, and there is a spiritual (pneumatikon) body," which body no one can receive unless he shall first exchange the (psychikos) or natural life for the (pneumatikos) spiritual life. This termination of the psychen life. Such an one die having only made provision for the psychen life, he has nothing within him on which to predicate the (zoe aionios) life eternal," he is like the beasts that perish, seeing that he has only the psychen, or the life of the animal. There is no difference between the death of a man or a beast, unless he shall first cultivate the (pneumatikos) spiritual life, before he dies. "If the Spirit (a new mind or life) of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you." If this spirit is absent, (it is like a grain of corn in which there is no life germ) there is no seed-germ by which it can be quickened into life. If this does not exist, such a life does not differ in any respect from that of any other animal, because the serpentine seed which abode in our progenitor is transmitted to his descendants, and will abide there until it is extracted by "the law of the Spirit of life."

"I said in mine heart concerning the estate of the sons of men, that God might manifest them, and that they might see that (by nature) they themselves are beasts," (possessing only the psuchikos nature). "For that which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts; even one thing befalleth them: as the one dieth, so dieth the other; (both alike have the psychen or the beast life), yea, they have all one breath (spirit); so that a man hath no pre-eminence above a beast," that is they are both simply animals, and continue to be such, until such time as the animal nature is supplanted by the operation of "the law of the spirit of life," and if he dies without this, "even one thing befalleth them" both, that is "as the one dieth so dieth the other," that is, in beast nature there is nothing on which to base a hope of a revival from the dead.

With regard to evil disposed animal men, Paul says: "These are as natural brute beasts, made to be taken and destroyed." If a man dies as a "natural brute beast," without having the nature of the "brute" taken out him by "the law of the Spirit of life," his end must be just like his fellow brute.

No person can possibly comprehend the operation of "the law of the Spirit of life," until he shall first comprehend his relation to the animal kingdom. They must perceive that they are not "as gods," but animals, before the operation of the law of life can be properly perceived by them. Remember what the Lord said: "Give not that which is holy unto the dogs, neither cast your pearls before swine." He had no reference to four footed but bipedal swine. Those who have smelt human flesh cooked, say that it looks and smells like swine's flesh, and that cannibals describe the difference between the two in their own language, as "long and short pork." We are told that man differs from the animal nature, in that he has in him a spiritual nature. In what then do those animals called man, who prey upon, and eat their own kind, differ from other animals which do the same thing? or other animals still, called man, living in more civilized countries who lie in wait to rob their fellows of those things that they may lay up to sustain their natural life? These natural animals hang tenaciously to the serpentine declaration: "Ye shall be as gods," as the difference which exists between them and the lower orders of the animal creation.

By what law can these bipedal animals who have been resolved again to their natural elements, (without the indwelling of "the spirit of life,") be reformed and called again into life seeing that "the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God;" "hath not life," "shall not see life?" If they "shall not see life," then they must surely be as "the beast that perisheth." Now, I apprehend that honest careful students of the Bible must recognize the fact that the phrase: "He is like the beasts that perish," is a comparative phrase, with which the [illegible] recognize the fact of peoples [illegible] even of their death they have no more of the life-germ in them than has "the beasts that perish," and therefore on this account, "he is like the beasts that perish." Who are they? See Psa. xlix. 10. "The fool and BRUTISH person," (or the animal person who has not the Spirit of life). Their inward thought is (and as a man thinketh so is he) their houses shall continue forever, (their thoughts are wholly centered on things which pertain to the animal life) and their dwelling places to all generations." "Nevertheless (fleshly animal) man being in honor abideth not: (and as regards the future) he is like the beasts that perish." See verse 19: "He (margin Hebrew—the soul) shall go to the generation of his fathers; they shall never see light. (Why? Because) man that is in honor, and understandeth not, (does not comprehend the nature of, or the way to the higher life), is like the beasts that perish." Why? Because "the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God." If not received by them, then they can attain to nothing higher than the animal. "Natural men" are men "in the flesh." So then they that are in the flesh cannot please God. But ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you." This "spirit" is the vital life, the resurrection germ. And "if the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you." Should any one after receiving the Spirit of life, cease to walk after the Spirit, they will not be like the natural man, (Prov. xxi. 16) "remain in the congregation of the dead," but must come forth to the resurrection of judgment.

We read, "The Word of God is quick and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit." If a division or a distinction can be placed between the two, then they must differ, and are not the same thing. The "living soul" is from Adam, but the "quickening Spirit," from the Lord Jesus. The word animal represents the psuchikos, and pneumatikos, the spiritual. A student who does not recognize these distinctions in the study of the Scriptures, must of necessity fall into error.

W. H. WILSON.

Gospel of the Kingdom of God Endangered in Scotland.

No. 3.

"We ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard lest at any time we should let them slip." Hebrews.

"With one mind, striving together for the faith of the gospel." Paul.

In two preceding papers attention was drawn to this subject by noticing certain reviews in THE RESTITUTION some five years ago, as also answers to queries. The present writer pointed out a tendency to drift away from the vital character of the gospel of the kingdom.

I have now to notice a paper by G. G. M. recently printed in the Messenger (Sept. 1902). It is headed "An anxious question and what it implied —'Wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?'" It seems intended to be explanatory of former statements on this "question," as previously referred to.

In 1897 this author wrote on this "question"—"Their (the apostles') minds had to be schooled to relinquish the immediate gratification of a fondly cherished dream, and to patiently acquire the full spiritual perception of a Christ and kingdom not of earth-born conception," etc. On this it was remarked—"If this is not the spiritual kingdom of popular theology the language is certainly well-fitted to give expression to it, and in the absence of any explanation to the contrary, to mislead." A stronger criticism had occurred recently in these terms—"To speak of backsliding or apostasy here might be unwarrantable, but the language, so far as intelligible, really appears to convey such a sad reality." However, in reply to [illegible] the author of 1897 paper seems to explain his meaning by speaking of the "Millennial kingdom," and of what he supposes to be a "preliminary stage" of the same. If even such language as this, though vague enough, had been used in 1897, a milder criticism might have been permitted. In his reply he adds that "the disciples of our Lord required and received much instruction during his ministry regarding the kingdom, about which they appeared to hold many misconceptions, and which indeed were not finally removed till the 40 days teaching had been imparted to them." He also affirms that "any misunderstanding of words in paper of 1897 is next to impossible." As to the term "next to" here it may be sufficient to remark that it finds its solution in the four pages of print now being employed to explain one or two of his statements in the old paper.

In the paper for Sept. 1902, we find the 40 days' teaching by our Lord again referred to in this way. "That the disciples did not fully comprehend all that the Lord had to tell them of the kingdom seems clear from his 40 days instruction." And again, the apostles "sat eagerly watching for the revelation of the great secret, When! When! will it come? till they can contain themselves no longer, and it bursts from them—'Wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?'"

The reader will note that the only real information afforded to us as to the 40 days' teaching, is "speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God." Is it anything but the purest conjecture to imagine that the "removal of many misconceptions about the kingdom," and things the apostles "had not fully comprehended" of the Lord's previous teaching was taught during the 40 days? Not one instance of "misconceptions about the kingdom" is given by the writer. The conceptions of the apostles were derived from such teachings as in Matt. xix. 28, that the apostles were to "sit on thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel." The writer of the paper goes on the assumption that our Lord had nothing new to tell them about the kingdom, or the manner in which they had now to make it known.

Besides such conjectures as those just noticed, where no proof exists, the writer of the paper referred to ignores some [illegible] instances of our Lord's teaching prior to his crucifixion having a close bearing on the question put by the apostles, altogether left out of sight. The parable in Luke xix. 11-27 shows that the disciples were given to understand that the coming or the "appearing" of the kingdom was to be preceded by our Lord's departure to the "far country," and his return. In accordance with this parabolic teaching concerning his going away and returning, he told them plainly, without a parable—"I go to prepare a place for you, and if I go a way I will come again." John xiv. 2, 3. At a later period he told them that his return should precede the kingdom, and that at his coming it would be known that the kingdom should then be nigh at hand. Luke xxi. 27-31.

It is plain from these teachings that the coming of the kingdom, or shall we say, the "Restoration of the kingdom again to Israel," is put at least one remove distant in point of time, and ceased to be the nearest in the order of events. Hence since the ascension of Christ on which occasion it was announced that he should return, that return came to be the event "looked for" by his disciples. In the epistles we therefore read—"The Lord is at hand," and statements of like effect.

In the paper of Sep. 1902 the "preliminary stage" of the millennial kingdom, though not mentioned, is plainly hinted at in these terms. If it is argued we should put one sense only upon the word kingdom here and elsewhere in Scripture, viz. the millennial reign, then the apostles' question implies that our Lord did not speak of the time, or approximate date of Israel's restoration at all, and by consequence that of his own return"..... "I incline to think.....the main topics of the.....40 days teaching were not details of the future kingdom, but rather things calculated to elevate their conceptions of the kingdom of God.....to a higher and more spiritual plane. They had proclaimed the kingdom was at hand.....Were they quite mistaken? I think not.....When the 70 went forth, it 'came nigh' to persons, and since then believers can both seek and enter the kingdom of God's dear Son. Col. i. 13.....Admit this, and all fancied necessity for explaining 'at hand' away will immediately disappear."

These are the arguments used by the popular theology, but as G. G. M. only says "I incline to think" the reader will not lay much stress on them. It is a fancy sketch rather than a demonstration. As to Col. i. 13, the statement in the paper is neutralized by alternative renderings of "translated" into. These are translated into, and changed for. The kingdom 'came nigh' to persons. The article says "since then" believers enter the kingdom. But we read that several years later Joseph of Arimathea who was a believer still "waited for the kingdom of God." Were the early believers of the proclamation in a better position than this "good man?" The article fails to show any other sense of the word kingdom than the "one sense," namely, the "millennial kingdom," except the case of Satan's kingdom. I never heard it doubted the "word kingdom" had more than one application, namely, to the millennial kingdom, even Satan's and many others. But the suggestion implied in the kingdom of Satan can have no force, even as an illustration, as long as anything like a "preliminary stage" of the kingdom has not been established. As to the kingdom being "at hand" having been in some sense realized, I have to ask the reader to revert to a previous paragraph of the present article. I hesitate not to say that our Lord's teachings in Luke xix. and xxi. and John xiv. are conclusive of the question. I may be excused for mentioning that this solution of the question was put forward in the Messenger of the churches as far back as Nov., 1880

Questions for Thinkers.

Reader, do you believe that man has or is an immortal soul? Which do you believe? If it is something that the man has, can it be something that the man is?

Why do you believe it? Is it because you have found such a doctrine in the Bible, or is it because you have been taught so by men? Have you ever read, in the Bible, that man has or is an immortal soul? Do you know that the term "immortal soul" or "immortal spirit" is not in the Bible? If the doctrine of the immortality of the soul is a Bible doctrine is it not strange that the Bible never says that man has or is an immortal soul?

And if man is an immortal being by nature, is it not stranger still that the Bible describes him as mortal, and compares him to objects of a perishable nature? If the doctrine of the immortality of the soul is in the Bible, why can it not be found there? If it is not there how can it be a Bible doctrine?

Is it not strange that when men—calling themselves Bible teachers—attempt to prove the doctrine, that instead of quoting from the Bible they invariably quote from the writings of heathen philosophers? If it is in the Bible why do they not quote Bible to prove it? Is not their course a virtual admission that they cannot find the doctrine in the Scriptures, and so are forced to seek for proof elsewhere?

Do you know that the Egyptians were the first to teach and defend the doctrine of the immortality of the soul? If it is a subject of Divine revelation, and therefore a Bible doctrine, is it not strange that a heathen people were the first to teach it?

Are you prejudiced, or do you want the truth? Will you search the Scriptures prayerfully, and learn whether these things be so? Are you willing to believe the Bible as it is written? Do you believe that God says what he means, and means what he says; or do you believe that he says one thing and means another? If he does not mean what he says, how do you know what he does mean?—C. F. Ladd.

"Nearer, My God, To Thee."

This touching hymn was written by Sarah Flower Adams, a gifted English woman. She was of frail constitution, and amid many bodily sufferings, kept her pen at work on various poetical productions. At what time she caught the inspiration to compose that one immortal hymn, which is how sung around the globe, has never been learned. Probably it was some season of peculiar trial, when the bruised spirit emitted the odor of a child-like submission to a chastening Father. It must have oozed from a bleeding heart. Her hymn first appeared in a volume of lyrics by Mr. Fox, in England, about the year 1841. The authoress did not live to enjoy the fame it was to bring, for she died in 1846, aged twenty-four years, and was buried near Marlow, in Essex.

"Separate Yourselves."

God's call for a separated and peculiar people has been answered by the few of all ages. We know that Abel was distinguished from his brother by the acceptable offering of faith. Enoch was translated because he separated himself from the world to walk with God.

God and the world do not move the same way, so he who walks with God gets further and further from worldliness. Noah was saved by being separated from the world and shut up in the narrow confines of the ark. Abraham was promised a rich and vast inheritance, if he would separate himself from idolatrous friends and relatives.

God's people were charged not to mingle with the neighboring idolaters, and were especially forbidden to marry among them. They were often punished because they did not keep separate from the world, and they found it necessary to separate and reconsecrate themselves before God would bless them; and their experience foreshadowed Christian life. God calls for a separated and a peculiar people, zealous of good works.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, DEC. 24, 1902.

MERRY Christmas. Happy New Year to all our readers.

A DRAGGED cross is heavy, but a carried cross is much lighter.

THE Father has given the Son "power over all flesh, that he should give eternal life to as many as thou hast given him;" no more.

"SINCERITY is to speak as we think, to do as we pretend and profess,—to perform and make good what we promise, and really to be what we would seem and appear to be."

"COMING nearer and nearer to Christ,"—that does not mean creeping into a refuge where we can be safe. It means becoming better and better men; repeating his character more and more in ours."

"LOVE feels no burden, thinks nothing of trouble, attempts what is above its strength, pleads no excuse of possibility, for it thinks all things lawful for itself and all things are possible."

AFTER considerable show of force and a little fighting the German and English governments will submit to have their Venezuela claims arbitrated. The United States is the factor that has brought that about.

WE wish all would read the item in last issue regarding spelling names as they should be, and writing them distinctly. This is for your good more than ours. Twice this week this little matter has been overlooked.

IT is through the Son only that we have access to the Father. The forgiveness of sins and reconciliation with God, and adoption into his family, even, do not give us access to God without an advocate. There is still too much imperfection about us to permit that.

IN the department of Ferghana in Asiatic Russia an earthquake last week destroyed a whole city of 30,000 people, and the number killed reaches to over 1,000. Famine stalks in Finland where it is reported that 400,000 people are destitute and starving. The situation is worse than in 1867 when 100,000 died.

RUSSIA is gaining in Persia by constantly pressing on her way, making no very decided advances but nevertheless gradually getting so close that her influence is felt more and more. In Afghanistan matters it is the same; she has simply notified England that it is desirable that her relations in the future shall be direct with Afghanistan. Heretofore her dealing really have passed through English hands—now she ignores that ceremony.

"FIND, if you can, any ray of hope, any door of escape for the miseries of this world, save in the promises made to the Hebrew nation, and to the Gentiles through and after them, and in the coming of the Lord, and his universal kingdom. For which, O let our souls be stirred up to pray most fervently, while we wait most patiently, and long most anxiously, for the day of the glorious coming of this kingdom, when God's will shall be done in earth as it is in heaven."

As in the time of Luther the great point of duty for every man was to emancipate himself from the chains of superstition, so the great point of duty now is to free ourselves from the more subtle, and therefore more delusive dangers of infidelity. There is no safety apart from the written Word—the engrafted Word which is able to save the soul. An enlightened faith in this is the first step toward the approbation of God.

BURKE said, "The real aristocracy of a country—that raises a country—that which strengthens a country—and that which dignifies a country—that which spreads her power, creates her moral influence, and makes her respected and submitted to, lands the heart of millions and bows the pride of nations to her,—the instrument of obedience, the fountain of supremacy, the true throne, crown and sceptre of a nation—this aristocracy is not an aristocracy of blood, not an aristocracy of fashion, not an aristocracy of talent only; it is an aristocracy of character. That is the true heraldry of man.

THIS issue ends the 51st Volume of the present series of THE RESTITUTION. We have tried to conduct the paper in such a manner as will be acceptable to the Brotherhood, and pleasing in the eye of our Heavenly Father. If any degree of success has attended our efforts we give him the glory. Doubtless mistakes have been made. We are none of us infallible creatures by any means, and the present Editor does not even claim that his judgment is at all times what it should be. Please remember that an Editor does not always seek to please himself. Many times he has to consider questions from more than one side, and often does not fully endorse every sentiment expressed. At times too, little things slip in when in a hurry that would on mature reflection be changed. We want to thank our friends for their leniency in the past, and hope that as we enter on and travel through, as the Lord wills, the mazes of another year, that our relations may be pleasant and profitable. We will do our best, relying in our Heavenly Father for strength. Pray for us, and may the Lord bless you each.

"Giving Thanks Always."

"This is one of those deep-meaning admonitions of the apostle, which at first sight seems rather impracticable; but as it is only the spiritual who can discern the spiritual, so only those who are in touch with Paul can follow his depths. Is not this what the gospel of God's grace should generate in our breasts: We, worthless; cared for, and sought for, by the great Creator, and all out of his love. Ought not the knowledge and the true realization of what salvation to eternal life means, and the thought of God's mercy and goodness to lead into that state of mind beyond empty formula, not platter-cleaning, or long prayers, or the giving of alms to be seen of men, but the offer of the higher power of our nature—the intellect—to God, by offering him our heart. Joyful in the truth as David; confident in God as Paul; real in worship as Christ; always abounding in joyful heart-praises to God. In every act, and look, and word, and thought, 'giving thanks' like nature, in her silentness and beauty."

Jesus of Nazareth.

Of all the race, Jesus of Nazareth is the man. Of all the race there is none other to be persistently gazed on and persistently studied. We ponder the thoughts of others; we smile at their weaknesses; we allow for their prejudices; we condemn their errors; but in this man there are no weaknesses, nor prejudices, nor errors. His judgments are ever accurate; his morals are ever perfect; his emotions are ever pure. No personal ambition, or hatred, or love, or interest sways him any instant. He thinks as before God. He rejoices as before God. All he does is right. By him alone was the precept ever fulfilled: "Whether ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God."

It is From Father.

We read the other day a beautiful illustration of the truthfulness and reliability of God's Word. It was to the following effect: A letter was brought to the door by a postman. "It is from father," the children cried. The mother took the letter very indifferently, saying, "How do you know? Many letters have the same postmark." "But," said the children, "It is father's handwriting—nobody else writes like that. Just open it and see; you'll soon find out then, that we are right;" so the letter was opened and read. It was full of affection. It named the wants of each member of the family, and made promises of gifts for them all, to be sent on tomorrow. It addressed the mother and children by name, and the father's name was signed at the close. The children were sure there could be no mistake. "Nobody but father could know all about us," said they. Still the mother cast doubts upon its accuracy. The little ones thought it very strange. Their mother had never spoken so before. So they decided to wait; and if the gifts were received they knew she would be convinced. And sure enough, at the appointed hour the bundle was brought to the door. It was opened; and the promised articles were within. "Now mother, what made you doubt?" said they.

To show you how it is with GOD'S message, she replied, "It is in his handwriting. No one else could have written such wonderful words. It is addressed to us. It has promised us just what we need. Its promises come true. It foretells future events, and they come to pass. Its signatures that of God, it is stamped with the seal of heaven. It must be from above. Don't you think so, dear children?"

READ the proposition of two weeks ago regarding a "New Year's Greeting" issue. Do you not want to take your part in sending a word of cheer to your brother? Let the response be hearty and with gladness. Surely our hope is a blessed hope, and we can well afford to give voice to our heart's affection to God and for each other. Let those who are in the habit of writing be heard in this "social meeting," and those who seldom write, thinking they can give nothing worth while. The excuse that others can do so much better, is not a "good excuse" this time. Let each join in making this feature of our paper a great blessing to the hearts of the children of the Father's household. Let the young folks of the Berean Society, as well as the older ones enter into this matter. We invite each and all.

Brethren and Sisters.

Is not ours a high and holy calling? Then what manner of persons ought we to be in all holy conversation and godliness? In his first letter to the Thessalonian church we are called by Paul "the children of light and children of the day." It is truly so, if, as sons of God we remain faithful. God is light, and in him is no darkness at all. True reflections of him we cannot be unless we are burning and shining lights, glowing more unto the perfect day.

Passing Events in the Light of Prophecy.

According to Glad Tidings, all sorts of rumors are afloat in England regarding the visit of the Kaiser to King Edward,—and the Spectator suggests that he came to ask something connected with the Bagdad railway scheme, in which he is deeply interested, and most anxious for its completion. If he could manage to make it appear that Britain was interested in it officially as well as commercially he would have secured about all the protection he needs for his scheme.

Lord Kitchener on his way to India visited Egypt and the Soudan. He found great progress in the Soudan since he left it three years ago. At Khartoum he opened the Gordon college, which bids fair to help in lifting the natives up. The Morning Post says: The freeing of the fellaheen, the Nile dam, the college at Khartoum, these are types of the work of the Empire of which our countrymen may be proud, and which they may call on the world to emulate. The Pall Mall Gazette says: We have abolished the courbash, and the corvee; the fellah no longer sweats and groans under the lash of the taskmaster. British rule has changed that. What we have done for Lower Egypt we shall do in the Soudan in time.

The St. Petersburg Birzhewiya Videdomosti says the establishment of direct relations with Afghanistan and the appointment of a Russian representative at Kabul became a necessity for Russia from the time when she undertook the construction of the railway from Ovenburg to Taskend. The Journal declares that the understanding between the ruler of Afghanistan and the British government can in no way be considered a reply to Russian proposal of 1900, to which Lord Cranbourne recently referred in the British parliament.

Commenting upon Lord Rosebury's reproach that the government had sent Lord Kitchener to India, whereas had he been in office, he would have made Lord Kitchener secretary of state for war to re-organize the Army, the Scotsman remarks that "In view of certain possibilities on the Afghan frontier, Lord Kitchener may be found to be the right man in the right place."

The Morning Post says, respecting the result of the elections in lower Austria for the Diet, there is a majority hostile to the Jews, to the German parties, and to the present constitutional unity of Austria as a whole. The presence of such a majority in the Diet of lower Austria cannot but have a serious effect on the country and monarchy as a whole. The Jewish Chronicle says that the Anti-Semites have carried everything before them. Their victory is antagonistic, not only to the Jews, but the entire state as at present constituted.

At the recent Zionist Conference at Vienna Dr. Herzl said that during the year Zionism had continued its victorious march, and not only has the number of its inherents increased, but in many fresh quarters it has taken strong hold and it exists wherever Jews have a dwelling place. It is a matter for rejoicing that as the strength of the movement has increased it has gained in the respect and appreciation accorded to it by the general public opinion. Our idea is no longer the subject of ridicule, and in the most earnest circles this earnest movement is given its due. This is proved by the negotiations for the realization of our idea, in respect to which, while, up to now they have led to no positive results,—on the part of the Turks our delegates and representatives met with the greatest consideration.....We are convinced we are on the right path."

The Bereans Column.

[Under this heading the society of "Bereans" of Illinois, will supply the copy, and endeavor to fill the space once a month.]

Dear Bereans:

The coming of Christ has been given me to comment upon. Do we realize that this may be the very next move in God's arrangement? How foolish we are if we trifle with this event. Read carefully and profit by the lesson taught in 2 King ii. No excuses will be granted at the coming of Christ. What a happy, joyful meeting of the saints that will be. Best of all never more to part. What horror will seize the guilty ones when they awake in the morning and find their friends gone. Sad will be their fate, for God is just. Let us so live, dear Bereans that we may have an entrance into the kingdom.

EVA KOONTZ.

Dear Bereans:

A short time ago I received a letter from Sister Leila E. Whitehead requesting me to write a short Christmas article for publication in the Berean column of THE RESTITUTION, so I will try and write a few words of hope and encouragement to the young Bereans. As yet, I am not a member of your society but expect to be soon, as we hope to have a society formed at this place within a short time. Let us all during the coming year put forth greater efforts to organize new societies and add many more members to our number. The society is certainly doing a grand work and is the means of leading many into the straight and narrow path that leadeth unto life everlasting. May it not be [illegible] so increase as to play an important [illegible] part in [illegible] tions? That the Master may soon [illegible] come and he will find us all watching [illegible] is the prayer of your Sister in Christ.

EVA S. BRADLEY.

Dear Bereans:

Another year is gone with all its golden moments, some wisely used, some carelessly thrown away, while some more than wasted. As the pendulum of time swung to and fro, we should have listened to its solemn "tick-tick," counting to us those fleeting treasures, telling us that what is past is and will be always past, and try as we may we can never bring it back. If God were to put into our hands a page from this book of remembrance containing all we have said and done during the past year, how much we would like to change it; so many things we would like to erase and put better things in. He is keeping a picture of our lives. As that tick tick sounds in his ear our words and actions are put down in this great album. What will the picture of our life be? Will it be worthy to be placed with that of Jesus? Only if we have been striving to walk in his steps. This new year will be the best we shall ever have for painting our portrait. Some pictures will be so soiled that they will be destroyed. But in wishing you a happy new year, I would like to speak only of what is bright and joyous. My wish shall be that every day you will ask the Lord Jesus to help you paint a life picture as nearly like him as you can, and then stand by your prayers. How pleased God will be when he hears his own Son proclaim it, and Jesus will be satisfied. Worthy art thou our Lord and our God to receive the glory and the honor and the power.

EMMA LINDSAY.

Dear Bereans:

Another Christmas is here and if my wish be fulfilled all the Bereans will have a right good joyous time. Did you ever think how gloomy the whole year would be if we had no Christmas? Why, we would have nothing to look forward to. No Christmas! Then there is no birthday; no babe lying in the manger. No Savior, God's great Christmas gift. The sick and suffering would have no kind Physician to go to. The aged would see the evening shadows lengthen with no hope of a coming day. Boys and girls would forget their merry laughter; homes would be cheerless and dark. Without the birth of Jesus the angels' songs would be less sweet, for there could be no joy over one sinner that repenteth. Let us give thanks and honor to the Son Jesus whose birthday we keep.

GEO. H. LINDSAY.

Dear Bereans:

Are the people of God responsible for the spread of the gospel. I say they are. I reflect as proof Matt. v. 14-16. "Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on an hill cannot be hid. Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven. If we do not let our light shine we are surely not helping to spread the good news of the kingdom of God. In Matt. xxiv. 14. "And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations. And then shall the end come." Are we helping with this work? In Mark xvi. 15, "And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." And now Bereans let us do all we can to spread the gospel.

GOD'S PROMISE AND HOW TO GAIN IT.

"And this is the promise that he hath promised us even eternal life." 1 John ii. 25. Dear Bereans, is not this the precious promise God has made to us that we ought to strive for? And how can we gain this life eternal inheritance? By putting on Christ through baptism and then add to your faith virtue, to your virtue knowledge, and to your knowledge godliness and brotherly kindness, charity; for in these things we should abound in the knowledge of our Lord, Jesus Christ. Wherefore the rather, brethren give diligence to make your calling and election sure; for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall. 2 Pet. i. 10.

Obituary.

Francella E. Howlett was born in Barry, Barry County, Michigan, May [illegible] 1870. She [illegible] with her party [illegible] years, was then married to [illegible] W. Morgan of Ovida, Iowa Co., [illegible]. To this union were born 7 children, [illegible] 1893 the family moved to Millbrook, Mecosta Co., Mich., where they have since lived. Mrs. Morgan was taken sick March 15, and this sickness soon developed into that dread consumption, which caused her death, Dec. 4, 1902. Deceased was 45 years, 6 months and 11 days old. She leaves a husband, 7 children, a mother, and many others to mourn her faithful life, for she was a true wife, mother and neighbor. Elder B. W. Woodward spoke from 1 Cor. xv. 26 in which he tried to point the friends to the promises of God, and hope of eternal life.

M. A. WOODWARD.

John Main was born in Waterloo County, Canada, Feb. 25, 1848; died Dec. 4, 1902. In the spring of 1867 he came to Millbrook, Mich. He was married in Canada to Arabella Morrison, Nov. 18, 1868. Twelve children were born to them; two have been laid to rest. Sister Main and one son Charles accepted the gospel several years ago while we were preaching at Decker school house. Many anxious prayers were offered for the father and other members of the family. And about three years ago while we were holding meetings at Allen school house, he and another son yielded obedience and now we rejoice that after the toils of life he rests in hope of life immortal when Jesus comes. May the hearts of the other children be drawn towards their father's God, that they may be a happy company of redeemed ones in the soon coming kingdom. An immense congregation listened to Elder Woodward while he spoke from the words of comfort given the church in 1 Thes. iv. 13 to end. The I. O. O. F. concluded the ceremonies at the grave. We leave him in the hands of the life Giver, entreating the sorrowing family to cast all their care upon God who cares for his own, for death will soon be followed up in victory.

M. A. WOODWARD.

Fones Carey was born in Utica, Herkimer Co., N. Y., June 2, 1835. He moved to Michigan in 1863; served as a faithful soldier in the war of the rebellion. He settled at close of the war in Byron township, where he resided until he fell asleep in Jesus, Dec. 4, 1902. Bro. Carey had been a great sufferer for years with heart disease. About 11 years ago, he with his faithful wife attended our meetings, became much interested in the glad tidings and after studying to know whether these things were Bible truths that they listened to, accepted Christ and were baptized into his dear, saving name. They have both been faithful. We visited Bro. Carey two weeks before his death, and found him rejoicing in the hope of eternal life when Jesus comes. On Sunday, Dec. 6th, while Elder Woodward was engaged in preaching Bro. Main's funeral sermon I was performing the same sad duty at the late home of Bro. Carey. He leaves a wife and other relatives and friends to miss his presence, hospitality and words of exhortation. May God be the widow's guide in her lonely hours, her comforter even unto death. The writer spoke from Paul's words, "If in this life only we have hope in Christ we are of all men most miserable." 1 Cor. xv. 19.

M. A. WOODWARD.

Mrs. Ella Bainbridge was born in Seneca Co., New York, in 1828. She and her husband endured the toils and privations of pioneer life in Michigan, but with their three sons enjoyed their home life until broken by the accidental death of the husband several years ago at a barn raising. She has since resided with her son Nois at the old home in Gaines. Mrs. Bainbridge died very suddenly of heart disease, Dec. 9, 1902. The writer spoke from words found in Rev. xxi. 4, "And there shall be no more death." Mrs. Bainbridge was a true wife, mother, neighbor and friend. She was formerly a member we believe of the Dutch Reform church. She believed in life through Christ. She leaves three sons, several grand children with many other relatives and friends. May each so order their lives that they may receive the reward of righteousness is our prayer.

M. A. WOODWARD.

Ellen P. Carroll, wife of the writer, was born Dec. 11, 1862, and died Dec. 1, 1902, at the asylum in Tuscaloosa, Alabama, where she had [illegible] since in September last.

She embraced the truth some nine years ago on hearing it preached by Bro. George Kidwell of Arkansas, and has ever since lived a Christian life. [illegible] will not say she was the best [illegible] in the world, but she [illegible] man, and loved [illegible] in turn loved by all who [illegible] ever ready [illegible] and the truth and speak a word for the Master.

She was the mother of five children, who are left with me to mourn our loss. Pray for me that I may have strength for the trials that come.

Spirituality.

To be a spiritual Christian is to cultivate the life of the new creation in Christ Jesus, by constant, habitual communion with God, by faith in the unseen, by habitual activity in the highest realms of thought, namely, the truths of revelation, and by constant effort to conform our conduct and character to the highest moral ideals. It is to aspire after that holiness without which no man shall see the Lord, and to be so absorbed in the study of God's being and character, as revealed in his Word, that we are changed into his image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord. It is to crucify the flesh with its sinful affections and desires. It is to put off the old man with his sinful lusts, and to put on the new man, fashioned after Christ Jesus, in righteousness and true holiness. It is to seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God; to set our affections on things above, and not on things on the earth. For, if we are risen with Christ, i. e. spiritual, we are dead—dead to sin, and our life is hid with Christ in God. The reader will do well in this connection to read Col. iii. 5-17.—Evan. Messenger.

LIFE.

Opening the map of God's expansive plan,
We find a little isle, this Life of man;
Eternity's unknown expanse appears
Circling around, and limiting its years.
The busy race examine and explore
Each creek and cavern of the dangerous shore,
With care collect what in their eyes excels,
Some shining pebbles, and some weeds and shells,
T us laden, dream that they are rich and great,
And happiest he that groans beneath his weight.
The waves o'ertake them in their serious play,
And every hour sweeps multitudes away:
They shriek and sink—survivors start and weep,
Pursue their sport, and follow to the deep.

Communicated.

The Wisdom of Saloomoon. Chap. 15.

1 But thou, our God, art most easy good and truthful, forbearing and ... ging all things with mercy.

2. Yea, indeed, if we sin we are thine, aware as we are of thy controlling power; but we will not sin, knowing that we have been accounted thine;

3. For what thou standest upon is a complete allotment of righteousness, and to know thy control is a root of immortality (deathlessness).

4. For neither hath a badly-devised thought of men led us astray nor a shadow-writing unfruitful labor, a form depicted with diverse colors.

5. The sight of which cometh to thoughtless ones to bring reproach and make them desire the breathless form of a dead image.

6. Worthy lovers of evil things and such like hopes also are those who grasp after and long for and reverence them.

7. Yea, indeed a potter crushing pliant earth moldeth with toilsome labor for the service of each of us; moreover from the same clay hath moulded both the serviceable utensils for our clean employments and all the opposite also likewise: and what the use of each one of these severally the clay-worker is the judge;

8. And an evil-toiler moldeth an inutile god out of the same clay, he who a little before was begotten out of earth and who a little later goeth his way whence he was taken, the use of [illegible] soul [mortal-life] ... demanded.

... moreover his thought is not that he is destined to die down, nor that he has a shortly-finished life-time, but that he is rivaling the gold-workers and silver-pourers and that he hath imitated the copper-moulders; and he accounts it a glory that he is moulding spurious things.

10. His heart is ashes, and his hope more worthless than earth and his life time more valueless than clay.

11. Because he hath not known the One who moulded him, and breathed into him an energizing soul (breath of natural life) and implanted in him a life-giving spirit.

12. Moreover they have accounted our life a plaything and our life-time a general holiday to get gain; for, say they, it behoveth us therefrom to get on even though by evil means

13. This man though knoweth that he is sinning more than they all are since he is also a worker of easily broken utensils of earthly fuel and sculptured things.

14. And they all are most wanting in good sense and more wretched than the soul of a child, the enemies of thy laity, who have oppressed them.

15. Because they have also accounted all the idolds of nations as gods, that neither have the use of eyes to see, nor nostrils to draw in the air, nor fingers of hands to touch, and their feet inefficient for walking.

16. For a man made them and the spirit loaned him moulded them; for no man is strong enough to mould a god like to himself.

17. And he being a mortal worketh out a dead thing with transgressing hands, for he is better (more efficient) than the objects of his reverence, since he hath lived, but they never.

18. And they reverence the most hateful living-creatures also; for when compared with the rest in lack of understanding they are the worst.

19. Nor doth he attain as much longing desire for good things as there is in the sight of living-creatures; and he hath fled away both from the praise of God and his blessing.

COMMENT.

It is very plain to see where Paul as well as the older prophets get their illustration of the potter and the clay, brought out here in this chapter in all its minor details. Then the use of the soul demanded back because of misuse, in the Christ's parable of the rich but thoughtless man, who was going to make larger room for his prosperity in which his soul might enjoy itself. Mark the argument here also for a higher utility in art than a mere love of beauty or emulation to excel in imitative skill or to please a cultivated taste for such things; and the utter and unequivocal condemnation of the art and skill that is prostituted to the making of objects of veneration or worship, and so diverting the thought of mankind from the worship due their Creator and Preserver. In short the argument of this chapter is not so archaic as it may seem to the careless reader; but in its last analysis is as applicable today as in Saloomoun's day. We are all of us more or less worshipers of the creation rather than the Creator and thereby fail to receive the enduement and enablement from on high which is an important part of our "whole allotment," herein also referred to and emphasized.

Random Thoughts.—No. 3.

Now as to the state of things during the millennium, or thousand years. Will it be all peace and glory, or will there be war, and sickness, and death, as now? And will the reign of Christ and the saints end at the end of the one thousand years, or will they reign after that time? When will there be no more death, or sickness, or crying, or tears? and so on.

I may say, in short, that there will be more or less sorrow, sickness and death so long as mortality prevails, and that will be during the thousand years and beyond, as seen by Rev. xx.

After the Adversary is loosed out of his prison, he deceives the nations who are mortal and fire consumes them. But let us begin at the beginning of the one thousand years, which will be when the Lord comes. He will then set up his kingdom. Now what will that kingdom be like all through the thousand years, and will it end then, or will it continue forever and ever?

Of course my readers want to know all about it, and I will try to tell them as best I can.

In some respects the kingdom of God will be like all other kingdoms.

1. It must have a place, territory, locality, where will it be?

2. A King or Head, [illegible] say King, Emperor, Sultan, or Czar. Who will it be?

3. He must have his cabinet officers to assist him in the government. Who will they be?

4. There must be subjects to be governed, or ruled. Who or what will they be?

5. There must be laws by which they will be governed.

6. There must be a Capital or seat of government where the laws shall be enacted and put forth.

7. There must be a time for the setting up of the kingdom. If it is set up, when was it done? If it is to be set up, when will it be?

I will take each topic in its order, and as well as I can in its proper place, answer the questions asked in the early part of this paper.

Now what is a kingdom? A kingdom is the dominion of a King or a King's dominion, of which there are quite a number in the world—there are kingdoms of men, and so we read "the kingdoms of this world," Rev. xi. 15, in the plural, but the kingdom I am about to write about is the kingdom of God or God's kingdom, in the singular. The Bible says nothing about God's kingdom in the plural, always in the singular,—the kingdom of God. Now then,

1. Where is, or will the kingdom of God be located? How extensive its territory? Will it be in heaven or in the heart? Will it not be under the whole heaven, and over the whole earth? Dan. ii. 35.

From Isaiah xiv. 18, we learn that God created the heavens and the earth, and that he found the earth to be inhabited, and from Gen. i. by whom, "having created the birds of the air, the fishes of the sea, and the beasts of the field," he placed them all under or in subjection to Adam. He gave Adam dominion over them all—even over all the earth. He had made him but a little lower than the angels, and crowned him with glory and honor. Isa. viii. Here we have the beginning of God's kingdom. Its dominion is the whole earth. God made a garden, in which were fruits, good fruits of all kinds, and here he placed Adam and his wife. They may eat freely of all the fruit there with the exception of one tree—they must not eat of it. If they do they will certainly die, and they are to be fruitful and multiply and fill or inhabit the earth and subdue it. The earth was formed to be inhabited by his (God's) people—and here is the command to his people to do it. The kingdom is God's kingdom, but given to Adam on condition of obedience to possess and manage. Thus we see the locality of God's kingdom is the earth. Can any one of my readers tell me where the Bible speaks of God having a kingdom anywhere else?

Now, here we find our first parents in possession of the kingdom. Birds, beasts, fishes and every thing—the whole earth in subjection to them, we may suppose they were happy, but, what happened to them? The tempter came and made our mother Eve believe that God was not doing what was best for them in forbidding them to eat of that one tree, for by eating the fruit of that tree they would acquire knowledge and become as gods, and certainly would not die. Adam does not seem to have been with her just then. She is alone with the serpent. She hesitates a little, she knows that if what the serpent says is true, then what God had said can not be true, and the fruit appears to be all right and good to eat, as well as to make one wise. So she believes what the tempter says, and of course does not believe what God had said, and so she took some of it and I presume she liked it, for she gave her husband some of it also, and he did eat, and there they are. Now what? Will they certainly die, or not die? Did God or the serpent speak the truth? Certainly both did not. If God, and mankind who will possess the kingdom, seeing at that time no others were born? and if the serpent, then what becomes of God, his Word, and plan or purpose? It seemed an easy thing to do, to eat what was forbidden, but what awful consequences result from it. Not only to them but to all the then unborn generations of mankind, including ourselves. Now let us see if God did as he said he would. Adam and Eve knew they had done wrong, and felt ashamed and tried to hide themselves when they heard the Lord coming. The Lord, the Judge in the case knew what had occurred, but still enquired into the matter. He asks the man "Hast thou eaten of the tree whereof I commanded thee that thou shouldst not eat?" He admits he had, but blames the woman for it, "She gave me of the tree and thou gavest me the woman," then before pronouncing judgment, he turns to the woman and asks "What is this that thou hast done?" And she puts the blame upon the serpent, "the serpent beguiled, or deceived me and I did eat," then, without further inquiry he turns to the serpent and pronounced judgment on him, then on the woman and last on the man. The sentence on each is important as it concerns all questions from that day to this, and is still in force. The enmity still exists, the woman's sufferings continues and all men die, and we all die, because our first parents ate of the fruit that was forbidden.

Report.

Since Oct. 31, I have visited points in Lincoln, Mitchell, Cloud and Jewell Co.'s Kan. In these places there has been no meeting for almost three years, but at Yorktown, Victor and Prairie Point the attendance and attention was splendid. Some that had never taken an interest before were very attentive. We hope much fruit will come from the seed sown. The great trouble is lack of interest. A good sister in Nebraska sent five dollars, saying she wanted others to hear the truth as well as she. She said that if I needed any tracts, to send to the paper and order such as I wanted and she would pay the bill. If one-fourth of the brethren that I know had the interest in the truth that this sister has there would be no dragging of the work in these fields. Brethren, let us awake to our duty and push the work along.

The first of the year I will start on a trip through south central Kansas, going east into Missouri. Write me at once, brethren, that I may know just where to find you. My service is at your command, and if you do not have a meeting it will not be because no one is available; for we are in the work for the year. Write me at once at Ransom, Kansas, that we can arrange the route that the expense may be as light as possible.

Your Brother in the Master's service.

Common Sense Talk to Young Men.

Success in life is not pot-luck; but is generally the result of careful thought, intense activity, and the good providence of God, who helps those that help themselves.

A young man who spends his spare time in trying to be funny must not expect to receive much encouragement from men who are of a serious disposition and who have business of importance to be transacted. The only place where funny business pays is in the employ of a circus manager, and the fact is even circus clowns draw less pay than formerly.

Fun is all right in its place, but not in connection with business; and the young man who is only gifted with that quality will be fortunate if he ever makes over $10 or $15 a week, and the chances are that he will receive less rather than more. Jokers and fun-breeders are at a discount, except at parties where they amuse for the time. They are not wanted when thought and carefulness are the qualities needed.

What is termed "cheek" is a poor foundation to build on. It may work well for a few weeks, but it soon tires out those who constantly come in contact with it or who have been so unfortunate as to hire it. "Cheek" in a young man is only handy to employer who runs his business on "cheek." But whose business career will end as soon as his creditors insist on getting something more substantial than promises to pay based on "cheek."

Laziness is one of the poorest foundations on which a young man can build. Other defects may be mended or even overcome; but the born-lazy seem to stay so from boyhood to old age. The lazy may as well hang up their business fiddles first as last. My old grandfather was a wool-comber, and among his apprentices was a young man born lazy. When the old gentleman started off on his trips to buy wool his last words to his lazy, yet truthful apprentice, were, "Now, while I am away lay well to your work." I have heard my father say that the young man always replied, "I will, sir." And to keep his word good he was in the habit of putting the wool on the floor and lying down on it, when he would soon be fast asleep.

My father often told me, "George, you are too careless; but you have one good trait that will put you through life safely, you have not a lazy bone in your body." Perhaps that is the only good trait I possess; but it is not a bad one.

Another bad foundation in some young men is being too consequential. That is a great hindrance to ever amounting to anything. The consequential young man is the laughing stock of intelligent people, and will surely come to grief unless he mends his ways. It is one of those faults in our make up that we should pray daily to have removed from us. We are all more or less tinged with it.

A friend of mine who hired a young man filled with this peculiar defect, informed me one day that he had "discharged Puss-in-boots," and never wanted to see his like again. The gentleman could stand almost any other kind of help, but declared that no more would he be annoyed with help that knew more in one hour than he and his two partners knew in a year. The last I heard of "Puss in-boots" was that he was engaged in leading mules for a Newark ice company. At the time my friend discharged him you would have thought he would have been a member of Congress inside of a year.

Obnoxious or disagreeable ways are also a poor foundation on which to build. The agreeable young man, who has a kind word for everybody, is generally in demand in business circles as well as in social circles. Years ago I asked a wealthy New Jersey man (Mr. Dudley Gregory) how to be a success in business, and his reply was, "keep your eyes open and act pleasant." And there was common sense in his remark.

Attention to the small interests of those who employ you is perhaps one of the best methods of attracting their favorable notice. Every young man should study to look out for the details of anything he undertakes.

There are so many bad foundations that I must cease to enumerate them, as it would occupy too much space. You can hunt them up, and think them over. But the sure foundation to build upon is a good character built upon the fundamental truths contained in the Bible.

Rest assured that no employer objects to an honest, conscientious young man, who loves father, mother, sisters, brothers, and home better than he does the exciting amusements of life. Even saloon-keepers advertise for bartenders "with a good character." And if a business that has no character wants character in its employees, how much more do men who conduct large, responsible business enterprises need only young men who have the love of God and that of father and mother stamped upon them.

Build your foundation slowly but surely. And have Christ for the corner-stone.

The Second Time.

The coming of the Lord is the subject of many prophecies. It may perhaps be correct to say that it is the one subject of the prophecies. This inference seems to be a natural one from the words of the martyr Stephen when he saw the purpose of his hearers: "Which of the prophets have not your fathers persecuted? and they have slain them which showed before of the coming of the Just One." This is more directly stated by the apostle Peter in his talk with the people who gathered about him after he had healed the lame man: "Yea, and all the prophets from Samuel and those that follow after, as many as have spoken, have likewise foretold these days." The constant and all-absorbing theme of the prophets was the coming of the Lord, but they did not, in direct terms, distinguish between a first and a second coming. They spoke of events which we can now see clearly involve a manifestation of himself in the world as a sacrifice for sin, with his glory veiled in sinful flesh, and another manifestation of himself to gather his people, a coming "with power and great glory." But after he had appeared once in the world, and had returned to the Father, the direct promise is made that "unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation." It is for this second appearing that we look in this generation. He has visited this world once. He was rejected by his own people, and was put to death. He "was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father." To the apostles whom he had chosen "he showed himself alive after his passion by many infallible proofs," and "he was seen of above five hundred brethren at once." While blessing his disciples, "he was parted from them, and carried up into heaven." It is now more than eighteen centuries since he said, "If I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself." Our faith rests upon his sure Word of promise. He will come the second time. Signs manifested and prophecies fulfilled and fulfilling show that the second appearing is near at hand. "Even so, come, Lord Jesus.—Review and Herald.

Speak Out the Truth.

"But," says one, "may not the ignorant and indiscreet advocacy of truth by unqualified persons do a great deal of harm to the cause we love?" It may, but is the truth you believe so weak as to be in any serious danger from such an accident? Is not truth invincible and fully able to take care of herself. All she has to fear is the cramping and imprisoning agency of excessive prudence. With weakness for her guardian, and folly for her defender, she is yet safe! The God who protects her from her foes can assuredly save her from her friends. The danger lies in our carnal wisdom, which would cover the light with a bushel to prevent its being blown out, and wrap the talent in a napkin because it is only one.—C. H. Spurgeon.

Have You Time?

Have you time to sit and read the newspaper for an hour or more every day, but no time to read your Bible?

Have you time to attend the concert hall, the ballroom, or the lecture, but no time to attend the missionary meeting or the house of prayer?

Have you time to talk about all the news of the day, both home and foreign, but no time to speak of Christ or his love to your fellowmen?

Have you time to wash and scrub, and make your house clean, but no time to pray that God may make your heart clean?

Have you time to spend days, and weeks, and months, and years in a business that will soon end, but no time to give to the business of salvation that will never end?

Have you time to think and plan for the preparation of daily bread, but no time to give to the question of heavenly manna?

Have you a whole-life-energy to devote to the service of self and the world, but no time to spend in t... service of God? "Choose ye this d... whom ye will serve!"

Foxy Prophets. Ezek. xiii.

There are persons, even in ... church, who are in great reputa... shrewdness. They are constantly pl... ning, scheming, and contriving. Th... words and their looks give no intim... tion of their designs or purpose. Th... look in your face and greet you wit... all the blandness of Christian brothe... hood, and slander you behind ... back with a malignity worthy ... great deceiver. Their wor... smoother than butter, but w... their hearts; they are softer th... yet are they drawn swords.

They think that this is shrewdn... but those upon whom they ply the... arts look upon it as hypocrisy. They ... believe that such a course opens the way to success, when, in fact, it only exhausts the forbearance of Christian men, and provokes the wrath of the Most High. Such men were known of old among the people of God, to whom the Lord said, "O Israel, thy prophets are like the foxes in the desert."

Their prophecies were false, their instructions were deceptive, and their designs were deadly. They were serving themselves. They had the wisdom of the serpent, but not the harmlessness of the dove. They said, "The Lord hath said it," when God had not spoken by them. They said, "Peace, peace," when there was no peace. They daubed walls with untempered mortar, and only hastened the ruin which was already impending.

Let Christians learn to beware of foxy prophets. Men who are too meek, too gentle, too smooth, too polite, too pure, to be ranked with ordinary humanity, are very likely to turn out to be foxy prophets, and as such to receive the rebuke and curse of Almighty God.

A Solemn Warning.

The world is moving on with great rapidity towards the close of the present dispensation; delighted with the great progress made in literature, science, art, and general knowledge; while the churches of every creed are, with here and there a few exceptions hoping to see the millennial dawn very speedily; the world and the churches generally having very little dissension, and being at variance mainly on the coarser vices, such as drunkenness and gross immoralities.

No one denies that there is great progress being made in education, science, and all mechanical improvements; but few see and feel that the decadence of morals is keeping pace with the others; and still fewer, perhaps, see that vital godliness and spiritual power are leaving the churches generally, only to have their places filled by numerous organizations, societies, artistic music, moral and political lectures in lieu of God sermons. The members of the Laodicean church, (Rev. iii. 14-18) are not aware of their fearful condition: Thou "knowest not that thou art wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked."

Don't Shut off the Light.

The following incident will apply to many self-proclaimed Christians who prate about the inefficiency of Christ's cause, doing nothing themselves to make it possible to do a better work, and really standing in the way of those who would be active helpers.

Gathered on the sidewalk was a group of boys intent upon a game of marbles. One little lad, with knuckles on the chalked line, suddenly raised his head to call out to a companion: "Stand out of my sunshine, can't ye? I can't see what I'm aiming at when you shut off the light."

ad Fly in the Ointment. Eccl. x. 1.

The articles in THE RESTITUTION om the pen of W. H. Wilson as a eneral thing have been exceptionally ood and instructive. The one how-ver in which he shows the difference etween psuche life and zoe life as re-ed to believers in Christ contains ufatements that are in my judg-ubversive of one important ele-All the truth as it is in Jesus.

ll kindness I take the liberty of ing out wherein I conceive he is staken. Controversy is not the ob-ct in view,—a wrangle of words is unprofitable to both writer and reader. Our highest ambition should be to know what God has revealed, and take kindly to it regardless of prejudice or pre-conceived ideas. Our only safety consists in submitting to the record, and there will be no vain glorying as the result.

1. Psuche life does not end, until it is swallowed up in zoe life or extinguished in the second death. Falling asleep in Jesus is not the end of psuche animal life, for the dead in Christ are not hopelessly dead, and hence they are spoken of as simply asleep, which by implication involves the idea of waking. The awakened ones are the ones who fell asleep. No change of nature or relationship transpires while they are asleep, nor in the act of waking. Proof of the foregoing is found in the Scripture cited by W. H. Wilson. "He that loseth his life for my sake shall find it." Matt. x. 39. "Whosoever shall lose his life shall preserve it." Luke xvii. 33. "He that loveth his life shall lose it, and he that hateth his life in this world shall keep it unto life eternal." John xii. 25. The life lost is the life found. It is psuche animal life, lost, and it is the same that is kept, or preserved unto life eternal. I cannot conceive how it is possible to put any other construction upon our Savior's words.

The real hope and comfort in his words consists in assuring his disciples that if they lost their lives for his sake the same would be restored to them, and in addition to this, they would be rewarded with zoe life everlasting. Moreover this is in accord with the fitness of things. A believer in Christ who has passed away into death and dust creates the necessity for such restoration to life as Jesus promised. You cannot give a man something, when the man has no visible existence. It is living ones who received the plaudit, "Well done, enter thou into the joy life zoe everlasting of thy Lord."

2. The whole difficulty with W. H. Wilson appears to be in overlooking the Scriptural doctrine of judgment, or if not overlooking at least misapprehending the subject. One of the first things Peter announced to the Gentile Cornelius was that Jesus is "ordained of God to be the judge of quick and dead." The Lord Jesus himself repeatedly in a number of ways and forms of speech made known to his disciples how at his second appearing he would sit as a Judge, first to reckon with, and reward his own servants according to their works, and second as a Judge to his enemies that would not have him to reign over them." The most casual reader of the Scriptures can hardly go astray on this subject. In view of the testimony it is presumptive folly on our part to affirm that believers in Christ will not come into judgment. It is better to go slow here, and understand what manner of Spirit we are of before hasting to an unwarranted conclusion.

Paul wrote his Corinthian brethren very plainly upon this question. His words are, "We must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ that every one may receive the things in body according to that he hath done whether it be good or bad." 2 Cor. v. 10. Who are we all? Can there be any doubt in the mind of the reader? How then can we say that the believer in Christ "will not come into judgment." Here is where the "dead fly in the ointment causeth it to stink."

To contradict the apostle is a serious matter. In another place Paul says, "If any be spiritual let him acknowledge the things that I write," It is not Paul alone, Peter and John are equally explicit in warning all to be prepared to give an account to him "who is ready to judge the living and dead." The doctrine of resurrection and judgment as related to each other both have their place in the holy oracles, and it is our duty to give both proper attention. If anything will make a man sober minded and circumspect in his daily walk and conversation it is the ever present consciousness that his Lord and Master will reckon with him at his coming.

GEO. MOYER.

[This article has reference to the one in issue of Dec. 3, and not to Brother Wilson's article in the present paper. —ED.]

Brother Underwood:

In a recent issue of THE RESTITUTION under the heading, "Questions and Answers for Our Children," occurs the question, "How long were they (Israel) in bondage?" and the answer given is, "Four hundred years."

I believe it is generally thought by Bible students that the Israelites were in bondage in Egypt 430 years. Upon examination, however, we find that Jacob and his children went down into Egypt 1706 B. C., Gen. xlvi. and that the Israelites were delivered by the hand of God through Moses in 1491 B. C. Ex. xiv. making a period of only 215 years that they were in bondage. How has the notion that they were in Egypt 430 years arisen? It was only 430 years from the time God made his covenant with Abraham until "he giving of the law on Sinai. Gal. iii. 17.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. OUR NEW YEAR GREETING LETTERS.

Editor Restitution:

Oh, how thankful we separated ones ought to be for the opportunities we have in these last days of Gentile times of communicating with each other through the mails, and THE RESTITUTION which brings so many kind letters of love, giving encouragement to those who are weary and anxious to reach their journey's end and be home with our Lord and Master; but while we are waiting we ought not to neglect communicating and speaking to each other, though we have to do it through the mails, or our ever welcome papers. See what the Lord thinks of those who "speak often one to another; and the Lord hearkened, and heard it, and a book of remembrances was written before him for them that feared the Lord, and that thought upon his name, and they shall be mine, saith the Lord of hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels, and I will spare them as a man spareth his own son who serveth him." Mal. iii. 16. Brothers and sisters, as our names are in the Lamb's book of life we ought to give more attention to the things to come, as Moses taught the Jews to teach them diligently to their children, and to talk of when they would sit in their houses, and when they would walk by the way, and when they lay down, and when they would rise up, and bind them upon their hands, and they shall be as frontlets between their eyes, and they shall write them upon the posts of the house, and on your gates." Deut. vi. 7-9. If it was good for the Jews to be ever thinking and talking of a temporal inheritance, how much more is it for us who are looking and hoping for an eternal inheritance in the ages to come.

Yours in hope.

GEO. MITCHELL.

Washington.

Brother Underwood:

Your call for Christmas greetings reminds me that the old year is nearing its close and that the New Year will soon be here. The question comes to each of us, Have we done what we could for the Master? He says upon all occasions spoken the truth as we find it written in the Word? For more than twenty years I have been isolated [illegible] Church privileges with one ex- [illegible] Ohio. I do not think always that I am alone for the Master's promise was, "I will be with you always." When we see that the churches of the day are "at sea" in regard to the plan of salvation and the future, and to know that they are denying the Bible and making it the works of men, we feel like rejoicing that God has so loved us that we are privileged to see the simplicity of his plan for the future. Every week I look for to our waiting [illegible] in this age darker away all [illegible] have to have the privilege of fill[illegible] some political position that they may be honored of men. These "gilt-edged rags in God's sight. But what think ye brethren? If we remain faithful to the end he will make us co-rulers in the kingdom of God. This means an everlasting life and a privilege to rule. An inheritance well worth our time and talents to seek for. What a great honor to know Abraham, David, Christ and his disciples who suffered so much that we might receive a crown of righteousness that faileth not away. In concluding let me say to those who are situated as I am, stand firm. Let nothing move you from the Rock of your salvation. If you can not go out and preach you can speak for Christ in private and distribute tracts and copies of THE RESTITUTION that others may see. Let us lay hold upon the hope set before us; which hope we have as an anchor of the soul, both sure and steadfast, and which entereth into that within the vail. Whither the forerunner is for us entered, even Jesus, made an high priest for ever after the order of Melchisedec. Yours in hope of eternal life.

D. C. ROBISON.

Ohio.

Dear brother and sister:

Another year is about gone, and what are we doing? Are we overcoming the evils of this world, and trying to walk in the footsteps of the meek and lowly Jesus? Although isolated from all brethren we believe that we can do something for the cause we love so well. Pray for me that I may live a pure and perfect life, and when Jesus comes receive a crown of life.

Your Sister praying for the soon coming King.

INEZ TITUS.

South Dakota.

Dear ones of like precious faith:

Nineteen hundred and two is now drawing to a close and the question comes, Have we made any progress in the divine life or character, have we made any additions as Peter says, adding to our faith? is our life in our homes more Christ-like? Are our dealings with our fellowmen such as it becomes those who believe the gospel to be the power of God unto salvation? It was said nineteen hundred years ago, Thou shalt call his name Jesus, for he shall save his people from their sins. How important it is for us to see, brother and sister, the importance of the word to be saved from our sins, not in our sins. Hence how beautiful the words of Paul in the fifth chapter of second Corinthians, seventeenth verse: "Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature; old things are passed away; behold, all things are new." The old life we buried when we were baptized. Dear ones in the Lord, have we been dying daily to the world, to the flesh, to the devil? If the Lord should suddenly appear, would we be found of him in peace, without spot or wrinkle. Some time ago I read in THE RESTITUTION among the letters, one from a dear sister whose name has slipped my memory. In her letter she mentions of setting apart a part of each day for prayer. How appropriate that would be when we may expect the Lord especially any moment. Daniel and his companions prayed three times a day to the God of Israel. How careful we would be in our business, and what a power it would have over our life during the day, and how better we would be to overcome the tendency to covetousness, after having spent some time in closet at the throne of grace, to which we are invited to come with confidence, that we may obtain favor in the time of need, and surely this is a day of need. May God bless our dear brother William Wilson. He is one that I have learned to love and have known for many years, and also all the dear ones who go and proclaim the unsearchable riches of Christ. May we one and all be more faithful this coming year if the Lord tarries, is the prayer of your brother in the blessed hope.

MARTIN T. ANDERSEN.

Illinois.

Dear brothers and sisters:

I wish to send greetings. Brother Underwood has requested us to exhort and speak to one another, and give our testimony for Jesus. We cannot tell all he has done for us, but his blessings have been many the past year. But the greatest blessing is that he has led us to see the truth as it is in Jesus, the light of the glorious gospel, and to know that Jesus is coming again. We know by the Word of God and the signs of the times that it is near, even at the door. Yes, the Lord is coming.

The Lord is coming, I this be
The heralded note of jubilee
And when we meet and when we part,
The salutation from the heart.

The Lord is coming, saints rejoice,
We soon shall hear his glorious voice;
Majestic uttered from afar,
As on he hastes for conquering war.

The Lord is coming, who shall stand,
Who shall be found at his right hand?
He that hath the white garment on,
That Christ our righteous King hath worn.

Let us brethren, forsake not the assembling of ourselves together to keep in memory our blessed Lord, and to study his Word. May we all be found watching.

ELLA KNOWLES.

Ohio.

Dear Brother Underwood:

We are nearing the end of another very eventful year in every respect; floods, earthquakes, railroad accidents of every description, causing the loss of lives of many people and destruction of thousands of dollars worth of property, and those strikes of different kinds, have caused much misery and suffering, let alone the inconvenience to the world at large. These certainly are signs of nearing the end of Gentile times, for we are told in Scripture that in the last days perilous times shall come, men shall be lovers of self, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy; lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God; and that is most assuredly the case in this last part of the nineteenth century. Pleasure is the main thing now with religious people as well as the world's people. But we as members of the Church of God should try and keep ourselves from mingling in their pleasurable amusements as much as possible.

Yours truly in the one faith.

W. D. TOWNSEND.

Ohio.

Dear ones of like precious faith:

I feel glad to exist in my testimony for the love of God and the truth. I feel rejoiced when I read so many good letters from the dear ones of the blessed hope. Although I have never seen many of them, I love them as brothers and sisters, and hope to meet them in the kingdom which I hope will soon come. The [illegible] meeting I attended at Waterloo, Iowa, is still fresh in my memory. I close with love to the brothers and sisters, wishing you a happy New Year.

Yours in hope.

MRS. S. C. OLIVER.

Kansas.

Dear Restitution:

Christmas time is approaching when we expect God to let our drawer to lengthen out. And I hope it will engulf all those who love our Lord's appearing. For myself I have no merits to boast of, only hoping and trusting until we reach our Father's house. For the sighs which are our guide board tell us we haven't much further to go. I had the pleasure of a short vacation from my study employment through November, and wife, children and myself spent it in California visiting my wife's father and family at Oleander, and had the pleasure of meeting with the brothers and sisters of the Church of God at that place, which is composed principally of Bro. Albert Baker and [illegible] Caldwell families. They meet regularly every Sunday for Bible study and social meeting. Bro. Edwin Groat preaches for them every fourth Sunday. The Lord's supper is served every other Sunday. They meet at present in a hall; the churches of that place being closed against them. One of the desires of their hearts is that they may be able to build a small church of their own some time. Uncle Albert and Uncle George, as they are called by those that know them, and to know them is to love them, for they are two God-fearing men, striving to show their faith by their works. How we enjoyed their company and those meetings in the hall, talking of those things concerning Jesus and the kingdom of God. The hardest part of our trip was taking leave of them. Oh, how those meetings and partings cause us to stop and breathe the prayer, "Thy kingdom come; thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven." It is grand to think of that age when every man will have the truth in his mouth and be our friend, and all heart aches, tears and partings have passed away; when we are gathered in our Father's house to enjoy the society of each other through the countless ages of eternity. Brothers and sisters we repeat our request and extend it to the household of faith, pray for us.

Yours in hope of the soon coming King.

JOHN E. MCDAVIS.

Oregon.

Editor Restitution:

I noticed your suggestion in the issue of Dec. 10th, for a New Year's greeting, and I desire to contribute the following, hoping it will be acceptable. The Holidays, Christmas and New Years as they are commonly called, are very closely associated in my mind. It is the custom at Christmas to exchange gifts with those dear to us that we hope will be appreciated. Christmas is what? It is the anniversary of the birthday of Jesus. When we follow the custom of gift giving do we think of the great Gift God made to us? "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in him might not perish but have everlasting life." John iii. 16. God though he owed man nothing, yet through his great love he gave his only Son that man might have a hope of salvation, eternal life. [illegible] that a glorious gift that was. Can we realize the love God holds toward us? Can we appreciate in our finite minds the sacrifice that was made for us? If we do realize the value of this precious gift; if we do realize the close relationship between God and us, the believer, through Jesus Christ, our Mediator, then Christmas will be held very dear by us and with the coming of the New Year we will strive to live a holier and purer life, present our bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable to God, that we may in some measure repay God. Brothers and sisters in the Lord, my earnest prayer is, that the New Year will find us walking the narrow way, holding the hand of Jesus, guided by his precepts. This will bring us into closer communion with God, and when the day of our salvation dawns we will hear the voice of our Master, "Well done thou good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things, enter into the joy of thy Lord.

Yours in the blessed hope.

GEO. NEILL.

Ohio.

Dear Restitution:

My subscription to the dear old paper expired in August and I am sorry I could not renew it sooner; I will try to be more prompt in the future. I should miss its weekly visits so much. It is not often I can hear a gospel sermon. I attended the Methodist services last evening. The text was, "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation." How I did wish Bro. or Sister Woodward could have handled the subject. We were warned to give our hearts to God if we would escape eternal torment in the lake of fire prepared for the devil and his angels. We were not told what we were to believe or do in order to escape the punishment, or in what the great salvation consisted. It certainly could not have been from death, as he thinks we were immortal. I thought about the blind leading the blind and the probable result. I ask an interest in the prayers of those of like precious faith, that I may be enabled to walk more worthy of the high calling, and that I with all who have taken the name of the Master may enter into that rest prepared for those that love him. Yours in hope of eternal life.

MRS SARAH L. GREEN.

Michigan.

Brothers and Sisters:

We thank our Heavenly Father, and our esteemed Brother Underwood for this privilege of greeting all those looking for the King. I am seventy-one years old. Have rejoiced in the glorious gospel of the kingdom for many years.

May the King soon come and find us ready, is my prayer.

ELMA V. BAKER.

Ohio.

Dear Brethren in Christ:

In our dear paper, a short time ago some one asked about our yearly love feast. We are nearing the end of 1902. Will 1903 be the year of Jubilee? I am happy to say that I find that the path of the just does shine brighter and brighter, and I can say with the poet,

I have no bad reports to bring,
When tempted to give o'er,
I will take the cross and gladly sing,
'Tis better on before.

I am bound, by the grace of God, to have a better report to bring in next year than I have this. Pray for me, "For it is not by might nor power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts."

W. J. CUMMINGS.

Michigan.

Dear Household of Faith:

We have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ, the Righteous. This Advocate we have if we have been immersed into Christ, and not until then. We must get into Christ, the Life Giver, then he is our life, and he will give us our life when he comes. Then he is our Advocate, our Life, our High Priest, our Mediator, our Son of Righteousness, the Captain of our Salvation, he is our Sin Bearer, he is our Immanuel, he is our Rock, he is our Shepherd, he is our Defence, our Victory over death. He will raise us up at the last day. He has obtained eternal redemption for us. Let us then get into the family of God's dear children. Let us become adopted sons and daughters of the Lord our Savior, Jesus Christ. Let us walk worthy of our high calling in Christ Jesus, and make our calling and election sure, and if we do these things, we shall never fall. Then an entrance will be ministered unto us into the everlasting kingdom of God's dear Son. Dear ones of like precious faith, let us be faithful to the end, and all will be well.

Submitted in love.

Dear Restitution:

I am rather isolated but I am looking earnestly, desiring and waiting for the King to reign in righteousness. A good Brother in Nebraska is sending me the paper. I send it away marked "Read, Return and Subscribe." This is the best I can do. I do not go out any. I would be glad to receive a letter from any of the friends.

Yours, still praying, Thy Kingdom Come.

JOHN T. ONGLEY.

Dear ones of like precious faith:

We wish you a happy New Year, and may the special blessings of God rest upon one and all. We are still looking for the soon return of our Lord and Redeemer, to reign in righteousness and peace. Our hope grows brighter day by day. We are striving to add to our [illegible] and grow in knowledge of the things revealed. We are trying to do all the good we can, although we meet with trials and disappointments. We count those as light compared to the joy set before us. What the year 1903 will bring forth, we can not tell, but would say to one and all, let us be on the watch. Let us ever look to Jesus the Author and Finisher of our faith, who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame. Remember the joy set before us to be revealed when Jesus comes. It is our desire that the Lord will soon come and put a stop to all evil. Let us be faithful, that we may receive a crown of life. In love.

Dear household of like precious faith:

How grand it seems that we are probably all directing our minds in one great channel of love concerning the precious promises in God's Word and for each other in writing a few lines for a New Year's greeting, expressing our hope, which is an anchor of the soul both sure and steadfast, and unfeigned love of the brethren that we have one another with a pure heart fervently. Rejoicing to know that we have the privilege of joining with this company of the faithful, and that we may enjoy their admonitions and be encouraged by the many comforting sayings in the articles of the New Year's greeting in which the different brothers and sisters will be mentioned what we are living for and so anxiously waiting to see fulfilled. Yes, we are longing for the time when many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways and we will walk in his paths, for out of Zion shall go forth the law and the Word of the Lord from Jerusalem. And he shall judge among the nations and shall rebuke many people; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." Yes, when this will have taken place the Bride will be occupying her glorious position with Jesus in his throne. Hasten the time, O Father.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JANUARY 7. 1903. NUMBER 1.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Dear brothers and sisters:

We have come to the season of the year when families and friends gather for annual visits and interchange of greeting, and when those who cannot attend send letters that will cheer and gladden the hearts of the receivers. No class of people have more reason to imitate this custom than have the people of God. All over the land and beyond seas, are those who are waiting, watching, for the coming of the Lord. Many are gathered into companies, where the association of their fellows makes the heart often glad as they meet and mingle together, telling over and over again the story of Jesus and his love, and singing glad songs of Zion. Others are alone so far as companionship of those of like precious faith are concerned. These feel, as others do not, the strength that comes from the occasional greeting of brother and sister. To satisfy this longing for a letter from loved ones, we again this year asked that those who would do so send their mite to cheer, encourage, exhort, edify, the hearts of others.

The answer is before you. From every direction—east, west, north and south—from sunny land to that of ice and snow—from city, town and rural home—from the aged father bent with years and with whitened hair, from strong men and women in their prime, from young and old,—from every one from everywhere, we have this same story, that while surrounded by trials and discouragements, grieved by sorrow, none of these things are able to drive them from the path that leads to the brightness they know is just beyond. Firm in the faith of Abraham and his God, confident that the promises will be fulfilled, unwavering, each is determined to press on and win the prize.

Shall we make new resolves for the year just begun? Let this be—that not by any word or act of ours during the year 1903 will any one have cause for offense. That each hour of each day of each week of each month—of the whole year, our life will speak with no tongue, that we are lamps giving forth a clear light, that others may be thus aided and not miss their way on our account. Pray for me.

OUR NEW YEAR GREETING LETTERS.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

I write once more to wish you all a Happy New Year. Let us exhort one another to love and good works, for God's love and protection for the past year. Let us praise his holy name and hold up the Banner of Truth to the world. I want to thank Brother Geo. Francis for his article on 1 Pet. iii. 18, 19, in issue of Nov. 26. Also wish to praise the dear Bereans of Illinois for such good letters. May God's best blessings be upon our young people. How we wish Brother Geo. Moyer or some one else would please write an article on 1 Thess. v. 20. We are in a Latter Day Saint neighborhood, and would like to feed them. Please find money to renew for the dear old paper, as we cannot do without it.

Yours in faith, looking for the return of the Nobleman. "Come Lord Jesus and come quickly."

Editor Restitution:

I herewith send a New Year's Greeting to you and to all the household of like precious faith scattered abroad throughout the land. I feel stronger in the Lord than ever I did before, and am determined more than ever to live the life of the righteous, that my last days may be like his. There are only two of us in this vicinity, of the household of faith, Sister Southwick and myself. She, I am sorry to say, has been very sick, but is somewhat better at present, and my prayer is that the Lord will have mercy upon her and that she may be raised to health and usefulness again. We were much strengthened and built up in the most holy faith by having Bro. W. H. Wilson visit us last October, but the result was not what we desired on account of the small turnout to hear him. The people here are afraid of Adventism. But, notwithstanding all this we had a very pleasant visit with him and were much strengthened and determined to go on to know the Lord, which to know aright is life eternal.

Yours, in the Faith.

Dear Friends in the One Faith.

I hope these few lines will be as interesting to you as yours are to me. I do rejoice in the great truths of the Bible, especially the promise made to the fathers, and since I have come to the knowledge that our dear Savior came into this world as he did, I can see how he was tempted in all points as I am, and still he has triumphed over them all, and so can I if I believe his Word and the record that Moses and the prophets testified of. Paul's warning to us, though we or an angel from heaven should come and preach other doctrines not to receive it. This is a good foundation to stand upon. I hope these few lines will meet the approval of all.

MRS. MARY FORSYTHE.

Dear Restitution:

As the old year has passed out, and the New Year has come in, let us be more watchful than ever. Let us heed the dear Savior's command to watch. Mark iii. 37, "And what I say unto you I say unto all. Watch." Let us watch in different ways. Not only the signs of false Christs and deceivers, wars, pestilence and earthquakes in divers places, but let us watch ourselves, that we stick closer to the straight and narrow path this next year than ever before, and prepare ourselves so we are fit subjects for the kingdom. We should be found with our lamps trimmed and brightly burning. There is much to do. We must watch that we do unto others as we would have them do unto us. Be patient in all things. James says, "But be ye doers of the Word and not hearers only, deceiving your ownselves." Matt. vii. 21. "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." We must be meek and lowly as our Savior was. James also says, "If any man among you seemeth to be religious and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, this man's religion is vain." Be kind to the poor. James says, "Hath not God chosen the poor of this world, rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom which he hath promised them that love him." 1 Cor. i. 26, 27, "For ye see your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many noble are called, but God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise, and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty." Let us be watchful and fit ourselves for the kingdom is my prayer.

Your sister waiting for the soon coming of our Savior.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

I send New Years Greeting, now that the present year is near its end. Perhaps many isolated ones like myself, are reviewing the life they have led through the past year. This thought comes to me, What have I done for the truth and the Christ that I profess to love? Have I always been ready to say a word for Jesus? Have I done all in my power to promote the truth of his holy Word? Have I made good use of the talent the Lord entrusted me with, or have I like the wicked servant hid it in the earth? Have I let my light so shine that others might see by my daily walk that I had been with the Christ and had learned of him? Paul says, "If we have not the spirit of Christ we are none of his." This little have I done I have contended for the faith once delivered to the saints, at every opportunity, and I have given THE RESTITUTION and many tracts on the true teaching of the Scriptures and conditional immortality, to the inhabitants of this place, but in this community there is not a person that believes the precious teachings contained in the gospel of Jesus, the Christ, and the kingdom, except myself, in fact, they all seem satisfied to believe that they have an immortal soul that wings its way to heaven immediately at death. One person said to me, "I want to think that my departed ones have gone to heaven, and that I will go there when I die." I replied, "Dear friend, Your thinking so will not change the plan and purpose of God; for there is no promise in his Word of going to heaven at death." Dear Brothers and Sisters, I thank my Heavenly Father, through his dear Son, that I have been brought out of darkness, and have gained life through Christ, the Life Giver. Now Brethren and Sisters, "To God and the Word of his grace which is able to build us up and give us an inheritance among all them which are sanctified." I desire an interest in your prayers, that I may be among the faithful few that will have confidence and not be ashamed before him at his coming.

Your Sister in the faith.

Editor Restitution:

Seeing your kind invitation to join in a social meeting, I embrace the opportunity, and send greetings to the scattered ones of the household of God. I have often attended social meetings of the sectarian churches, and have observed that the burden of their testimony was in stating the time, place and manner of their conversion; the time was stated almost to a minute, and the manner was given as bordering on the miraculous. I could hardly make a statement to that effect in regard to myself, and some of my pious friends have been candid enough to tell me that I never had been converted, or I surely could state the exact time. My father, H. P. Elliot, (now awaiting the sound of the trumpet that shall call the dead into life) was a pioneer in the early settlement of Northern Illinois, and also in the Blessed Hope, ever kept his family supplied with all the available literature on the "doctrine once delivered to the saints," and from my earliest ability to read understandingly, I was fully persuaded that it was necessary for me to go down into the watery grave thus making manifest my faith in order to be eligible to the promises made to Abraham and his seed, but I did not obey the promptings of my heart until June 1871, when I was baptized in the clear waters of Bear Creek, Benton Co., Ia., by that grand old soldier of the Lord, Elder Geo. Craton, when I arose to walk in newness of life, came out from under the condemnation of darkness and death, to live in the glorious light of the gospel of God's dear Son. Since that time many changes have taken place. I have had many trials and tribulations to endure. Death, the arch enemy has invaded my home three times and taken away those that were near and dear, shattered my fondest hopes, and for a time the future looked dark indeed. But I found that there is a balm that will heal every wound, although my days and nights are often filled with pain, yet I have schooled myself to look upon the bright side of life, and to be thankful for the multitude of blessings that I enjoy, and to realize that God is good, and that his mercy endureth forever. I recognize that God is the giver of every good and perfect gift, and everything that adds to the enjoyment of a child of God, comes from the same bountiful hand. He has given to us his Word, wherein is revealed to us the grand promises of a future life, immortal, eternal, glorious; and the joy of its contemplation should overshadow everything else, to such an extent that there will be no room in our hearts for gloomy forebodings of evil. Surely if there are any people that have cause for rejoicing, it is he who has the love of God in his heart, and been made free from the law of sin and death. Dear ones, let us stand fast in the profession of our faith; earnestly striving day by day to overcome all things that can lead us from the straight and narrow way that leads to life, steadfastly looking for the glorious appearing of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ, who shall fashion our vile bodies like unto his glorious body; for he says, "Behold, I come quickly. Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of my God." Blessed thought! Infinite love divine.

Yours in hope of the soon coming King.

Dear Restitution:

This evening my thoughts wander back a year. Yes, Christmas is here, and soon we will begin another year. I hope it will not be a year of sadness, as this one was to us. Oh, how many sad and lonely hours have we passed in this long and lonely year, when we had to give up our dear one, that seemed more than life to me. But he sleeps in the silent tomb waiting for the Life giver, who will come and make all things new. Many are the trials which have come to us as we journey on toward the valley of death. But not to us only, but to all that love the Lord and his appearing, yet there are a few of us left to tell the wonderful story of a risen Savior. It is a pleasure to tell of his wonderful love. He is with us amid all of our sorrow; he is with us and will ever be if we only look for him and fully trust him. He is our guide unto eternal life.

We have no preaching, as it seems we cannot get a minister. There are some dear ones who we think would obey if we could get some good minister, and we have tried to get some one but without success. We have our little Sunday School every Sunday, and meet to try and hold out the word of life to those that come. About 25 attend.

I wish you all a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year, and may God bless all the dear ones in Christ, and keep us safe till he comes, and then may we all come rejoicing bringing in the sheaves, is the prayer of one that loves the truth as it is in Christ Jesus our Lord.

Your Sister.

Dear household of like precious faith:

In response to the invitation to write, we send greeting to all the household of faith. We united with the Church of God at Eureka, Wis., nearly forty years ago. The lamented J. M. Stephenson was our pastor. The church is all scattered. We are up in Northern Wisconsin, far from any of the faith, which we regret very much, but we hope to see you all face to face in the near future. Our sincere love to all.

Yours truly in the one faith.

A starry blue-eyed flower grows in profusion on the surface of the sluggish ditch water that acts as drainage for this old fashioned southern town. It buries its roots deep in the slime at the bottom or clings to the oozing banks. By some subtle law of nature out of these stagnant depths it draws the nourishment that transforms it into a thing of beauty and a joy to the passer-by. So the cleansing power of the Holy Spirit reaches the human heart buried in the depths of sin and misery and converts it into a gem fit to adorn the King when he comes in his beauty. As the New Year dawns upon us how important that we invoke this indwelling of the Spirit. May a double portion of it rest upon us all.

Dear Household of Faith:

How blessed are all who have the privilege of assembling together to talk of our precious faith. We of the isolated class are hungry for a rich morsel from the Master's table, and always glad to partake with God's children at our annual love feast, that is spread for us through our dear old RESTITUTION. Neudesha is quite a thriving little city of about three thousand inhabitants. I think it would be a good spot to sow the seed of the kingdom, if financial circumstances would permit. If there are any of our people living here than mother and myself, we are not aware of it. We enjoy reading reports of meetings in our own state and elsewhere, and rejoice in our quiet way, that others are blessed. Only a few, here and there seem willing to listen to the true gospel, but oh, how precious, for they are the Lord's jewels, and will all be gathered by and by. Let us be cheerful waiting ones, and hope to the end; for soon the last name will be enrolled, after which the door will be closed. How dark this world will be after the saints are taken away. For all the worthy ones shall escape the things that will come to pass after, as spoken by our Lord, and will stand before the Son of man. Dear friends, the most of you we have never met, nor do we expect to meet you all until the great reunion. Then O yes, blessed thought! we shall look into your eyes beaming with immortality and recognize our Father's family. We shall know each other then.

Your Sisters in the glorious hope.

Brothers and Sisters:

A Christian greeting to all. I am happy that it is so that I am permitted to state to you that I am through the providence of God, past sixty-nine years old, in fairly good health, and strong in the faith of the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, and of his soon coming to set up his throne and establish his kingdom and rule over the nations of earth.

I am one of those isolated ones that first began to see the truth some fifteen years ago, after which I was denounced as a heretic, and cut off from the church of which I was a member. When I was fully persuaded the things concerning the kingdom and the name of Jesus Christ, I became obedient to its requirements, and am trying to walk in all the commandments and ordinances blameless. I have never once felt like looking back, amidst all my many trials when those that were dear to me would separate themselves from me, calling me a heretic, old fool, queer, crazy, and other hard names.

The enemy death has snatched some of my dear ones from me, and bowed my head in grief, yet I am strong in the faith, giving glory to God in the name of his Son, knowing that he doeth all things well, and that I must suffer to make me worthy of the kingdom. Pray for me that I may be an overcomer, and with you obtain the promises in Revelation, which are to be given to eat of the tree of life, to have a crown of life, and not be hurt of the second death. To eat the hidden manna, and be given a white stone and in it a new name written. To have power over the nations and rule with a rod of iron, and have the morning star. To be clothed with a white garment, and our name never blotted out of the book of life: to be made a pillar in the temple of God, the name of God and the New Jerusalem written on them. To sit with him in his throne.

Be faithful unto the end, that we may receive all the promises.

Your brother in the Lord watching for his signs, and waiting for his coming kingdom.

The year is dying! What a medley of emotions fill the soul,—the dear old year, born to us in the far-off sunny Southland of Australia, on the banks of the River Brisbane, amidst the Tropical Botanical Gardens, we bade it welcome. We see it die where the waters of the Alabama mingle with the briny tide of Mobile Bay. To us it has been an eventful year. True and unfeigned friendships have been formed, and adieus spoken with those we shall never meet again. Like ships that pass at sea, we think of them, and wish them a pleasant voyage and a safe anchorage in the haven of eternal rest. Did we help them? Was their acquaintance a strength to us? God only knows. The year's work done is but a paragraph in life's history with blots in every line, save by the cleansing blood of Christ. Oh how weak and frail we are, and how much we need the sympathy of him who said, "Thy faith hath made thee whole." May God help us and give us strength for the duties of the coming year.

Yours in hope,

Dear brothers and sisters:

As we are requested to write a short letter for a New Year love feast, and I would like to join with others in that feast, let us all answer the call and show our love for God and Christ and for one another. I am still strong in the one faith, and I am not ashamed to own my Lord, nor to defend his cause. I love the Lord, for he first loved me, and he suffered and died on the cross that we might live. So let us love one another as Christ loved us. I am all alone here, and have no preaching of the true gospel, but when I get the dear old RESTITUTION, and read the encouraging letters from the brothers and sisters, O, how cheering it is to me. Let us be faithful, prayerful, hopeful, and watchful till Jesus comes.

Your Sister in hope.

Editor Restitution:

I seat myself this beautiful New Year morning to write you a few lines and renew my subscription. I have taken the paper for about thirty years, and as long as I live I do not want to be without it. It would seem like parting with a very dear friend.

We have a little band of the one faith here, and we meet on Sundays to hear the word of life expounded which is ably done by our dear brother Geo. Moyer. On Thursday evenings we meet for prayer and exhortation, and to build each other up in that most holy faith which was once delivered to the saints.

Our hearts have been much saddened during the last year by the invasion of the enemy death, who has claimed three of our number. In April our Brother Dr. Clemmer died, and in Oct-ober Bro. [illegible] my brother-in-law Sister Dunhan very much in our meetings sorrow not as those that have no hope; for we believe that Jesus died and rose again from the dead. Even so also them that sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. So we comfort each other with that blessed assurance in his Word.

Surely this is an age of pleasure-seeking, even nearly all professors of religion are lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God. The attendance in the churches at their regular services is very light. If they wish to draw a crowd they have to resort to some special attraction in the way of an orchestra or something of that sort. There is everything to indicate that we are living in that age of the world which is called in the Scriptures perilous times. But let us as children of the light pray—Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven.

Wish you and the whole household of faith a happy new year, I remain,

Your brother in Christ.

In accordance with our Editor's request, I will try and say a few words in our annual love feast. We are one year nearer home, one year nearer the judgment, one year nearer our final rest, and, let us fear lest a promise being left us of entering into that rest any of us should seem to come short of the prize. As I write my thoughts are active, I think of so many I have become acquainted with in all these years of working in the ministry. Many have proved faithful unto death and are sleeping in Jesus, many are still battling for the right, striving to gain the crown of life. I imagine I can almost see the faces of the dear ones around Niagara Falls, in different places in Indiana, Illinois, Ohio, Michigan, and how vividly I see the earnest, determined look on the faces of the faithful, self-sacrificing ones in Washington and Oregon. What workers they are out there. May we all be kept by the power of God through faith, and may we all remember that we cannot serve two masters and love both best. Let us all make the resolution to be better Christians if life is given us for another year, than we have ever been before, thus striving we will gain the crown of life.

Yours, trying to be a worker with God. I ask an interest in your prayers that I may be enabled to do God's will and his work acceptably. A Happy New Year to you all. Your Brother and fellow-worker.

Dear ones of like precious faith:

If we wish to live in the future glorious age and share in the honors of blessing the nations, as revealed by Moses and the prophets, now is the time to make the necessary preparation for the prize of the high calling in Jesus. Now is our time to lay away all preconceived false ideas, and come to the Scriptures "Which are able to make us wise unto salvation." We must come like a little child, teachable. Unless we are willing to submit our will to the will of God, we cannot become acquainted with God's plan of the salvation of the world. The long expected day is nearing and soon the Messiah will come. What joyful expectations will greet us when we behold him who hath said "I will come again," and while we wait his return let us look beyond to the great jubilee when the captives will be free and all sorrow passed in the Happy New Year of Eternity.

Dear ones of like precious faith:

I send New Year's Greeting. Dear ones, another year with its cares, its joys and sorrows, has gone by and we are that much nearer our promised crown. Let us strive this New Year of 1903, to live better, nobler lives than in the one just past. May God help us to follow more closely in the footsteps of our meek and lowly Savior, that we may be as nearly like he was as is possible for mortal flesh to be, and besides we are the Body of Christ. Oh consider what true, holy lives we ought to lead. How pure should be our every thought, word and deed. The Lord is soon coming to reward every man according as his work shall be. Let us so live that we may not be ashamed before him at his coming, and that we may hear the welcome words, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

Underwood has again given us the privilege to take part in this love feast through our much loved RESTITUTION, which will indeed be a feast of good things to the hungry soul to hear from the different members of the Christ body, and be strengthened and encouraged in our lonely pathway with only here and there a traveler.

But why keep they that narrow way,
That ranged thorny maze?
Oh, that's the way their Leader trod;
They love and keep his ways.

Yes, dear brethren, the world is not apprised of our glad anticipations or the joy that comes over us at times, when we meditate in our loneliness of the soon coming King who shall reign in righteousness. I love to think of that resurrection morning, when all the saints of God shall be called forth to meet the Lord in the air, and be crowned with immortality. Jesus says, "I am the resurrection and the life, he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live, and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die." We hear his voice ringing down the ages, "I am he that liveth and was dead, and behold, I am alive for ever more," and we have the promise that our life is hid with Christ in God, when Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall we also appear with him in glory. Happy New Year. How I apply Christ's prescriptions might aid some one. I find by experience when my sense of feeling is not located I have a sense of comfort, ease and pleasure. When my feelings are located I have a sense of discomfort, my mind is affected, dissatisfied, conscious of disturbance, implying danger, non-congeniality existing; not spiritually minded; lamp oil getting low. One says, In such a state of feeling what do you do? I carefully read Christ's sermon on the mount, in connection with Gal. v. Christ's prescriptions properly applied are always effective. What do you do when you realize you have no home, are poor, feel dispondent, forsaken, etc.? I read God's covenants and promises: then feel rich, well and happy. When persecuted, called an infidel, soul sleeper, etc., I tell them I am in good company. All holy men of God were soul sleepers since the world began. Truth drives out all unhallowed delusions of men and devils; and blessed will be the meek when they inherit the earth. Lord, hasten that day is the prayer of

"THE YEAR IS GROWING OLD."

So wrote the poet. The last sands of 1902 are running out, and soon it will be numbered with the years that are gone. While it is our duty at the close of each day to reflect or cause to pass under review, the deeds and the words of the previous hours, as to what we have done and said, whether both have reflected the glory of God or dishonored his name, and brought reproach upon ourselves; so, great anniversaries like our birthdays and the New Years become occasions for reflection and review. In the first case it is but a few hours of activity back over which we glance; in the second a whole year of our history and experience is brought under examination, with a view to see how well our deeds and words will stand the test of God's word, and with the further view to setting ourselves resolutely to the work of making improvements, in the oncoming year; to growing wiser and better as life advances.

As the New Year has been an occasion for exchange of greetings among friends, for each to give expression to the common but appropriate sentiment, "A Happy New Year," to friends each chances to meet, or write to; so this time it has been proposed by Bro. Underwood that the circle to be greeted be widened to take in the Household of Faith, or such portion of it as are readers of THE RESTITUTION. I for one am glad of this opportunity. I send to all my New Years greeting in the language of Paul's salutation to the churches: "Grace be unto you, and peace from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ."

Being a public speaker, I am personally acquainted with quite a number of our Father's family; been in the homes and shared the hospitality of many of these. Some of the living members of the Christian household I know by name, but the vastly larger proportion are utter strangers to me, so I patiently wait for the grand opportunity of introduction and greeting in the presence of the Lord Jesus Christ at his coming.

The Household of Faith, in its universal sense, comprehends the faithful of all ages. What a large family of noble sons and daughters with which to become acquainted. I indulge the hope—call it a conceit if you will—that after a time I shall be able to identify by name every member of the Household. What a retentive memory and ready recollection one must have to do that. But just think of what some mortal and diseased brains have been capable of doing. It was said of one in general that he could call by name every soldier in his vast army. I cherish the hope of big things, and expect the realization of more than I dream.

Now dear ones of the family circle to whom my greeting shall come, hold on to the faith, and do this in a most practical way, by word and, by giving, by suffering, by patience, by loving as Christ loved us. May each one's self reflect the glorious image of the Christ character. Don't fall by the w... Dear brothers and sisters in the one faith and hope in Christ:

Christian love and greetings to all. I am one of your number who is a lonely pilgrim and stranger, traveling to that blessed abode, soon to be our eternal home. We have no abiding place here; we seek a city out of sight whose builder is God, who holds it in reserve for the coming and kingdom of his beloved Son Jesus, the King of the Jews. Then let us lift up our heads and rejoice for our redemption is nearer than when we gladly believed and joyfully obeyed the blessed gospel of the kingdom of Jesus Christ, our Lord and Savior, who is the resurrection and the life, and we know if we are faithful to the end we shall live and reign with him in the glorious and beautiful city prepared for the King, and those who love his appearing. So we pray, come Lord Jesus, quickly come. Let us not be discouraged, or faint by the way, for he who has promised not to leave or forsake, is faithful to fulfill. Let us trust him with all our heart and patiently wait for his coming, having on the wedding garment with our lamps brightly burning, ready to go out to meet the Bridegroom with joy and gladness.

Your Sister in Christ.

Dear Restitution:

Another year is gone and we are one year nearer home. Our Savior will soon come. Let us so live each day as to be ready to meet him. We do not know the day nor the hour, neither do we know the year of his coming, but the signs show that we are nearing the end of Gentile times, when our Lord shall come in power and in great glory.

Soon the beautiful prophecy which we find in Solomon's Song 2d chapter will be fulfilled. Our Savior will say, "Rise up, my love, my fair one, and come away. For lo, the winter is past, the rain is over and gone; the flowers appear on the earth, the time of the singing of birds is come, and the voice of the turtle is heard in the land. The fig tree putteth forth her green figs, and the vines with the tender grape gives a good smell. Arise, my love, my fair one, and come away." Then the Bride of Christ will arise with shouts of victory, to meet her Savior in the air. May that glad day soon come, and may we be ready to meet the Bridegroom.

Dear Ones Scattered Abroad:

I am glad to join with you once more in this social love feast. Am glad that it was suggested that short letters filled with love and good cheer be submitted to the way worn travelers. We know they will be enjoyable because we all speak the same things. Not an uncertain sound of brass or tinkling cymbal; because we are built on the apostles, Jesus Christ being the chief corner stone, elect and precious.

The past year has been fraught with many sorrows—many of our dear ones have come under the power of the enemy death, the mourners go about the street, crying Come Lord Jesus, come quickly. Take to thee thy great power and reign. I believe he is coming soon, and will bring from the dead our dear ones that now are sleeping that dreamless sleep, and destroy him that has power over death, which is the devil.

When I look over my past life, how little good I have done, yet receiving continually his unmerited grace, and drinking from that wonderful fountain of love. Oh how ungrateful I am. Pray for me, dear ones, that my unworthy heart may be filled with gratitude and praise, that I may be fit to meet the Master when he comes to raise up the tabernacle of David that is fallen down, that the residue of men may seek the Lord, and all the Gentiles on whom his name is called. He is coming to rule over this earth; all dominions shall serve and obey him. When he comes with all the holy angels, then he will sit on the throne of his glory, and before him shall be gathered all nations. Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth, and delight themselves in the abundance of peace. For the knowledge of the glory of the Lord shall cover the earth as the waters do the sea. Then we will not have to teach every man his neighbor, saying Know the Lord, for all shall know him from the least to the greatest. At that time they shall call Jerusalem the throne of the Lord, and all the nations will be gathered unto it to the name of the Lord. Yes many people, and strong nations shall come to seek the Lord of hosts in Jerusalem, and to pray before the Lord: and the inhabitants of one city shall go to another, saying, Let us go speedily to pray before the Lord, and to seek the Lord of hosts I will go also.

How I would love to meet with all those once more of the true faith. I am alone here in the true Abrahamic faith, though there is a variety of faiths here. We isolated ones know and we cannot be satisfied with a faith not backed by God's holy word.

Brothers and sisters, if we have to stand alone, don't let us complain; be ever ready to give a reason of our hope. Tell them we are journeying to a land of promise, invite them to come and go with us, and we will do them good. Come brothers and sisters, let us hear from you all. It builds us up; short letters are what we enjoy. I don't know how I could get along without the dear RESTITUTION. Oh those loving letters of encouragement from so many good writers. We need each other's help in these times of falling away. Be faithful a little longer. We will soon hear the voice of him that is able to give life from the dead. Then I hope to meet you all in the kingdom.

May the good Lord help us, that we may hear the applaudit, Well done, good and faithful servant, come you blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world.

Yours waiting.

Dear brothers and Sisters:

I feel like sending you a word of greeting for the New Year, although not capable of writing any thing that will be of much service to others. For more than thirty years have been contending for the faith once delivered to the saints, and striving to do those things my Father would have me do. I frequently have to stand all alone in defense of God's Word. I cannot think of compromising with error although I know others frequently think me stubborn because I will not accept their teaching.

Pray for us, brethren and sisters, that we may not be led away from the truth by the false teachers by whom we are surrounded. May the Master soon come and take to his own right and reign, when sickness and sorrow will be done away, and God's will be done on earth as it is in heaven, is the prayer of your Sister in Christ.

Editor Restitution:

Truly the world is rushing on in the fulfillment of the prophecies relating to the second advent of our Savior. England and Germany firing on the forts of that little helpless country, Venezuela; Italy standing ready to join them. Some of the South American governments, and these United States watching, ready to stand in and help Venezuela. For what is all this threatened waste of human life—to collect a few paltry dollars. It is spending a million to collect a nickel, to say nothing of the human carnage. Does it not seem strange? To those who know nothing of God's plans, as outlined in prophecy, yes; but to the student of prophecy, no. God is working out his purposes. That is to say, he is carrying out his plans in fulfillment of his purposes foretold by his prophet Joel nearly three thousand years ago.

Before the nations of the world will welcome the Peacemaker they must become tired of war. As a general proposition, the people of all nations, are so patriotic, that wars brought about by their rulers are popular where there is any just cause. Therefore to accomplish God's purpose and make the people of the world tired of war, the wars must be brought about without any real or just cause.

I think those who will have the blessed privilege of becoming members of the Bride of Christ, have all, or nearly all, been selected. Our good Father is now getting the world ready to receive Jesus as Supreme Ruler and Peacemaker. Ere long Jesus will come for his saints and take them away unto himself. As soon thereafter as the world is ready to receive and welcome the King of Kings and his co-workers, the saints, Jesus will come with his Bride.

God rules in the affairs of men. He is never idle, and does all things on time—he is never tardy. The time in which he was to take out from among the Gentiles, a people for his name, has if our chronology (which is only human) is correct, expired. If it has, then the work has been accomplished, and the Bride is ready for the Bridegroom, and the marriage may take place any day. What a glorious outlook for those who are to become members of the Bride! Is it true that the time when we shall have the blessed privilege of again meeting with the dear ones who have fallen asleep in Jesus, is near at hand? Yes, it is true as God is true. Lift up your heads, all ye who are bowed down with suffering and long waiting, the time of your redemption draweth nigh. The time when you shall see Jesus, and meet the loved ones, is at hand. The beloved Jesus, the faithful Paul, the enthusiastic Peter, the fatherly James, the loving John, will all be there.

May our good Father hasten the glad day.

R. S. DUNCANS.

Through the dear RESTITUTION I wish to greet the dear brethren and sisters of the one faith who are scattered abroad. I am still contending for the one faith that was delivered to the saints, and I am looking for the soon coming of our Lord from heaven to change our vile bodies, and fashion them like his glorious body, that when he shall appear we shall be with him in glory.

Dear brethren and sisters I hope our faith is built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ being the chief corner stone. God said he that overcometh shall inherit all things. Then let the word of Christ dwell in us all richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another in Psalms, and hymns, and spiritual songs, singing with grace in our hearts to the Lord. Oh, I pray that we all will hold out faithful unto the end of this life, and that we may be the cause of many being brought to the knowledge of the truth, and the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ.

Oh, what a glorious kingdom that will be when Christ shall reign King, with all the saints. If we all get into that kingdom we must be faithful in all our works, for without faith it is impossible to please God. He that cometh to God must believe that he is and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him. Therefore let us walk in his footsteps, patiently enduring all things, and strive to overcome evil with good. If we walk thus through life, when our Savior takes his great power to reign, he will say unto us, Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord.

Brothers and sisters, the signs of the times indicate that Christ's second advent is near, when with his glorified saints he will rule the world in righteousness. To the comparatively few, the coming of the Lord is the blessed hope. Around it clusters every thing grand and glorious. Then let us pray Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven. I close with love to all, and hope we may hold out faithful till the Master comes.

Yours in hope of eternal life.

Dear Household of Faith:

I thought I would write a few words to inform you that I am yet holding to the good hope of the gospel of the kingdom, as given us in God's Word, written by holy men of God who wrote as they were moved by the holy spirit, or God wrote through or by them, and we have it to read for encouragement in these last days of Gentile wickedness; for surely darkness has covered the earth, and gross darkness the people; for they know nothing of the hope of the gospel for they have another hope, of going to heaven when they die; affirming that they do not die, as was taught in the Garden of Eden, in plain contradiction to the Word of God: for God said, "In the day thou eatest thereof, thou shalt surely die, but the serpent says, ye shall not surely die, but be as gods knowing good and evil." This contradicts God emphatically. Just so now, only they have it more modified, saying that the soul is immortal, and goes direct to heaven when the body dies, and not one passage in the Bible to prove it. My brethren, we have no such a hope as that. Our hope is plainly written out in plain words, like this: "Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth," and the Psalmist says, "The meek shall inherit the earth and delight themselves in the abundance of peace." Thus we might go on and shew that our hope is not ground on the doctrine of the devil, but is founded on a plain and positive "thus saith the Lord." So we can rest assured, it will never fail. O my brethren and sisters, we have a hope that gives us new encouragement to press our way on through this dying and sinful world; but for the Word of God, and THE RESTITUTION, I would have hard work to keep in the way of life, which is so opposed to the ways of the world, but is sure and reliable. Thus we can face a world in darkness. Yes, my brethren, I never was so strong in the faith of the gospel of the kingdom; the stuff preached all around me has no effect on me, for I believe God's Word is truth, and nothing else has any effect on me: for I am settled and grounded in the truth as given to us in God's Bible. My brethren, it will stand when every thing else fails, and in the great day we will hear the welcome voice, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world. Amen." Praise the Lord, O my soul! And now I want to say a few words to show the contrast between the teaching of the apostacy and the Bible. The apostacy says the good go their reward at death, by going direct to heaven when they die and receive their reward, each one as they die. The apostle says, in Heb. xi. 13, "These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off, and was persuaded of them and embraced them, and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth. And these all having obtained a good report through faith received not the promises, God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect." Thus showing that the dead and living will receive their reward at one and the same time. The dead by a resurrection; the living by a change to immortality. Thus we (God's) people will be made perfect together and live on the earth.

Dear Restitution:

Once more it is my pleasure to send greeting to the dear ones of like precious faith. O how I love to read the letters from the dear brothers and sisters. It is a great pleasure to me as we cannot see each other face to face, to hear through the columns of THE RESTITUTION from one another. It is a great help, it gives cheer and strength to some that are often cast down. Let every one that can, write a few lines, that it may be the means of strengthening some one. I want to see a letter from some of the Fort Brethren and Sisters before long. We are told to let our light shine. So let us be faithful that when he, who is our life shall appear then shall we appear with him in glory. Now I ask an interest in the prayers of God's people, that I may be able to enter into the straight and narrow gate which leadeth to life eternal. I want to live in the Eden home where there will be no more sorrow, death nor crying, for the former things have passed away. It will be a glorious time when it shall come to pass and all this curse be removed and this earth be made a home for the righteous to dwell in.

Yours in hope of eternal life.

Dear Restitution:

I feel grateful that it is our happy privilege to communicate with each other through the columns of our dear old paper, on this, the beginning of another New Year. May we all take fresh courage to work for the Master, both in word and deed. Let our words and actions be in harmony. Let us labor to build each other up in our most holy faith, striving together for the unity of the Spirit. Let us try to be one, as it is so beautifully set forth in the 17th Chapter of John. Let us not forsake the assembling of ourselves together. This is quite a privilege, to come and surround the Lord's table, and show his death till he comes. John says, "I have no greater joy than to hear that my children walk in truth." Let us abound more and more in the work of the Lord, knowing that our labor is not in vain in the Lord. Let us not be weary in well doing, for in due time we shall reap, if we faint not. Let brotherly love continue. Let us do all with an eye single to the glory of the Father. Let us lay aside every weight of sin which doth so easily beset us and run the race that is set before us with patience, ever looking unto Jesus who is the author and finisher of our faith. Let us be watching for every sign that appears to show us the near approach of the coming of the Bridegroom. Let us so run that we may obtain a crown of life when the Righteous Judge shall come to gather up his jewels.

Your Sister, earnestly contending for the faith once delivered to the saints and trying to ever be ready to give a reason for my hope with meekness and fear.

Editor Restitution:

We are just at the verge of a New Year, on which there is neither blot nor stain on its pure white pages. How careful we should live in the sight of the Savior so as not to bring a blot on them. The Lord Jesus will soon come in power and great glory, and oh, how happy we will be if we are found without spot and blameless before the Lord. Come Lord Jesus, and come quickly. Bro. W. H. Wilson was in our midst and pointed out the precious promises and the Word of Truth so earnestly. Though the weather was unfavorable there was good attention and attendance. Five precious souls were obedient and put on Christ in baptism. How beautiful to see the young render a life's service to the Savior. Those obedient were Mollie Crickbomb, Clara Knife, Elgin Black, Addie Black and Emma Jarrard. May the blessings of God ever be with them, and may they ever be found working for their Savior, is my prayer.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

We feel that we would like to say something for the Master. We are isolated from any of the brethren, and if it was not for the dear old RESTITUTION and the Bible to read and meditate upon we would feel lonesome, but looking unto God's promises it fills our hearts with joy and comfort. We are trying to do all that we can in spreading the gospel truth, to whoever we meet. We wish you all a Happy New Year. May the Lord bless us all and give us a crown in his coming kingdom is our prayer.

Yours in the One Faith,

Brother Underwood:

I send you a report of the death of our beloved Brother, Charles Franklin Thompson, who was born in Edgar Co., Ill. in 1844, and died near the town of Glendale, Arizona, Dec. 24, 1902. Brother Thompson was baptized July 24th, 1895, by Brother John Foors, in Bates County Mo. His sickness was Typhoid Pneumonia. He was buried in the cemetery at Glendale. Brother Thompson leaves a wife, and a son who is a cripple, and entirely helpless, and both have the sympathy of the sorrowing friends and acquaintances. A few words of comfort were spoken at the grave by the writer, from Job xiv. "If a man die shall he live again?" after which we laid him to rest to await that call at the last day.

TO OUR PATRONS.

We want more readers for THE RESTITUTION. We want One Thousand new names on our list for 1903, and can have them if you will help us.

In every Church of our faith in the land there are members who do not take our paper, who would be benefitted by reading it.

There are those who are isolated by circumstances from any Church fellowship, who would be kept firmer in the faith, helped and strengthened for the battles of life if they had THE RESTITUTION each week.

There are others interested in the truths we hold, who would often have their attention called to the principles of our faith by reading our paper. When no preacher can be heard, when you cannot talk to them, THE RESTITUTION in their homes would be ever a present visitor—a missionary that will do more than any other one thing to keep the interest alive.

There are those whom we wish were interested in the Bible and what it promises. Many of this class of persons have never had the opportunity, or have neglected the matter when it was before them.

You are surely known to people such as are mentioned, and you are surely interested in them. We are satisfied you are not unmindful of their eternal well-being. How much do you care for these people? Will you join with us in getting the gospel before them, and keeping it there a year? We have this to offer to you for consideration.

We will send THE RESTITUTION one year to NEW Subscribers for $1.00. We will start them as soon as received and give credit to the end of 1903.

With a little persistent effort in presenting the paper to those you know who are not taking it, you can induce them to try it for $1.00. If you want some sample papers we will gladly supply them to you, and our list can be increased by 1000 names at once.

It can be done easily if you will act on this suggestion, and get those near you interested. If each reader would get a new name our list would be doubled at once.

It would seem as if every reader of THE RESTITUTION could exert influence enough to get one more new name if the effort was made. Will you try it? If the first person you suggest it to does not respond, do not be discouraged, but try some one else. Perhaps the one you least expect will answer quickest.

Did you ever stop to figure up how many words are contained in our paper in a year? You will be surprised at the number of sermons it contains. There is variety too. There is doctrine and the practical, encouragement and cheer, and comfort for the distressed. Each phase of teaching would make several good sized books during the year. You can do no work that yields as large a return for the money expended as by sending THE RESTITUTION to a friend for a year.

Will you not start right away and send one name, and next week when that person gets his paper, some one else will hear of it, and you can send another subscriber.

Obituary.

I write to inform the many readers of the death of our beloved Sister Mrs. Elisabeth J. Clark, of Soda Springs, Idaho. She was taken very suddenly with pneumonia, Nov. 7th, and died Nov. 11th. Although she suffered much in her sickness no word of complaint ever escaped her. Indeed she was one of the most patient and unselfish persons I ever knew. Elizabeth I. Clark was born in Washington Co., New York, June 9, 1837, and moved with her parents when five years old to Wisconsin. She was married in the last named State in 1854, to W. H. Clark. They moved from there to Iowa and then to Nebraska, then to Washington. She has always been a member of some church. In the winter of 1900 she came into the Church of God under the preaching of Bro. W. L. Skeels of Scholls, Oregon, while he was holding a series of meetings at Ellensburg, Washington. Since then she has been a devoted reader of THE RESTITUTION. She loved to read the letters from the dear brothers and sisters of like precious faith. She has often told me how glad she was to know the truth in Christ Jesus as taught in God's holy Word. She moved with her husband to Soda Springs, Idaho, where she died. She leaves a husband and four children to mourn her loss; Mrs. B. T. Titus and Mrs. Martha Scott of Soda Springs, Idaho, Mrs. Overcash of Crete, Nebraska, and D. W. Clark of Waterville, Washington. Her bereaved loved ones have the heartfelt sympathy of many sympathizing friends. Do not grieve too much, dear ones. She is sleeping in Jesus waiting for the resurrection morning. When he comes she will rise from her dusty bed and reach out glad hands to meet her loving Savior who will say to her, "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." Let us dear ones so live that when our dear Lord shall come we may be ready to meet him and her.

MARY PATTERSON.

Lillian Mae Weaver, daughter of Bro. and Sister Oliver P. Weaver, was born Feb. 16, 1878, and died Dec. 7, 1902, at Hillisburg, Ind.; aged 24 years, 9 months and 22 days. She leaves a father, mother, six sisters and one brother to mourn their loss. Lillian was a kind and loving child, and among her young associates was well liked. Having that disposition which goes to characterize the noble qualities of a woman. She will be greatly missed in the community where she was known. She met with a painful accident over a year ago by breaking her ankle. She had often said to her mother and sisters, just as soon as she was able that she was going to be baptized, and lived in great hopes that she would soon be able to go to the water and there put on Christ. But a sad changed occurred; one day while she was walking she slipped, and breaking it over, soon blood poison set in which caused her death. She is in the hands of a just God who will deal right with her. The writer was called to come and preach her funeral, but arrived there too late. This is the first death that has occurred in Bro. Weaver's family, and the blow was a hard one. But one grand thought and that is the sister and child called her sisters and brother around her bed and requested of them to prepare to meet their God. And when Brother Zilmer goes there several of her sisters and one brother in-law will put on Christ.

Circuit Tours to Hawaii.

Low rates have been announced by the Chicago & North-Western Railway for special round-trip, tourist tickets to Honolulu and return, via all direct steamship lines from San Francisco.

The trip can be made going via San Francisco and returning via Vancouver, if desired, or vice versa.

The Hawaiian Islands now occupy a place more prominent than ever before with the American public, and this trans-Pacific movement is rapidly growing in volume each year.

The special rate referred to provides an opportunity to visit these magical islands of the Pacific. They have a climate of such marvelous softness and warmth as to mark them as a health resort for the whole world. Nothing quite like it has ever been discovered elsewhere. The completion of the Pacific cable, now being laid, will place the islands in direct telegraphic communication with the United States and add very much to the popularity of the islands from a tourist's standpoint.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters abroad be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittances should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended.

Office Calendars.

A very serviceable calendar has been issued by the Chicago & North-Western R'y, for the year 1903. The figures are large and easily distinguished, the days of the month and the consecutive day of the year are both shown; and the publication is of that solid and creditable sort which makes it desirable for business men and manufactures. Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av, Cleveland, O.

TO OUR PATRONS.

We want more readers for THE RESTITUTION. We want One Thousand new names on our list for 1903, and can have them if you will help us.

In every Church of our faith in the land there are members who do not take our paper, who would be benefitted by reading it.

There are those who are isolated by circumstances from any Church fellowship, who would be kept firmer in the faith, helped and strengthened for the battles of life if they had THE RESTITUTION each week.

There are others interested in the truths we hold, who would often have their attention called to the principles of our faith, by reading our paper. When no preacher can be heard, when you cannot talk to them, THE RESTITUTION in their homes would be ever a present visitor—a missionary that will do more than any other one thing to keep the interest alive.

There are those whom we wish were interested in the Bible and what it promises. Many of this class of persons have never had the opportunity, or have neglected the matter when it was before them.

You are surely known to people such as are mentioned, and you are surely interested in them. We are satisfied you are not unmindful of their eternal well-being. How much do you care for these people? Will you join with us in getting the gospel before them, and keeping it there a Year? We have this to offer to you for consideration.

We will send THE RESTITUTION one year to NEW Subscribers for $1.00. We will start them as soon as received and give credit to the end of 1903.

With a little persistent effort in presenting the paper to those you know who are not taking it, you can induce them to try it for $1.00. If you want some sample papers we will gladly supply them to you, and our list can be increased by 1000 names at once.

It can be done easily if you will set on this suggestion, and get those near you interested. If each reader would get a new name our list would be doubled at once.

It would seem as if every reader of THE RESTITUTION could exert influence enough to get one more new name if the effort was made. Will you try it? If the first person you suggest it to does not respond, do not be discouraged, but try some one else. Perhaps the one you least expect will answer quickest.

Did you ever stop to figure up how many words are contained in our paper in a year? You will be surprised at the number of sermons it contains. There is variety too. There is doctrine and the practical, encouragement and cheer, and comfort for the distressed. Each phase of teaching would make several good sized books during the year. You can do no work that yields as large a return for the money expended as by sending THE RESTITUTION to a friend for a year.

Will you not start right away and send one name, and next week when that person gets his paper, some one [illegible] upon to send

Poetry.

AWAKE

Awake my soul! no longer sleep
The sands of time are nearly run
A few more hours of conflict yet
And then will find thy work undone
The conquests that remain thy foes,
And soon thy hours of toil be past.

Take up the duty next thy door,
Heed the cry of those in sin and woe
Awaken them, and with the power,
Not in the flesh, the world to know;
Let every one thou hast to win
In Him the Lord of Truth the Way.

A Homeless Race.

Home, home sweet home! Of all the hymns among the thousands sung by English speaking people, scarcely any hymn touches the heart and calls forth the emotions as this does. "There is no place like home." J. H. Holla-d said, "That a few days away from home suffired to make one a weaker man, morally and every way." So a man is at his best at home. While nearly all men from the most civilized and enlightened down to the lowest in the scale of intelligence have homes of some sort, a spot each can claim as his own by some kind of right that bars out the claims of all others; the man of means has his palatial residence, and the Kaffir his kraal, and the western Indian his wigwam. To these spots sacred to each by right of ownership each returns; the wealthy business man after hours of mental excitement in a world of competition to his lordly mansion, and the Indian after the chase to his home of poles, bark and skins, each to feel in a measure the quiet and restfulness that he can feel in no other spot. But at the present time among civilized and Christianized peoples there are thousands of one race of people who can lay claim to no one spot on earth as home, a place of rest, of quiet satisfaction, and one of freedom from molestation. I mean the European Jew against whom nearly all the continental nations have set the hand of persecution. Anti Semitism abates for a time here and there only to break out afresh with equal violence until those who feel that they can stand it no longer sell what little of this world's goods they possess, and board a vessel for the United States; "The land of the free and the home of the brave," thinking to find here what they could not have in the lands of their birth, homes of peace and plenty, and free from molestation by those who held it to be a sign of patriotic devotion to country to hate the Jew, and make it in every way uncomfortable for him.

Before me in the Jewish Evangelist is a pathetic incident which Mr. Spievacque the editor got from the lips of a young Jew who was among seven hundred unfortunate Jews waiting on Ellis island to be sent back to the land of their adoption. The incident occurred on board the steamer on which he was a passenger. There was a proposition made by somebody, that all the passengers should unite in a song after a night of terrible storm. A young girl proposed that "God save the king" be sung; a German interrupted by remarking that his "Wacht am Rhein" was more melodious; a Frenchman interfered, ridiculing Limburger cheese melodies, but was full of fire in his proposal that Marsaluise should be sung, while an Italian interfered and said something beautiful and harmonious can be gained by us all when we listen to "Presto, presto Signore," to my "Patria mia care," but as he opened his mouth, there was strife between the people, and an American girl pushed herself to the front, saying, Forget ye men about London, Berlin, Paris and Rome, but remember we all like "Home, Sweet Home." Her proposition was accepted and this song was sung heartily by all. He said every Jew who joined in this song supposed that America was going to be his home. Woe unto me, woe unto all us Jews, we cannot sing about "home." Americans who claim to be Christians refuse to give us a home, and where is our home? Can you tell me? Here he burst into an agony of tears, said Mr. Spievacque, that could not be described. Poor downtrodden and oppressed race, when will Judah's cup of suffering be drained to the dregs? When will she have received "the double for all her sins?" It is no wonder that the Jews of Europe are turning their minds toward the ancient home of the race of Israel. I mean the home of all the tribes. Judah in her blindness forgets the ten-tribed house as though she was to have no part or lot in the matter. Zionism with them, as with most all expositors who believe that God is not done with Israel according to the flesh, means no more than the establishment of a Jewish State in the land promised to the fathers—a thing no where contemplated by the prophets. The divine programme is as stated by Jeremiah, "In those days the house of Judah shall walk with (margin to) the house of Israel and they shall come together out of the land of the north to the land that I have given for an inheritance unto your fathers." Jer. iii. 18

JOHN L. WISER.

Notes by the Way.

Having concluded my services at Piqua, Ohio, in the neighborhood of Sister Eidemiller and husband, I was conveyed by carriage to the Brush Creek Church, near Fidelity. There is a church here of forty-five members. This is Bro. Wagoner's boyhood home, and the existence of this church is due to the labors of our much respected Bro. Wagoner. Praise the Lord for his efficient work. His name was frequently mentioned during my sojourn with this church.

The meetings were opened on the Tuesday night after my arrival, with a good audience. The Christian Church people immediately commenced opposition against what they call "soul sleepers," by starting a protracted meeting. The brethren say their scheme heretofore always succeeded in drawing the crowd, but for some reason they failed this time. I am told that our audience was at times three times as large as theirs, one Sunday night they were left with only an audience of ten. They then saw they must get some more popular preacher to help them out, so they sent to the City of Troy for the preacher at that place to come to the rescue, but still they could not rob us of our audience, although the weather was bad.

But praise the Lord, we had something much better than holding an audience, and that was, five confessed the faith, and asked for baptism. Twice we gathered on the banks of Brush Creek, to perform this solemn and impressive service. The last was on Sunday morning before church service. A large congregation gathered upon the banks of that rolling stream to witness the baptism of three, two having been baptized two days previously. My heart was impressed with the solemnity of this impressive service. What could be more impressive than to witness these dear people take the most important step of their life? I felt honored that I had the privilege of leading them into that stream and burying them beneath the yielding wave.

After baptism we wended our way to the Church, and met a good audience, and spoke to them on the subject of "The last step," after which those who had been baptized were welcomed into the communion of the church. After this, we engaged in the solemn service of the communion in memory of our Lord.

I then went home with Sister Mace, and partook of the hospitality of Sister Mace and husband, at which time I had the pleasure of meeting Brother and Sister Pearson, who had driven some distance to attend the service.

At seven o'clock we again assembled at the church for the last service of a two weeks series of meetings. I spoke to them on that occasion on the subject of the "Signs of the Times," which was listened to with marked attention. At the conclusion the congregation sung, "In the kingdom we will never say good bye." May God grant that we may all meet there. On these parting occasions it is sorrowful to part with those with whom we have formed attachments, but it will be joyful to meet with these loved ones in the good time coming, where we will "never say good bye." May those who put on Christ by baptism contend earnestly for the "faith once delivered unto the saints," and live a pure and holy life. May God's blessing rest upon them.

I was delighted to meet our sisters Mrs. Eidemiller, and Mrs. Westfall who came from Piqua to attend the Sunday meeting. These two sisters are earnest servants of God, and very zealous in the work in trying to interest their neighbors in the grand old gospel of the kingdom.

During my stay with the Brush Creek Church, I made my home with Bro and Sister John Lehman, who did all in their power to make my stay among them pleasant. May the Lord be with these dear people.

I also had the pleasure of visiting with Bro. and Sister Daniel Lehman, Perry Pearson and wife, and Sister Davis Pearson and husband together with their sons who are members of the church. Bro. and Sister Rufus Curtis, and Bro. and Sister Knife, and Sister Neisley, and family. I had other invitations but opportunity forbid the pleasure of accepting of them. I also became acquainted with many other members of the church to whom I feel an attachment, who warmly welcome my presence among them, whom I hold in grateful remembrance, but space forbids personal mention.

On Wednesday Dec. 24, I took leave of these dear people to commence a series of meeting in Cleveland, Ohio, and may God grant rich results from the service.

W. H. WILSON.

Children of Israel in Egypt—How Long?

In THE RESTITUTION of Dec. 24th, Bro. S. S. Lindsay enquires: "How has the notion that they were in Egypt 430 years arisen?" I answer it has arisen from the statement in Exodus xii. 30 that: "The sojourning of the children of Israel who dwelt in Egypt was four hundred and thirty years." This statement it will be seen covers the whole period of their "sojourning" and it is thirty years more than the time of their affliction. The prophecy of God given to Abraham (Gen xv. 13) was: "Know of a surety that thy seed shall be a stranger in a land that is not theirs, and shall serve them; and they shall afflict them four hundred years." It will be remembered that the affliction did not begin until after the death of Joseph (Gen. i. 26). "Now there arose up a new king over Egypt which knew not Joseph." Ex. i. 8.

Therefore both the prophecy and fulfillment thereof were entirely correct. See also Ex. i. 11; Acts vii. 6; Gal. iii. 17, etc. Archbishop Usher to the contrary notwithstanding.

Bro. Lindsay's trouble has evidently arisen from taking it for granted that Usher's chronology in the margin of King James' version of the Scriptures is correct—too many people think it of equal authority with the text "because it is in the Bible." Let us be thankful that this chronological guess work or calculation has been omitted from the Revised Version.

Archbishop Usher was a Fellow of Trinity College, Dublin, who received his doctor's degree in 1612. He was the author of several scholarly works and also of the system of chronology which was placed in the margin of King James Version of the Scriptures about A. D. 1650.

This chronology is therefore of modern origin and the author himself probably regarded it as merely tentative. It was intended, it is true, to give some general idea concerning the dates of Biblical history, but it is by no means authoritative. It has done an immense amount of mischief by misleading many honest souls who have depended upon it as being infallible. We can hardly say that we have any reliable chronology going back later than 4000 before Christ and probably we could safely make the statement somewhat stronger than that. Some people have argued from this very chronology that the earth was created about 4000 years before Christ regardless of the sublime statement: "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth." When that "beginning" was, we have no revelation, and it is not necessary to man's salvation that he should ever know. It may have been millions of ages ago without in any way impugning the sacred record. This is the sublime sentence—the golden gateway, between eternity past and eternity to come. God wrought alone in those great eras and man can only feebly guess at the time when or wherein the work was done.

ELIZABETH A. REED.

"Dust Thou Art."

What is dust? It consists of nearly all the chemical elements, and is usually met with in the solid form at common temperatures; raise the temperature and it becomes a fluid, raise the heat still higher and it becomes gas, and beyond this in how many other forms or conditions it may first exist we know not or when it becomes the "ether" of space from which worlds seem to be condensing, and of which perhaps all worlds were made.

Many and various living beings are composed of dust in its solid form, who knows but there are living beings composed of dust in its more etherial forms? Beings invisible, intangible, but none the less real? Who knows that the "soul" which them that kill the body cannot kill, (Matt. x 28) consists of dust in some etherial form? Yet the power of the scalpel, after the death of the body, gives it no hold or assurance of immortality. The Power that assembled the elemental particles and made of them a man, can scatter them again and unmake the man, "destroy both soul and body," and no doubt when evil men and evil beings have had their day and have been "judged according to their works" (Rev. xx. 13) and found unworthy and unfit for eternal existence, they will be cast into that "fervent heat," by which "all these things shall be dissolved" (2 Pet. xi. 10) and perish "root and branch." Those who believe that "our departed friends are about us" can furnish no proof of even their immortality.

Bible Characters.

Buy the truth and sell it not, wisdom and understanding and instruction.—Solomon.

One of the unfortunate results of some of the superstitions that in these latter days masquerade as Christianity is the elimination of character as the primary element of religion. Now in the study of the Scriptures it can be plainly seen that they represent the Creator of all as taking a fatherly interest in human affairs, particularly in regard to the development of individual character, and all such events as war or peace, famine or wealth, the building or destruction of temples or kingdoms are viewed from the standpoint of their effect on the thought and life of individuals or communities. Thus, for instance, the seven years' famine in Egypt, which must have had a tremendous effect on the work and life of myriads, changing the whole face of the land and the policy of the rulers, is only treated as a background to the story of Jacob and family. We may also note in this study that divine judgment is represented as being passed, not at some court session thousands of years in the future, but then and there. This continual supervision, this permanent sitting of the court of the Majesty on High, this imminence of judgment both for good and evil, for sin or defeat of human effort is one of the most marked thoughts of the Old Testament particularly. In no respect does the New Testament differ, but owing to the fact that it is read as a sort of newer light, superseding the old, and that the metaphors of Paul and others are construed to suit conventional ideas utterly at variance with the old revelation, there seems to be a discrepancy.

According to this conventional view religion is treated as something separate and distinct from any[illegible] invested with character or content, and becoming Oh, to be nothing, nothing! Quote "All our righteousness is as filthy rags," and construing themselves to say that they are the chief of sinners, although they may be very close at people, and as a part of "religious confession" they must wallow in misery and straw. This done the Lord Jesus is represented to them as righteous enough for all, covering all their evilness with his goodness, with which white washing an "angry God" is "propitiated and satisfied." As the legitimate sequence of such teaching we may observe the marked distinction that a particularly "vile sinner" receives at the hands of some of those who minister to the spiritual wants of the community. When some miscreant astounds civilization by some weird deed of villainy and blood these persons crowd each other to wait on him and usher him into the pearly portals of the realms of the redeemed; and while the hallelujahs waits, the wretch is set to spell Bible verses and worked up to the penitence pitch of forgiving every body and thanking the jailor and the hangman. So also it may be noted in the public meeting when at stated seasons certain sects institute so called religious revivals. The ignorant, the wanton, and the "sin-soaked" have the place of honor reserved for them in the rostrum. If such a one has not gone to bed sober for years, beats his wife and throws his children out of the window, the narration of his exploits in that line with stentorian voice and unlimited gesticulation will draw crowds like a circus or a church fair. Brawny young farmers within a radius of ten miles will hitch up their best teams, spruce up their sweethearts and drive through winter nights or summer days, and the "Lord's blessing" will shower down in hatfuls of nickles.

Such conduct as this bears no relation or resemblance to the old and more laborious form of religion that the Bible histories, the Prophets, the Proverbs and the Psalms depict. The life-long patient, self-correction in integrity and honor, the struggle after truth, right-eousness and justice, the instruction in wisdom and understanding—all such is brushed aside by the modern charlatan's cheap and easy method that substitutes for the straight and narrow way a many-tracked railroad that puts them through with an express train rush.

But there are many who prefer the old style of religion, based not on noise but on study, not on excitement but on reason, not on cant but on character. Character is that which is developed only by God and man—the resolution of all that is good and true. It is essential to industry and commerce, to art and science, to society and religion. To this human life is nothing, human character is everything. This is the secret, the "tone" of the whole Bible. Nature and revelation are working together for the production of human character which will alone endure, which is alone worthy to endure. Only the just shall live by faith, only the pure in heart shall see God, only he that doeth the will shall [illegible] the doctrine [illegible] unto [illegible] God saith unto her thou to do to declare my statutes, or that thou should take my covenant in thy mouth, seeing that thou hatest instruction and castest my words behind thee."—*J. NOTICE.

I wish to say to the brethren that the second edition of my pamphlet—"The Reasons of My Withdrawal from the Evangelical Association," is just from the press and ready to send. 25 pages, at 5 cents per copy. Send orders to A. H. Zihner, Plymouth, Ind.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the re-establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a belief in the fulness of the gospel, repentance and conversion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, the prerequisites of the forgiveness of sins, and in baptism by immersion essential for final salvation.

HE who would trust implicitly, must inquire conscientiously. True faith must rest on sound knowledge.

SAINTS die because of hereditary descent from the first Adam, and obtain a right to immortality, because they have become Christ's, by intelligently obeying the gospel of the kingdom.

THE Jews thought they knew all about Jesus of Nazareth; but Jesus on the spot told them they neither knew whence he came nor whither he was going; and that they judged after the flesh.

AT this writing the last sands of the year 1902 are rapidly running out. The record for each of us is almost filled out. What does it say of us,—for us or against us. It is a good time for partners with Jesus to run over the account to see if we have dealt justly with him or taken the best of the bargain ourselves.

QUITE a number of subscriptions expire at this season of the year, and we trust our friends will be prompt in renewing, so that we will not have to send out statements. This means much work and some expense that can be avoided by promptness. Please attend to this. We thank you in advance for this favor.

"Who then is that faithful and wise steward, whom his Lord shall make ruler over his household, to give them their portion of meat in due season? Blessed is that servant whom the Lord when he cometh shall find so doing. Of a truth I say unto you, that he shall make him ruler over all that he hath." IN the Jan. 6 issue of the Bible Advocate, a Seventh Day Sabbath periodical published at Stanberry, Mo. on the editorial page, is a double column portrait of G. M. Myers, with a biographical sketch by the Office Editor, W. C. Long. Some important items are not given in the write-up, but the last few lines are the ones we wish our readers to know of, so copy them exactly—"Bro. Myers is now a confirmed Sabbath keeper, and is a strong advocate of God's ancient day of rest. Those desiring meetings in their vicinity should make arrangements to have him visit them." We give this item because it will be news to some of our readers, and we should all be posted on the news of the day.

"LION growls at Russia," "British resent the Czar's action," and similar headings are in the daily papers because some "unarmed" Russian warships have passed the Dardanelles. European treaty laws do not allow of the passage of warships of any nation through the Dardanelles. This is unanswerable, and ordinarily would raise a cry from all the powers. But Russia has formed a habit lately of going on and doing things when she gets ready treaty or no treaty. She quietly dismounts a few guns on some vessels, states that they are not "strictly" war ships, and with the consent of Turkey passes them through. Germany is supposed to be allied with England, as is shown by the Venezuela incident, but she will not join in protest against this action by Russia. France accords to Turkey the full right to exercise her discretion in such a case—thus shifting responsibility off her own shoulders. Italy would side with England, and regards the incident as important in view of complications that are likely to arise in the Balkan states this spring. It is not at all likely that England will offer armed resistance to this or further infringements on this treaty. (However her Mediterranean fleet was immediately strengthened.) The fact of the matter is that since the Crimean war conditions have changed, and no one nation has seen more of them than England. The geographical center of the British Empire is now about Cairo, and Constantinople has lost much of its importance in consequence of these changes. Let us watch closely these seemingly small matters, because one of them is going to start a big blaze some day that will make history very fast. Every important move shows the Saxon and Slav in opposite a

THE offer to new subscribers for the year 1903 is still open, as given elsewhere in this paper. We thank our friends who have sent in new names, and trust others will take advantage of this and have THE RESTITUTION in the hands of many others this year.

THE treaty powers are having some trouble with China again. The indemnity to be paid the allies was to be on a "gold basis." China has much silver, but in the past few months the silver has depreciated very materially, hence to pay in silver on a gold basis will require more than China has provided for, and she wants to pay on the same basis as silver was when the treaty was made. This the powers will not allow. China is still ren. by uprisings in various parts of her empire, and can ill meet this added demand, and at the same time keep the peace within her borders. Should she fail—then what? Keep watch, for the "Yellow Peril" only sleeps.

Story of Creation.

It was easy to hand down the story of creation and fall, by tradition from Adam to Isaac. Adam was contemporary with Methuselah, and Methuselah with Shem, and Shem with Isaac; hence it required but two persons intermediate between Adam and Isaac, to recount to the fathers of Israel the history of the world to their own time. Isaac could tell his grandson Levi, and Levi his grandson Moses, and the latter has delivered it unto us, having been guided into all truth by the Spirit of God.

A Candid Mind.

In our opinion, after many years of experience and observation, nothing sheds so fine a light upon the human mind as candor. It was called whiteness by the ancients for its purity; and it has always won the esteem due to the most admirable virtues. However sought for or practiced, all felt the power and the charm of its influence. The man whose opinions make the deepest impression upon his fellows, whose influence is the most lasting and efficient, whose friendship is instinctively sought where all others proved faithless, is not the man of brilliant parts, or flattering tongue, or splendid genius, or commanding power; but he whose candor and ingenious truth transmits the heart's real feelings, pure, and without bending to suit circumstances.

There are other qualities which are more taking, because showy,—and other traits that are rated considerably higher in the world's code of honor; but none wear better, or gather less tarnish by use, or claim a deeper homage in the silent reverence which the mind must pay to Truth.

Our Hope.

The hope of the great body of believers is one. What is that hope? Perfection in Jesus the Messiah, at his appearing, and his kingdom. The true hope of every sorrowing, death-stricken son of Adam is to attain to perfection of Being. They desire an existence in which every imperfection is obliterated. And possessing this aspiration they earnestly strive to reach that perfect state which can alone complete and crown their being. Just as in all ranks of living things there is a reaching forward toward that maturity which shall consummate the end for which they exist, so the Church of God stretches onward to her perfection—hoping to attain her perfect standing at the return of her Lord, when he will present her to God without spot or wrinkle, or any such thing, for the inheritance of the kingdom and for participation in their everlasting rest. This can only take place by the union of the Bride with the Bridegroom in the redemption of the body at the resurrection. The bride's raiment will be changed. Instead of the filthy garments of sin-defiled flesh, she will put on linen, clean and white—the immortal robes of a tried faith, and perfected righteousness by being clothed with her house which is from heaven, an incorruptible glorious spirit nature like unto her Lord. The body of humiliation shall be fashioned like unto his most glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able to subdue all things unto himself. Then will her hope be realized and all her joy consummated.

Good News from Persia.

It will no longer be possible to charge that the Pentateuch contains legislation too minute and elaborate to belong to the exodus. A Babylonian code has been dug up in Persia by an expert French archeologist, nearly a thousand years older than Moses. The text of the code was found transcribed on a diorite column, 2 25 meters in height, in the ruins of Susa. On the upper part of the column is a picture of Hammurabi, king of Babylon about 2300 B. C. He is the Amraphel, king of Shinar, of the fourteenth chapter of Genesis, who led the confederate army that captured the cities of the Plain in the days of Abraham and Melchizedec. He established a great Semitic empire and made Babylon its capital and Marduk its chief god. His empire covered all the known East, from Elam, or Persia, to the Mediterranean Sea.

M. de Morgan has been employed for the last ten years by the French government to explore the ruins of Susa, the ancient capital of Elam. This was Shushan, the palace of Xerxes, the Ahasuerus, of the Book of Esther, where Nehemiah was cupbearer to the king, and hereafter the accession of Cyrus the Achemenian kings of Persia held their winter court, and their summer court at Persepolis. The text of this code find is already published in Paris, and is in course of translation into German. Fragments of this code have been known to exist for hundreds of years. Portions were found in the library of Assurbanipal (650) before Christ, and specimens are preserved in the Museum at Berlin. We will give samples of these enactments of Abrahamic contemporary.

Legal cases were tried before a court of Judges, at the head of whom was a President.

Facts in the case were learned through witnesses and written documents.

The care taken in this regard is evident from the following example: "If any body has bought or received as a deposit, silver, gold or a male or a female slave, or a steer, or a sheep, or an ass, or anything from a free man or a slave without witnesses or written documents, he is to be treated as a thief and shall be killed."

In some cases divine judgment was appealed to. The accused had to go down into a stream of water, and "if the river seized him," he was guilty; but "if he remained in good health," he was innocent. In this way those charged with witchcraft, and women accused of infidelity, but not caught in the act, were tried.

The punishments were very severe. Death was the penalty for a false oath, witchcraft, robbing a temple, or royal possessions. Women generally kept drinking places and were headquarters for political agitations. If the landlady failed to report dangerous inmate, she had to die. Crimes of less serious character were sometimes followed by the loss of some member of the body. In this way an adopted child who said to the foster-parents that they were not his parents had to lose the offending member—the tongue. A surgeon could collect no pay for an unsuccessful operation. If a free man died under an operation he had to lose his hands.

We hope parents and teachers will make good use of the providential care of God for his Word.

The Gospel of the Kingdom.

The gospel is good news concerning a future kingdom to be established on the earth, which will ultimately become a universal kingdom having Christ as King, the saints as rulers, and the nations of the earth as the subjects to be ruled.

Jesus taught this gospel. "Jesus came into Galilee" testifies (Mark i. 14) "preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God." The apostles taught it. "Among all ye," says Paul, "have I gone preaching the kingdom of God." Acts xx. 5.

What is that kingdom? A kingdom on earth. "The Lord shall be King over all the earth, and in that day shall there be one Lord and his name one." Such is the testimony by Zechariah. The universality of the kingdom is declared, the position defined, and the King revealed. The Ancient throne of David is the throne upon which the Lord will sit. "The Lord hath sworn in truth unto David, of the fruit of thy body will I set upon thy throne." Psa. cxxxii. 11. Peter applies this to Christ, as we read in Acts ii. 30. "David being a prophet, knew that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne."

The co-rulers with Christ are his immortalized brethren. Jesus himself declared, "And I appoint unto you a kingdom as my Father hath appointed unto me, that ye may eat and drink at my table in my kingdom." The song of the redeemed will be at the time of their immortalization in these words, Rev. v. 10, "Thou hast redeemed us.....and hath made us unto our God kings and priests, and we shall reign on the earth." The kingdom is Jehovah's. It is an instrumentality ordained of him for the completo and final redemption of the world—the consummation of his glorious purpose. Hence it is the saint's great desire to attain to that kingdom. It is the prize set before them. They are exhorted to seek it before all else. "Seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness." And having sought and found it by a faithful adherence to the Word of their salvation, and continuance in well doing unto the end of their probationary career, the welcome words of their gracious King will fall sweetly on their ears, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." Then will their every desire be gratified, their every hope more than realized, for long life and length of days will be theirs, glory, honor and incorruptibility.

The Indian Durbar.

To give our readers some idea of the display made at the ceremonies at Delhi, when last week King Edward was officially proclaimed Emperor of India, we give the following account of the richness of the show as it which indicates the resources of that country, and incidentally shows why it is to be desired as a possession. The account says:

All the glories of the ancient empire of the great Mogul were recalled when the ruling chiefs of the natives states of greater India passed in review before Viceroy Curzon and the Duke of Connaught. Their retainers were clad in the mailed costumes and carried ancient weapons and shouting strange battle cries. The procession, the most gorgeous and fantastic of its kind ever witnessed in India, or probably any where else, rolled by the reviewing stand with a display of almost incalculable wealth of gold and silver.

A seemingly never ending medley of elephants, camels, troops, musicians, and carriages passed and marshalled before the duke. The elephants carried howdahs and trappings of the purest gold and silver. There were carriages of pure silver and sedan chairs of gold.

Contingents from all parts of greater India participated, mostly retaining the distinctive features of their costumes. The flags and other emblems of the state of Cutch were carried on camels and elephants, accompanied by armed men on stilts, while Arab irregulars danced past the viceroy to the music of their own instruments. The famous gold and silver guns of the state of Baroda attracted much attention. The ancient mahartta flags, descended from the Mogul emperors, were borne past on an elephant carriage. The martial rajputs were clad in mail armor.

State bands, camel kettle drums, richly caparisoned horses and elephants, and agile swordsmen, many shouting battle cries, followed one another in quick succession. A royal elephant carriage, two stories high, showed how the palace women accompanied the princes of bygone days. The retinue of the state of Kashmir included a fine detachment of cuirassiers and a large giant.

The great Sikh states were represented by large soldier like bodies of men armed with lances, shields, matchlocks and hand grenades. Each contingent was headed by an elephant bearing a gorgeous howdah, in one of which the sacred book of the Sikhs occupied the place of honor. The book was guarded by the chief priest. The venerable Chief Maha, escorted by men mounted on richly caparisoned horses and accompanied by hounds and hawks, was a striking feature of the display, which for wealth of coloring, diversity of components, and number of spectators may be considered to have been the most brilliant of the durbar.

The maharajah of Jaipur sent horsemen in complete armor, riding on golden saddles and carrying lances with red and white pennons. The maharao of Kota sent many camels carrying swivel guns, a force of military ascetics, and a number of quaint musicians.

The camel men of the maharajah of Alwar wore uniforms of blue and yellow. An elephant carriage, drawn by four elephants, followed the horsemen which were clad in mail armor and whose horses reared in salute to the royal personages.

The shamman of Burmah carried golden gonge and teapots and wore gold helmets. The carriage of state of Jind was of pure silver and drawn by four black horses with golden harness. The carriage of the state of Pa[illegible] was also of silver, decorated with [illegible] gold. A dwarf from the state of Mal[illegible] was followed by a giant seven feet ten inches high. The contingent from Kashmir closed the procession.

Russia's Plan in the East.

The following news item is taken from the Chicago Tribune and is dated at Paris, Jan. 10. The "Eastern Question" is still a question that must be settled.

"One may be certain that Russia in the eastern question will act in concert with Austria, and quite outside the influence of Germany. In case of intervention or shoring the country the adhesion of Vienna is certain. That which is imminent is the enforced cessation of the criminal warfare in Macedonia. The task of Russia will be to bring pressure on Bulgaria, while Austria will do the same on Servia.

An ultimatum, the text of which already has been prepared, will be sent to the Sultan demanding reforms in Macedonia. If, as anticipated he refuses to grant these reforms, Austria will occupy Albini. Russia will effect a landing at Burgas, and then will advance [illegible] the Bulgarians to the Rhodope mountains. A naval demonstration in the Bosporus is on the cards.

The attitude of Germany and England will be awaited with anxiety. Germany is the protector of Turkish oppression, but England can scarcely support the persecution of the Armenians. The downfall of the Ottoman empire is in sight."

OUR NEW YEAR GREETING LETTERS.

Editor Restitution:

I have passed my 80th birthday, cannot stay here much longer. I have hoped to live until the dear Lord comes to claim his own but whether living or at rest I shall see him as he is. The mercy of God has followed me another year. O how much I have to praise him for. He has marvelously blest and kept me, giving me victory all along the way. To the dear ones of like precious faith, I want to say, my soul rejoices in the love of God. My heart says, Bless the Lord, O my soul; for his wonderful love. May the Lord keep us close to him, that we may be ready when he comes. The signs of [illegible] are [illegible] we are living [illegible] nations. We are a scattered few [illegible] Diego. Sister Williams is here but does not have Bible Class any more. My heart hungers to hear the Word in its purity. Praise the Lord his Word can teach us, his Word is Spirit and life. Pray for me, dear ones, that I may have my lamp trimmed and burning to meet the Bridegroom when he comes.

Yours, still praying, Thy Kingdom Come.

Editor Restitution:

Another year has quickly passed, and I have done but little for the dear Master. Have tried to hold forth the Word of life as opportunity offered. Just closed a six nights meeting at our school house on the night of 17th inst. Had a very fair hearing and good interest with some, although every night was stormy. Four out of six was snowing. I have earnest calls to go other places, but having no help and the cares of farm life resting on me has hindered me from doing much that I would love to do, but the good Master will open up a way for me to do his will, as I love him and all his people. May we all live nearer to him, and let his truth be first with us in everything, and when he comes be ready to hear that welcome applaudit, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." May you dear brother, live to publish the grand old paper until the last issue in bold head-lines will say "The Lord has come."

Yours in hope.

Editor Restitution:

Perhaps there are many who do not realize the great high calling to which we as brethren of the One Faith are called. Not only are we called to be meek and lowly followers of the Lord Jesus, but we are called to a position as kings and priests in the age to come. We cannot, however, become qualified and prepared for that high position unless we put aside many things of a worldly nature,—bring our bodies into subjection, and form that high, noble Christian character that is a characteristic of a true child of [illegible] chaos and victory out of defeat, but the man or woman who can control his or her temper and in no case allow the evil in our natures to overcome them, they are true heroes. We are to overcome the world, the flesh and the devil. "To him that overcometh and keepeth my works unto the end. To him will I give power over the nations." Rev. ii. 26 "Know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God?" In view of the fact, that another New Year has dawned upon us, and that before it closes the Savior may appear and call for his own, how important it is that we guard carefully our every thought and action, so when that time shall have come, we can say, "The victory is won," and will receive the reward of the righteous in the kingdom soon to come.

Yours watching and waiting.

On Earth Peace.

And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will to men. Luke ii. 13, 14. The present day religion teaching to my mind fails to present the truth when using the above quotation. The trend of teaching is that the birth of Christ brought peace on earth and good will to men. That this event is a fulfillment of every prophecy concerning our Savior is taught by many today and very many believe this. Now if the doctrine of going to heaven at death is true then their teachings will do. But the Bible is full of the blessed truth that Christ's future reign on the earth will bring this long prayed for Blessing. The angel declared to Mary that her son's name should be called Jesus, and the Lord God should give unto him the throne of his father David, and that of his kingdom there should be no end. The message of the angels to Mary and to the shepherds was in harmony with the promise of God to mother Eve that her seed should bruise the serpent's head. The Seed of the woman should in the end prevail. The promise to Abraham and David was not only concerning the promised Seed, but the redemption of this earth. The gospel that does not contain these truths is not the gospel that Christ preached, neither is it the gospel taught by the Apostle Paul. Christ Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God. Could it mean anything less than the angel's message to Mary? Luke i. 32, 33. The only thing to [illegible] can bring peace on this earth is the righteous rule of David's Son. See 72nd and 132nd Psalms. In Gal. iii. 8 Paul says that the gospel was preached to Abraham, saying, "In thee shall all nations be blessed." In referring to the original Scripture we read thus, "And in thy (Abraham's) seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." Paul further says that this promise is to his only seed who is Christ. Can it be that this blessing is being enjoyed by the nations through Christ today? No, no; emphatically no. What then is the purpose of the preaching of the gospel in this age? "Go ye therefore and teach (margin, make disciples or Christians of) all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit." Is this preaching for the purpose of converting the world to Christ before he comes? We think not. Christ taught that when he should come he would find the world as it was in the days of Noah. Christ will come because "we know that the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now." Rom. viii. 22. Not that there will be peace when he shall come but why. Foolished, fanciful, [illegible] Men shall cry out peace, peace, when there is no peace. The gospel is being preached "To take out of the Gentiles a people for his name. After this I will return and will build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down; and I will build again the ruins thereof, and I will set it up." Acts xv. 14 15, 16. The Gentiles were taken out of Israel that they might [illegible] upon them [illegible] the twelve tribes of Israel. Matt. xix. 28. He is now taking out a people to make of them kings and priests Rev. v. 10, "And hath made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth." Matt. v. 5, "Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth." The text "On earth peace, and good will to men" has a broader and a deeper meaning than that given to it by modern day teachers. It embraces the glorious truth of the future ruling of Christ and his saints (those who are of the [illegible] elect) on the earth. The opening chapters of the Bible give a history of the fall of man and the curse pronounced upon the earth. The closing chapters restore the earth and its inhabitants again. If the first history recites literal facts, why not believe that the second will be as literal? During the Dark Age the Scripture were looked upon as an unknown tongue. In this age it is to say the modern day preacher has spiritual meaning. This spiritual meaning is learned in the schools of theology. Peter says no prophecy of the Scripture is of any private interpretation. But the prophecy came not in olden times by the will of man, but holy men of God spoke as they were moved by the Holy Ghost.

Recreation from a Bible Standpoint.

I Cor. x 31. "Whether therefore, ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God."

What do we understand by "recreation?" Let me quote from J. Adams Rawlings, of London, England. "Recreation is such employment of the time released from the ordinary service of life as will send us back with renewed vigor and cheerfulness—recreated indeed to that same daily toil and service."

Young man, young woman, please read the above quotation over very, very slowly. Get its true meaning and then you can decide whether you are really finding recreation in your present pleasures, or shortening your life, weakening your nerve force, bringing upon yourself disease and a premature death. I am convinced that something should be said on this question which is caused by the word amusement. Because it is right hope that so [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] shall be no end. The message of the [illegible] angel to Mary and to the shepherds was in harmony with the promise of God to mother Eve that her seed should bruise the serpent's head. The Seed of the woman should in the end prevail. The promise to Abraham and David was not only concerning the promised Seed, but the redemption of this earth. The gospel that does not contain these truths is not the gospel that Christ preached, neither is it the gospel taught by the Apostle Paul. Christ Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God. Could it mean anything less than the angel's message to Mary? Luke i. 32, 33. The only thing to [illegible] can bring peace on this earth is the righteous rule of David's Son. See 72nd and 132nd Psalms. In Gal. iii. 8 Paul says that the gospel was preached to Abraham, saying, "In thee shall all nations be blessed." In referring to the original Scripture we read thus, "And in thy (Abraham's) seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." Paul further says that this promise is to his only seed who is Christ. Can it be that this blessing is being enjoyed by the nations through Christ today? No, no; emphatically no. What then is the purpose of the preaching of the gospel in this age? "Go ye therefore and teach (margin, make disciples or Christians of) all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit." Is this preaching for the purpose of converting the world to Christ before he comes? We think not. Christ taught that when he should come he would find the world as it was in the days of Noah. Christ will come because "we know that the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now." Rom. viii. 22. Not that there will be peace when he shall come but why. Foolished, fanciful, [illegible] Men shall cry out peace, peace, when there is no peace. The gospel is being preached "To take out of the Gentiles a people for his name. After this I will return and will build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down; and I will build again the ruins thereof, and I will set it up." Acts xv. 14 15, 16. The Gentiles were taken out of Israel that they might [illegible] upon them [illegible]

Then first of all our amusements as Christians must be right in themselves. Their essential or necessary tendency and results must be a genuine refreshment of our nature, without any alloy of evil. An amusement which tends to produce unhealthy excitement of mind or body, which stimulates the passions, fosters discontent, leaves us jaded, and with weakened nerves, does not respond to the test of essential rightness, and cannot be counted "to the glory of God."

Let us test the text again. This is the argument in favor of attending horse racing. I am only speaking of professed Christians, remember. The man or woman of the world is expected to go to these places if they choose. A day in the open air—rest from daily toil—loving to see the improved breeds of horse flesh, etc. But when the day is past, what is there against it? Over-excitement, hence weakened nerves; some excitement if there is no stake, very much excitement if there is a stake, your money has gone or gambling, your influence has gone the same way; your example is sure to be followed by your sons and daughters, or your neighbors.

This is a form of amusement characterized by extravagant excitement, therefore not right in itself, and will not stand the test. Not to the glory of God, and cannot conform to the text: is carnal and will result in spiritual death.

Christian man or woman, can you abide by God's decision in this matter? "Come out from the world" was written as a test for those who wished to gain eternal life by denial and ever coming O, if we could always remember, God is watching us, and the record will be kept correct, wouldn't we be more careful what our life is?

Adoption.

"But ye have received the spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba Father."

I ask, Is there any law of adoption taught in the Scriptures?

I answer, Yes, there is.

Is there any law on the Statute Books of our land that states how a child can be adopted into a family and become legal child of that adopted father?

I say, Yes there is, and unless that father and child takes legal steps to adopt that child, it can never inherit any of that man's property. Some or many of the neighbors may think the child was adopted, but in the absence of the facts the child gets nothing.

There was a case in Illinois a few years ago. A man took a boy and intended to adopt him; but neglected it from time to time and finally took severely ill, and at no time while he was ill was he able to transact any business, and yet, it was generally believed by the people that he was adopted, and the nearest relatives of the man got the property and the boy got nothing. So it will be with many that think they have been adopted, but have not complied with the law of adoption.

Paul says, in Gal. iii. 26, "For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus, for as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ; and if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise."

Here we see how we become adopted into the family of God's dear children, then we become sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty. 2 Cor. vi. 18.

Paul says in Eph. ii. 19, "Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the saints, and of the household of God, and are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief cornerstone. These are some of the positive statements made in the Scriptures.

Again, in 1 Peter iii. 21, "The like figure whereunto even baptism doth now save us." The ark saved eight souls from drowning. They got into the ark and remained in the ark until the flood subsided. Christ is our ark of safety. We must get into Christ and remain in him. We must go into the water in order to get into our ark of safety, being buried in baptism, then rise to walk in newness of life, and then make all the additions named by Peter, which will entitle us to an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom of God's dear Son.

In love to all the dear ones of like precious faith.

Report.

It has been some time since the readers of The Restitution have seen any thing appear in these columns from the Cleveland Bereans. In explanation of this, we would state that during this interval we have adopted the name of the National Berean Association and have endeavored to enlarge our field of labor.

We have increased our membership which now includes brothers and sisters in Toronto, Seattle, Niagara Falls and Salem, Ohio.

Our object is to promote the bond of peace in the unity of the spirit among all the young Brothers and Sisters of the Churches of God, and to distribute literature pertaining to the truth among the Brethren and the public at large, and we shall endeavor to the utmost of our ability to live up to our standard.

We have several correspondents in the United States and Canada and we desire to increase this list and ask all who wish to become correspondents, especially isolated brethren, to write us in care of Brother Geo. Neill, 10 Webster Block, Cleveland, O., our Vice President and Corresponding Secretary, and we assure you you will receive prompt attention.

We hope to submit a paper on "Grow in Grace" by our Brother Thos. Glover of Toronto, Ont., and shall try from time to time to have something in these columns to the edifying of the Brethren.

We wish you all a Happy New Year.

Respectfully submitted,

The National Berean Ass'n. of Cleveland, Ohio.

J. C. Thompson, President.

GROW IN GRACE.

We read in 2 Peter iii. 18, these words: "But grow in grace." The first question which might be asked is, "What is grace?" Is it not to be kind, loving, obedient, forgiving and merciful? It is. And we are all exhorted to grow in this glorious thing, grace.

We ask ourselves the question, What is the manner of the growth in grace? We read these words: Luke vi. 36, "Be ye therefore merciful as your Father also is merciful." 2 Pet i. 7, "And to godliness, brotherly kindness, and to brotherly kindness, charity."

2 Cor. vi. 6, 7, "By pureness, by knowledge, by long suffering, by kindness, by the Holy Ghost, by love unfeigned, by the Word of Truth, by the power of God, by the armor of righteousness on the right hand and on the left." Col iii. 12, 13, "Put on therefore as the elect of God holy and beloved, bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, long suffering, forbearing one another, and forgiving one another. If any man have a quarrel against any, even as Christ forgave you, so also do ye."

"And above all these things put on charity which is the bond of perfectness."

These texts tell us what we should do. If we do them we will grow in grace.

Our next question is, What are the evidences of growth in grace? 2 Cor. x 5, Bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ.

Col. iii. 17, "And whatsoever ye do in word and deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus giving thanks to God and the Father by him."

Phil i 20, "According to my earnest expection and my hope that in nothing I shall be ashamed, but with all boldness, as always so now also Christ shall be magnified in my body whether by life or by death. For me to live is Christ and to die is gain."

7th verse, "But what things were gain to me those I counted loss for Christ. Yea, doubtless I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord for whom I have suffered the loss of all things and do count them but dung, that I may win Christ." Such are the words of Paul. He had suffered trials of all sorts but they only served to help him grow in grace.

What are the peculiar hindrances to a growth in grace? Too much selfishness, not enough love for Christ, and not enough obedience, for if we obeyed our Heavenly Father in every little thing, we would be filled with more love, more Christ likeness, and our hearts would be filled more and more with those glorious longings of Paul, who said, "For me to live is Christ."

To grow in Grace, we must submit ourselves to the will of God, become like Paul who said, he "Suffered the loss of all things that he might win Christ and be found in him, that he might know him and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his suffering." We must as Paul says, "I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

If we would grow in grace we must have the pure religion in our heart which James says, "Is to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction and to keep himself unspotted from the world." We must also pray to our Heavenly Father who is love, to give us grace to overcome, for he said, "My grace is sufficient for thee, for my strength is made perfect in weakness."

We must also "Lay aside every weight and the sin that doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us." If we do these things we will bear the fruits of grace and the fruits will be love, obedience, mercy and truth. We will be able to say with James, "Beloved now are we the sons of God; it doth not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that when he shall appear, we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is." And when he does come we will rejoice to see the One who saved us and hast redeemed us to be kings and priests with him. How wonderful is the grace of God. Yea his mercy is beyond our comprehension. Let us dwell in his love and grace.

Table Talk.

ABIDE WITH ME.

How can we have Jesus abide or stay with us? What must we do to have him make his abode with us? "If ye keep my commandments ye shall abide in my love, even as I kept my Father's commandments and abide in his love. If a man love me he will keep my words and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him and make our abode with him." These words of Jesus make it plain unto us just how we can abide with Jesus by keeping his commandments, by loving his work, his Word, and trusting in him. Abide in me and I in you, as a branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine, no more can ye except ye abide in me. I am the vine and ye are the branches. He that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit, for without me ye can do nothing. Jesus makes use of something that the people to whom he was speaking were familiar with, for the hills of Judah were covered with vineyards, and many of the people were vine dressers, so they knew how soon a branch broken from the vine withered and the fruit perished. This is why he uses this comparison. I am the true vine, my Father the husbandman. Every branch in me that beareth not fruit he taketh away. I am the vine, ye are the branches. He that abideth in me and I in him bringeth forth much fruit. Do not these words make us long to have Jesus abide with us; make us strive to be true branches, branches that will not be cast off. Abiding keepeth his words, in him verily is the love of God perfected. Hereby know we that we are in him. Let us therefore abide in you, which ye have heard from the beginning. If that which ye have heard from the beginning shall remain in you, Ye also shall continue in the Son, and in the Father, and this is the promise that he hath promised us, even eternal life, a life with Jesus, our Savior, who will make the earth a dwelling place, who will make his abode with the redeemed of God. Grant that we may abide with him.

E. T. Knowles.

ABIDE IN ME.

In giving us this loving admonition the Savior has used the comparison of a vine. "I am the vine, and ye are the branches. If a man abide not in me he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered."

The branches obtain their life from the vine. The ones which do not bear fruit are cut off. They wither on the ground, and men gather them and burn them. Think of this as our lot. We, that have been cleansed by the word of God. It is Christ's own words "If a man abide not in me he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered." "Every branch in me that beareth not fruit he taketh away, and every branch that beareth fruit he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit."

What is our condition, dear ones in the Lord? Are we to be cast away to wither on the ground and burned? are we bearing fruit, being purged that we may bear more fruit. Let us not lose sight of the cleansing power. This cleansing, life giving principle must continue to cleanse us, or we cannot abide in Christ.

If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you. Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit.

In the parable of the sower we read, "He that receiveth the seed in good ground, is he that heareth the word, and understandeth it, which also beareth fruit, some an hundred, some sixty, some thirty fold."

In verse 19 this seed is called "The word of the kingdom." "Now ye are clean through the word that I have spoken unto you."

Their joy was full. "These things have I spoken unto you, that my joy might remain in you." Yes, it must remain, and bear fruit.

May we all with the apostle pray that our love may abound yet more and more in knowledge, and all judgment. That we may approve things that are excellent; that ye may be sincere, and without offense till the day of Christ; being filled with the fruits of righteousness, which are by Jesus Christ, unto the glory and praise of God. Phil. i. 9-11.

Nancy Barnes.

The Spirit of the Master.

It stands out in bold relief when contrasted with that of the world, as manifested even by his chosen disciples. John said, "Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name, and he followeth not us; and we forbade him, because he followeth not us. But Jesus said, forbid him not." And when beseechingly approached by the leper, who said, "If thou wilt, thou canst make me clean. And Jesus moved with compassion, put forth his hand, and touched him, and saith unto him, I will; be thou clean." The disciples rebuked those that brought the children to the Master. But he being displeased said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of God." Again when blind Bartimeus heard that Jesus of Nazareth was passing by, he began to cry out, "Jesus, thou Son of David, have mercy on me. Many charged him that he should hold his peace: but he cried out the more.....Thou Son of David, have mercy on me. And Jesus stood still, and commanded him to be called..... And Jesus said, What wilt thou that I shall do unto thee? The blind man said unto him: Lord that I might receive my sight. And Jesus said unto him, Go thy way; thy faith hath made thee whole. And immediately he received his sight, and followed Jesus in the way." When traveling to Jerusalem a village of the Samaritans refused to receive him; the spirit of the disciples manifested itself in a request that they call down fire from heaven to devour them as did Elias; but Jesus rebuked them, saying, "Ye know not what spirit ye are of. For the Son of man is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save them." The same Spirit is manifest in the Master at all times, even on the cross, when he said, "Father forgive them, for they know not what they do." Now when we understand that Jesus is to us, the manifestation of the Father; that the Father gave him a commandment, what he should say, and do in so much that Christ could say, "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father." And again, "I and the Father are one." Now can we grasp in its fullness the meaning of this Scripture, "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him, should not perish, but have everlasting life." He did not destroy the Amorites until they were past redemption; so were the inhabitants of Sodom. It was like cutting off a diseased limb to save the body. Now brethren, let us commence to cultivate the Spirit of the Master; do not attempt to use the truth as a club; but hold up the love of God and forget not that it is the love of God that leads men to repentance. Cultivate the Christ Spirit; extend the truth by word and publication. It will work to our good, and to the glory of God.

Turning from Grief.

There are many people who live perpetually in the shadows of the trials and losses of their bygone days. Nothing could be more unwholesome or more untrue to the spirit of Christian faith than such a course. What would be said or thought of the man who should build a house for himself out of black stones, paint all the walls black, hang black curtains over the dark stained windows, put black carpets on every floor, festoon the chandeliers with funeral crape, have only sad pictures on the walls and sad books on the shelves, and should have no lovely plants growing and no flowers blooming about his home? Would we look upon such a person with pity, as one into whose soul the outer darkness had crept, eclipsing the beauty of life?

Yet that is just the way some people do live. They have a memory like a sieve, which lets all the bright and joyous things flow away, while it retains all the sad and bitter things. They forget the pleasant incidents and experiences, the happy hours, the days that came laden with gladness as the ships come from distant shores with cargoes of spices; but there has been no painful event in all their life whose memory is not kept ever vivid. They will talk for hours of their griefs and bereavements in the past, dwelling with a strange, morbid pleasure on each sad incident. They keep the old wounds ever unhealed in their heart; they keep continually in sight pictures and reminiscences of all their lost joys, but none of the joys that are not lost; they forget all their ten thousands of blessings in the abiding and absorbing recollections of the two or three sorrows that have come to them amid the multitudinous and unremembered joys.

Few perversions of life could be sadder than this dwelling ever in the shadows and glooms of past griefs. It is the will of God that we should turn our eyes away from our sorrows, that we should let the dead past bury its dead, [illegible] on with resolute courage [illegible] new duties and the new joys that await us. By standing and weeping over the grave where it is buried we cannot get back what we have lost. When David's child was dead he dried his tears and went at once to God's house and worshipped, saying, "Now he is dead, wherefore should I fast? Can I bring him back again? I shall go to him, but he will not return to me." He turned all the pressure of his grief into the channels of holy living.—J. R. Miller.

The Wisdom of Saloomoon. Chap. 16.

1. Therefore through such like ways were they held in check in a manner worthy of them, and through amul titude of dangerous wild-beasts were they subjected to a final test.

2. Instead of which curbing punishment, thou didst beneficently treat thy laity and prepare a flight of reel-birds as sustenance in answer to an inordinate desire. a strange taste of an abnormal propensity;

3. That they, while inordinately desiring sustenance might, because of the putrid appearance of the things sent, turn away also from the constraining abnormal desire; and when they had come to feel their need for a little while, they might also change their abnormal taste.

4. For it was necessary that an insatiate need should come unto those tyrants: but that they should only be shown how their enemies were being put to the extreme test.

5. Yea, for even when a dreadful passion of wild-beasts come upon them and they were being destroyed by the bites of crooked serpents, thy wrath did not continue unto a full end.

6. But to foster them were they terrified for a little while, having a fellow-counselor of salvation in their remembrance of thy commandment of law.

7. For the one who turned about was not saved because of the things he saw, but because of Thee Savior of all.

8. And in this way didst thou persuade our enemies, because thou art the one who deliverest from every evil.

9. For them the bites of locusts and dog-flies killed and there was found no healing for their soul (natural-life of course) because they were worthy to be cut off by such-like things.

10. But thy sons not even the teeth of venomous dragons overcame; for thy mercy prevailed against these and healed them.

11. For they were made contrite in the remembrance of thy oracular words and quickly were saved, that they might not fall into a deep forgetfulness and become oblivious of thy beneficence.

12. Yea, neither herbs nor an emollient healed them, but thy word, O Lord, that healeth all things.

13. For thou hast official-power over life and death, and dost lead down to gateways of Hades (the grave) and dost lead up.

14. Man though killest in his evil way and the spirit when it hath gone out doth not return, nor doth he restore a soul that hath been taken away.

15. But thy hand it is impossible to escape.

16. For irreverent men who deny that they know thee have been scourged with the strength of thine arm, pursued by strange kinds of rain and hail and inexorable thunder-storms and lavishly destroyed by fire.

17. For the fire in the most paradoxical way was energized all the more in the water that quencheth all things; for a fighter for the justified (the saints) is the cosmos.

18. For when a flame was subdued that it might not burn up the living creatures sent against irreverent ones, they saw moreover and knew that they were being driven by God's judgment.

19. And when it flamed with more than the force of fire in the midst of water that it might destroy the products of an unjust land; and that

20. Instead of which things thou didst morsel out angels' food to thy laity, and didst send bread from heaven made ready for them without weary toil, strengthening every pleasure of sense and made ready for every harmonic taste; they saw and knew.

21. For thy being hath made thy sweetness manifest unto children; but hath been mixed in the pouring for the inordinate desire of servitors of him who bringeth it according to that which any one hath desired.

22. And snow and ice withstood fire and melted not, that they might comprehend that fire flaming in the hail and hurtled in the rain had destroyed the fruits of enemies.

23. And this again moreover that justified ones might be fostered and ignore their own ability.

24. For the creation, subservient unto thee the Creator, extendeth itself unto punishment on the unjust, and yieldeth to beneficence for those who trust in thee.

25. Therefore even then exploring all things it subserved thy all-fostering giving in answer to the supplicants.

26. That thy sons, whom thou didst love, might learn that not the generic products of the fruits do foster mankind, but that thy oracular word watcheth to keep those who put faith in thee.

27. For that which was not destroyed by fire, was melted, when heated simply by a little actinic ray of the sun.

28. That it might be known that one ought to come before the sun: both ingratitude to thee and intervede with thee for a ray of light.

29. For the hope of an ungrateful man will melt like a wintry hour-frost and will run like inutile water.

COMMENT.

We have in this sixteenth chapter a commentary on the plagues of Egypt which reads very strangely when compared with the many uninspired interpretations of those great historic occurrences. What a reasonable philosophy too runs through the whole argument, and what an exalted character it gives to God as the Judge of all the earth and the Disposer of all things; and what a comment upon the immutability of so-called natural laws. Fire burns or it doth not burn: ice melts with heat or it doth not melt at the behest of an "All-controller," and the cosmos as a whole is subservient to its Creator. Moreover in prophecy and promise he has covenanted to give this same subserviency ultimately to his sons, "the sons of God" and the lesson of the plagues of Egypt in its last analysis as given here is a foretaste of it for his people and a great object lesson by which to teach it to the whole inhabited or the oikoumenical ("ecumenical") world of all the succeeding generations. The same teaching is frequently emphasized in the Law and the Psalms and the Prophets; but nowhere is it so elaborated as in this book of wisdom. What a glory and enlargement awaits the perfected sonship of the saints, when instead of the little knowledge we now have of steam, electricity and other natural forces, "the sons of God" shall sway the cosmos to promote and work out righteousness on the earth to the glory of God their Father.

Report.

Brother J. F. Wilcox and myself have just closed a two-weeks meeting at Moriah, Ill. It was very wet and muddy weather and dark nights, but still quite a number attended. Bro. Wilcox is a good visitor to visit and talk with the people personally about their duty. I find that more can be done in this way than by preaching. A heavy sleet stopped our meeting before any obeyed, but afterwards through visiting the people and presenting the Scriptures to them relating to the gospel, three decided to obey, and to unite with us in the race for the crown incorruptible. They are Wm. Gross and wife Amelia, and Mrs. McFarlane. We believe that they are good ground, and that they will endure to the end. I mean to be in Ontario when this comes out, trying to get my old acquaintances there to see and obey the truth. Pray for me that I may speak the truth in love and power. My health is improving for which I thank the Giver of all good.

My address for two months will be Salisbury, Bruce Co., Ont., and my R. R. town, Paisley. I have had an offer of $10.00 a week from Iowa, to work there, and though it means a sacrifice of wages and fares to go to Ontario, yet I have more interest in old acquaintances than in strangers in Iowa, so have decided to make the sacrifice for the future reward. The truth never returns void. If good ground exists there it will receive the good seed, and bear fruit I know.

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Woodruff, Elizabeth N. J.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

TO OUR PATRONS.

We want more readers for THE RESTITUTION. We want One Thousand new names on our list for 1903, and can have them if you will help us.

In every Church of our faith in the land there are members who do not take our paper, who would be benefited by reading it.

There are those who are isolated by circumstances from any Church fellowship, who would be kept firmer in the faith, helped and strengthened for the battles of life if they had THE RESTITUTION each week.

There are others interested in the truths we hold, who would often have their attention called to the principles of our faith by reading our paper. When no preacher can be heard, when you cannot talk to them, THE RESTITUTION in their homes would be ever a present visitor—a missionary that will do more than any other one thing to keep the interest alive.

There are those whom we wish were interested in the Bible and what it promises. Many of this class of persons have never had the opportunity, or have neglected the matter when it was before them.

You are surely known to people such as are mentioned, and you are surely interested in them. We are satisfied you are not unmindful of their eternal well-being. How much do you care for these people? Will you join with us in getting the gospel before them, and keeping it there a year? We have ...ord to offer to you for consideration, ...hen he ...ignite will send THE RESTITUTION one year to NEW Subscribers for $1.00. We will start them as soon as received and give credit to the end of 1903.

With a little persistent effort in presenting the paper to those you know who are not taking it, you can induce them to try it for $1.00. If you want some sample papers we will gladly supply them to you, and our list can be increased by 1000 names at once.

It can be done easily if you will act on this suggestion, and get those near you interested. If each reader would get a new name our list would be doubled at once.

It would seem as if every reader of THE RESTITUTION could exert influence enough to get one more new name if the effort was made. Will you try it? If the first person you suggest it to does not respond, do not be discouraged, but try some one else. Perhaps the one you least expect will answer quickest.

Did you ever stop to figure up how many words are contained in our paper in a year? You will be surprised at the number of sermons it contains. There is variety too. There is doctrine and the practical, encouragement and cheer, and comfort for the distressed. Each phase of teaching would make several good sized books during the year. You can do no work that yields as large a return for the money expended as by sending THE RESTITUTION to a friend for a year.

We ask you to go at this work and push it along with a will. The time is getting short, and if you can be the means in God's hands of gaining one more for the Master, it will pay for all your labor. We will send several of the back papers to all new subscribers so each will get more than the current year.

Will you not start right away and send one name, and next week when that person gets his paper, some one else will hear of it, and you can send ...ther sub...scriber.

The Old Churchyard.

Oh, some come with hearts full of joy to the chapel
I will know the gospel through the week, grace to read;
Friends slumber there who were worth their gold,
We'll trace out their names on the old church wall.

Oh, mourn not for those who sleep there,
We plead for them, they were the loved
For the ... and Lord
...

I know that the ...
When we only ...
...
But we ...
Why should you weep for those ...
I'm very well and happy, I assure you,
Those that I love in the old churchyard.

Our friends linger in the peaceful repose,
Beyond from the world's sad heart-aches and woes.
And who would not rest with the blest they regard,
In quiet slumber in the old churchyard?
We'll rest in the longest day and hour,
When we only stand aside from the passion of clay.
When Gabriel's voice and the trumpet of the Lord,
Shall awaken the dead in the old churchyard

Oh, weep not for me! I am anxious to go
To that haven of rest where tears never flow;
Dear not mourner God calls, lovely word.
For soon shall I rise from the old churchyard.
Yes, soon shall I join that heavenly band
On glorified morn at my Savior's right hand.
Forever to dwell in mansions prepared
For the saints who shall come from the old churchyard.

The Preacher or Evangelist

The word evangelist occurs but three times in the Scriptures: Acts xxi. 8; Eph. iv. 11; 2 Tim. iv. 5; and is defined by Young as one who announces good tidings. In Isaiah lii. 7 is found a beautiful poetic description of this class of God's faithful servants, "How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace, that bringeth good tidings of good, that publisheth salvation; that saith unto Zion thy God reigneth. A part of this text Paul quotes and applies to the first proclaimers of the gospel. Rom. x. 15. In writing to Timothy he says: "Watch thou in all things, endure afflictions, do the work of an evangelist, make full proof of thy ministry, or fulfill thy ministry." 2 Tim. iv. 5. The importance of the mission of the early proclaimers of the gospel cannot be over-estimated. It meant the overturning of the numerous systems of false religion under which semi-savage and even civilized nations bowed in adoration to idols the workmanship of human hands. It proclaimed liberty to those bound by the chains of every form of superstition that clouded the mind and haunted the childish fears of the peoples of the ancient East. It meant, and did minister blessing to the nations at large in many ways, giving the down trodden and oppressed the idea of liberty as their natural right, furnishing every community in which a body of believers was called out, an example of justice and equity, the church being a model republic, surpassing that described by Plato. It proclaimed freedom to Israel from the bondage of the law, the yoke which neither the fathers, nor their children of later generations could bear. It brought life and immortality to light and settled the question which so much perplexed the mind of the wisest men of Greece and Rome with respect to the nature of man; and settled it in a way that for ever unsettled their philosophic vagaries. It laid a sure foundation for hope in reference to the future, imposing conditions, by conformity to which the priceless boon of eternal life and a never-ending kingdom might be secured. It held out to Israel of the two houses the long-cherished expectation of national restoration and salvation. All this the mission and ministry of apostles and co-workers with them meant and has been in part brought about with a view to the whole scheme being wrought out, as announced, at the coming of the Lord. While the consummation of the plan is still a pending question the mission of the evangelist remains. Somebody must engage to do the work of an evangelist. The gospel must be preached in order to the salvation of men. The Christ must be made known to men before they can call on him. Paul asks these significant questions. How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? And how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? And how shall they hear without a preacher? Rom. x. 14. The preacher is still an important factor in the carrying out of God's purpose to make known his will to the children of men. However high in the estimation of the world men may rank in the professions, in official stations, in diplomacy; the faithful proclaimer of the gospel ranks above these. His mission is burdened with grave consequences. His message relates to the future. Life and death are in the balance. What was true of the early proclaimers is likewise true of those of today. Says Paul, "We are a sweet odor of Christ to God, among those being saved, and among those who are perishing: to these an odor of death; and to those an odor of life to life." 2 Cor. ii. 15, 16. How weighty the responsibility! Well might the apostle ask: "And for these things who is qualified?" He and his co-laborers were sincere as he affirms in these words: "For we are not like the many trafficking the Word of God; but really from sincerity, and as from God, in the presence of God we speak concerning Christ." In the face of his detractors Paul could truthfully affirm his sufficiency and his sincerity. God had empowered him to preach the truth—made him an able minister of the New Covenant. He had renounced the hidden things of dishonesty was no longer walking in craftiness nor handling the Word of God deceitfully but by manifestation of the truth commended himself to every man's conscience in the sight of God. The evangelist of today though lacking the miraculous qualification which distinguished the apostles, must equip himself with the truth, and get it like Timothy by study, he must be sincere and bold, and hold forth the truth as of God and in the sight of God; and the same charge which Paul gave Timothy will apply to the evangelist of today. I charge thee, therefore before God and the Lord Jesus Christ * * * preach the Word.

JOHN L. WISE.

OUR NEW YEAR GREETING LETTERS.

Dear brothers and sisters:

Another year has passed and I am again permitted to have a few words with you in our yearly love feast. I have many things to be thankful to our Heavenly Father for during the past, and especially for the privilege of meeting with so many of the one faith at the Waterloo conference last August, and listening to the glad tidings proclaimed by the worthy ministers, and the dear friends I met while there. I enjoyed it so much. I could only think, O what will the kingdom be, with Jesus in our midst, and no good bye to be said? So dear friends, let us stand firm for the truth that we may be found worthy.

Your Sister in Christ.

MRS. F. W. CHAPIN.

Iowa.

Dear Household of Faith:

I am glad the good Lord has permitted me to live to write a few words to the brothers and sisters once more. I love to read the letters of so many brothers and sisters whom I never expect to see this side of the kingdom. As we have another New Year to begin let us try to live better than we ever have before. Let us ever look for the Master, not only with our eyes but with our actions. Let us not forsake the assembling of ourselves together. Let us keep in the middle of the road. Let us not turn on one side or the other; but let us be faithful to the end, no matter what comes. Let us never mind the scorns of this world for only think, when they crucified the dear Lord, instead of cold water they gave him vinegar to drink. Let us go on in the way we should go; for remember it will not be long until he will come and will not tarry. None but the faithful will be permitted to enter there. The Scriptures say that there shall be a great falling away. Pray for me, that I may not be of that number. There are trials and disappointments here but in the kingdom there will be joy everlasting.

MRS. DEBORAH PEARSON.

Ohio.

Brother Editor and all:

We have taken the dear RESTITUTION for nearly thirty years and have scarcely missed a paper in our wanderings. Isolated as we are, and nearly always have been, it is all the preaching we have and we cannot do without it. Its kind, cheering words to the household of faith, and the sounding of the signs of the times to those that are heeding our Lord's admonition to watch, cheers the heart and strengthens the faith of the lonely ones as they wait and watch. May they not wait long; for, Oh come blessed Savior, quickly come is our prayer.

E. J. & C. H. WATKINS.

Canada.

Dear ones of like precious faith:

Dear because of mutual hopes and desires. God loved us all while we were yet sinners. We were all purchased at the same precious price. If you are a humble slave your purchase price is the precious blood of Christ. If you are the commander of servants your sins and your redemption cost the same precious sacrifice. Not every one that says, "Lord, Lord," are members of the blessed family. The Savior says only "that doeth the will of my Father" is my sister and my brother. Therefore if we be brethren, we are always trying to do the will of our heavenly Father. If we be brethren we are always watching and watching for our glorified ... from heaven. If we be brethren ... all daily feel the need of his ... for mortality and ... soul health to his patiently waiting ones, and when the blessed of all ages are at home with our Elder Brother in our midst, and the light of immortality beaming from face to face, then and not until then, shall I be satisfied.

Submitted in love.

SADIE SKEELS.

Kentucky.

Dear household of like precious faith:

Tonight I have been reading the letters of the brethren and sisters, and I am so glad to hear from so many of them. I will say that I am just as strong in the faith as ever and though the last year has been a sad one in many respects, for me, I still hope for the soon coming of our Lord. It is one year today since my dear husband was taken and I am all alone, all my children are married and gone and yet I am not alone; for Christ says, "Lo, I am with you always." Pray for me brothers and sisters, that I may be worthy to enter the kingdom even as the humblest subject. I wish you all a Happy New Year.

Yours in love.

LIZZIE JOHNSON.

Nebraska.

Dear Restitution:

When I look back and take an account of the way the last year has been spent as regards myself, I ask myself the question, Have I lived in accordance with the rule that has been laid down in God's Holy Book? Have I done all that I might have done in the way of furthering the cause of our blessed Master who gave his life for us? When I realize the great suffering he underwent on our account, it makes me feel as though I had done so little. But I am striving to attain to or be accounted worthy of that glorious inheritance that is in store for all God's faithful ones. As I write my mind runs out to dear ones whom I have met in other days and with whom I have held sweet fellowship, and as I think of the living, in sadness do I remember the dear sleeping ones that are resting from their labors. O how sweet the resurrection morn seems when we think of meeting our Father's family altogether. I am now sixty-five years old and have but little hope of ever meeting again with the household of faith in this life, as I am one of the isolated ones. It is a feast to me to read the testimonies from those of like precious faith. So, Brothers and Sisters, let us ever look to Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith, and remember the joys set before us to be revealed when Jesus comes. It is my desire that the Lord will soon come and put a stop to all evil. So let us become adopted sons and daughters of the Lord our Savior. Then an entrance will be ministered unto us into the everlasting kingdom of God's dear Son.

Your Sister praying for the soon coming King.

MRS S. F. ANDERSON.

Indiana.

Dear brothers and sisters:

How many stop to think how precious our moments are, and that we should obey our kind Father who has done so much for us. We should not delay for our Lord will come in a twinkling of an eye and the ones that have obeyed his most Holy Word shall raise their hands and rejoice; for their redemption draweth nigh. Oh how glorious the thought to see our dear Savior face to face. Let us all be found watching and waiting, not one moment have we to spare for the time is drawing nigh. I will state that we have had the pleasure of hearing the gospel preached this winter by Bro. W. H. Wilson. He left many friends behind. How much better it is to part with our dear brothers and sisters when we know that the time will soon come when parting will be no more.

A Sister in Christ.

NELLIE VANCE.

Ohio.

Dear ones of like precious faith:

I did not know that we ... a love feast this year ... ed getting a few ... Post Master had ... We got the paper ... was filled with so many ... from the brothers and ... thought I would like to say a few words although it be late. The letters seemed so good to me, and more interesting than ever before; because it told what state each person was living in. When I saw they were written from all over the United States, it made me think of that Scripture that says, They shall come from the north, south, east and west and sit down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in the kingdom of God. Oh what a glorious time that will be. May we all be of that company. There are many pleasures and different things inviting and trying to allure us from the straight and narrow path that leads to the kingdom of God. But the pleasures of this world are not to be compared with the riches that await the faithful. We must not turn aside a moment. Jesus says, "No man having put his hand to the plow, and looking back is fit for the kingdom of God." I am rather isolated, there not being but three of the faith here. Ministers have talked with us, but never for a moment have we thought of giving it up. But instead, we have contended for the faith. May we all earnestly contend for the faith when ever an opportunity presents itself. I send love to one and all. Pray for me, that I may be worthy of eternal life when Jesus comes.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

I am glad to cast in my testimony with those who love the truth in Christ Jesus. Do we believe in Jesus Christ? Yes, we believe him to be the Son of God, the Prophet like unto Moses, the rightful heir to the throne of David, the Messiah promised to Israel, the servant of the Deity who in Zechariah is called the Branch, the Child born and the Son given, of Isaiah, the seed of Abraham who was to bless all nations. We see all these prophecies fulfilled in the Man, Christ Jesus. "Philip findeth Nathaniel and saith unto him, We have found him of whom Moses in the law and the prophets did write, Jesus of Nazareth, the son of Joseph," John i. 45, who at the age of thirty made his appearance in Galilee, "preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God, and saying The time is fulfilled, the kingdom of God is at hand, repent ye and believe the gospel." Mark i. 14. Dear Brothers and sisters, let us take Christ as our pattern so that we may be ready at his coming.

Yours, in faith of the soon coming kingdom.

Dear Restitution:

I send New Year greeting to all the faithful in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh. Present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service and be not conformed to this world, but be transformed by the renewing of your minds; for this is your reasonable service. Prove all things hold fast that which is good. Walk worthy of your calling so an entrance may be granted you into the kingdom of God and his Christ. I do not want to do without THE RESTITUTION as I hear no preaching. I heartily endorse its Bible teachings.

Yours in the faith.

Editor Restitution:

How grand it is that we are all directing our minds in one great channel of love concerning the precious promises in God's Word and for each other, in writing a few lines for a New Year's greeting. I am still firm in my views of the faith delivered to me. It is my greatest desire to so live that I may be a partaker of the divine nature. I would not give ... have for all ... of th... truth ... I am sorr... coming when each ... el. stand in the presence of our Lord and render our accounts and if we are not prepared why not prepare now. Let us trust him with all our hearts and patiently wait for his coming having on the wedding garment with our lamps brightly burning, ready to go out to meet the Bridegroom with joy and gladness.

There are some preachers who think that to keep abreast with the age, it is necessary to accept, more or less, the ever-changing and strange notions that are being evolved from the brains of those who assume to be "leaders of thought." This is the fatal hand that has shorn many a pulpit Samson of his locks, and made him an easy victim of the Philistines. It is far more important to keep abreast of the Bible than to keep pace with the so-called higher criticism. The man who takes the Bible as the Book of God, and walks with unquestioning faith in the path it points out, will not go far astray, his own skeptical neighbors being judges. The preacher who gets his inspiration from critics and doubters, will never grow himself nor feed the flock. To doubt is to be weak. Faith is the demand of the hour.—Light Bearer.

Have you ever noticed how an icicle is formed? If you have, you noticed how it froze one drop at a time until it was a foot long or more. If the water was clear, the icicle remained clear, and sparkled almost as brightly as diamonds in the sun; but if the water was slightly muddy, the icicle looked foul, and its beauty was spoiled. Just so our characters are formed—one little thought or feeling at a time. If each thought be pure and right, the soul will be lovely, and sparkle with happiness; but if impure and wrong, there will be deformity and wretchedness.

restoration of Israel; the ... wicked will of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

THE fundamental fact underlying all religion is the existance of God.

THE fire of holy zeal is kindled and fed by communion with God and Christ.

DON'T make a practice of making promises that you don't think any more about.

IF you would know God's mind search his Word, watch his hand, and live near his throne. "The secret of the Lord is with them that fear him."

REMOCK, are you at work, for God? Do you engage in it heartily, perform it industriously, and persevere in it constantly? If so, in due season you will reap, if you faint not.

HE that leans upon his comforts will find them to be a reed; he that leans upon his God, will find him to be a rock; he that leans on comfort, leans on it; he that leans on God, secures it.

A MAN who has no conception of the divine purpose, and no sort of interest in the subject, would be but ill-adapted to take a position along with prophets and apostles in the kingdom of God.

"THE good man is led in a good way, by a good God, to be employed in good things, walking in good company, working by a good rule, from good motive, to a good end, and at last arrives at a good home."

THE Christian has bound himself to follow where God leads; but if God leads he makes a way; and it is generally a flesh-crossing way, a creature humbling way; just the opposite of what the carnal mind expected.

Bible Doctrines.

"Bible doctrines will bear looking into. They do not offend the reason. They do not confound the intellect. They do not shock the moral faculties of our nature. No sophistry is required for their defence. The conscience is not troubled by the nature of them. "They are true and righteous altogether." David said the "Law of the Lord is perfect.....the statutes of the Lord are right;" and we may say the same of all the doctrines contained in the book. They are reasonable and defensible, and will stand discussion. Those who are so timid about their doctrines being looked at are sorry followers of robust Paul, whose "manner was," to "reason out of the Scriptures," even amid "much contention," and at the risk of much persecution as well."

The Godless.

"What an unlovely—nay, what a frightful thing, or condition it is to be without God in the world. To wander all day in the sunlight among the tribes of animals, unrelated to any thing better; to behold the horse, cow and bird, and to foresee no equal and speedy end both to him and them; no, the bird as it hurried by with its bold and perfect flight, would disclaim his sympathy and declare him an outcast. To see men pursuing in faith their varied action, warm-hearted, providing for their children, loving their friends, performing their pro[illegible] lives,—what are they to this chill, houseless, fatherless, aimless Cain, the man who hears only the sound of his own footsteps in God's resplendent creation? To him it is no creation,—to him these fair creatures are hapless spectres, he knows not what to make of it. To him, heaven and earth have lost their beauty. How gloomy the day, and upon yonder shining pond, what melancholy light? I cannot keep the sun in heaven, if you take away the purpose that animates him. The ball indeed is there, but his power to cheer, to illuminate the heart as well as the atmosphere, is gone for ever. It is a lamp-wick for meanest uses. The words, great, venerable, have lost their meaning; every thought loses all its depth, and has become mere surface."

False Hope Better Than None.

Even if there were no final issues of the faith of the kind which the Scriptures exhibit—if the whole thing turned out a magnificent fiction, and there was in reality but an eternal grave before all the sons and daughters of men—still it would be better to pass through life under the inspiration of a piece of a splendid falsehood, than exist without aspiration and die without hope. It is better that the countenance of a dead man should be pinched and tranquil, than that it should bear indications of horror and despair. Expectancy, joy, purity, nobility and elevation of character are better than their opposites even though the foundation on which they rest be a foundation of sand. But can we conceive of such a foundation for such qualities as are generated by a study of the Scriptures of the prophets? We are by no means reduced to such an alternative. The roots of our faith and hope stretch far out into the historical past, and entwine themselves around facts which are among the best accredited of all that appertains to the human kind."

Death's Doings.

Another of the oldest members of the Church of God in Cleveland has passed under the power of death. Sister Eliza Nutt was born in London, England, Aug. 22, 1815. And died Nov. 11, 1902 at Ridgeville Miss., where she had gone with her daughter, Miss Alice Nutt. She was married to N. F. Nutt May 15, 1849 and in 1872 the whole family came to America and settled in Cleveland, Ohio,—where five years later, husband and [illegible] obedient to the truth by [illegible] assisted by Bro. Geo. [illegible] and passed out of [illegible] Grandma Nutt as [illegible] called, was a great [illegible] many years, but it was evident to those who visited her that she rejoiced in hope of the glory of God in the face of affliction, and was careful to recommend it as an anchor sure and steadfast. We trust she will, like David, be satisfied when she awakes in her Lord's likeness.

Study of the Word.

The man anxious to be "wise unto salvation" will strive to master the historical part of the Word of God, and in doing this, he will not confine himself to the nominally historical books of the Bible, but will extend his researches to the prophetic records in which is to be found the inner history of Israel, the unveiling of God's mind in reference to the transactions of the nations, and their position as affected thereby. Here, to read what God thought of them and intends to do with them, is to ascend as it were from the arena of human strife to the cool and elevated pinacle of God Almighty's seat: to step in fact out of the finite and infallible, and to lay hold of God's unerring and all-comprehending discernment. This altitude is so much above the natural grasp of the human mind that we have often to go there to get accustomed to it. At first it makes a man mentally dizzy, but in time he feels at home and enjoys the extended survey. Away from that height, we see not with God's eyes, but regard things from a carnal point of view—that is with views formed by the unassisted mind of the flesh on subjects which, apart from dogmatic revelation, i. e., divine instruction, it is unable to comprehend. An occasional visit to the exalted summit of which is not enough for our spiritual wants. The natural tendency of the mind is so entirely contrary to that which is divine, that the corrective must be constantly applied. The knowledge of God must be constantly kept streaming through the mind. The study of the Word must be incessant. An acquaintance with the history of God's doings in the past is not to be acquired like pro-

[illegible] fane history, a[illegible] accomplishment [illegible] and then neglected and allo[illegible] lay under secular engrossments. It is too important and too easily forgotten to be thus lightly dealt with. It must be constantly renewed like our daily bread. Only thus is the mind so thoroughly assimilized to the divine purpose as to be able instinctively to apprehend it accurately in all its remote and immediate bearings, and eschew those stagnations of error which the sincere are constantly falling into from partial information."

The Coming War.

Under this heading appears an editorial in the Chicago Tribune of Jan. 18, which we give herewith. Many of our lost students have contended all along that the conflict must come between Saxon and Slav. Many have even contended that Gog and Magog must be allied with Russia. There may not be enough in this to cause a change in the mind of any one but to stimulate thought we think. Before our readers

The phrase "Saxon versus Slav" had an alliterative force which always impressed the reader. One is sorry to have to give it up in favor of "Teuton versus Slav." Yet this is what one will have to do if "Quidam" claims in this month's Contemporary Review that the great European conflict which has been "looming on the horizon" and sometimes even "looming immediately on the horizon" for the last fifteen years will be a conflict not between Russia and England but between Russia and Germany. It will be "a life and death struggle which will prove unparalleled in the world's history for its magnitude and for its far reaching consequences."

During the Franco Prussian war of 1870 Russia refrained from intervention and supposed that it would thereby earn Bismarck's gratitude. A decade later Bismarck displayed an excessively queer kind of gratitude by helping to block Russia's progress toward Constantinople. From that time on, says "Quidam," both the Russian and German governments have understood that their respective interests were irreconcilable.

Gen Skobeleff said: "The battle is unavoidable between the German and Slav; it will be long, bloody, and terrible, but the Slav will triumph." A pamphlet called Russland am Scheidewege," Berlin, 1888, said: "Between Germany and Russia there exist not differences on isolated questions of policy, but deep seated, irreconcilable [illegible] nature which irresistibly press to [illegible] an open conflict."

Why did Bismarck court Russia's Turkish dreams? The answer is found in a word, Pan-Slavism. Suppose that European Turkey passed under Russian control. The next step would be the absorption of those parts of Austria-Hungary which are predominantly Slavic. There are many such parts. The total population of Austria-Hungary is 47,000,000. The Magyars (Hungarians) number 8,000,000; the Germans 11,500,000, the Slavs, 22,000,000. The first Pan-Slavic congress was held in Prague, Bohemia, in 1848. Since that time the Pan-Slavic agitation has been continuous. Now Pan Slavism differs only Pickwickianly from Russification. Give Russia Constantinople. The road from Constantinople leads to Prague. Think of the circle around Berlin formed by St. Petersburg, Warsaw, and Prague! "Quidam" may be in full possession of his senses when he concludes that the Teuton can hardly afford to regard Pan-Slavism as merely the accomplishment of a beautiful theological ideal.

Meanwhile Russia seems to be determined not to be found unprepared for any emergency. Two thirds of the Russian European army is massed in Warsaw, Vilna, and Kiev, within a few miles of the German frontier. The Teuton and the Slav are where they can easily get at each other.

MY STRENGTH.

2 Cor. xii. 7, 8, 9, as we read Paul besought the Lord thrice to remove the thorn in the flesh, which was given to keep him humble. And the Lord's reply was this, "My grace is sufficient for thee, for my strength is made perfect in weakness." We find by these words that my strength our subject for this evening is the Lord's strength. By this thorn in the flesh Paul had become more strong, more powerful in the Lord. It was a blessing to him. As in his case physical infirmities

[illegible] all who are [illegible] a spiritual [illegible]ing. Paul gloried in his infirmities. No doubt in his day the fleshly minded said that only a fool would glory in infirmities, so it is today the natural man cannot understand how an infirmity can be a blessing. The natural man cannot discern the things of the Spirit. If we are in the Spirit, though weak physically, we can be strong in the Lord. Through infirmities we realize more clearly, than if we are strong physically, that we are weak, dependent creatures. We see if we are in the Lord that we are nothing without him. Our lives have been likened unto a vapor, and as the grass of the field, which appear for a little while, and then vanisheth or fadeth away. If we have been brought down by disappointments, losses or sickness we more fully realize these statements and are more inclined to cast all our cares upon him, to trust him more, and therefore be made more perfect in the Lord. Paul had great cause to glory, the thorn in the flesh had been a blessing. The power of Christ was with him, through weakness he had been made strong. If Paul had not received the thorn in the flesh he would have gloried in his knowledge as he had been specially favored by God. He had come to visions and revelations; yes, if he had not received this thorn in the flesh he might have been proud and boastful. Even as some of the Corinthian brethren had become to whom this epistle was written. Through this and other infirmities he had been made to see that without the Lord Jesus Christ he was nothing, and therefore his glorifying in his infirmities. Pride or glorying in one's self or contending for our own way is a detriment, and a hindrance to the cause of Christ. Such an one cannot be strong in the Lord. But if with a humble spirit we contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints we cannot do otherwise than promote the cause of Christ. Paul took pleasure in weaknesses, in distresses, in persecutions. Instead of making him discouraged they made him strong in the Lord. So we, if in Christ, can be stronger in the Lord though we be weak physically. In the Bible characters physical strength and spiritual strength did not always go hand in hand. Saul, the first king of Israel, was a choice young man, from his shoulders and upwards he was higher than any of the people. Although favored by God and youth and strength at the start he made a miserable failure. And Samson though strong and powerful in physique was weak spiritually. He too was favored by God, but through folly his last days were sad ones. Strong, powerful persons have no advantage over weak ones in serving the Lord.

Contrast these two Bible characters just mentioned with Paul who is said to have been small of stature, frail and weak, contemptible in speech, but notwithstanding all his infirmities he was powerful in the Lord, and was faithful unto death. Without these infirmities he like Saul might have made a miserable failure. This lesson teaches us that the race is not to the swift, but rather through weakness we gain strength in the Lord which will assist us to overcome and gain the victory.

J. C. THOMPSON.

[The following was written for a meeting at Cleveland, Ohio, and is sent for publication that others may have the benefit of it.—ED.]

Dear brothers and sisters:

Tonight's subject is found in 1 Pet. ii. 1-5, "Wherefore laying aside all malice, and all guile, and hypocrisies and envies and all evil speakings; as new born babes desire the sincere milk of the Word, that ye may grow thereby; if so be ye have tasted that the Lord is gracious; to whom coming as unto a living stone disallowed indeed of men, but chosen of God and precious; ye also as lively stones are built up a spiritual house, an holy priesthood to offer up spiritual sacrifices acceptable to God by Jesus Christ."

This Scripture, especially the first two verses, is similar to that in Gal. v. 16; "This I say then, walk in the Spirit, and ye shall not fulfill the lust of the flesh." Also that in Rom. vi. 12-13, "Let not sin reign in your mortal body that ye should obey it in the lusts thereof, neither yield ye your members as instruments of unrighteousness unto sin, but yield yourselves unto God as those that are alive from the dead, and your members as instruments of righteousness unto God." In other words the first of our text means, put off the old man and his works and put on the new man in Christ Jesus with his works:

[illegible] natural man would naturally do, being in bondage to sin, fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affection, covetousness, anger, wrath, malice, blasphemy, hatred, emulations, strife, seditions, heresies, murders, revellings, these all are the fruits of the carnal man who is for this reason at enmity with God, we who have put on the new man which is renewed in knowledge after the image of him that created him are to flee these things, and as the elect of God holy and beloved will follow after mercies, kindness, long suffering, love, joy, peace, gentleness, goodness, faith, temperance, for if things be in you and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. And we will desire the sincere milk of the Word, yea, we will crave for it if these things be in us, even as a babe craves for milk, or nutriment or nourishment:—why? That we may grow, if so be that we have tasted that the Lord is gracious, the Lord's graciousness means his kindness, or the favor of the Lord. If we find the favor of the Lord we will desire more and more of the sincere milk of the Word and grow thereby i. e. the knowledge of our Lord, to whom coming as unto a living stone, disallowed indeed of men but chosen of God and precious. This phrase, "To whom coming," can be better understood if turned around. "Coming to whom?" To explain this I will go back and connect the second verse with the fourth. We, having put on the new man and partaking of the milk of the Word are growing or coming nearer to whom? Why to the living stone that was disallowed of men, but approved of God, Jesus Christ our Lord and Savior, and we through this growth are also as lively stones, built up a holy priesthood acceptable to God.

Now this lesson teaches us what? That the Lord God is gracious. How do we know? Because when God was under no obligations to man he extends to him a hope of salvation from the sentence placed upon him through Adam, and we recognize and admit this, Brethren, when we accept the mediator Jesus, and put away the lusts of the fleshly or natural man for the works of the Spirit.

If indeed brethren we have drank at the life giving fountain and have tasted the goodness of God it will be our desire to lived life acceptable to God, a life that will fit us to be a lively stone, part of the temple of God, of which Jesus is the chief or living or corner stone. In these verses there is also a lesson in growing in grace. It is by following the principles outlined in the 1st and 2nd verses of this chapter that we can grow in favor of God and it is only by a steady growth in God's favor that we attain to that glorious hope.

THE THRONE.

In Psa. lxxxix. 35, "Once have I sworn by my holiness, that I will not lie unto David, his seed shall endure forever, and his throne as the sun before me." And again in Psa. cxxxii. 11, "The Lord hath sworn in truth unto David, he will not turn from it, of the fruit of thy body will I set upon thy throne." And Isaiah says, "That of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David and upon his kingdom to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even forever, the zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this." We find from these quotations that God has promised David that his throne and kingdom should be established forever. Who is it then, that shall sit upon this throne forever? If we turn to Luke i. 32, we read, "And the Angel said unto Mary, thou shalt bring forth a son and shalt call his name Jesus; he shall be great and shall be called the Son of the Highest, and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever and of his kingdom there shall be no end." And Paul writing to the Hebrews, quotes from the Psalms, "But unto the son he saith, Thy throne, O God, is forever and ever, a sceptre of righteousness is the sceptre of thy kingdom." We have found the seed, now who shall sit on his throne forever? It is Jesus, the son of Mary, the Seed of David, and God's well beloved Son, and he is to reign in Mount Zion, and in Jerusalem and before his ancients gloriously. Oh, for the coming of the time, when this King of glory shall usher in this reign of righteousness. Blessed be the Lord God of Israel who only doeth wondrous things. Belov-

[illegible] throne, even as I also overcame and am set down with my Father on his throne. Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection, on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years, and they sang a new song, saying, Thou art worthy to take the book and to open the seals thereof, for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred and tongue and people and nation, and hast made us unto our God kings and priests, and we shall reign on the earth. We some times say, "Truth is stranger than fiction," and if it were not that it is God that cannot lie, who promises, we would think this too good to be true, but as God is true and his Word is truth, and all his promises are yea and amen in Christ Jesus, we are assured that we, even we, will be made partakers of divine nature, if we do not let slip the things which we have learned, and walk worthy of so high a calling. Oh, let us keep our eyes fixed on the mark of the prize of our high calling. Let us give attention to reading, and let us search out the deep things of God, and give all diligence, that we be neither barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ, and so make our calling and election sure. "For if ye do these things ye shall never fall, for so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." May we all be among that happy number, is my most earnest prayer.

Prayer to the Lord Jesus.

I would like to submit a few thoughts in reply to Bro. O. R. L. Crozier's your issue of Nov. 20th in which he defends the practice of praying to the Lord Jesus, by quoting passages where the worship of the Christ is referred to. Now such quotations are altogether irrelevant to the question. While the Lord was with his people he could be addressed in prayer as requested, which is the same idea. He could even be worshiped in the manner that was customary to worship kings and dignitaries in those days and even now in certain eastern [illegible] That the Savior accepted such ship is certain because of the dig[illegible] of his office. It is just as certain though that he never made any demand for it from his "brethren" and "friends." When he comes again he will be worshiped again in his official capacity as representative of Omnipotent God, but now while is "not present with us" the question is, is he to be addressed in prayer? I know of one meeting of well informed believers in the "gospel as we understand it" who never even mention the name of the Father in heaven in any way in their prayers, so far as their petition is concerned. God has abdicated and the entire management of the universe devolves on the Lord Jesus and to him alone they address themselves. Now if we are to obey the command of Christ himself we in prayer must address the "Father who art in heaven." The God of all is ever present in all his works, over all his dominions and the Lord Jesus has not interfered to displace him in the attention or the heart of the believer, rather the contrary to introduce and establish him there. Much of the trouble that we have to contend with in presenting gospel truth before the people comes from just such "fads" as these. Perhaps it is as well to slight them and let the ever increasing light dissolve them as the rising sun dissolves the morning mists, but they are very troublesome nevertheless and make inroads on the peace of the churches.

WHEN YOUR TIME IS OUT PLEASE RENEW.

My prophet and priest, my sacrifice too,
My rock and salvation, so faithful and true.

He was born to be Savior, and King of this earth,
He was crucified, slain, but death's bands in his hand;
He has gone to the Father, and there will remain
'Till he comes to this earth to commence his great reign.

Then those who are sleeping in Jesus will hear
The call of their Savior, his glory to share:
He will raise them to life, they immortal will be,
And will dwell with their Lord throughout all eternity.

Now tell me, my brother, what is he to thee?
I've told what my Savior and Lord is to me.
O, haste to your refuge, God you may welcome in
To everlasting glory, wherein will be no sin.

When such the blood of the Lamb we've been sealed a bit of new,
Through the gates to the city of Zion we'll go.
His jewels we'll be, loud hosannas we'll sing,
Glory to God in the highest, for Jesus is King.

Consolation.

Brethren, concerning them who are asleep, comfort one another. 1 Thess. iv. 13-18. We are accustomed to say that the believer needs comfort, especially when suffering from affliction, bereavement or persecution. But indeed there are no times in life's history when the consolation which may be derived from the passage under review may not be suitable.

It contains the "consolation with which we are comforted of God." It is "life and immortality are brought to light." Let us open our hearts to welcome the things which are wrapt in those gracious and prophetic words.

The Thessalonian church seems to have been greatly approved by the Apostle Paul; it was a pattern church, it embraced men who had turned from servitude of idols to serve the living and true God, and to wait for his Son from heaven. They were not waiting for what is termed the outpouring of the spirit, not waiting for the fulfillment of predicted troubles, nor for the conversion of the world; but they were waiting for the Son of God, the Lord Jesus Christ; they knew that when he came from heaven their true dignity and happiness would commence, that Christ's waiting, watching, living saints would be changed.

But you ask me, what of the dead? We saw so many obituary notices in our paper for the year 1902. Still brethren, there some of us left yet, but we are all a year nearer our graves, than we were in Jan. 1902. How many of our dear brethren have dropped out of our number during the past year, and I stop and ask myself who will be the next to go, and sleep until the Master comes?

Well your question—What of the dead? we will let Paul answer. "I would not have them ignorant, nor us, concerning them that are asleep," and proceeds to make this statement:

1. That those dying in the faith, sleep in Jesus.

2. That those sleeping ones shall arise at the coming of the Lord.

3. That after their resurrection, the living, waiting, watching ones shall be caught up with them to meet the Lord in the air, and

4. That those raised and those who are changed shall ever be with their Lord.

Other things are also implied which yield material for comfort, but these statements are emphatically made by the apostle as affording great consolation to the church. We will briefly examine them.

Those dying in the faith sleep in Jesus. Such as by the operation of the word, the gospel, God's power (Rom. i. 16, 16; Mark xvi. 15, 16) we become new creatures in Christ Jesus, have exercised repentance toward God and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ, have turned from the service of idols to serve the living and true God; these also live in a watchful state, waiting for the coming of the Lord. But while the Lord tarries they die or fall asleep. The Thessalonians died, all of them have long since fallen under the power of death. They were waiting for the Lord from heaven; they expected the angelic prophecy would have been fulfilled in their day. Acts i. 11. Multitudes have since that time lived a life of faith on the Son of God, lived praying, hoping, expecting, but Jesus did not come, and they died, and unless there be a resurrection they have never been ra[ised] and judging from the flaming [wa]sters every where visible, our judgment is that it is not in sight and will not be in this present condition of things. Our amusements must be right in themselves when tested by the Word of God. We have not to deal with the theatre as it might be, but as it really is today. Is it the place for a Christian? Is your influence for good intensified by the knowledge you receive there, or by their knowing you are accustomed to spending a part of your time there. Put this question to yourself. I am a Christian, will the use of this amusement help me to live a more spiritual life, will it make me more prayerful, more zealous in the cause of Christ, is the time spent there, the influence of the play on my mind for days after "to the glory of God"? I wish all professed Christians who make a plea for attending the theater, could get one thought strongly impressed on their minds, namely, What is the reflex influence of the actors thought? Have you ever considered that the actor is hardly ever his real self, he is always acting a part, not the real man, all their days are spent learning to act their part. In the very nature of things some moral effect, good or bad, must be the result of this acting. Think of it in the play, "the sign of the cross" a wanton, and some woman must act the part, the more perfect the acting the more completely the sense of individuality is lost in the character represented. The object is to make the audience believe the real villain, murderer or seducer is before them. Following these low ideals night after night, how soon one must be lost to real virtue or goodness, truth or right living. Does it not surely follow if we patronize them with our presence and money, we are helping them to bind fetters upon themselves that are sure to keep them from "entering the gates of life eternal?" Think you, dear Christians, young or old, that all this is to the glory of God? If not, it will not stand the Scripture test, will it? A young lady remarked not long ago, who had quite recently begun attending the theater, "O, you do not know how beautiful it all is, why, I never was so happy in my life as when watching the scene on the stage." I have been in the ball room while young and had the same sensations. But it did not give me any desire to attend the prayer meeting the next Thursday evening, or build me up spiritually. It does not matter how [ha]ppy we got, we cannot be justified in any pleasure which involves physical or spiritual danger of [th]e around us. It is selfishness which causes us to overstep the Word of God and our own sense of right at times. We argue something like this, I want to go, others must do as they think best, and not to be governed by my actions. Wait and think again, O how selfish this is. Perhaps you have a brother or sister just starting out in the Christian life, would you be glad to have them come to the city to visit you and you absent at the theater, would you for their spiritual uplifting invite them to attend with you the same place the next evening, would you be glad to hear their confession afterward. Well, I guess I'll give up the narrow way I have been trying to walk in, it is too straight, give me the world, and if I go to ruin, remember sister, you led me in the first step, would you rejoice in their downfall? Remember what would cause your brother, sister or friend to fall would cause others to do the same. Are you so selfish you do not care to help save only those who have been nursed, fed and clothed at the same fireside with yourself? If so, alas for your personal safety when Jesus comes. If an actor cannot be a Christian while following the stage, can you frequent their haunts and do any better than they? "Destroy not" by thy pleasure "[one] for whom Christ died." No Christian! it will not stand the Bible test, and cannot be to the "glory of God."

M. A. WOODWARD.

"O Israel, thou hast destroyed thyself; but in me is thine help." Hosea xiii. 9.

In half-hearted service, the Israel of Hosea was the picture of a large part of the church today. "Ephraim is a cake not turned." Is there anything more disgusting than half-cooked food? and so the church is full of people who have had a touch of fire at the altar today, at the theatre tomorrow; thanking God [to]day, grumbling tomorrow; at the communion today, in the house of Belial tomorrow; singing today of a Savior's love, tomorrow squeezing the last cent out of a hapless victim.

Again, what is more expressive than Hosea's figure, "your goodness is as a morning cloud, and as the early dew it goeth away." Inconstant purposes ebbing and fading; love and faith faltering and stumbling; obedience halting and compromising. Oh, how sad the end of our good beginnings and the blighting of our morn's fair promise.

"He that endureth unto the end the same shall be saved." Hosea's people were like the Laodiceans, to whom John bore the message of the Savior, "Because thou art lukewarm, I will spew thee out of my mouth."

Hosea is the prophet of Israel's restoration. He tells us that the time is surely coming when they shall sing again in the mountain of Samaria and the heights of Zion, and the fearful curse of ages shall be wiped away in God's eternal favor and his everlasting covenant, yet, the number of the children of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea, which cannot be measured nor numbered; and it shall come to pass that in the place where it was said unto them, Ye are not my people, there it shall be said unto them, Ye are the sons of the living God, then shall the children of Judah and the children of Israel be gathered together, and appoint themselves one head, and they shall come up out of the land; for great shall be the day of Jezreel." Hosea i. 10, 11. "And I will sow her unto me in the earth; and I will have mercy upon her that had not obtained mercy; and I will say to them which were not my people, Thou art my people; and they shall say, Thou art my God." Hosea ii. 23 "Afterward shall the children of Israel return and seek the Lord their God, and David their king; and shall fear the Lord and his goodness in the latter days." Hosea iii. 5.

"They that dwell under his shadow shall return," tells us of the higher blessing which he will make us give to others after we ourselves have been blessed, and then, his grace is guaranteed to keep us faithful. "Ephraim shall say, What have I to do any more with idols." From me is thy fruit found. Sinner, backslider, return to this loving Father, and, child of his love and bride of his heart, walk softly and closely with him, "Who is wise and he shall understand these things, prudent and he shall know them; for the ways of the Lord are right, and the just shall walk in them. But the transgressors shall fall therein." [illegible] MISHLER.

[illegible] up yonder I'll be there." The second stanza and second line ends with the word "sky." It may safely be said that the meaning conveyed by the poets above is, that heaven is either in or beyond the sky. The writer has never been able to find in the Bible where God has said that he would ever remove the righteous or wicked from this earth. If any think differently, give chapter and verse.

Obituary.

Benjamin Boyes was born at Bradford, England, Oct. 24th, 1816, and died at Geneva, Ill., Jan. 6, 1903. He was married to Mary A. Horwood Jan. 1, 1839, and with his wife came to Geneva in 1844, when but four other families were there. The year following he moved to Northfield, near Chicago, returning to Geneva in 1863, and established himself in the mercantile business which he continued until forced by declining health to relinquish it a few years since. His wife died in 1896. To their union were born nine children, five of whom are living. Of these the best known to our older readers is Mrs. Sarah J. Knowles, whose husband, Matthew Knowles, was a Chicago merchant, who lost his life in a railroad accident soon after the great Chicago fire. Sister Knowles has had the care of her father in his later years, devoting her life to caring for him. Another daughter is Mrs. Harriett Denton of Chicago, who is in quite feeble health. Mrs. Julia Bartholomew of Geneva is another daughter, and the wife of Bro. Samuel Fahrney of Chicago was also their daughter, she having died some years ago.

To write a history of our deceased Brother Boyes as related to the church it would be necessary to go back to the 50s, when John and James and Joseph and Benjamin Wilson were all living in Geneva—when the old Gospel Banner was printed there, and when the "Emphatic Diaglott" was issued, for way back at that time Benjamin Boyes was a strong supporter of the faith. The father of the writer and Bro. Boyes were close companions, and after searching the Scriptures and becoming convinced of the truths of the gospel nothing could change them. They lived out their faith and are now sleeping, waiting the call of the angel of the Lord.

For some years Bro. Boyes has [been] feeble in health, and [suffered] For some two [years] he had [seemed] [illegible] for dinner, but [was] was taken with [pa]ralysis and lived till in the night, when he passed quietly away to rest in peace. He was through all his long illness, strong in the faith and hope of living again when the Lord shall come, and his constant prayer was "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done."

A writer in a local paper in closing his remarks says, "No better husband, wife, or citizen ever lived in Geneva, than Benjamin and Mrs. Boyes," and to this we add only that no truer friend, more faithful brother, or nobler man ever lived any where. An example to others, one to be safely followed—for in his life it could be seen that he had been with Jesus and had learned of him.

Bro. A. J. Eychaner of Iowa, preached at the funeral, and Bro. Boyes was laid away to await his Lord's return, when he will rise to a life that will not end—eternal life.

May we each so live as to meet him on the other shore.

Selections.

Christ's Glorious Coming.

If there is any doctrine plainly taught in the Scriptures of truth, it is that of Christ's second coming. It is of equal importance with his first advent. The following concerning that noted event is clearly and explicitly set forth:—

1. Christ will come again the second time. John xiv. 1-3; Heb. ix. 28.

2. That coming is not at death; for he comes not to bring death but life. John xi. 21; xxi. 22, 23.

3. That coming is not an outpouring of his Spirit; for the Spirit was sent as the substitute of the Lord's own presence. John xvi. 7.

4. It is not a secret or local coming, as set forth in any of the various "isms" of the present day. Matt. xxiv. 26

5. It is a personal coming; "this same Jesus," "the Lord himself." Acts i. 9-11; 1 Thes. iv. 16.

6. It is a visible coming. Rev. i. 7; Matt. xxiv. 26, 27.

7. He will come on a cloud (o[f] [an]gels), as he ascended. Acts i. 9-11; Matt. xxv. 31; Luke xxi. 27.

8. He will come in great power and glory. Matt. xxv. 31; 2 Thes. ii. 8.

9. When he comes, the righteous dead will be raised, and the saints will be clothed with immortality. 1 Thes. iv. 13-17; 1 Cor. xv. 51-55.

10. At his coming the wicked will perish in the brightness of his glory, and the good will receive their reward. 2 Thes. i. 7-9; Matt. xvi. 27.

11. Then shall culminate the hope of the church of all the ages, "the blessed hope." Titus ii. 14; Isa. xxv. 9; Job xix. 25.

12. Signs will precede that coming that all may know when it is near; and yet no one shall know the day nor the hour. To these signs the church of God will give heed, though the wicked will be in darkness because of their sin. Luke xxi. 25-27; Matt. xxiv. 29-35; 1 Thes. v. 1-6.

The above enumerations could be augmented and the citations be multiplied greatly; but these we believe are sufficient to arouse in every mind that possesses an interest in these things (and who does not?) a desire to study further.

Notwithstanding these plain, obvious instructions concerning so precious an event, one so pregnant in import of all that concerns the Christian, it is a little understood by many Christians, and lightly regarded by nearly all. What would we think of the affections and feelings of a bride who would be indifferent at the delay of the bridegroom when all things were ready? We could but conclude that her love was indeed small.

Yet it is not wholly lack of affection that is responsible for the attitude of believers. The importance of the second advent of our Lord in his great plan of redemption has made it the subject of especial attack by Satan. He has sent his agents into the church to pervert the doctrine. He has brought obloquy and reproach upon it and the Bible by the numerous time settings that foolish men have made contrary to express Scripture statement. He has made one of the most blessed things of the Bible the butt of jest and quip and joke and [illegible] Signs of the Times.

[illegible] [ge]thering [illegible] [ni]ght see [illegible] come. He stopped [illegible] [la]d had made up in the foreign parts with kisses, so he never got through it, and fondled him as if he had been his mother more than his father, and set all the men and maidens to work, and then set them to feasting and dancing and merry-making, as if it had been a wedding or a christening, instead of a poor wild lad creeping back home for a bit of bread, with scarce a rag on his back nor shoes to his feet. He wasn't afraid the poor boy would make himself too much at home. He couldn't do enough like to make him feel he was at home; and the Lord says that's how the Almighty feels when one of us comes back to him.—Kitty Trevylyan.

Take life all through, its adversity as well as prosperity, its sickness as well as its health, its loss of its rights as well as its enjoyment of them, and we shall find that no natural sweetness of temper, much less any acquired philosophical equanimity, is equal to the support of a uniform habit of kindness. Nevertheless, with the help of grace, the habit of saying kind words is very quickly formed, and when once formed it is not speedily lost. Sharpness, bitterness, sarcasm, acute observation, divination of motives—all these things disappear when a man is earnestly conforming himself to the image of Christ Jesus. The very attempt to be like our dearest Lord is already a wellspring of sweetness within us, flowing with an easy grace over all who come within our reach. —F. W. Faber.

Married.

Recreation from a Bible Standpoint.

1 Cor. x. 31, "Whether therefore ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God."

In our last article we left many professed Christians on the grand stand at the horse race, handkerchiefs and hats were waving and cheer upon cheer sounded out as the last heat was being reached. Are they still there in mind or have they decided it was not "all to the glory of God," and conclude to spend their time in the future in more healthy recreation?

Let us try the dance hall by the same test. Is it right in itself, will it bring glory to God? There can be no real evil in the gymnastic exercise we call dancing, in the open air, at the family circle or fireside, in reasonable hours; but when young people learn to dance, the ball, the public dance, is the goal of their ambition. Here comes the serious trouble, with many things not right in themselves, and which lead to life-long sins and physical misery. First, for days beforehand the whole time and mind is absorbed in planning and making the dress for the occasion with suitable trimmings and jewelry to correspond. Then the young men who are expected there, one of which comes on the eve of the party, and the home is left at night with its pure atmosphere and holy associations for the impure air of the ball room, tainted with the fumes of tobacco, whiskey, impure language and lax morals. All night long the dance goes on, the young and thoughtless girl mingling with men and women hardened in sin, vile in themselves and desire nothing higher than this or similar places of amusement, with no regard for virtue, either to protect it for themselves, or the girl by their side. Do you think the Christ would search in such a crowd for one of his chosen ones? Did you see any thing there done for the glory of God? The night is spent, the morning hours see the tired, jaded creatures nearing home. Night, God's time for rest, has been worse than wasted, there has been a most flagrant breach made in the laws of health—and no real recreation.

Let us try the same test for the theater. Is a place of recreation for the Christian. There is much said of late about the ideal theatres where all the plays will be pure, sweet and noble, and each actor and actress, men and women of noble character, a place that will combine innocent amusement and moral education. Such an ideal has

The Wisdom of Saloomoon. Chap. 17.

1. For thy ways of judging are great and difficult to be discovered.

2. For transgressors who undertook to assert their ability against a sanctified nation prisoners of darkness, fettered and shut down upon with hatches of a long night, lay as fugitives of the forethought of an everlasting one.

3. For supposing that he was ignoring hidden sins, they were scattered with a rayless covering of lethe, awe-struck in a dreadful way and terrified by seeming appearances.

4. For not even did the innermost chamber that held them keep them to be without fear, and terrifying echoes resounded around them, and mute appearances with gloomy faces appeared unto them.

5. And no force of fire availed to give light, nor did coy flames of stars shine out to glean down upon that continuous abhorred night.

6 And only a self-kindled inferal pyre full of fear appeared to them, and frightened as they reasoned that the things that were being looked at were worse than their sight beheld.

7. And mockeries of magic art lay down upon them and a haughty rebuke for their swaggering boast of thoughtfulness.

8. For while promising to drive away abject fears and disturbances from a sick soul they themselves were sick with a most laughable true fear.

9. For even if nothing of a disturbing nature was making them afraid, frightened with the passing by of wild beasts and the hissings of creeping things, they perished trembling and denying that they were looking at the inevitable air on every side of them.

10. For wickedness when called to account testifieth in its own cowardly way, and when constrained by conscience taketh to the difficult ways.

11. For fear is naught unless there be a betrayal of the responsive help that comes from reasoning.

12. And the less the expectation within is the more dotn one account the manner of the cause that [illegible] to [illegible] to obey it, [illegible] There is no hint [illegible] ordeal of darkness being prolonged beyond the death of the incumbent. Death brought the extremity of the test to those who were frightened to death by their "vain imagination" and "superstitious fears" under this test. Read Paul's exposition in the first chapter of Romans of this whole subject of man's moral depravity and how God deals with it.

Of course a time is coming in the economy of God when this picture-lesson will be realized in a great world-wide fact, when God's shekinal light of glory will be over his perfected saints and all the rest of the world will be in an Egyptian darkness, "outer darkness" as it called, "away from the glory" as is also said. But there will be "a new order of things" when this occurs. Great changes will have occurred in the physical as well as the moral universe of our God and his Christ. "Babylon will have fallen" and "there will be no more sea" with its depths of profoundest mystery; and the harlot with mystery written upon her forehead will no longer sit with the goblet of the wine of her fornication in her hand in the midst of the sea of nations, tongues and peoples. All these things will have passed away. "Lo, saith he, I make all things new;" not I make all new things. And the author of Hebrews on this subject says this will be "a change" or "translation" of things as they now are. Read the context and ponder upon it.

TO OUR PATRONS.

We want more readers for THE RESTITUTION. We want One Thousand new names on our list for 1903, and can have them if you will help us.

In every Church of our faith in the land there are members who do not take our paper, who would be benefitted by reading it.

There are those who are isolated by circumstances from any Church fellowship, who would be kept firmer in the faith, helped and strengthened for the battles of life if they had THE RESTITUTION each week.

There are others interested in the truths we hold, who would often have their attention called to the principles of our faith by reading our paper. When no preacher can be heard, when you cannot talk to them, THE RESTITUTION in their homes would be ever a present visitor—a missionary that will do more than any other one thing to keep the interest alive.

There are those whom we wish were interested in the Bible and what it promises. Many of this class of persons have never had the opportunity, or have neglected the matter when it was before them.

You are surely known to people such as are mentioned, and you are surely interested in them. We are satisfied you are not unmindful of their eternal well-being. How much do you care for these people? Will you join with us in getting the gospel before them, and keeping it there a year? We have this to offer to you for consideration.

We will send THE RESTITUTION one year to NEW Subscribers for $1.00. We will start them as soon as received and give credit to the end of 1903.

With a little persistent effort in presenting the paper to those you know who are not taking it, you can induce them to try it for $1.00. If you want some sample papers we will gladly supply them to you, and our list can be increased by 1000 names at once.

It can be done easily if you will act on this suggestion, and get those near you interested. If each reader would get a new name our list would be doubled at once.

It would seem as if every reader of THE RESTITUTION could exert influence enough to get one more new name if the effort was made. Will you try it? If the first person you suggest it to does not respond, do not be discouraged, but try some one else. Perhaps the one you least expect will answer quickest.

Did you ever stop to figure up how many words are contained in our paper in a year? You will be surprised at the number of sermons it contains. There is variety too. There is doctrine and the practical, encouragement and cheer, and comfort for the distressed. Each phase of teaching would make several good sized books during the year. You can do no work that yields as large a return for the money expended as by sending THE RESTITUTION to a friend for a year.

We ask you to go at this work and push it along with a will. The time is getting short, and if you can be the means in God's hands of gaining one more for the Master, it will pay for all your labor. We will send several of the back papers to all new subscribers so each will get more than the current year.

Will you not start right away and send one name, and next week when that person gets his paper, some one else will hear of it, and you can send another subscriber.

Poetry.

A Song in the Night.

Be still, my heart, and rest!
Upon the storm-tossed breast
The moon is shining in a silver flood
And o'er the flowers in sun and cloud,
Gleaming with myriad diamond dew-drops dressed!
Be still, my heart, and rest!

Rest, sweetly rest, and sleep.
Nor let care-haggard keep
The fetters of its weary, binding thrall.
Trust thou the Lord of all
To rule the planning in his love most deep.
Rest, sweetly rest, and sleep!

Sleep on, nor dree no fear.
Thy Father standeth here.
Who wants celestial fragile lives of ours
As over the birds and flowers;
In day or darkness to abide to more—
Sleep on, nor dream of fear!

Probation in the Age to Come.

William Miller held and taught the doctrine of a universal conflagration of our earth; that this would preclude the possibility of any human beings in the mortal state surviving the dreadful catastrophe; that only the church would be saved, it having been caught up into the air and housed in the "secret chambers" (Isa. xxvi. 20) while the fire below would be consuming every combustible thing and melting the solid earth. The Advent church whose views of Bible teaching, is voiced, in the main, by the World's Crisis and Our Hope, still hold this view relative to the final consummation of God's plan. There may be some exceptions among its expounders. A late editor of one of their papers stated that nations would exist for a time beyond the Lord's advent. He would be obliged logically to place the conflagration of the heavens and earth later in point of time than Miller and those who still reflect his notion, placed it. The editor of Our Hope after referring to the theory of Rabourdin a French scientist on the internal fires of the earth quotes a few Scripture passages in proof of the correctness of this scientist's conclusion. I here give the closing words of Rabourdin. "Perhaps our suffering and corrupt humanity is fated to disappear at some future time in the bursting forth of some gigantic furnace of this kind. Perhaps!" To this paragraph closing with "perhaps!" the editor of Our Hope responds, "Undoubtedly corrupt humanity will disappear in just this way at some future time not far distant;" then raises the question, "But who believes it?" and answers, "A few Adventist world burners and fanatics." What the cautious French writer put down as the possible fate of corrupt humanity this editor of Our Hope says undoubtedly this will be its fate, meaning of course by the term humanity the entire living population of the globe minus the church, which preparatory to setting the world on fire had been snatched away beyond the reach of the flames. He further says of this scientist that by "scientific reasoning he hit upon the truth revealed in God's Word." If said editor has rightly apprehended the meaning of the passages he quotes—if he has not misapplied them then Rabourdin hit upon the truth, though himself not absolutely sure of it. We who not only doubt, but deny the world burning theory, call in question the application of the texts quoted as proof of a universal burning, at the coming of our Lord. That the reader may judge as to the correctness of his application I here give the texts quoted by the editor of Our Hope: "Behold the Lord maketh the earth empty; maketh it waste, and turneth it upside down, and scattereth abroad the inhabitants thereof * * * the land shall be utterly emptied and utterly spoiled, for the Lord has spoken this Word * * * Therefore the inhabitants of the earth are burned and few men are left." Isa. xxiv. 1, 3, 6. Another passage from the same chapter, "Fear and the pit, and the snare, are upon thee, O inhabitant of the earth. And it shall come to pass that he who fleeth from the noise of the fear shall fall into the pit; and he that cometh up out of the midst of the pit shall be taken by the snare: for the windows from on high are open and the foundations of the earth do shake." Isa. xxiv. 17, 18. Admitting that said editor is right in placing the fulfillment of this 24th chapter of Isaiah at the time of our Lord's advent, it may be seen at a glance, that the language emplored here cannot denote a destruction as complete as Rabourdin imagined might be the possible fate of corrupt humanity, which fate said editor believes will undoubtedly overtake it. The words and phrases used by the prophet to set forth the catastrophe here contemplated will not bear the weight of Miller's theory of a universal world burning nor Rabourdin's "the bursting forth of some gigantic furnace." The careful reader observes that the destruction described here under a variety of terms, is local and not universal. The first verse represents "the inhabitants as scattered abroad," showing that there is territory outside of the earth (land) made "waste" and "empty"—to which or into which they are scattered. In the 3rd verse the Hebrew word "eretz" which in verse 1 is translated earth, is here translated "land" and said to be "utterly emptied and spoiled." In the world, the people languish." v. 4. They are not literally burned up as Miller taught and Rabourdin imagined. The whole drift of the prophecy shows a destruction local and partial instead of universal. In verse 6 where it is affirmed that the "inhabitants are burned," it is also affirmed that a few men are left; and a preceding sentence says of these "they are desolate." In view of the change the land passed over that land, under figure of speech, the wine is said to mourn and the vine to languish. In consequence of this "the merry hearted sigh." The theory of world burning leaves no room for this. The wine, the vine and the merry hearted could not survive the flames. Again, v. 10, localizes the destruction: "The city of confusion is broken down; every house is shut up that no man may come in." In the streets of this city there is a crying for wine. v. 11. The condition of things as here foreshown is utterly out of harmony with the notion of Mr. Miller and that of Adventists in general. If it could be shown that the prophecy of this 24th chapter of Isaiah belongs to the closing scenes of this age and to the epoch of the Lord's return, even then it not only fails to prove the theory of world-burning, but sets before us a condition of things at variance with such a view. However, nearly the whole of the chapter was fulfilled in the history of the past. The last verse bringing to view the glorious reign of the Lord in Mount Zion after the punishment of the host of the high ones and the kings of the earth, after the many days of imprisonment. I find no support in this chapter, nor in the next for the notion of the destruction of all nations so complete that none would remain; in fact, this 25th chapter teaches that there will be nations existing after the Lord enters on his reign, "to whom he will make a feast of fat things," and "destroy the vail spread over all nations."

Short Sermons. No 32

That yoke of bondage, what is it? Now therefore why tempt ye God, to put a yoke upon the neck of the disciples, which neither our fathers nor we were able to bear? Peter. Acts xv. 10. Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage. Paul. Gal. v. 1. This troublesome question whatever it was, was at one time settled by the apostles and elders. Yet it has come up at various times, from that day to this, to trouble the disciples. Let us hunt for it, and mark it, if we find it. Yet if we cannot tell what it was, and doubtless many cannot, then we would not know who or where to mark. Let us make an effort and note the result. And certain men which came down from Judea taught the brethren, and said, Except ye be circumcised after the manner of Moses, ye cannot be saved. That is plain and to the point, so far, so good. Now Dr. Luke, is that all you know on this question under consideration? Please tell us what you know about this trouble in the early church. Listen, and learn more. But there rose up certain of the sect of the Pharisees which believed, saying, that it was needful to circumcise them, and to command them to keep the law of Moses. Again, Forasmuch as we have heard that certain which went out from us have troubled you with words, subverting your souls, saying, Ye must be circumcised, and keep the law, to whom we gave no such command. Thus far it seems plain that circumcision and keeping the law of Moses was taught by some who believed, and was resented by others. This is what caused a commotion in the church, and made it necessary for the apostles and elders to meet in conference at Jerusalem, for to consider of this matter. And after mature deliberations they decided that these things were not necessary to salvation. Later on this same old trouble came up in the Galatian church, and many of the brethren were affected by it, so much so that Paul's letter to them was almost wholly devoted to its refutation. Read this letter carefully. In the 3, 4 and 5 chap[ters] [he] gives some hard licks. Hear [him] say, O foolish Galatians, who hath bewitched you, that ye should not obey the truth, before whose eyes Jesus Christ hath been evidently set forth, crucified among you? Then in chapter 5 he says stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage. Behold, I Paul say unto you, that if ye be circumcised, Christ shall profit you nothing. For I testify again to every man that is circumcised that he is a debtor to do the whole law. Here Paul tells us plainly what that yoke of bondage is, and it is no small light affair, or else we and our fathers could have endured it. Now if you can tell how much was included in the whole law, then you can tell how big and heavy the yoke was. And I am just simple enough to believe that the Sabbath was no small part of that yoke. Hear what James has to say in that conference at Jerusalem on this point. For Moses of old time, hath in every city them that preach him, being read in the synagogues every sabbath day. These words coming right on the heels of that sentence of liberty and freedom from that yoke of bondage indicates clearly that James regarded the sabbath as a part of the law of Moses and also of that yoke of bondage. Verse 21, see also xiii. 26, 27. Again, to do no work on that day, and to keep it holy as directed is no easy task. To kindle no fires and do no cooking, and bear no burdens on that day is no light affair. And to refrain from thine own ways and thine own pleasures, and thine own words, is quite a task, try it and see. To cause thy son and daughter, thy man and maid servant, thine ox and thy cattle, and the stranger within thy gates, to rest, is no little light affair. And its friends are much like those of old, they profess great reverence for the sabbath and say and do not, and keep it according to their tradition. This was their leaven of, you know what. They thank the Lord for the holy sabbath, and imagine they are keeping it holy, when in fact they are violating it every week. See how consistent they are. If I chop wood or make hay on that day, I am a sinner and must be lost, unless I repent and reform, but they can kindle fires and cook, and drive their teams for miles and miles, and write letters and receive and send off mail on that day, and talk about riding upon the high places of the earth, and have a right to the tree of life, and a home in that holy city. If they should take such liberties with other commandments, what kind of men would they be? This is not the kind of liberty and freedom that Paul advises his brethren to stand fast or firm in. The Master nor his apostles ever preached a sermon or made an argument in behalf of the sabbath. And when they met in the synagogues on the Sabbath day it was not with his disciples, but was with Moses' disciples. Not to substitute with them, as they were blind bitter enemies of his, but to open their eyes and teach them if possible a better way, much as Sabbatarian ministers meet with the people on Sundays, only the order is just reversed. I am aware this yoke is just as hard on the Sunday Sabbath, if it be the Sabbath as any other. Now brethren, let me conclude by saying unto one and all, look the ground all over, and give this old yoke a fair trial by wearing it as dictated, and then you will learn how hard and heavy it is to bear, and can much better see the difference, and the propriety of our Master's loving words of advice, when he says, Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light. Kindly submitted for consideration.

Table Talk.

THE KINGDOM.

A kingdom is a territory or country of a king, the undivided territory under the dominion of a king or monarch. In Scripture it would be termed the government or universal dominion of God, which would include the whole world. God's kingdom is to extend from sea to sea, and from the river unto the end of the earth.

In a kingdom there would certainly have to be a ruler and territory, in which would have to be subjects to be ruled over, and officers to administer the government. Of course there would have to be a place, or seat of government, as it is termed, and we are informed that the law shall go forth from Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem, and Zion and Jerusalem are on this earth; and the first mention of a kingdom in Scripture is in 1 Chron. xxix. 11, which reads thus, "Thine, O Lord, is the greatness and the power and the glory and the victory and the majesty, for all that is in the heavens and in the earth is thine; thine is the kingdom, O Lord, and thou art exalted as head above all."

The next mention is in Psa. xxii. 28, "For the kingdom is the Lord's, and he is governor among the nations." The next mention is Psa. xiv. 6, "Thy throne, of God, is forever and ever; the sceptre of thy kingdom is a right sceptre." Again Psa. cxlv. 11, "They shall speak of the glory of thy kingdom, and talk of thy power, to make known to the sons of men his mighty acts, and the glorious majesty of his kingdom. Thy kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and thy dominion endureth throughout all generations. In Daniel we have a history of King Nebuchadnezzar having a dream of the great image. This great image whose brightness is excellent, stood before thee, and the form was terrible. Daniel proceeded to describe the image to the king, and make known the interpretation of it—the four kingdoms, and in verse 44 says, "And in the days of those kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all other kingdoms, and it shall stand forever." The foregoing passages have reference to God's kingdom, and now comes in Christ's connection, mention of which is made in Isa. ix. 6, "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given, and the government shall be upon his shoulders, and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David and upon his kingdom, to order it and to establish it with judgment and with justice, from henceforth even forever. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this."

Again in Isa. xi. 5, "And righteousness shall be the girdle of his loins, and faithfulness the girdle of his reins." The wolf shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid, and the calf and the young lion and the fatling together, and a little child shall lead them; and the cow and the bear shall feed, their young ones shall lie down together; and the lion shall eat straw like the ox."

That would certainly be a peaceable kingdom, for we never have seen anything like that come to pass, but it certainly will be fulfilled when the Son of Man comes.

Again in John xviii. 36, Jesus said "My kingdom is not of this world—if my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight, that I should not be delivered to the Jews. But now is my kingdom not from hence."

In 2 Peter i. 10, "Wherefore the rather brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure, for if you do these things, ye shall never fall, for so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly in o the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ."

Again as they were traveling to a certain village, a certain man came unto him and said, "Lord, I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest; and he said to other different ones to follow him, but they all had some excuse; one to bury his father, another to go and bid them farewell at home, etc., but Jesus said unto them, no man having put his hand to the plow and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God."

Now brothers and sisters, it stands us in hand to try and so live, that when the just King comes to reign we may be found worthy to be with him in his kingdom.

W. D. TOW[illegible]

Dear ones of like precious faith:

It is very encouraging to us in these perilous times, to hear of your faith and love for Jesus of Nazareth the King of the Jews; and to have his promise who was led as a sheep to the slaughter, and as a lamb dumb before his shearers he openeth not his mouth, saying, I will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able to bear, but will with the temptation make a way for your escape.

The Lord knoweth the heart of all, and has promised to give his holy spirit to them that ask him. Look at the eunuch as he travels and reads: "Who shall declare his generation, for his life is taken from the earth." In his humiliation his judgment was taken away. The judge, Pontius Pilate judged Jesus guiltless, and washed his hands. But this judgment was taken away, and they said Let his blood be upon us and our children. Their request was granted, but Oh, what an awful mistake they made, judge and all.

Can it be truthfully said of any of us, as it was of the Athenians, that ye are too superstitious? Have we not in the past seen the inscription—To the unknown God? As one of old let us declare that God hath appointed a day, or an age, in which to rule world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained; and as an assurance of this, and that he shall die no more, God raised Jesus from the dead.

See again the link which connects the believers in God's name to the gospel of his Son. Mal. iii. 10; Matt. i. 1, and in connection with these Scriptures read Mat. iii. 12; iv. 23; v. 5; vi. 10; xxiv. 14; xxv. 31-41; Luke i. 32, 33; Acts i. 6, 8; ii. 22-36; iii. 13 26; iv. 2; viii 12; ix. 18; x. 36-48; Mat. xiii. 19; Acts xiii. 22-37, and for the sure mercies of David see Acts xv. 13-17.

Pray for us in Israel's hope.

R. C. & H. A. HUMPHREY.

There is nothing we may know so certainly as spiritual things. God intends that we shall know what we do know, so that we shall know that we know it. It don't matter what I was taught by the Quakers, but everything depends on what I have learned to know from God. Moses with all his learning was no good. God taught him.—Seth C. Rees.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Remember, that it is to the humble that God gives grace. That is his way. Be thankful for all that humbles.

"The way to the crown is by the cross! To the mountain—'tis by the valley! To exaltation—'tis he that humbleth himself."

If you walk by faith you will never live in sin; faith in God purifies the heart, and sets the whole force of the mind against evil.

Be not stingy of kind words and pleasing acts, for such are fragrant gifts, whose perfume will gladden the heart and sweeten the life of all who hear and receive them.

"A man who makes calculation and provision for this life only, is like a sea captain who, starting on a voyage to Europe, lays in provisions sufficient to last him until he gets past the light house, and out into the open sea."

By an error we gave the wrong address in notice of call for Ohio State Conference. We give it right in this paper. Also information referred to on the outside pages of this paper were printed, states that the meetings will be held in Cleveland, O. This is yet given.

Prayer that is not based on God's promises and offered in the name of Jesus Christ is like the clicking of a telegraphing instrument that is not attached to the transmitting wire. The sound is all right, and the petition may be understood on earth, but it will not be transmitted to heaven.

"What is the difference between being good and being bad? It may be answered that the good do not yield to temptation and the bad do. This is often the distinction between the good and the bad in regard to act and deed: but it does not constitute the difference between being good and being bad."

"Social opinion is like a sharp knife. There are foolish people who regard it only with terror, and dare not meddle with it. There are more foolish people, who, in rashness or defiance, seize it by the blade and get cut and mangled for their pains. And there are wise people who grasp it discreetly and boldly by the handle, and use it to carve out their own purposes."

Current Signs.

Current signs indicate that the coming of the Lord is drawing very near. How near we do not know, but if we are wise we will take care that that day does not overtake us as a thief. The world at large will be altogether unprepared for the event; for we are told that "when they say peace and safety, then sudden destruction shall come upon them." 1 Thes. v. 3. Christ himself, in speaking of that time, said,—"As the days of Noah were, so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be. For as in the days before the flood they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noah entered into the ark, and knew not until the flood came and took them all away; so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be."

The brethren of Christ would do well to keep on the watchtower, lest coming suddenly, the Lord will find them sleeping. Let them obey their Master's command to "watch and pray always, that they may be accounted worthy to escape all the things that come to pass, and to stand before the Son of Man." Matt. xxi. 36.

To those of our readers who are interested in these things, but who have not yet united themselves to that "only name given whereby men may be saved," we would say, Make haste! Time is short; delays are dangerous. The Lord Jesus is about to be revealed "in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of his Son." 1 Thes. i. 8.

The righteous judgments of God are about to be poured out upon a wicked world. How do you stand in relation to these mighty and terrible events? We entreat you to seriously consider. God has provided an ark of safety, a refuge from the storms in the person of his Son. He is willing and ready to receive you. "Him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out." "The Spirit and the Bride say come: and let him that is athirst come, and whosoever will let him take of the water of life freely." Rev. xxii. 17.

A Complete Library.

"To obtain a library of reliable books, upon a variety of subjects, is too expensive for the majority of those who have to earn their bread by labor, whether manual or mental. But it is not generally known that a complete library of books upon almost every conceivable topic, can be purchased (nicely bound,) for one dollar. The books comprise discourses and essays upon political economy,—a complete history of the most wonderful nation on earth,—the origin and development of almost every nation under the sun,—the earliest authentic history of the earth,—the solution of the Eastern question,—the finest poetry ever written, the most interesting stories ever penned,—some speeches of the greatest men in the world's history, the finest collection of maxims and moral laws extant, marvellous instances of faith-healing, and the biographies of the world's worthies.

It is almost needless to say that this wonderful library is none other than the collection of books known as THE BIBLE. What book contains grander discourses upon political economy than the Bible, which from the beginning to the end is a history of the kingdom of God, which will eventually subdue all kingdoms and exist for ever? What national history is more wonderful or interesting than that of the Jews, who have outlived all other ancient peoples, and who will yet rise to be the foremost nation in the world? No other book is so reliable as the Bible in matters pertaining to ancient history, and no other historical records date back so far as the books of Moses. The Jewish prophets have foretold the ultimate settlement of the Eastern question, and the destiny of every nation under heaven.

The Psalms of David form the most sublime poetry ever written, and the stories of Joseph, Pharaoh, Samson, Ruth, Esther, Daniel, and Jonah are unequalled. They illustrate the saying that "Truth is stranger than fiction." The parables and discourses of Christ are the finest on record, and even his enemies were compelled to admit that "never man spake like this man." John vii. 46.

Those who will make themselves acquainted with this book will be well repaid in this life, by finding a priceless treasure which will never grow stale, or cease to yield instruction, and if its precepts are carried out faithfully, an endless life in the kingdom of God will be the reward for the attention given to God's wonderful Revelation—THE BIBLE."

Scientific Notes.

Instinct is usually defined as the faculty of acting in such a way as to produce certain ends, without foresight of the ends, and previous education in the performance. That instincts as thus defined exist on an enormous scale in the animal kingdom needs no proof. They are the functional correlatives of structure. With the presence of a certain organ goes, one may say, almost always, a native aptitude for its use. In a work on Instinct, P. A. Chadbourn says:—

Has the bird a gland for the secretion of oil? She knows instinctively how to press the oil from the gland, and apply it to the feathers. Has the rattlesnake the grooved tooth and gland of poison? He knows without instruction how to make both structure and function most effective against his enemies. Has the silk worm the function of secreting the fluid silk? At the proper time she winds the cocoon such as she has never seen, as thousands have done before, and thus without instruction, pattern, or experience, forms a safe abode for herself in the period of transformation. Has the hawk talons? She knows by instinct how to wield them effectively against the helpless quarry."—James' Psychology, Vol. II. ch. 24, p. 383.

"It is often said that man is distinguished from the lower animals by having a much smaller assortment of native instincts and impulses than they, but this is a great mistake..... If we compare him with the Mammalia, we are forced to confess that he is appealed to by a much larger array of objects than any other mammal; that his reactions on these objects are characteristic and determinate in a very high degree. The monkeys, and especially the anthropoids, are the only beings that approach him in their analytic curiosity and width of imitativeness. His instinctive impulses, it is true, get overlaid by the secondary reactions due to his superior reasoning power; but thus man loses the simply instinctive demeanor. But the life of instinct is only disguised in him, not lost."—James Talks to Teachers, ch. 6, p. 43.

The Kingdom.

The kingdom of the thousand years is but a transitional period between the purely animal and purely spiritual ages. It will blend the elements of both. It will exhibit the perfection of eternal ages in the Lord Jesus and the saints who will be immortal and incorruptible, and exemplify the imperfection of the human age in the mortal population who will constitute the subjects of their rule. Both will co-exist for a thousand years, and will constitute a stage of things as superior to the present dispensation as it will be inferior to the glory ages beyond. The kingdom of God will lead us by a bridge of a thousand years from the age of human defection to the time of a perfect restoration to the bosom of the Deity."

Where Are the Dead?

To you, dear friends, who are preaching that as soon as the breath leaves one of your faith, that they soar away to heaven, to be with Jesus, the Anointed, again I ask you, how can you conscientiously preach to the rising generation those errors, in face of such positive declarations of God through his chosen agents?

Jer. xxiii. 28. "The prophet that hath a dream, let him tell a dream, and he that hath my word let him speak my word faithfully. What is the chaff to the wheat? saith the Lord." And dear Brother, in the flesh dont you think it will be the wisest plan to search the Scriptures to see if you have any warrant for teaching such doctrine?

Now let us see just what is said on the subject by the blessed Master.

In John iii. 13, when Jesus was talking to Nicodemus he told that worthy Jew, that no man had ascended up to heaven. Now friends, this conversation was about four thousand years after people had been dying, and their is no revelation from God since to the contrary.

Again, in John vii. 33, 34, Jesus informs the Jews that where he was going they could not go. Yes, and in John viii. 21, in order that they might understand him Jesus repeats his words. But objector will say the Master was talking to sinners. Very good, but now go to John xiii. 33, and you will find that Jesus informs his beloved ones that as he had said to the Jews, so now he also said to them, That where he was going even they could not come. But objector will say he told Peter he could not go then but should follow him after. Yes but if you will look at the contextual reading in John xxvii 18, 19, and 2 Peter i. 14, you will find that Jesus was telling Peter by what death he would die, and we are told that he was crucified with his head down, a short time before the destruction of Jerusalem, and in explanation of the 18th verse Webster says it was the custom in Rome to put the necks of those who were to be crucified into a yoke and to extend the hands and fasten them to the ends and thus they were led through the streets on the way to be crucified. Diagiott. And again, Jesus said, "The meek should inherit the earth." Matt. v. 5. And in Matt. xvi. 27, he said he was coming here to reward every man according to his works. Also Matt. xxvi. 31, Jesus informs us that he is coming here to earth again. And could you, my fellow-traveler to the judgment seat of God, I say, could you realize the awful import of Paul's words in Gal. i. 8, 9, "But though we or an angel from heaven preach any other gospel unto you than that which I have preached unto you, let him be accursed." Read the 9th verse also.

Now then, see just what Paul did preach, 2 Tim. iv. 1-8; 1 Cor. xv. 17, 18, 32. Thus you find that Paul knew nothing about going to heaven at death or any other time. But listen to that awful curse he through the Spirit calls down upon men for preaching anything aside from what he and the other apostles preached.

Dear friends, wouldn't you just as soon live here with the curse removed and Jesus and his kingdom here as to be all the time striving to go where you are positively told you cannot come? "If I go away, I will come again," said Jesus. "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my kingdom, (or throne) as I have overcome and have set down with my Father in his throne." Please look this up.

Yours, in hope,
J. Anthony.

Believe on the Lord Jesus.

We here the churches of today asking the people to believe on Christ and yet they fail to point out in a definite way the Christ, the Son of the living God. I was reared a Methodist and was taught to believe that my conversion was wrought in some mysterious way. It could only be reached through much distress and agony. Not knowing a better way I sought that one. When the better way was pointed out and I saw it, how different I found it. It is peculiarly adapted to our nature and our relation to God. It is certainly true that our relation to the first Adam is by generation, a begettal and a natural birth. Our relation to the second Adam (Christ) is by regeneration (a rebirth). Christ taught Nicodemus, "Except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of God." Further he says, "Except a man be born of the water and of the Spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." To be born again, or from above, certainly means more than our conversion or our turning about and marching in a different direction. For mark the fact stated in the 8th verse of this chapter (St. John iii.), "The wind bloweth where it pleaseth and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh and whither it goeth; so (in like manner) is every one that is born of the Spirit." After this birth our bodies will not be weighed down to this earth, but we shall walk and not faint, we shall mount up as an eagle's wing. We then shall possess our spiritual bodies like unto Christ. Paul says, Rom. i. 4, "He (Christ) was declared to be the Son of God by his holy spiritual nature and by his resurrection from the dead. In the same manner will we be declared his sons.

Is believing on Christ merely accepting the statement that he is the Son of God? What follows the statement that Paul makes here? "And they spake unto him the Word of the Lord, and all that were in the house Paul preached to the jailor and his household the Word of the Lord, and they believed and were baptized straightway. Can we determine what the Word here spoken of is? Only by the Book. Peter on Pentecost declared that God raised Christ from the dead to sit on David's throne. Acts ii. 30. Is not this in harmony with the angel's statement? "The Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David," etc. Again, Peter preached the same "Word of the Lord" to Cornelius, saying, Acts x. 37, "That Word I say ye know which was published throughout all Judea and began from Galilee after the baptism which John preached." You will notice Mark i. 14, that Jesus preached the gospel of the kingdom of God. In Luke ix. 2, he sent his apostles out to preach the kingdom of God. Ver. 6, "And they departed preaching the gospel." We then concluded that to preach the gospel that Christ preached is to preach the kingdom of God. If we preach a gospel that does not seat Christ on David's throne we preach another gospel, for which Paul says, "Let him be accursed." Let us be able by diligent search to determine what the gospel of the Son of God is. After having done this let us obey it by being baptized into the name of the Lord Jesus. For there is no other name under heaven whereby man can be saved. Let us not be deceived by the statement that you need only believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. It embraces the promises that God gave to Abraham and David. It embraces the restoring again the kingdom to Israel. Acts i. 6, "And the kingdoms of this earth have become the kingdom of our Lord and his Christ; and he shall reign for ever and ever." Rev. xi. 15, "And the kingdom and dominion and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him." Dan. vii 27.

These Scriptures contain the gospel preached to Abraham, that the nations should be blessed in his seed, whom Paul says is Christ. Not that the preaching of the gospel today is to nations, but to individuals to make of them the seed of Abraham. For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female; for ye are all one in Christ Jesus. Now mark the conclusion that the apostle makes: And if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to promise. According to what promise? See Gal. iii. 16-18. Read the whole chapter and see how important the apostle considered this promise to be.

But they say, Did not Abraham receive this promise in his life time? We would answer No. In Acts vii. 5, Stephen says, God gave him none inheritance in it, no, not so much as to set his foot on. Yet he promised that he would give it to him for a possession, and to his seed after him, when as yet he had no child.

Paul says in Heb. xi. By faith Abraham sojourned in the land of promise, as in a strange country, dwelling in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob the heirs with him of the same promise. Do not these Scriptures teach plainly that Abraham was promised land and eternal life to enjoy it? Also that he died not having received it. Therefore to fulfil that promise he must be raised from the dead (made immortal).

Christ has been raised that he shall rule over the house of Jacob forever, and unto his kingdom there shall be no end. Luke i. 33. To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne.

Let us not follow cunningly devised fables, but accept and retain the gospel of Christ, of which Paul was not ashamed, because it is the power of God unto the salvation of every one that believeth.

In conclusion permit me to ask you to "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved."

Your brother waiting patiently for Christ's return.

D. C. Robison.

Dear Brother Underwood:

I have just returned from holding a series of meetings at East Plum River, Carroll Co., Illinois, where I preached seven discourses to large and attentive audiences.

In this locality, preaching services are held in a schoolhouse which at its best is inconvenient alike for speaker and auditors, but not-with-standing this, the building was well filled on each occasion and crowded on Sunday. We have about twenty-five brethren living in the vicinity. These do not have the advantage of regular preaching for various reasons among which I may mention the absence of a convenient meeting place. This is one of the best fields in northern Illinois for evangelistic labors. A splendid harmony exists among the brethren, people of other denominations come in to hear the truth, and those who have no particular inclinations toward the Scriptures come out to hear what is to be said. The brethren here have been stirred up to that degree of enthusiasm that they have decided to build a church. This has been decided upon. The needed funds for the most part have been raised, but still there is room for any one to help. If you live where you have the advantages of a church home, you should do in brotherly kindness what you can to help these brethren to a church home. If you have not these advantages and live where you cannot have them, why not help those who are struggling to get them. There can be a strong church worked up at East Plum River. Those desiring to donate to this cause may send money to Martin Mitchell, Lanark, Ill.

S. J. Lindsay, Evangelist.

If blasts of ridicule and showers of abuse dash in the face of the Christian, he is to take it as silently as the bronze figure takes the tempest. That which cuts him off from man joins him more closely to the Lord.—A. J. Gordon.

Misunderstandings.

How many griefs and troubles which come to us in this world are simply the result of misunderstanding. We think people say what they never did say, or mean what they never did mean. We count men unreasonable and harsh; we fume and fret about matters which do not go to our liking; we complain about what men have said or done; and all this while the persons whom we are blaming meant nothing of the kind that we surmise, and know nothing of our tribulations.

This is one reason why persons who have grievances should go at once to those concerned. They are often the only ones who know the truth, who can explain the misunderstanding, correct the error, or right the wrong. They can tell what they intended to say, or intended to do; and in a great many instances we shall find, on going to the proper parties, that we have utterly misapprehended the facts in the case, have judged others unkindly, and have made ourselves miserable for nothing. In many a case we shall find that we have taken offence where no offence was intended; that we have counted words harsh which were kindly meant; that light and tripping phrases which were carelessly thrown off, have been taken to heart as they never should have been; and that we have made ourselves and others miserable, when there was no need of it whatever.

How many such little misunderstandings stick, like a splinter in one's finger, until they make mischief and trouble that can not be easily remedied, and in how many cases five minutes' frank, honest talk would have settled the whole matter. The policy of silence at such times is a very dangerous policy, and many hearts have bled and suffered when a word would have healed them.—H. L. H.

Things to Forget.

If you would increase your happiness and prolong your life, forget your neighbor's faults. Forget the slander you may have ever heard. Forget the temptations. Forget the fault-finding, and give a little thought to the cause which provoked it. Forget the peculiarities of your friends, and only remember the good points which make you fond of them. Forget all personal quarrels or histories you may have heard by accident, and which, if repeated, would seem a thousand times worse than they are. Blot out as far as possible all the disagreeables of life; they will come, but they will grow larger when you remember them, and the constant thought of the acts of meanness, or, worse still, malice, will only tend to make you more familiar with them. Obliterate everything disagreeable from yesterday; start out with a clean sheet for today, and write upon it, for sweet memory's sake, only these things which are lovely and loveable.

Obituary.

Emeline A. daughter of E. B. and Mary A. Perry, was born Feb. 12th, 1845, in Shelby Co. Indiana, and died Oct. 22, 1902, near Seybert, Mo.

She with her parents went to Lyon Co. Kan. in 1859, where she was married Nov. 8, 1860 to Wm. Updegraff. She was the mother of seven children, six of them preceding her to the grave.

At the age of twelve or thirteen she united with the M. E. church, maintaining her connection with them till 1890 when she was immersed into the all saving name by Brother John Foore.

She was an affectionate and faithful wife and mother, and lived a consistent Christian life, holding fast her hope and trust in the gospel of the kingdom to the end.

She leaves a husband in his seventieth year, one son, one brother and two sisters to mourn for her.

We ask an interest in the prayers of all the faithful, that we may hold out to the end of the race.

Married.

At the home of the bride's parents at East Plum River, Jan. 21, 1903, Mr. Irvin E. Flickinger and Miss Ella Frederick. The bride is a daughter of Brother and Sister John Frederick. These young people start in life with good health and many friends. May their pathway be strewn with the comforts and joys of this life, and may they soon learn that these may be had only upon payment of the price—fidelity to God. The well wishes of their many friends go with them.

A New Year Greeting.

Dear brethren and sisters,
A greeting I send,
To cheer lonely pilgrims
In the time of the end.

We are walking in the valley
Of sorrow and woe,
We meet with temptations
Where ever we go.

Kind friends forsake us
For choosing the narrow way,
But the light grows brighter
As we near eternal day.

We cannot "read our titles clear
To mansions in the skies,"
But are waiting for the kingdom
And hope to win the prize.

We have no immortal souls to save,
No home in heaven above,
We'll be content to dwell on earth
Where all will be peace and love.

Let us put on the whole armor,
And keep in the narrow way,
That we may be found worthy
Of the first resurrection day

May our lamps all be burning
And well filled with oil,
While we wait for redemption
From suffering and toil.

We pray for the kingdom,
May we all enter in,
And forever escape
From temptation and sin.

OUR NEW YEAR GREETING LETTERS.

Brother Underwood:

The letters of greeting to the family of God, by adoption, are very interesting, and also comforting. May we all be ready as a family when our Lord doth come; accepted of him, and granted an abundant entrance into his glorious kingdom, is my earnest prayer.

MATILDA WOODBERY.

Brother Underwood:

I wish to send a few words to help cheer those of like faith on their journey to the land of promise. My heart has been cheered by the words of so many dear ones. Brothers and Sisters, press on to the mark of our high calling in Christ Jesus, who has so loved us that he freely gave his life to redeem us from our lost and ruined condition, that we were placed in by our first parents, and added to by our own short-comings. What a glorious future awaits us if we only prove faithful to the end of the race. Kings and priests with eternal life is the reward of those that diligently seek his face. O what a glorious prospect. Men and women think it a great honor to be rulers in this wicked world, but it is nothing to be compared to the glory that awaits the children of God. So, dear friends dont get discouraged if the time does seem to be long. We have looked for him for a good many years, but his promise is sure. "I will come and receive you to myself" is what he says, and he is faithful that has promised. Pray for me that I may prove faithful and win a crown that fadeth not away.

Your brother in Christ.

Dear brothers and sisters:

How it cheers my heart to see the names of so many of the loved ones in the love feast, and how my heart rejoices to know that Christ is soon coming; for the signs all point to the near approach of our Savior. The year 1902 is passed and gone and to some it has left aching hearts for the ones gone from the fireside never to return till Christ shall appear; but to us who remain let us draw nearer to that precious One who suffered, bled, and died that we might have life and that more abundantly. Loved ones in the Lord, let us stand firm through the coming year "Speaking one to another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making melody with your heart to the Lord, giving thanks always for all things in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, even the Father." It fills our hearts to overflowing to see that dear Bro. Woodward remembers us who are so far away and how much greater will be our joy to be remembered by our loving Savior when he shall come and say to the hearts who are longing and waiting, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant." May the blessing of God be with you all. Pray for us.

Your Sister in Christ.

Dear ones of like precious faith:

How glad I am that Brother Underwood will give us the privilege of writing one another a New Year's greeting through our dear, old RESTITUTION. I would be glad to read New Year's greeting from every one that is looking for and watching for the Master. The year 1902 is gone, is numbered with the past. Let us, dear ones, look back over the past year and see wherein we have erred, and at this the beginning of the New Year let us resolve with vows renewed to serve the Lord with heart and soul and strength and mind. We are sure of happiness, yea, eternal happiness if we only trust in him, and keep his commandments. He has left us many great and precious promises if we will only prove faithful unto the end. He is faithful that has promised. He never made a promise that he will not fulfill. When the mother of Zebidee's children asked him that her sons might sit one on his right hand and the other sit on his left hand in his kingdom, his answer was, It is not mine to give. When his disciples asked him, What shall we receive? He answered, Ye shall sit on thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel, which promise he will soon fulfill. Oh happy that day. Our King may come before another New Year's day, and then will the promise to Abrahmn be fulfilled, "In thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." Dear ones, let us live near to God and he will live near to us. When we see the signs that speak in trumpet tones that the night is far spent, the day is breaking and soon we will see king in his beauty, let us have our lamps trimmed and burning, for soon we will hear the joyful cry, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him." May each and every one that reads these lines receive a welcome "Well done," is my prayer. I ask an interest in your prayers that I may be an overcomer.

Yours, looking for the Master.

Editor Restitution:

I feel like sending a word of greeting to the dear ones scattered abroad as it was the earnest request that all write. I am a little late; but if all should write at once there would not be room in your columns to publish all at the same time. Some of my brightest hours are when I am reading these letters from loved ones telling how they are progressing. Our little church here at Browntown, Va., is getting on fine. It is true we do not have much preaching during the winter months; but we do not expect it as there are no ministers living near. We have the words of the apostles and prophets in our reach and we can read and build up our most holy faith by so-doing. It has been my great aim ever since I became acquainted with the Word of God, to deal gently with the worldly and professed ones when I attempt in my feeble way to handle the Word, lest I should drive them into outer darkness, never to return. Oh what a fearful thing if I thought I was the cause of one single person not coming to the place of learning the blessed truths. Oh how careful each and every one of us should be, and especially with the one who has lately started in the faith, lest they turn back. We read in the most Holy Word of God that the last stage of man will be worse than the first. May God help me in my weakness to push forward always and be able to enter the kingdom. Let us all be meek and lowly and willing to be led. It is found in the Holy Writ that "He that thinketh himself great is the least in the sight of God." I wish you a Happy New Year and firmness to do good for the cause. If any one spitefully abuse you try as much as possible to let it go into one ear and out the other. I ask an interest in all your prayers for my dear husband and myself that we may be faithful to the end, and be among the faithful ones. I send Christian Greeting to all.

Beloved in the Lord, Greeting:

We are just beginning to pass the mile posts of 1903. We only know how the few brief days have been spent. The journey, the seemingly long, unknown journey lies stretched before us. Who are we working for this year? Self, or the Master? This journey may never be finished. Jesus may come to fill the earth with his glory, and fashion our bodies like unto his own glorious body. We can not serve two masters. No wonder the apostle said, "Give diligence to make your calling and election sure." Diligence means steady application to business. We can not be slack, we press toward the goal, unto the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. I beg of you, do not be lulled to sleep with the dangerous theory that "The time has expired, the people for his name has been chosen." Do not plead this vain excuse. If you do, it will do its deadly work. It is out of harmony with the teaching of God's Word. "Faith without works is dead." Dear household of faith, the burden of my heart is that all who believe the covenants of promise will put forth every effort to spread the good news of our coming King. Let the year 1903 be unparalelled in spreading the gospel. In short, let this be our business. It is true there are more obstacles, the warfare is greater. "Wherefore take unto you the whole armor of God that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all to stand. Stand therefore, having your loins girt about with truth, and having on the breastplate of righteousness, and your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace. Above all, taking the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked, and take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit which is the Word of God. Praying always with all prayer and supplication for all saints," and then he adds, "And for me that I may open my mouth boldly to make known the mystery of the gospel." May this prayer go up from every heart each day of this year, that we may boldly make known the gospel. Then if the Master comes, we will hear the welcome "Good and faithful servant, enter into the joys of thy Lord."

Dear Restitution:

If it is not too late I wish to add my testimony with the rest in regard to our faith. Dear brothers and sisters it does me so much good to hear from you through the paper, all expressing about the same faith. I am alone here, not one of our faith near me, that I know of. I have not had a chance to talk with one of our faith since I embraced it. The light was shown me through the paper about eight years ago, and it has been growing ever since. Scriptures that I could not understand and the preachers could not explain are now made plain. I have learned to love you all, through our much loved paper. As I expect to take a trip to Seattle next summer I hope to be able to find some of our people there and hear a gospel sermon if possible. Wishing you all a Happy New Year, I remain your Brother, waiting for the kingdom.

Difference Between the Psuche and Zoe Life.

The readers of THE RESTITUTION will doubtless have noticed in the issue of Dec. 24, a criticism written by our esteemed brother, George Moyer, upon the use I have made of the words in the above caption. He says, "The whole difficulty appears to be in overlooking the Scriptural doctrine of the judgment, or if not overlooking at least misapprehending the subject. One of the first things Peter announced to the Gentile Cornelius, was that Jesus is ordained of God to be the judge of the quick and the dead."

My purpose is to be a careful student of God's Holy Book, and not to "overlook" or "misapprehend" anything if I can avoid it. I therefore thank my brother for pointing out that which he thinks I have misapprehended.

In studying the Scriptures I apprehend that the safest rule is to be very careful and not to distort, change, or put a forced construction upon the meaning of words, in order to make them conform to an idea which we may desire to sustain. Take for example the text my brother quoted; "One of the first things Peter announced to the Gentile Cornelius was that Jesus is ordained of God to be the judge of the quick and the dead."

Notice, he is "ordained of God to be the judge" of people while they are in two opposite conditions, viz: he judges the "quick" (the living) and also the "dead." No condition can possibly be wider apart than that of the quick and the dead, and yet while they sustain those opposite conditions, Jesus is "ordained of God to be the judge," while they sustain the relationship of the quick and the dead. To quicken the dead before they are judged is to make him the judge of quick only, and destroy the declaration that he is the "judge of the quick and dead."

See 2 Tim. iv. 1, "I charge thee before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom." His appearing then is the time when both the "quick" and the "dead" are judged. Our brother's position that the "quick" only are judged would do violence to these Scriptures. See Rev. xi. 13, "The time of the dead that they should be judged." See 1 Peter iv. 5, "Who shall give account to him that is ready to 'judge' the quick and the dead."

Is it a verbal or book account? The "dead" who are judged are incapable of rendering a verbal account. The indications are that a book account is rendered. See Dan. vii. 10, "The judgment was set, and the books were opened." See Rev. xx. 12. "The dead were judged out of those things which were written in the book." Dan. xii. 1, "Thy people shall be delivered every one that is found written in the book." "He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment; and I will not blot out his name out of the book of life." Rev. iii. 5.

Phil. iv. 3, "Help those women which labored with me in the Gospel, with Clement also, and with other my fellow laborers, whose names are in the book of life."

Luke x. 20, "Rejoice because your names are written in heaven."

Rev. xiii. 8, "Whose names are not written in the book of life."

Psa. lxix. 28, "Let them be blotted out of the book of the living, and not be written with the righteous."

It is evident from many Scriptures that Jesus must judge both the quick and the dead, before the dead are quickened again, because when so quickened, both the dead and quick experience a momentary change from the corruptible to the incorruptible, and the mortal to the immortal. A momentary change excludes the idea of its being a long process. A long process theory has no better authority to sustain it than the thinking and reasoning of the flesh, but a momentary change is found upon the inspired Page. 1 Cor. xv. 51-54, "We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed (both quick and dead) in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, (when?) at the last trump, for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed." If the dead are raised incorruptible, they must of necessity have been judged while dead, to be worthy of a momentary quickening to incorruptibility.

THE PSUCHE AND ZOE LIFE.

Our brother says, 'Psuche life does not end, until it is swallowed up in Zoe life or extinguished in the second death."

It is true the Psuche life will not completely end until it is extinguished in the second death, but it will end completely in the case of the "quick" and the "dead" who are judged at Jesus appearing worthy of incorruptibility and immortality.

There is a sense in which believers have the Zoe life now, but in a greater degree after the judgment of both the quick and the dead. "It is the Spirit that quickeneth, the flesh profiteth nothing; the words that I speak unto you are Spirit and are (zoe) life." Here is the difference between believers and unbelievers. See John iii. 36, "He that believeth on the Son hath (aionian zoen) eternal life, but he that believeth not shall not see (zoe) life." This is judgment already rendered upon those as long as they shall retain the position of believer and unbeliever. "Shall not see life," is a decision or a judgment already rendered, and if they pass into the death state while sustaining these relative positions, all the Lord will have to do when he shall "judge the quick and the dead," is to execute "the judgment written." Obdient believers when they lose their Psuche or animal life, never find that again. They find (or preserve) the Zoe life which was received when the Word, which is "Spirit and (Zoe) life," entered them.

John xii. 25, "He that loveth his (Psuche) life shall lose it; and he that hateth his (Psuche) life in this world shall keep it unto (Zoen aionian) eternal life." It is the Zoen aionian he finds, and not the soulical or animal life that ends.

Brother Moyer says, "No change of nature or relationship transpires while they are asleep, nor in the act of waking." David certainly expected a great change when he should awake. Psa. xvii. 15, "As for me, I will behold thy face in righteousness; I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness." Paul says, "It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body." What is that but a "change of nature?" There can be no change of nature at any time, if that is not a change of nature.

Again, "It is sown in corruption, it is raised in incorruption." Is there no change of nature, when the change is from corruption to incorruption? Paul says it is a change. "But we shall all be changed in a moment, in a twinkling of an eye, at the last trump." The change is at "the last trump." When does that sound? "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord."

The trump shall sound when the Lord descends from heaven, and his people are gathered unto him, and from that time on shall "ever be with the Lord." They could not "ever be with the Lord" if a "change of nature had not been experienced.

Job expected a change when he should be awakened. He says, "O, that thou wouldst hide me in the grave, that thou wouldst keep me secret, until thy wrath be past, that thou wouldst appoint me a set time and remember me! If a man die shall he live again? all the days of my appointed time will I wait, till my change come." Job expected to wait in the grave until his change should come. He expected to experience a "change of nature" when he should awake. The Scriptures have to be changed, twisted and an unnatural interpretation put upon them in order to make out a case favoring mortal resurrection. When such practices are resorted to we are justified in being sceptical as to the truth of such a doctrine.

Brother Moyer asks this question—"How can we say that the believer in Christ will not come into judgment? Here is where the dead fly in the ointment causes it to stink." I think some other comparison might have been found which would better harmonize with Christian courtesy and culture, than stinking ointment, that savors of contempt. As to the question, that is easily answered, if plain statements of Scripture can be accepted as proof.

See John iii. 36, "He that believeth on the Son hath (aionian zoen) everlasting life; and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life."

Here is judgment in advance upon both believer and unbeliever. The believer hath the (Zoe) life in the Son, now; and when the Son appears he appears with him in glory. He don't have to wait for a long judicial assize to investigate that question, it is already decided, he hath it now in the Son. And as to the unbeliever the judgment is, "shall not see life." His case is already decided or judged.

See Rom. viii. 1, "There is therefore now no condemnation (judgment to condemnation) to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit."

See John v. 24, "He that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life (aionian zoen—already decided) and shall not come into condemnation, but is passed from death unto life." If this is the case, what a complete farce it would be to institute a judicial investigation into a matter already settled. The words "shall not" express a decided decision.

The judgment of the quick and the dead at his appearing and kingdom, is not to investigate, but to pronounce the judgment that is already settled.

W. H. WILSON.

[We wish this article to end writings on this subject. Each side has been given, and more would be only repetition. In our humble opinion the discussion of the subject of "mortal resurrection" is a clear waste of good white paper, and in all the wide range of such discussions we have yet to discover the least atom of good fruit. So we ask that in future correspondents chose other topics—such as will benefit the brotherhood and humanity as well.—ED.]

QUESTION.

Send answers to L. E. Whitehead, 5428 Ontario st. Austin Sta. Chicago, Illinois.

In Acts xvi. 30, we read that the jailor asked Paul what he should do to be saved. Paul told him to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ. Then it states that they spake unto him the word of the Lord. After that they were baptized.

Now the question is, What is the Word of the Lord that Paul and Silas spake to the jailor?

LOVE.

The essence of Christianity, according to the New Testament, is Love. Paul describes it as a gift, and so it is in its beginning, but too often it is a gift unused. Jesus declares that the first commandment is to love God; the second, essentially like it, is to love man. Love to God and love to man are the only motives which will last.

John declares that he who loveth, dwells in God, and God in him, and that love to God and to our neighbor go necessarily together. What a power love is! It is the best of all gifts, because it transforms and controls character.

Let us look to see how we stand with God, whether we really are serving him; whether indeed we are filled with the Spirit. No one can do a service for Christ without loving him, and the more we do for him, the more we love him. Let us turn to God who is perfect, so that we may receive a crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him.

KATHRYN TOWNSEND.

Dear Bereans:

The subject given me to write upon is What are some of the features of Christ's reign?

The first question which presents itself to me is When will Christ reign? We know that Christ is not here now, but we read in John xiv. 3, that he is coming again, and will rule then on the throne of his father David. Luke i. 32. We read in Rev. xx. 6, that Christ is to reign a thousand years. Christ's rule will be one of justice and righteousness. Jeremiah xxxiii. 15, "In those days and at that time will I cause the Branch of Righteousness to grow up unto David, and he shall execute judgment and righteousness in the land."

Isaiah xxxii. 1, 16-18, tells us that when Christ shall reign everything will be peaceful and righteousness will flourish.

MARY ABLAHSEN.

"How did Jesus prove that he was the Messiah?"

The Jews always were looking for a Deliverer to come, but when Jesus did come they did not accept him as their Messiah. He had to prove himself by his many wonderful works; as stilling the tempest, raising the dead, cleansing the lepers, and the blind receiving their sight.

Yet with all of his wonderful works, they could hardly believe he was the Messiah. We find in Matt. xi. John when he was in prison heard of his wondrous works sent two of his disciples and they said unto him, "Art thou he that should come, or do we look for another?" What was Jesus' answer? "Jesus answered and said unto them, Go and show John again those things which you do hear and see. The blind receive their sight, the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear, the dead are raised up, and the poor have the gospel preached unto them."

Your brother in hope of eternal life.

CHAS. GESIN.

"In what condition should a Christian's lamp be?"

This question asks us how our lamp should be. To my knowledge they should be bright. As we have much to do among the worldly people of today, we must keep our paths straight for the people that know we are trying to keep our lamps bright will try to find some flaw in them.

The people of this world are in darkness, and we must keep our lamps bright so they may see the right path and follow in it. The better we make the path the more will follow, and the more sins we will hide.

Bereans, let us all keep our lamps bright, that we may lead many wandering ones.

Your brother in Christ.

CHAS. T. LINDSAY.

Dear Bereans:

Jesus said, I am the good shepherd, the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep. Again it is said, And when he putteth forth his own sheep, he goeth before them, and they follow him, for they know his voice.

O, let us listen more closely to the voice of our Master, and incline our ears unto righteousness, that we may follow in the straight and narrow way that leads to life eternal.

In trials and temptations we know that he is near us, for in Heb. ii. 18, we read, "For in that he himself suffered, being tempted, he is able to succor them that are tempted.

Then let us not be discouraged, but rejoice in the hope, and lo, he is with you always, even unto the end of the world.

The Wisdom of Salcomoon. Chap. 18.

1. But for thy holy ones there was greatest light; and they (the Aigyptioi) hearing the sound of them, but not seeing their form, because they themselves were overwhelmed, accounted them blessed-happy.

2. And they (the Israelites) who had been previously wronged, were thankful because they were not being harmed, and because they had besought grace to be brought through it.

3. And because in answer thou didst furnish them with a flaming pillar of fire as a guide for their unknown wayfaring and an uninjurious sun for their ambitious foreign service.

4. For those (the Egyptians) were worthy to be deprived of light and to be kept in darkness, who had kept thy sons shut up, through whom the incorruptible light of law was destined to be given to the animate-age.

5. And because they had desired to kill the children of the holy ones, and when one child had been born and saved, in the way of reproof thou didst deprive them of a multitude of their children, and with one decree didst destroy them with much water.

6. That night was made known beforehand to our fathers, that they might surely see and set their hearts upon the oaths in which they trusted.

7. And salvation of the justified was expectantly looked for by thy laity, but loss for enemies.

8. For in what thou didst rebuke the adversaries thou didst comfort and glorify us.

9. For holy servants of good things were offering hidden sacrifices, and covenanting with unanimity of mind the law of the divine nature, namely that the saints would share in like manner both the same good things and the dangers, of which the fathers were singing praises.

10. In contrast with this did an inharmonic cry for help of enemies echo, and a pitiable sound of threning children was borne through.

11. And with like justice hond-servant and master together were being cut off and commoner with king were suffering the same things.

12. And by one fiat did they all in one name of death have unnumbered dead ones; for not even did the living suffice to bury them when their more honored generation perished by corruption at one inclination of the balance.

13. For distrusting all things because of their pharmacies, at the destruction of their first-born ones they confessed God's laity to be his sons.

14. For in a quiet silence that environed all things and a night that was intervening with its own swiftness,

15. Thine all enabled word from heavenly royal thrones leaped a precipitate warrior into the midst of earth's destruction.

16. Bearing thy decree without hypocrisy as a sharp sword, and taking his stand filled all things with death; and touched the heavens, but walked upon the earth.

17. Then all at once phantasies of unreal dreams terrified them in a dreadful way, and unwelcome fears stood over them.

18. And they when cast down on this side and on that half dead made it evident to one another for what reason they were dying.

19. For the unreal dreams that had terrified them made this pre-evident that they were not ignorant why they were suffering and perishing in an evil way.

20. And a trial of death touched also the justified, and a dreadful smiting of a multitude occurred in the wilderness; but the wrath did not continue over long.

21. For a blameless man hasted and fought his way to the front, bringing as the weapon of his own public-service votive-prayer and expiatory offering of incense, and withstood the anger and put an end to the occurrence; showing that he was thy courtier.

22. And he prevailed over the mixed multitude not with strength of body, nor with a force of weapons; but with a word he subdued the punisher by reminding him of the oaths and covenants of the fathers.

23. For although there were dead fallen in heaps upon one another, taking his stand in their midst he allayed the wrath and cut his way through unto the living.

24. For upon the flowing skirt of his under-garment was all the cosmos (the whole world) and a glory of fathers upon the seal of four-rowed stones, and thy majesty upon the diadem of his head.

25. And these the destroyer yielded to and they feared them; for the trial alone of the wrath was sufficient.

COMMENT.

The reader will see that in the phraseology of this chapter, as in the psalms and other oracular portions of the Old Covenant Scriptures, all God's old covenant people were accounted "holy" because they were as a whole nation a priestly nation—not really holy but accounted so; and they were the light-bearers of "the light of law to be given to the animate-age." This "to be given" has been fulfilled in Christ and the light of this higher law in Christ is now shining in the moral darkness of the world. "The justified" as used here in antithesis with their "oppressors" "the incorrigibles" of that day is also divinely significant.

Note the phrase "covenants and oaths" also—there is nothing about "testaments" any where in God's Word.

Observe also that the trial-test of "the good thing and the bad" come to both classes, and as Paul argues this test is a savor of life unto life to one class and death unto death to the other; and the philosophy of it is fully argued here.

Then mark the leveling equity of God's justice as brought out here in such phrases as "master and slave, commoner and king"—no caste distinction or partiality in God's calling and penal economy.

Again see how clearly the doctrine of "sonship" is taught herein.

Notice "the blameless one" not "the faultless or righteous one" who acts as intervener and mediator in this trial-test. Again the personal agent of God's Word spoken of as "the Punisher" and "the Destroyer" manifestly an angel here.

Study the official insignia of "the great priest" as here given and the emblematical significance as here plainly taught.

How to Make Life Happy.

Take time; it is no use to fume or fret, or do as the angry housekeeper who has got hold of the wrong key, and pushes, shakes, and rattles it about the lock until both are broken, and the door remains unopened.

The chief secret of comfort lies in not suffering trifles to vex us, and in cultivating our undergrowth of small pleasures.

Try to regard present vexations as you will a month hence.

Since we can not get what we like let us like what we can get.

It is not riches; it is not poverty; it is human nature that is the trouble.

The world is like a looking-glass. Laugh at it, and it laughs back; frown at it, and it frowns back.

Angry thoughts canker the mind, and dispose it to the worst temper in the world—that of fixed malice and revenge. It is while in this temper that most men become criminals.—Religious Intelligencer.

More and more, as we approach the close of this age, the religion of Jesus is being dealt with by millions in a slim, sleazy, shallow manner, requiring only a few soft, sentimental churchly performances, as conditions of salvation, instead of the painful heart-breaking repentance, and saving faith, that gives the soul a rock bottom foundation, and sky blue experience, of the knowledge of a personal Savior.—Living Words.

Love in the heart of the first disciples was recognized by him who kindled it, to be of the nature of fire or light. He did not expect it to fall on distant places without first passing through intermediate space. From Jerusalem, at his command and under the Spirit's ministry, it radiated through Judea, and from Judea to Samaria, and thence to the ends of the earth.—Arnot.

TO OUR PATRONS.

We want more readers for THE RESTITUTION. We want One Thousand new names on our list for 1903, and can have them if you will help us.

In every Church of our faith in the land there are members who do not take our paper, who would be benefitted by reading it.

There are those who are isolated by circumstances from any Church fellowship, who would be kept firmer in the faith, helped and strengthened for the battles of life if they had THE RESTITUTION each week.

There are others interested in the truths we hold, who would often have their attention called to the principles of our faith by reading our paper When no preacher can be heard when you cannot talk to them, THE RESTITUTION in their homes would be ever a present visitor—a missionary that will do more than any other one thing to keep the interest alive.

There are those whom we wish were interested in the Bible and what it promises. Many of this class of persons have never had the opportunity, or have neglected the matter when it was before them.

You are surely known to people such as are mentioned, and you are surely interested in them. We are satisfied you are not unmindful of their eternal well-being. How much do you care for these people? Will you join with us in getting the gospel before them, and keeping it there a year? We have this to offer to you for consideration

We will send THE RESTITUTION one year to NEW Subscribers for $1.00. We will start them as soon as received and give credit to the end of 1903.

With a little persistent effort in presenting the paper to those you know who are not taking it, you can induce them to try it for $1.00. If you want some sample papers we will gladly supply them to you, and our list can be increased by 1000 names at once.

It can be done easily if you will act on this suggestion, and get those near you interested. If each reader would get a new name our list would be doubled at once.

It would seem as if every reader of THE RESTITUTION could exert influence enough to get one more new name if the effort was made. Will you try it? If the first person you suggest it to does not respond, do not be discouraged, but try some one else. Perhaps the one you least expect will answer quickest.

Did you ever stop to figure up how many words are contained in our paper in a year? You will be surprised at the number of sermons it contains. There is variety too. There is doctrine and the practical, encouragement and cheer, and comfort for the distressed. Each phase of teaching would make several good sized books during the year. You can do no work that yields as large a return for the money expended as by sending THE RESTITUTION to a friend for a year.

We ask you to go at this work and push it along with a will. The time is getting short, and if you can be the means in God's hands of gaining one more for the Master, it will pay for all your labor. We will send several of the back papers to all new subscribers so each will get more than the current year.

Will you not start right away and send one name, and next week when that person gets his paper, some one else will hear of it, and you can send another subscriber.

Poetry.

Consider the Lilies.

They have no cares
They heed their heads before the storm,
And rise to meet the sunshine warm,
And dance responsive to the breeze,
And nestle underneath the trees,
And take whatever life shall bring
As gaily as the birds that sing.

They do not toil:
Content with their allotted task
They do but grow, they do not ask
A richer bed, a higher place,
But in their lowliness appear
But grow and smile, and do their best,
And unto God they leave the rest.

They have no sin:
Their pure sweet lives they upraise
And drink not from the sun's bright gaze,
And if the earth should soil, the rain
Comes down to make them clean again.
And, scented, beautiful and white,
They live their lives in God's clear sight.

They weep no tears:
No shadows dim their happiness,
They do but live in the world to bless;
Enough have they of cloth of gold,
They lift the cups the dew to hold,
Ah, or them are the light and song,
And they are glad the whole day long.

God cares for them:
His love is over every one,
He wills their good, his will is done!
He does neglect no single flower,
He makes them rich with sun and shower,
Their song of trust is sweet and clear—
And he that hath an ear may hear.

Qualification of an Evangelist.

If the evangelist is one who announces good tidings he must know what God's Word sets forth as good tidings or gospel, for this is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believes. It is the means to the one all important end—the motive to draw men to God; it is God's proposition to sinful man, embracing the conditions of pardon and reconciliation. Touching the evangelist nothing will atone for his lack of knowledge of the gospel. Prayerfulness, saintliness, piety and zeal—all good as far as they go,—are not to be substituted for the gospel. Proclaimers or preachers have gone up and down the world, professing themselves to be God's ministers; conversions have followed their preaching and yet they had but a moiety of the gospel which Christ and apostles preached; and a whole system of the traditions of the fathers, which traditions make void the commandments of God. They preached a badly perverted gospel, on which Paul pronounced a curse. Just now men of piety, zeal and learning are preparing to inaugurate a religious campaign, start a wave of excitement that will sweep over the civilized world. That they will succeed in a measure to arouse religious fervor, and in places a religious phrenzy, I have no doubt; but the awakening will not come as the result of the unadulterated gospel voiced by the mighty host of proclaimers. The promises made unto our fathers, the oath to David, touching the perpetuity of his throne and kingdom, the earth as the eternal dwelling place of the righteous, life and immortality through Christ by a resurrection from the dead, all these form no part of the gospel that will be announced in the oncoming crusade against sin; even the historic facts, the death, burial and resurrection of God's anointed Son will not be set forth as they are presented on the inspired page; and further, their methods will not be apostolic, but modern devices; and the claim will be set up of Holy Ghost operation and baptism. The result of the movement is not to be taken as proof that it makes no difference what is preached and what is believed, that only honest intentions and good motives count in the matter of conversions. It matters not to the honest lover of the simple truth how much of good has followed and will yet follow this kind of preaching; how many sinners have been won, and will yet be won from the evil of their ways, he must insist on the importance of the truth of the gospel, on the need of holding and preaching it as it is taught by Inspiration. He cannot honestly think otherwise in light of what is written by Paul and other inspired men. The evangelist who is so bound by the written creed of his church that he will not see the truth right before his eyes; too indifferent to feel its real value; too lazy to search for it as for a hidden treasure; or knowing it, is too cowardly and compromising to preach it, imperils his own salvation and misleads those who hear him. Jesus, addressing the Father said: "Sanctify them through thy truth: thy Word is truth." John xvii. 17. And Paul charged Timothy in view of the judgment of quick and dead at the appearing of Jesus, to "preach the Word." And Jeremiah announcing the Word of God said: "The prophet that hath a dream, let him tell a dream, and he that hath my Word, let him speak my Word faithfully. What is the chaff to the wheat" saith the Lord." The evangelist must have the truth as well as the prophet, and tell it faithfully. His appeal must be to the written Word of Inspiration, and not to Plato. Here is the wheat. Human notions are but chaff. If Paul and all his faithful co-laborers had been time-servers they might have saved themselves much trouble. Hear the great apostle's avowal of his determination in the face of danger "to testify the gospel of the grace of God." He was on his way to Jerusalem. He knew not what would befall him there—the particular kind of opposition was unknown to him, but he did know that bonds and afflictions waited for him in every city, for the Holy Spirit had testified this much. He could expect nothing but hard treatment in the capitol of his own nation. Knowing this he said, "But none of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself so that I might finish my course with joy, and the ministry which I have received of the Lord Jesus, to testify the gospel of the grace of God." Acts xx. 24. "He shunned not to declare all the counsel of God." The perils by land and sea, among robbers in mountain passes, among false brethren had no power to swerve him from his purpose to preach the truth. This same bold evangelist in his instructions to Timothy and Titus enjoins strict adherence to the truth. "Hold fast the form of sound words which thou hast heard of me, in faith and love, which is in Christ Jesus," (2 Tim. i. 13); and again, "Be not ashamed of the testimony of our Lord, nor of me his prisoner, but be thou partaker of the afflictions of the gospel according to the power of God." These exhortations were designed to arouse the courage of this young evangelist, to brace his mind against swerving from the truth in the face of dangers attending its proclamation where false systems of religion and the power of the state were arrayed in deadly hostility to the new comers and their message. Cowards and compromisers there were in the early church. The apostasy began to work while Paul was still alive; among churches either founded by his own labors, or by that of others, and fed by his ministrations. It is here today in whole systems of false teaching.

Table Talk.

ENDURE TO THE END.

The word endure is to continue or to bear or undergo. In the book of Esther viii. 6 we find the word endure. She says, How can I endure, to see the evil come upon my people, or how can I endure to see the destruction of my kindred. She was warned of the plot of evil Haman; he was seeking favor of the king to have the Jews put to death because Mordecai would not make obeisance to him, and bow before him. Haman thought he stood in great favor with the king. Mordecai being a Jew and also an uncle to Esther, which they knew not of. Esther could not endure to see her people suffer as she did with the king to save them. And our King can save those that come unto him. The parable of the sower and of the seed gives us a lesson in enduring. The seed that fell on stony ground and immediately sprang up, but could not endure because they had no root in themselves, they soon perished, they could not endure. So those that let the cares of the world and the deceitfulness of riches choke the Word. It loses its power because they trust in the world. But the good seed, such as hear the Word and receive it shall endure to the end, for the Word of truth can save, for the truth endureth for ever. The Apostle Paul's life shows a life of enduring for Christ's sake. What did he not suffer even from those that should have been his friends. I will enumerate some of his sufferings for preaching Christ, and the hope of salvation through his Word. "Of the Jews five times received I forty stripes save one. Thrice was I beaten with rods, once was I stoned, thrice was I shipwreck. A night and a day I have been in the deep. In journeyings oft in perils of waters, in perils of robbers, in perils of mine own countrymen, in perils in the sea amongst false brethren, in weariness and painfulness, in hunger and in thirst, in cold and nakedness." Yet through all those dangers God spared his life. Yes, he was a chosen vessel to bear the Word of God before all kings and rulers, and well did he his noble work, knowing what would befall him at Rome, and when parting with his brethren at Macedonia and telling them they should see him no more. They tried to persuade him not to leave them, but his work was not finished, for others must hear the Word of God. He would give his life as a sacrifice to save others. Is this not enduring unto the end? Yes, surely we have in Paul a noble example for us to press forward, fearing not the face of man, but trusting in the Lord. Hear him when his earthly work was finished, "I have kept the faith, I have finished my course, henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which Christ the righteous Judge shall give me at that day, and not to me only but to all that love his appearing." When I read his kind messages and exhortations to the churches that he had established at different places, I think, oh Lord, what am I that thou hast been mindful of me those long years, what have I done to extend thy Word, and thou art still mindful of thy servant. But I wish above all earthly things that I and also all that have taken upon them his holy name, may continue or endure unto the end, for "He that overcometh and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations." The blessings of the Lord are many to those who endure to the end, the blessing of eternal life and immortality. God grant that we endure unto the end.

Certainly I will be with thee,
All the way to help and aid;
Never let your heart be troubled,
Neither let it be afraid.

Certainly I will be with thee,
From the evil to defend;
Go and tread my glorious gospel,
Lo I am with you to the end.

M. ELIZABETH KNOWLES.

THE DAY OF THE LORD.

Zeph. i. 14, 18. "The great day of the Lord is near; the mighty man shall cry bitterly. That day is a day of wrath, neither their silver nor their gold shall deliver in the day of the Lord." Mal. iv., "For behold the day cometh that shall burn as an oven, and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly shall be stubble and the day that cometh shall burn them up saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch. Rev. vi. 15, "And the kings of the earth and the great men, and the rich men and the chief captains and the mighty men, every bondman and every free man hid themselves in dens and rocks of the mountains and said to the mountains and rocks fall on us, and hide us from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb, for the great day of his wrath has come and who shall be able to stand." These words of prophecy and of Revelation show us what the day of the Lord's wrath will be to those that are trusting in riches and power and might to save them. Those who are not trusting in God, and who do not look for his appearing. What does the day of the Lord mean to those who have the wedding garment on, to the bride of Christ? They know and love the Lord, and perfect love, casteth out fear. Herein is our love made perfect that we may have boldness in the day of judgment. To those who are watching, to his saints the day or the time spoken of in 1 Thess iv. will be a time of rejoicing. They will not call for the rocks to hide them from his face; but their joy will be full. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air and so shall we ever be with the Lord. There will be no fear of that day, no fear of the appearing of Jesus to those that love him. Trust in the Lord, keep the faith, for Paul says, "Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord the righteous Judge shall give me at that day, and not to me only, but to all that love his appearing," to all who are looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ, for his feet shall stand in that day upon the Mount of Olives, and the Lord shall be King over all the earth. Yes, this will be the day of the Lord when he will establish his kingdom at Jerusalem, and restore all the earth as Eden and his work will be the grand restoration and restitution, when his saints with their King will take the kingdom and rule over the whole earth. When all nations will acknowledge him as the ruler. Let all who have taken his name so live that they may have part in that kingdom, be with the Lord in the day of his reign and accounted worthy to escape the day of the Lord's wrath.

ELLA KNOWLES.

Recreation from a Bible Standpoint.

1 Cor. x. 30, "Whether therefore ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God."

I can distinctly hear some one say, Well! well! Sister Woodward has turned into a crank; does she think we young people must loose the charm of youth, give up all pleasure, and settle down into staid, sober, old people? No! a thousand times no! I have not forgotten my youth or how happy my life was then. It was father and mother that made that life for the two brothers and myself (Sister Francis came to brighten the home when I was fifteen years old). How full of pleasure for the little ones were the summer moonlight evenings. Sometimes playing "hide and seek" in the tall green field corn, varying the pleasures as simple minded childhood will, petting the motherless lamb or yoking the little calves together with a rope, the quadrupeds sometimes getting the better of we trio, sending us in all directions, sprawling over the ground, and then such a chase after the bellowing, frightened animals, which we made haste to get back into their pen before the "head of the family" should gently remind us, "It was time to get to bed if we could not behave better." And when the long winter evenings came, how we enjoyed the reading and talking, and often when tired of that, the reading and work laid by, table and chairs grouped around the stove to prevent accident. Blind man's buff having been decided on, father's eyes would be hidden with the bandana handkerchief always ready for the occasion. And then such a scampering, for none could long escape his quick ears and hands. Hiding the thimble was a favorite amusement entered into by the whole household, and when the hour for rest came, how refreshed, and happy we followed the dear little mother up stairs, kneeling by her side to say the little childish prayer, tucked snugly in bed, the good night kiss was given, and we called down the stairs, Leave the door open a little Ma, so we can see the light, and then very soon her sweet, clear soprano and father's beautiful bass blended and floated up to us in some sweet song of praise, and I know since then, they spent the next half hour singing us to sleep. O those happy days. How fast the tears fall now as I write and think of the dear patient mother now sleeping, the old home so changed.....but I am not writing to bring up sad recollections, but to remind other mothers and fathers that they have duties in this direction if they would keep their children at home. Is this all to the glory of God? Assuredly so, creating within us that essential mental and physical growth which was healthful, thereby planting deep in our hearts that which never has been erased, love and the highest honor and respect for our parents, thus magnifying God and his tender love and care for us. After the days of childhood passed, and youth came, the parents were just as careful to furnish pleasant and healthful surroundings, good literature, etc., as could be secured. And then we had what is a great loss to the young now, spelling schools, singing schools, writing, grammar and geography classes—no prizes awarded. The honor of being at the head of the class was enough. But some one says, we can not have those things now. Why not? I do not know of any law to prohibit it even in this twentieth century. If the principle involved in our text banishes the amusements whose essential tendency is morally or physically unhealthy and wrong in themselves, it leaves untouched all the innocent pleasures I have mentioned. Besides pure music and elevating literature, (no cheap novels), there is a large field open of physical recreation as gymnastics, boating, swimming, skating, cycling, etc. All these if moderately and discretely used are helpful in themselves, and should not lessen our love to God or man, because they tend to invigorate our bodies, purify the blood, strengthen the muscles, thus indirectly helping the mental and spiritual part of our nature; but in all these it is necessary to hold and use them in right proportion. The day of bitter regrets will come to those who "kill time" in exercises and untimely amusements. Could we but remember our time is God's time, loaned us for good use; some day we will have to give an account of our stewardship. Are we using it to the glory of God, or to satisfy self? Many other things crowd into my mind as I write, for I feel very anxious for our young converts. God wants you to be happy, but not to dishonor him in the means used. If we are living in spiritual union with Christ we will need no formal rules to guide us in our choice of recreation. We have been a partaker of the divine nature, we wish then to be like him. Remember life is not a mere play ground, subject to our selfish likes and dislikes, but "it is the threshold of a boundless eternity" to be gained by complying with the will of our Guide. O for a sublime indifference to everything that will bar us out of that life eternal. Through all work or pleasure strive mightily towards that goal. Do you ask why? "Whether therefore ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God."

M. A. WOODWARD.

Some religious teachers make light of sin. According to their view sin is not the most dreadful thing in the world. They tell us that it is only an infirmity, the result of ignorance, and may turn out to be a benefit rather than a curse. But this is not the doctrine of the Bible. This is not the verdict of an enlightened conscience. According to the Bible sin is an evil for which it is not easy to find a remedy. The wisest men of all the ages have made diligent search for an adequate remedy for sin. Sin is corruption. What can wash away the dismal stain and make the guilty conscience clean? "The wages of sin is death." What shall deliver us from the body of this death? Sin is an evil so dark and destructive that nothing less than the blood of the sinless Son of God is sufficient to save the one that has been tarnished by it.—Christian Advocate.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and forsakeness in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, FEB'Y 4, 1903.

WE have decided to continue our special offer as given on our first page through the month of February. The back papers can all be supplied, so each will get the full year's number. Will you not see if there is not some one else in your church or neighborhood who will be benefitted by this arrangement. The "signs" are getting plainer that the time for work is short, so make an effort and do all you can for the cause of Christ NOW. Next year may be too late.

Passing Events in the Light of Prophecy.

The Russian foreign office has issued a communication in explanation of Russia's policy in Persia, Afghanistan and Manchuria. It states that her relations with Persia are improving continually. "With regard to Afghanistan, she addressed no request of any sort, to the British Cabinet, but simply notified it of her desire to enter into direct relations with that country in the future. Her view of her treaty with China in regard to Manchuria is that in concluding it, she made the evacuation of Manchuria dependent upon the re-establishment of tranquility there and the conduct of the other Powers.

In an article on this somewhat peculiar communication the Scotsman says: "It is not easy to say what has induced Russia to open her mind at this moment," and after several surmises, concludes: "Whatever the occasion or the object, the move seems to portend trouble to Afghanistan, and fresh outlay, if not fresh danger in India."

The Powers are bringing pressure to bear upon the Porte, to remedy the state of matters in the Balkans, which is fraught with danger to Europe and the Ottoman Empire. Their ambassadors at Constantinople have all made representations on the subject.

A programme of measures was drawn up by the Turkish Council of ministers, and, after much delay, it was approved by the Sultan. Reuter's agent at Constantinople states that the scheme is totally inadequate to cope with the present serious position of affairs.

Since the measures were officially announced the Porte has addressed a long circular to its ambassadors abroad, in which it endeavors to exonerate itself from all responsibility by throwing the entire blame upon Bulgaria and the Macedonian committee.

A terrible tale of Turkish atrocities comes from Bulgaria. "Robbery, outrage under the cover of searching for arms were prosecuted with ferocious vigor." When will Europe and the world be rid of this monstrous system of misgovernment and crime?

The French government with a view to economy proposed a temporary reduction in the Mediterranean fleet, but the Chamber of Deputies compelled the minister in charge to withdraw his proposals for the decrease.

The Novoye Vremya, of St. Petersburg, in an article commenting upon the proposed reduction, says: "Joined to the Russian fleet, the creation of which the Emperor so strongly urged, the French navy would have been in a position to dispute with Great Britain the title of Mistress of the Seas, and it was just this fact which made the Franco-Russian Alliance so dear to us. France has already derived enormous profit from her alliance with Russia in being able to attend to her development in peace, and in not having to fear Germany, who is always conscious of millions of bayonets at her back. Russia on the other hand continues to be a prey to the greatest uneasiness, as any reduction in the naval forces of France would be a breach in the Franco-Russian alliance."

Questions Concerning Tithing.

Questions concerning tithing have come to hand that we do not feel competent to handle, for reasons the following will disclose. Questions as to what is one-tenth of a merchant's income,—and as to whether he must deduct living expenses, pay all debts, and so forth and so forth, do not trouble us.

When we impose rules of conduct upon ourselves we think we are competent to arrange the details.

When we are under law to God we are amenable to the conditions imposed by him. If we are under a law of God for tithing, we do not know it.

The commonwealth of Israel was under law to God in that respect,—and it was robbery of God not to pay them. Mal. iii. 8. But that institution was not perpetual. It was a part of the law which was added because of transgression "till the seed should come, to whom the promise was made." Gal. iii. 19. The Seed came and the law expired by the limitation given to it. God through Moses had announced this change,—he said he would raise up a prophet like unto Moses—a law-giver—and said "Unto him ye shall hearken;" or he would require it of them. That prophet was raised up. His laws have been promulgated; and being like Paul under law to Christ, I Cor. ix. 21, and not being aware that either Christ or his apostles ever promulgated a tithing law for the household of faith, we consider ourselves under the law of liberty in this respect. The law work by love; if continued, indeed, to lay by in store the first day of the week in proportion as the Lord has prospered them, for relief of the poor, and doubtless other expenses incurred in the proclamation of the gospel or the worship of the household. No amount is named, that being left to the conscience of each. It may be a tenth, or it may be more, or it may be less. No one can come between him and his God. If this in brief be not the truth in the premises, we confess we do not know what it is.

Nations are Angry.

The trouble over the Venezuela affair, which seemed near settlement a short time ago, is again at the acute state. England and Germany having claims against Venezuela, formed an alliance, sent their warships bombarding her towns and forts, sinking her ships, and blockading her ports. Later Italy joined with them. Sooner talk by other nations having interests there for a time quieted matters, and all agreed to have the claims arbitrated. Venezuela wished the blockade raised pending the arrangement of details, which was not agreed to, and Germany refused to be still even, and bombarded a fort for three days.

The allied powers demanded, as an item in the arrangements, that their claims be treated as "preferred claims"—that they should be paid in full before any other nation should get anything. Germany especially insisting that this be done.

Some months ago France having claims far greater against Venezuela than Germany or England, in her efforts to collect went so far as to break off diplomatic relations, but did not send war ships; finally arranging a basis for payment that was satisfactory. This of course would be set aside if the proposition of the allies is agreed to. The United States as well has claims, and besides, her trade, which is much greater than those other nations, is seriously interfered with by the blockade. She must wait also, and see her trade ruined.

Neither France or the United States are in a disposition to give way just because Germany and England sent warships and attempted to bully their way through. They consider their claims as greater and more just than those of any other nations.

England, ever on the watch for danger in every part of the world, would waive her claims willingly, but she is held to her treaty by Germany, and cannot get away without incurring the animosity of the kaiser, which she does not want to arouse. England and Russia are natural enemies, and for Germany to be turned into a foe, it would be but natural for Germany and Russia to antagonize England whenever possible.

Should the agreement stand it forces the United States and France to unite to counteract this combination. Such an alliance is being freely talked of in diplomatic circles in this country, as likely to be arranged in a few days, if Germany holds to her position. Of course Germany does not wish to appear as giving way before France, as that would humiliate her in the eyes of the world.

Russia, known to be antagonistic to England, is now allied with France. Japan, known to be antagonistic to Russia, is now allied with England. Should France and the United States combine what more natural than that they should be backed by Russia.

Should such combinations be effected they would not only be defensive, but offensive as well. Germany between Russia and France would need all her resources, and be unable to do much for England outside. England, only half-hearted, having been drawn in by Germany, would have a divided people to deal with. She would see Canada lost, and India in jeopardy. Maps would be changed.

All this has an "if" to it, and we only give it that our readers may be informed of what is going on. Personally we do not think the above combinations will be made, but no man can tell. Let us watch, for this unrest and disturbance of nations is but a "sign" that our Lord is coming soon. Be ready—watch and be ye sober.

Married.

At the home of Evangelist Joblin, 626 Woodland Avenue, January 1st, 1903, Mr. LeRoy Smith and Miss Luella Bradshaw. This young couple had already become children of Abraham faith-wise and heirs with him to the promise, having put on the anointed One by baptism. No better start in independent life than this is possible; and the whole church follows them with prayers that they may continue faithful and true witnesses for God till Jesus comes, and then meet his approving smile.

Sovereignty of Character.

Coupled with our firm and sacred religious convictions, a well-poised conscience must rule our every action.

The grandest and noblest of the many things capable of being acquired in this earthly condition, is a monumental character.

We are now living in an age enriched by the most perfect type of civilization the world has yet produced; but with the growing enlightenment, increasing temptations of many varied forms confront us for settlement, which we, as followers of the blessed hope in our Savior, must strive through earnest prayer, that we might be able to successfully overcome every evil thrown in our pathway, as we journey toward the Holy City. If we would win the crown of eternal life, we must cultivate real individual wealth based on enobling principles. We must have minds which are ever awake to the duties that are theirs to perform, duties which make our lives, as well as those around whom we work, a blessing to humanity.

Christ needs workmen in his vineyard whose characters will overshadow all earthly riches, talent and fame. The true greatness of noble character must be implanted in our lives, if we would enter into that haven of rest prepared for the faithful.

The world has seen the influences of the depraved sharply contrasted with those of uplifting morals and spiritual worthiness. The need of forming a good character while in youthful bloom, cannot be over-estimated. The partial effects of heredity cannot be denied; yet a character can be so wielded while in its early prime, that a fit model can be produced as an example to be handed down from father to son, so causing the effects of heredity to ever afterwards prove a blessing and help in furthering the formation of strong and well-rounded characters.

Again, the environments surrounding the person may either be a great help, or an evil source from which many an individual has fallen from elevated positions, held in former prosperous days; but however great these hereditary and external forces may be, we must not dare place too much on the shoulders of others, but bear our own burdens; for certainly the sharpest carving tools, the most constant in use in shaping characters are our own hands.

It has truthfully been said, "Every action is a seed we sow from which we reap habit, we sow habit, we reap character, we sow character, we reap destiny." The will power ruled by a conscience pure in purpose and not tinted by degraded or harsh usage, is the best guard that we can command for steering aright the actions and impulses of human nature, until at last our destinies will culminate in unspeakable joys in a home freed from temptation.

A character well begun steadily increases in strength and power, grasping new opportunities, until it multiplies into a heroism of lasting value to all mankind. The difference between reputation and character is, that reputation is the judgment or estimate placed upon our individual worth by others, while character is just what we are, it is our own personal wealth irrespective of what others may say or think of us. Which is the most desirable? Certainly character brings with it the sweet repose of rest and ease of conscience in knowing and feeling that we have performed our duties, remained true to a true principle and in the end, if not from the beginning, we will secure a repute which will be handed down from generation to generation like an ever widening circle, to influence men and women to lead nobler and more perfect careers; one which will stand the test of time even through the ages of eternity.

The student of history can recall various types of uplifting characters, many of which were blest in possessing genius and large talents, also commanded high positions, immense wealth and public favor, but these do not form the well rounded basis upon which their memory is cherished; they are only attributes of secondary importance. We can love and appreciate all that any noble character has done to enrich civilization, while on the other hand great genius and wide spread reputation falls low in our estimation if the thoughts which they produced are not accompanied by the greatness of deed. Their defective characters cause us to look upon them as no fit examples for those seeking to follow higher ideals, consequently that which is good in their lives is partly seared over by the evil.

A truly great character raises the owner above temptation hence nothing enters the mind of the person except the good and uplifting thoughts which tend toward the Utopia of the future.

Our Savior is the personage we should ever keep before our minds as the ideal type of a spotless character. He will guide our wandering feet through the narrow way, if we but follow his pure example and righteous precepts.

Then as followers of the lowly Nazarine, let us make double effort to build and maintain right and truth as we mount the ladder of time. Oh! the assurance of knowing the character to be is useless is one of the most gratifying thoughts man can possess, providing his ideal is placed in the truest and purest models, although genius is an acceptable gift of the favored, and wealth may win us distinction, integrity is within the reach of all and the pure character is greater and more royal than the greatest of endowments or renowned distinctions. It is attainable by all and prized in this earthly existence, how much more are the glories of the future sublime which awaits us, who have builded a palace that cannot be taken from us, but remains ours through all eternity.

V. E. REYNOLDS.

Dear Brethren in Christ:

May the love of our dear Lord and Master dwell in all your hearts.

In reading the Word of Life, there cannot be any mistake about the selection of this company. If we hold fast the precious promises to the end of the race, we shall hear the blessed words, Well done, good and faithful servant, thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things. Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord.

Is it possible that we poor, weak creatures of the dust will hear that welcome invitation, and have the glorious privilege, and honor to be associated with the King of kings, and all of God's elect, from Abel down, to assist in crushing the powers of this world, and bringing in subjection all things to the will of our great King Jesus?

Now brethren, a little comparison. We all know our own hearts and minds. Has there been a people that have searched God's word more faithfully for the truth as it is in Jesus, than the called out ones which we hope to represent. We know we have the truth, and how happy do we feel when we hear of one dear one that has taken the stand on the side of the Lord.

At this writing I expect there never has been such an effort here to control numbers. The whole force of orthodoxy except the Episcopal Church, is in the trust. Tuesday all business houses are to close, prayer meetings in every direction are in progress. The C. A. R., the S. of V. and Woman's League are to come out in a body, assisted by a choir of a hundred voices to cheer them in the great work of saving souls. The limit is one thousand souls to be handled. So says Dr. Marshall of Philadelphia, one of the greatest revivalists of modern times, so one of his members told me. What a grand time to live in, to see the struggles for power and money among worldly combines and trusts.

May we always be found on the side of the Lord, ready to be accepted at a moment's warning.

Yours in the true faith.

J. C. VENABLE.

Faith and Hope

For he is our peace who hath made both one, and hath broken down the middle wall, a partition or separation which divides into parts, something between us, having abolished, to repeal, to make void, to annul, in his flesh the enmity, hatred, hostility. Even the law contained in ordinances, a rule established by the law, for to make in himself of twain one new man so making peace; that he might reconcile both unto God in one body, by the cross, having slain the enmity—hatred, hostility—thereby. Eph. ii. 14-16. Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law. Gal. iii. 13.

Christ is the end of the law, and has brought us out of darkness, and has translated us into the kingdom of his dear Son. The new covenant. How much shall the blood of Christ, who through the eternal Spirit offered himself without spot to God, purge your conscience from dead works to serve the living God. For this cause he is the Mediator of the new testament, that by means of death, for the redemption of the transgressions that were in her the first testament the old testament hath not. The Scripture said that Christ cometh of the seed of David and out of the town of Bethlehem where David was. John. i. 42

Sin will not always exist. It is the very element that God abhors. It has caused all the misery that has flooded the world. God will not eternally keep it in existence, but will blot it out forever. Misery cannot outlive sin. Sin and misery are inseparable. Sin is the fountain and misery is the stream that flows from it. God will dry up both the fountain and the stream. For this purpose was the Son of God manifested, that he might destroy the works of the devil. This cannot be fully accomplished till the devil himself is destroyed. In due time Christ will destroy him that had the power of death, that is the devil.

Then there shall be no devil or sinner no sin or misery, no death or pain or sorrow. God shall be all and in all, and the former things shall have passed away. Blissful era, when earth's woes end.

The Resurrection.

The brightest day in the Christian calendar is the day of Christ's resurrection. Other days may have been bright,—yes, and filled with bright prospects; but the day the Son of God broke the seal of the grave and came forth helps more to make the Christian rejoice than all others. Till then, death and the grave were the mighty conquerors of earth.

Millions had fallen at the hand of death and had been received into the silent, gloomy and hopeless halls of the grave. No hope appeared beyond. Philosophy could not look beyond the vail of death. Science could not invent an escape. The race seemed doomed. Only the Divine Word gave any light, and even that was doubted by the mass.

But, praise the Lord! Jesus overcame death: and, conquering the grave, came forth to give life to all the race. How changed the scene! Before, all was dark; no light, no hope. Now the seal is broken, and light breaks in and hope is born. Jesus said, "Because I live ye shall live also." Glorious assurance! "Ye shall live because I live."

The voice that could hush the winds and calm the troubled waters, the same voice that could open one grave and call forth its occupant will speak again ere long with mighty power, and death will die. The graves will be opened, and the many millions of prisoners of all ages set free. A glorious prospect! "All that are in their graves shall hear his voice and come forth." Your friends and my friends will be among them; your loved ones and mine; perhaps you and I. Not because we merit it, but "Because I live," said Jesus.

We do not like the grave. It has robbed us of our friends. It holds our loved ones. It is cold and dark and gloomy. It is cheerless and hopeless. But even now by faith in Christ's words we can stand on the other side of the grave and, looking back, can exclaim, "O Grave, where is thy victory. O Death, where is thy sting!" Soon this will be a reality. It will not long be a prospect, but a realization.

Dear reader, how will you and I stand on the other side of the grave? How will that voice that calls forth the sleeping ones, affect us? Will we be thrilled with joy over the prospect of eternal life, or will we quail in fear over a misspent life? Prepare for eternity in time.—J. J. Morris.

The World Rules the Church.

The world has come to be the ruler of the church of today. It dictates what shall be preached, and woe to the preacher who preaches the old-time gospel. Some one or two rich men will have him removed. The world rules the church today and dictates how much and what kind of religion we shall have. Woe to the man who wishes to live according to the Bible. That man will find that the Bible is true that says, "All they that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution."

The world rules the church today and makes the large crowd of nominal churchlings patronize and support the popular sins of the day. The world rules the church, and introduces all sorts of methods to raise the cash and dwarf self denying benevolence for Jesus' sake.

The world rules the church today, and Holy Ghost revivals are few and far between. Repentance and restitution are almost unknown quantities in the religion of today because the world rules the church.

Says the California Christian Advocate, "The church and the world appear to have confessed. The secularism of today appears in sentiment at least to be Christian, and on the other hand, the church has relaxed, until the old, well-defined lines of demarcation between the church and the world have faded out." As a result it adds, "The same effort that is put forth at present and results in few additions to the church, would have, under the conditions of twenty-five years ago, resulted in large accessions.

Men assume that the world is gospel hardened. Not so. It is hardened by a church who has only been playing at religion, and a ministry that has neglected the old fashioned themes of repentance, restitution, the judgment and retribution as realities.

Prophecy Proves Inspiration.

As we examine the Old Testament, we find about 600 predictions, more than 300 of which center upon the person, character and career of Jesus Christ as the Messiah. These prophecies cover the line of his descent, the time of his birth and manifestation, the place of his nativity, and all the great leading circumstances of his life, death, resurrection and ascension, with many subordinate details.

These prophecies were in their complete form at least four centuries before his birth, inasmuch as both the Hebrew Scriptures and the Septuagint or Greek translation, were both in the hands of the Jews, one about two, the other five centuries, at the least, before Christ was born. The circumstances which these prophecies describe are not only unprecedented in character, but there was no possibility humanly speaking, of the predictions being fulfilled. In fact, they were largely couched in paradoxes or seeming contradictions. God has designed to present a mystery wholly inexplicable until history proved itself the key fitted to the lock.—A. T. Pierson.

It is good often to visit the mountain top but our work lies mainly in the valley. The place pleasantest for us is not always the best place for us.

Our Daily Bread.

"Give us this day our daily bread."
This was the simple prayer we said
In childhood, at the mother's knee,
Like birds that clamor to be fed.
In their soft beds, no doubt nor dread
For all tomorrow's needs had we.

O Thou, who never yet hath ceased
To shed thy bounty o'er the least
Of all thy creatures, far and wide,
"Give us this day our daily bread,"
So shall we with thy love be fed,
And in thy fullness satisfied.

OUR NEW YEAR GREETING LETTERS.

Dear household of like precious faith:

We have been reading the New Year greetings from the dear ones scattered over the land, and feel that we would like to add our mite. How it is repeated in these greetings, "Oh how I love to read the letters from the dear ones of like precious faith," and I can only reecho the same sentiment. It is so encouraging to know that there are others who are looking for the same King, who will bring joy and gladness to the heart of every true believer. And oh, how it makes us long for that time, when we witness the sorrow about us, as it has been our lot to do in the last few days. Our dear Sister Graham of Tillamook, Ore. lost her husband by drowning, while at his work on New Year's day. Oh how our hearts are filled with sympathy for this bereaved family. We can only tell them to look unto their Lord and Savior for comfort and consolation. Who is there among us that has not some loved ones that we wish to meet on the resurrection morn.

Pray for me that I may be among the faithful at his coming.

GRACE LAWRENCE.

Dear brothers and sisters:

I am not personally acquainted with many of you, yet I feel like saying a few words to you through our good, old RESTITUTION. I am now in my 77th year and am still trying to defend the truth. My faith is growing stronger, notwithstanding the hand of time is wearing us all away little by little. I am the old brother that caused the new house of worship to be built in our midst, and we surely do appreciate the happy privilege of our little church home. We are always glad to meet with the little flock and listen to the reading of the Word of the Lord, and to the singing of spiritual songs and thereby making melody in our hearts to the Lord. Let us still fight on brethren and sisters, for soon the night cometh when no man can work. There are only a few of us here and yet we can claim the promise that where two or three meet in his name that he will be in the midst. My wife and I wish to be remembered in your prayers. We extend greeting to all, in the name of Jesus.

Your Brother in hope,
JOHN J. CRISE.

Virginia.

Dear ones of like precious faith:

"Grace, mercy and peace be multiplied unto you through a knowledge of Jesus our Lord." I wish to say that I am indebted to many of you for the good, encouraging letters I read in our good, old RESTITUTION, and while I have had the pleasure of personally knowing some of our Father's family, there are many that I have never seen in this life, and in all probability never will until he, who is our Life Giver shall appear. Then I hope to meet the general assembly and church of the first-born. Then as Brother Winca says in his good letter, have an introduction to many whose names have by reason of many years become almost as my own, and shall I be permitted to name some of them? Time and space would fail me to mention one-half the names that flash through my mind, as I write, so will try and content myself with naming a few of the many travellers who, like myself, have overtopped the mountain and reached the vale below. Bro. Joblin will pardon me I know, for putting him first on the list, as I have been benefitted so much by reading his good articles that appear in the paper. Others are, Isaac McCurry, Sr., Richard Corbaley, D. T. Halstead, Daniel Howard, Lott Clover, J. S. Hatch, J. F. Wagoner, S. Roxana Winca, D. C. Robison, C. W. Watkins, and last but not least, my old yoke-fellow, whom I have known in the Lord for half a century, T. E. Adams. If we shall only be accounted worthy to attain the world to come by a resurrection from the dead I am sure we shall need no introduction, if it is possible for spiritual beings to bear any likeness to a natural being. O for that better and more enduring substance that will never fade away.

Yours in hope of immortality.

"Thou will keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on thee, because he trusteth in thee." This is comforting to those whose trust is not in the things of this world, where all things are passing away. We realize this more each passing year, as we hurry on to the age which is soon to be ushered in upon us. Let us hold fast that we have, lest any man take our crown. Having been emancipated from sin, and having become bound to God, you have your fruit in sanctification and the end everlasting life. Paul says, "I severely discipline my body, and make it subservient lest possibly having proclaimed to others, I myself should become one unapproved." Trusting in the One who has said, "I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee." Taking courage we may say, "The Lord is my helper and I will not fear, what man can do to me." Let us hold out faithful to the end, that we may receive the unspeakable gift of eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord, our King, for whom we are expectantly waiting, and who will make right all the wrongs of the present evil age. Finally, brethren, may we stand complete and perfect, (through Christ) in the whole will of God.

HATTIE E. RUSSELL.

California.

Dear brothers and sisters:

As the year 1902 with all its joys, sorrows, crimes and gross darkness is numbered with the days gone by, yet I, a poor, weak mortal am still on the land and among the living, but have been sick for six weeks, confined to my bed for two weeks, but all through my sickness and trials I still rejoice in the hope set before me, ever looking to Jesus who is the author and finisher of our faith. I wish all the family of the one faith, a happy New Year. May the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be and abide with you all. May we all keep our eyes Zionward, ever watching for the Bright and Morning Star. O the darkness and gloom that hangs over the world, and the people that have not the true light seem to be drifting down the channel of time and will ere long land in the ocean of dark despair. The people are more for pride and sport than for Christ and his cause. I was reading an advertisement of a preacher's meeting, he said, "The subject for the evening discourse would be a public library and amusements." Well, he is but a hireling and will flee when the wolf comes. A man or woman that stands aloof from such, will be called all manner of names. Let us watch and keep our garments pure. What communion hath light with darkness? I am one of the isolated ones, among a people that do not want the gospel truth, but I am not ashamed to own my Lord nor to defend his cause, to maintain the honor of his Word. May he soon come and take to himself the throne and reign. I think the signs of the times indicate that the time is near at hand. May we ever be found ready and watching with our lamps trimmed and bright. The poet says:

"If you have not gold and silver
Ever ready to command,
If you cannot toward the needy
Reach an ever open hand,
You can visit the afflicted,
O'er the erring you can weep,
You can be a true disciple,
Working for our Master's cause."

As time rolls on and the dark clouds thicken in the east, and all nations are making themselves ready for the last great battle, proves to those that know the Word of prophecy that the end of Gentile times is near at hand, and then the veil will be taken off of Israel, then Christ will come, then we will say, "Lo this is our God, we have waited for him." "Come Lord Jesus, Come quickly."

Yours, looking for the Master.
JESSE HARROLD.

Editor Restitution:

I thought I would write a few lines to the household of faith. We love to read the many good letters in the columns of our paper. Many a pleasant evening has been spent in this way. Brother Macy, my wife and myself paid the Cleveland brethren a visit, it was our first visit to them and will long be remembered with pleasure, may God's blessing ever rest upon them. O what a pleasure, even in this life, when surrounded with sorrows and sickness, to meet those of like precious faith and talk one with another concerning the great and precious promises made to us; for by them we shall be partakers of the divine nature, if we are found faithful. Brothers and sisters, are we striving to serve the true and living God, as it becometh the saints of the Most High? Is our conversation and deeds such as becomes the stewards of the Lord? Paul says, in writing to the brethren at Corinth, that God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them, and hath committed unto us the word of reconciliation. Now then we are embassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us. Here we can readily see that God is through Christ and its followers reconciling the world unto himself. Does this company include us? Are we ever striving to keep such literature before our friends and in our homes as will lead them into the true light. Please permit me to say that THE RESTITUTION should come into no family second to anything except the Bible. The many good exhortations are very strengthening to the child of God. If they feel that they are not able to take it alone, two families can send for one copy. The Lord says we shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. Many little habits can be dropped that would fit us nearer for the kingdom that would more than save the price of the paper. Paul says we should present our bodies a living sacrifice, holy acceptable unto God which is our reasonable service. We must deny ourselves of all unreasonable lusts, and shun all appearance of evil. "Know ye not that to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey his servants ye are, to whom you obey, whether of sin unto death or of obedience unto righteousness. Let us therefore have our lamps trimmed and burning that we may be accounted worthy to accompany those heavenly messengers. Just think what company we must be fit to join in with. He will gather his elect from the four quarters of the earth, and whether we wake or sleep may it be our happy lot to hear the welcome call. While on our way to Cleveland we visited our dear Brother D. S. Morrow, who is 85 years old. We remained about three hours, which were filled with spiritual blessing.

Yours, in hope,
J. H. LEDMAN.

Dear ones of like precious faith:

As we have the opportunity of writing to each other through THE RESTITUTION, I think each one should do so, and let the brethren know that they are still trying to serve the Lord. It has been my desire to live to see the Lord come; but whether I do or not I shall strive to make my calling sure. For the last 45 years I have been trying to serve my God. I will soon be 77 years old the 8th of next April.

Your brother in Christ.

Random Thoughts.—No. 4.

Before proceeding with my topic as indicated, I want to look a little at God's judgments or penalties on the offenders. 1st, on the serpent, Gen. iii. 14, "And the Lord God said unto the serpent, Because thou hast done this, thou art cursed above all cattle, and above every beast of the field: upon thy belly shalt thou go, and dust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life; and I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed. It shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his (or its) heel." This is the penalty on the serpent, shall we take it as it reads, literally, or seek another meaning? Whether we seek a spiritual meaning or not, it seems to me to be literally true, and I see no reason for seeking any other meaning. The serpent is cursed above all cattle and beasts of the field, it does go upon its belly, it does eat dust with its food, and an enmity did exist, doubtless, between that serpent and Eve, and certainly exists today between the two seeds, or posterity of both parties, and in general, the woman's seed or posterity takes every opportunity to crush the head of serpents, and serpents are dangerous enemies to man. The enmity still exists between the two seeds and will continue a long time yet, for after the Lord comes, during the millennium or thousand years have commenced, and the Lord with his saints are reigning on Mount Zion, when the wolf and the lamb shall feed together, and the lion shall eat straw like the bullock.....and they shall not hurt nor destroy in all God's holy mountain, still even then "dust shall be the serpent 's meat." Isa. lxv. 25. And I take it to mean the natural serpent, and not a spiritual one. When will the punishment of the serpent end? or the enmity cease?

2nd, The penalty or punishment of the woman Eve. "Unto the woman he said, I will greatly multiply thy sorrow and thy conception; (or sorrows and conceptions in the plural) in sorrow thou shalt bring forth children; and thy desire shall be to thy husband, and he shall rule over thee." Gen. iii. 16. As with the serpent the penalty affected not only that serpent but his seed or posterity, so it is with the woman; not only was Eve to have great sorrow in bringing forth children, and to be subject to her husband, but her children would be subject to the same things. What was said to Eve as a wife, applies to all wives to this day, as seen by the teaching of the Apostles.

3rd, The penalty or punishment of the man Adam. "And unto Adam he said, Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy wife, and hast eaten of the tree of which I commanded thee, saying, Thou shalt not eat of it: cursed is the ground for thy sake; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life; thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth to thee; and thou shalt eat the herb of the field: in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken; for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." Gen. iii. 17-19. As in the case of the serpent and the woman, so in this case. The penalty not only affects Adam but his seed, or all his descendants. The curse still remains on the ground, and man has to work and labor to obtain his crop of wheat, corn and other food crops, while without his sowing seed or doing anything thorns, thistles, weeds, etc., will grow in abundance, making it necessary for him to obtain his bread by the sweat of his face, until he returns to the ground out of which he was taken, for "dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." This applies to us all, we are all sinners in Adam, and in him we all die. I know some people object to God's judgments, as being unjust, and would have had God done very differently if they could have been there to have advised him. But I venture to say, had they have been there, God would not have consulted them as to what he would do, any more than he did Adam or Eve who were there. God knew his purpose or plan, and had even told them beforehand, that if they ate of a certain tree they would certainly die, and so they did, and we do yet. But instead of being unjust, I may say that mercy triumphed over judgment, for he may have justly cut them off at once, instead of cursing the ground so that they would wear out in securing their food. From the law given to Adam forbidding his eating of that particular tree, "in that day thou eatest thereof, thou shalt surely die," it may be inferred that he would die the very day he should eat of it, but it would seem that on inquiring of the man, the woman was partly to blame, and then of the woman that the serpent deceived the woman, and so was much to blame, and therefore God punished them all, and the punishment ends in death. Sin when it is finished bringeth forth death. James i. The wages of sin was, is and will be death, even in the age to come—the millennium or 1000 years. "The soul that sinneth it shall die." Ezek. xviii. 4, 20. And so far as contained in these judgments, I see no ray of hope, not a hint of any life after they had returned to the dust. I know some do, but I cannot see any promise to the woman in what God said to the serpent. If God does not find a remedy, then certainly death would end all. And in that case the kingdom God had prepared for his obedient children would never be inhabited. But "known unto God are all his works from the beginning of the world." Acts xv. 18. And as he created the earth to be inhabited, so it will be done.

In John iii. 16, we read that, "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." I am aware that many in quoting this passage quote it, that he so loved the "world of mankind," thus limiting his love to "man kind." Now I admit that it includes mankind, but I think it includes more than that. I will now ask my readers to allow me to express some opinions, things that I think, but do not know, nor believe even as I have no plain testimony, but from what is written I think more was said or done. Now then, I think the world he so loved was the world he had made, and given the dominion of it to Adam, who was a part of it and was included in the expression, "And God saw everything that he had made, and, behold it was very good." Gen. i. 31. But how soon after sin entered, and death by sin, the sentence of death was passed upon all men, and the earth was cursed for his sake. Still I think that God said and revealed to Adam and Eve more than is written. In my opinion God revealed to them that he would send his Son who shall redeem them from death by dying himself, and he would be Lord of all. And that though he passed the sentence of death on them the very day, yet they should offer a sacrifice that day which he would accept, and spare their lives till later. Now I will give some reasons for my opinions. That they began to offer sacrifices that day I think, because we read that God made them "coats of skins, and clothed them." Now I know of no account that animals were slain for food till after the flood, and so I think they were slain, their blood shed for sacrifice. And Christ was the Lamb slain from the "foundation of the world." Rev. xiii 8. I think typically. Again I infer that they had some knowledge of the coming Lord from the names they gave to their sons. Eve named her first born Cain, acquired or gotten, saying I have gotten a man from the Lord. But I have seen a translation, which left the "from" out which read, read, I have gotten a man the Lord.' She believes that her first born was the Lord that was to come, named him "acquired" or "acquisition," because she had acquired or obtained the Lord who would be the Deliverer. So the next child born she named Abel—"vanity"—because as compared to her first born, the Lord, he would be but vanity; and this appears somewhat in their history.

Cain, her first born, being as she thought the Lord, would be allowed to do pretty much as he pleased; but Abel, vanity, would be kept in subjection, and be a good boy, but the other a bad boy; just as we see today, under such training or lack of training.

As time passes away they each one bring an offering, and God accepts of Abel's offering but not of Cain's. But why? Paul says "By faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain." From this it appears there must have been some testimony and that Abel did as appointed, but Cain as he pleased. God accepted of Abel's offering but not Cain's. This made Cain wroth, and the Lord asked him, Why art thou wroth? If thou doest well, shalt thou not be accepted? and if not sin, or sin-offering, lieth at the door. It was not then too late for him to offer the lamb according to appointment, which typified the Lamb of God who would be the antitype later.

Later, Enoch said "Behold the Lord cometh with ten thousands of his saints." Thus I am inclined to think our first parents and their children had more knowledge of God's purposes than is recorded.

Time Points.

On the threshold of a new year, a few time points seem pertinent.

1. Accepted chronology is Gentile, not Christian. The nations devise time tables for themselves—Christians as others, use them if they like. There is but one serious break, that in the time of the judges; and that affects only the age of the world, not the local dates before or since the judges; and that break is nearly repaired by Acts xiii. 20.

2. The 430 years sojourn was from B. C. 1921, Gen. xii. 4, to B. C. 1491, Ex. xii. 40, 41, making 430 years. The Douay Bible corrects Ex. xii. 40 by "Who dwelt in the land of Canaan and in Egypt. The time in Egypt was only about 200 years.

3. The common dates of Daniel's prophecies have not been impeached. Cyrus the Great was a contemporary of Daniel, and doubtless his personal and intimate friend; and on the taking of Babylon Daniel became his prime minister, and probably wrote or dictated Cyrus' decree for the restoration of the Jews. Ezra i. Though that decree mentions only the temple, its authority underlies and made necessary both the decrees of Artaxerxes, that in his seventh year warding off the enemies of the Jews and providing for the sacrifices and worship at the temple, Ezra vii., etc. that in his 20th year granting Nehemiah full powers and means "to restore and build Jerusalem, the street and the wall." Neh. ii. Dan. ix. 25. This last in B. C. 445, fixes the beginning of the 2300 days, Dan. viii. 14, and of the 70 weeks of Dan. ix. 24, 25.

4. The most distinguished Roman historians in the first Christian era, Pliny and Tacitus, were Pagans, and despised the Christians; thought them hardly worth speaking of. Our Luke is more than their peer—a very prince of historians. His history of our Lord and of the Acts of the Apostles, and especially of Paul's three missionary journeys, is unequalled in any language.

Note, in the three first chapters of his gospel, how masterly he fortifies, historically and chronologically, the first advent of our Lord. What a flood of historical light he spreads for the terminal of the 70 weeks. Dan. ix. 27, 27—the going out of the Jewish and the coming in of the Christian age.

5. The companion period of the 70 weeks, the 2300 days, Dan. viii. 14, and last half verse 27, ch. ix., from restoration from Babylon to restoration from hades, has been spreading its terminal halo around us so gradually we have hardly perceived it. Even the Man of Sin has grown quite saintly. Think of the growths of the last 100 years, on so many lines, for human weal. It seems as if the coming ages were casting their shadows before them. Sin abound? Yes; but grace much more abounds. The church must rouse itself to mightier endeavor; clothe and permeate itself with the Word of God; seize every vantage point, push every opportunity—but with the irresistible gentleness and love of pure Christian faith.

My Brother and Myself.

Just at this time we are much alike physically. We are only 100 miles apart, but it might as well be 10,000. He is anxious to visit me and I am anxious to visit him, but on account of extreme bodily weakness, we are not in a condition to venture that far from home.

He has recently lost his wife who has been his faithful companion for over sixty years. Now that she is gone he says he has nothing to live for—rather craves to be with her, and enjoy her companionship. Hopes to have a happy transfer to his home up yonder.

How very different my views since I have been reading your paper and other helps on similar lines. The Methodist minister asked me recently to tell him how I felt in view of the end being (to all appearance) near? I looked him firmly in the eye and told him that the enemy had me completely in his net, that all escape was cut off. He replied, But you talk so cheerful; most people are all broke up when they attempt to speak of death. You speak of surrendering this life like it was a matter of daily occurrence. The preacher did not appear to understand the secret of my courage, confidence. He does not understand the Scriptures. I reminded him that giving up mortal life was a matter of daily occurrence. I told you that my enemy had me completely under his net, and that even now treated me as his prisoner; and that I was looking for him every day to carry me off, and put me with his other captives. But I can meet all this undaunted, because the Lion of the tribe of Judah in due time, God's time, will rescue me from my enemy. He is stronger than the guards watching my prison, and in God's time will call me back to life. Then if I am found to be one of his own, to reign with him on the earth forever. I said to him, My Bible declares this to be God's plan, and I have faith in God.

He was not prepared to hear me express myself in this way. It was a puzzle—he did not seem to have any comment, except to say, You don't appear to be afraid of anything.

Faith in God removes slavish fear. Praise his name. My brother saying he has nothing to live for surely does not understand what he says. My life work also appears to be over, so far as providing for my family, but God may have something for me to do yet. A word of warning here, and a word of cheer there. We don't always know.

During the war the situation at the front often called for every man able to march. Then the old and slightly wounded were used to watch horses, stores, and minister to those in hospital. So brother and myself, if we cannot go to the front as once we could, must not think we are unfit for anything. "We can bear away the wounded, we can cover up the dead. Yea, we can magnify the grace of God by our patience in the midst of sore pain.

The Wisdom of Saloomoon. Chap. 19.

1. But over the irreverent an unmerciful anger stood unto a complete end; for their destined acts were foreseen.

2. That when they had turned from letting them go and from forwarding them with haste, they would change their minds and pursue after them.

3. For while they still held in their hands their objects of sorrow and were suffering woe at the graves of the dead, they were drawn on to another reasoning of folly: and those whom with beseeching they had cast out, they pursued after as fugitives.

4. For the necessity appropriate to this denouement befitted them, and made them unmindful of the consequences, that they might fill out the punishment that remained with extremities of trial.

5. And that thy laity might attempt a paradoxical wayfaring, but they find a strange death.

6. For all the creation in its generic origin was typically modulating again from above, serving with its own tributary injunctions that thy children might be kept uninjured.

7. The cloud that overshadowed the camp, and the rising of dry land from out pre-existent water were beheld, a most impassable way namely from out a Red Sea, and a verdure-bearing plain from out violent waving water.

8. Which those sheltered by thy hand, a whole nation passed through, when they had beheld wondrous prodigies;

9. For like horses they were pastured and like lambs they skipped, praising thee, O Lord their Deliverer.

10. For they still remembered the occurrences in their sojourning, how the earth instead of a generic creation of animals led forth a flea-pest, and the river instead of creatures that live in water belched forth a multitude of frogs.

11. And in a later period they saw a new generic creation of birds, because induced by an inordinate desire, they had asked for a sustenance of delicacies.

12. For in answer there went up from the west a flight of reed-birds unto them, and the reproving punishment came upon the obdurate sinners, not without definite proofs having occurred, in the violence of the bolts that fell; for they justly suffered for their own acts of wickedness.

13. Yea, indeed they devised a worse than ordinary hatred of strangers; for they did not receive unknown comers, and they reduced to bond-service strange benefactors.

14. And not only this, but what will be their visitation since they entertained the alienated brethren in a hateful way;

15. And after they had received these with festivities who had shared the same with the justified, they afflicted them with dreadful pains.

16. And they were smitten with want of vision when they were at the doors of the justified man, while environed with close darkness they each one was seeking the entrance of his doors.

17. For the primal laws are laws that interchange of themselves, as in a psaltry the notes change the name of the system, which the primal laws continue in sound, a thing which it is possible to accurately image by a glance at the events that occurred.

18. For waste-places of land were changed into watery-places, and passed over into swimming-places on the land.

19. Fire of its own dynamic-power became strong in water, and water ignored its dynamic-power to quench.

20. Flames conversely did not wither the flesh of truly corruptible living-beings walking about in them; nor did a truly meltable, crystaline kind of ambrosial (or heavenly) food melt.

21. For in every way didst thou, O Lord, magnify and glorify thy laity, and standing by them thou didst not disregard them in any given time and place.

COMMENT.

This closing chapter is a rapid review of the principal miraculous events that had previously occurred in God's personal and special leading of his chosen laity, and a philosophical disquisition of the how and why and wherefore of these "wonders and prodigies" as they are called. In this modern age of law and doubt, when the old foundations of faith in God's revealed Word are being undermined by so-called "Higher Criticism," the review of these old incidents in the divine historical record and the reiteration of them as facts must be of more than ordinary interest to the sincere seeker after the truth. The masterly analysis of the events and their import as herein given, to my mind bespeaks divine prescience and the inspiration of the author and his absolute conviction of this divine mastery begets assurance in the mind of the diligent and reverent reader. His explanation of "the interchange of the primal natural laws of the cosmos (or universe) of themselves" in their dynamic-power "like the notes in a psaltry," will be something new, I think, to scientists, and is not only an explanation of so-called "miracles" that is rational, but startlingly in harmony with and suggestive of some of most recent scientific published conclusions in regard to light and heat.

Hoping that the reader has realized the profit promised in the prefatory comment with which we started the translation of this old book so little known to Bible readers and scholars even, we leave the result in the hands of its divine Author, who as we are herein told handles his harmonium, the cosmos of the heavens and the earth with all its primal, immutable laws as doth the other master of the harmonic psaltry with its unchanging chords to change the rythmic time at his sweet will.

Dear Restitution:

During the year 1900 I spent some months in Pennsylvania. This visit will be long remembered by me, as it afforded opportunity to make many valued acquaintances, and gave me so many chances to contend for the faith. Among the new made friends was Brother Benner, for whom this is written. He, like myself was somewhat peculiar in his faith, and it was arranged that we should meet. I with other friends had visited the cemetery, and returning found Brother Benner was there, and after being introduced he said, Did you see the grave of my little boy? I replied that I did. Well he said, I don't want you to understand me to say that I have laid his body there, and that his soul has gone to heaven. I mean that I have buried my little boy, there to sleep until the resurrection.

This was of course appreciated by me as an introduction to his peculiar faith, of which I had heard so much said by those who held views differing from him. On further acquaintance I found him to be quite an able exponent of the Scriptures, and a more zealous worker for the Master I never met.

Of course, his exit from darkness to light had brought him through several of the present religious orders, and a common remark of his was, Well, I used to believe thus and thus, but since I have come to know God, I cannot predicate my faith on any thing else but a thus saith the Lord. I spent many pleasant hours with him and his family, and it seemed to be his chief delight to talk of the things of the kingdom and the name of Jesus Christ.

After I returned home I sent THE RESTITUTION to him, and he was so thankful for it, and wrote me and said, O, how foolish one can be not to take THE RESTITUTION; how much I have missed by not having it sooner. Why, it is worth more than its weight in gold. Yes, he said, it makes merry ahead in praise to God when I read the many good gospel sermons, and the kind letters from the dear brethren and sisters, whose hearts seem to be knit together in love and true fellowship.

Brother Benner had been an employee of the railroad for many years, during which time he was crippled, which injured his general health, till he was taken with cancer, and was a great sufferer. He bore it all with Christian fortitude, knowing that the enemy death could do no more than to take this natural life, for if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them that sleep in Jesus will God bring with him.

Brother John Benner fell asleep in Jesus Dec. 14th, 1902, and is waiting with all the ancient worthies till the resurrection morning, when the dead in Christ will rise.

May we all attain to that resurrection is the prayer of your sister in the one faith and hope.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money so sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Woodruff, Elizabeth, N. J.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

"The World to Come and the Life Everlasting," is the name of a book of over 400 pages. The title page describes it as a Symposium of Writers on eternal life from the Bible Basis, and is selected from the works of a goodly number of Bible Students who have written during the past few years. It is compiled and published by Bro. John O. Woodruff, of Elizabeth, N. J., of whom it may be ordered. The paper and print are excellent, as is the durable cloth-binding. TO OUR PATRONS.

We want more readers for THE RESTITUTION. We want One Thousand new names on our list for 1903, and can have them if you will help us.

In every Church of our faith in the land there are members who do not take our paper, who would be benefitted by reading it.

There are those who are isolated by circumstances from any Church fellowship, who would be kept firmer in the faith, helped and strengthened for the battles of life if they had THE RESTITUTION each week.

There are others interested in the truths we hold, who would often have their attention called to the principles of our faith by reading our paper. When no preacher can be heard, when you cannot talk to them, THE RESTITUTION in their homes would be ever a present visitor—a missionary that will do more than any other one thing to keep the interest alive.

There are those whom we wish were interested in the Bible and what it promises. Many of this class of people have never had the opportunity, or have neglected the matter when it was before them.

You are surely known to people such as are mentioned, and you are surely interested in them. We are satisfied you are not unmindful of their eternal well-being. How much do you care for these people? Will you join with us in getting the gospel before them, and keeping it there a year? We have this to offer to you for consideration.

We will send THE RESTITUTION one year to NEW Subscribers for $1.00. We will start them as soon as received and give credit to the end of 1903.

With a little persistent effort in presenting the paper to those you know who are not taking it, you can induce them to try it for $1.00. If you want some sample papers we will gladly supply them to you, and our list can be increased by 1000 names at once.

It can be done easily if you will act on this suggestion, and get those near you interested. If each reader would get a new name our list would be doubled at once.

It would seem as if every reader of THE RESTITUTION could exert influence enough to get one more new name if the effort was made. Will you try it? If the first person you suggest it to does not respond, do not be discouraged, but try some one else. Perhaps the one you least expect will answer quickest.

Did you ever stop to figure up how many words are contained in our paper in a year? You will be surprised at the number of sermons it contains. There is variety too. There is doctrine and the practical, encouragement and cheer, and comfort for the distressed. Each phase of teaching would make several good sized books during the year. You can do no work that yields as large a return for the money expended as by sending THE RESTITUTION to a friend for a year.

We ask you to go at this work and push it along with a will. The time is getting short, and if you can be the means in God's hands of gaining one more for the Master, it will pay for all your labor. We will send several of the back papers to all new subscribers so each will get more than the current year.

Will you not start right away and send one name, and next week when that person [illegible] paper, some one else will [illegible] you can send another.

Poetry.

The Sin of Omission.

It isn't the thing you do, dear,
It's the thing you have undone
That gives you a bit of a heartache
At the setting of the sun.
The tender word forgotten;
The letter you did not write;
The flower you did not send, dear,
Are your haunting ghosts at night.

The stone you might have lifted
Out of your brother's way,
The bit of heartsome counsel
You were buried too much to say;
The loving touch of the hand, dear,
The gentle, winning tone
Which you had no time or thought for
With troubles enough of your own.

These little acts of kindness
So easily out of mind,
Those chances to be angels
Which we poor mortals find—
They come in sight and sixes,
Each sad, reproachful wraith,
When hope is faint and flagging
And all ill has fallen on faith.

For life is all too short, dear,
And sorrow is all too great
To suffer our slow compassion
That tarries until too late;
And it isn't the thing you do, dear,
It's the thing you have undone
Which gives you the bit of heartache
At the setting of the sun.

"For I Fear."

We are wont to think that the churches in Paul's days were models of perfection, that all walked orderly, lovingly, harmoniously together, keeping themselves from sin and "steadfast in the faith." And yet when we review our blessed lesson book, we see that this was not the case, but that matters were then very much the same as they are now. There were the same divisions, false doctrines, debates, backbitings, whisperings, swellings, tumults, Judaisms, false apostles, hypocrits, quarrelsome persons, and men who would either "rule or ruin." Paul had the same fears, the same anguish of heart in reference to members of his congregations, that our dear ministers have in reference to theirs. You dear brethren, Hatch, Woodward, Joblin, Wagoner, Austin, Zilmer and Wince must learn that your trials are no greater than Paul's, nor half so great, and must also learn to "bear all things" for the sake of Christ, and in hope of "the exceeding great and precious reward."

It is hard, or so it seems to us, to work untiringly for years, through summer's heat and winter's cold, spending and being spent to win a family of dear children for Jesus, and then have many of them prove reprobates. No one but yourselves and God can know what you feel, nor count the tears you shed. But Paul did not give up nor become discouraged, and you must not. He being "a steward of the mysteries of God," and knowing that "it is required of a steward that he be found faithful" and that he that judgeth is the Lord, brought his brethren not to lust after evil things, nor to be idolators, nor to commit fornication (by following Baal-peor, and other false gods), nor to tempt Christ, nor to murmur, as many of our fathers sinned and murmured and "were overthrown in the wilderness," that "all these things happened unto them for examples and are written for our admonition upon whom the ends of the world are come," and even so, you being stewards, must beseech your brethren to avoid these and all other sins, because it is impossible that a church influence the world and draw others to Christ, when it is not itself walking in accordance with his laws. But not even Paul, apostle though he was, could keep every baptized believer in step with the meek and lowly One, nor can you. There will be unruly members in many a church until Jesus comes. For not all who start for the kingdom will run to the end and receive the crown. A little Japanese boy, an attendant at Sunday school, was asked by his father, "what had brought about the change in his life," and answered that, "the Christians had taught him, that if he would obey God, he must obey his parents, be good to his brothers, and not quarrel with his playmates,' and that "he had just been doing what they told him." Has not that little sentence in it the very spirit and quintessence of true Christianity? Doing just as we are told, putting Bible lessons into practice, being meekly, lovingly obedient, without questioning why, is what God requires.

A small boy applied for a position in a store, "Why, what can you do?" said the merchant, "I can do as I am told,' was the quick response. He was at once given the position, just as God will give the high places in the world to come to those who do as they are told. This is the lesson, the most important lesson that child or man can learn. The character that is not built upon obedience is all wrong, all awry. It will have no principle, no firmness, no foundation, and the first storm of temptation that comes, will blow it all to pieces.

To be obedient, is the only way to be a Christian. To be "hearers" and not "doers of the Word," does not amount to anything. Such professors of Christianity give the world no uplift, help no one forward on the way to the kingdom. But the doer, showing his love for Jesus by keeping his commandments, exerts a beneficial and saving power that it is impossible for mortal man to estimate. Be "doers of the Word" and you will be saviors of men. "For I fear" as Paul did, "lest ye be found such as I would not," and if so what will become of you 'in the day of the Lord Jesus?" Can he? Will he say, "Well done good and faithful servant enter into the joy of thy Lord?" What do you mean? What do you expect when you so utterly ignore all the Savior's commands as to your conduct in reference to each other? Your hearts full of evil surmisings and of envy, and under your tongues, the poison of asps? It will not do, dear ones. If you want to be saved, and want to save others, you must be changed, stop surmising evil of your neighbors. Brother so and so was only after a mouse, and his wife was trying to help him catch it, when you thought he was chasing her with the broom stick. We misjudge our brethren many a time because we do not understand the nature of their errands. The selling of some stock that is not needed does not imply that the man who sells it has quarreled with his wife. She may be needing a new stove, and he be taking this way to get it. And what if one member with intense love for the Master steps forward, and tries to do all that is in his or her power for your good in your little gatherings? Is it a matter of envy and dislike? Why cannot we all be Christ like? Why will we not? Is it because we do not understand?

"The Father, his glory and his will were all in all to Jesus," it ought to be all in all to us, as it was to the Japanese boy. "This is the key note of Christ and of the Christ life." I would I could make you see it. You cannot lift yourself up, you cannot make yourself be good. There must be a spring in your heart that will respond to the touch of your Father's hand. If you love him, no trouble then! The strong will support the weak, the weak will love the strong, and each and all will "bear one another's burdens and so fulfil the law of Christ."

As a recent writer says, "The rawest recruit in the ranks of a patriot army—one who could not understand the use of a single step in his drill, or imagine the meaning of strategy, or have the least idea of the political or legal rights at issue, can as clearly recognize the great object of the war, and lay down his life for it with as high a sentiment of patriotism as any general or statesman, president or king that is over him. Exactly so the Christ's recruit, though but a babe in Christ can feel the transcendant rights of the Father of mankind, and the supreme interests of his kingship and his kingdom, as they are emphasized in the first words of the Lord's prayer, no less keenly, if not more so than the greatest theologian. You can. You can be true patriots in the cause of your King. You can fight faithfully for him by putting down all evil surmisings, envyings, evil speakings. It is his cause that will suffer if you give way to these. You are no true patriot, but a traitor, if you let the devil get the better of you in any of these things. You have each a post to guard, see that the enemy does not take it. "Be not deceived, God is not mocked, for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." Put away the works of the flesh." Gal v. 19, 20, 21, "They which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God." And "variance" and "strife" are enumerated among the things that shut us out of the kingdom. Do not let any of the ministering brethren say of you, "For I fear." "Be perfect, be of good comfort, be of one mind, live in peace, and the God of love and peace shall be with you."

S. ROXANA WINCE.

Gospel of the Kingdom of God Endangered in Scotland.
No. 4.

"We ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard lest at any time we should let them slip." Heb. ii. "With one mind striving together for the faith of the gospel." Paul.

The importance of this subject will not be disputed by readers of THE RESTITUTION. The gospel of the kingdom of God had been lost centuries. It had been providentially recovered some fifty years ago, and has been since professed by many as "the faith once delivered to the saints." Any attempts to degrade this gospel from its primal and truly fundamental position, especially by such as profess to be its friends, can only be met by calm remonstrance and plain Scripture testimony.

This question has been dealt with in three preceding papers in THE RESTITUTION. Notice was taken of certain articles published in the Messenger (Glasgow); as also of certain queries with answers. These all showed a laxity as to the gospel of the kingdom of God, with a tendency to lessen its importance in comparison with other important truths such as the death and resurrection of our Lord, etc.

The latest article noticed, (Messenger, Sept. 2, 1902) was on the question of the apostles, "Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?" The drift of this paper, as indeed of those already mentioned, was to favor an idea that a "preliminary stage" of the Millennial kingdom had come into existence in the first century. If this preliminary stage" of the millennial kingdom be not the Church, it is destitute of any basis of fact or testimony in the New Testament. If it be merely the Church that is meant by it, why use the term "preliminary stage" of the kingdom? Why should plain teachings concerning the kingdom of God and the Messiahship of Jesus, be made to bend to a mere human conceit, or what can only truly be called a myth? Col. i. 13 is a mistranslation, and cannot rule other Scripture statements of an entirely opposite character.

G. G. M. said, "If perfect accuracy of belief in the true realization of the Messiahship is affirmed to be quite vital to discipleship, it is difficult to see how they (the apostles and first disciples) possessed it." It is forgotten here that the difficulty with the Jews was not to understand the nature of the Messiahship, but to believe that Jesus was the Christ. Believers were threatened with expulsion from the synagogue. The phrase "perfect accuracy" is used here as if it were something quite different from simple knowledge. The idea suggested is that the Messiahship embraces a wider range of functions than royalty, and so to favor the idea of a "preliminary stage" of the kingdom. It is pertinent here to ask, when Samuel anointed Saul and David had he not "perfect accuracy" in his realization of what it betokened? This finds an answer in his own words—addressing Saul he said—"the Lord anointed thee king over Israel." 1 Sam. xv. 1, 17, etc. When Nathaniel confessed, "Thou art .....the King of Israel," had he not "perfect accuracy" as to the Messiahship? When the apostle Peter said "the Christ he ... been raised up to sit on David's throne," was his accuracy not quite "perfect"?

If the mission of our Lord had been to Italy or Spain instead of Judea and Galilee, his Italian or Spanish disciples would require a definition both of the kingdom and of the Messiahship. The Jews were under so much necessity. So in a Gentile city, Thessalonica, we find that Paul in preaching "[the] Christ," brought upon himself the charge of saying that "there is another king, one Jesus." There were in this city among the believers, "of the devout Greeks a great multitude."

Again, G. G. M. speaks of the "common restricted idea of royalty in relation to the Christhood." Here is another insinuation of complexity of the Messiahship, consequently favoring the so-called "preliminary stage" of the kingdom. It is forgotten here that besides the Messiahship—("royalty")—our Lord had several offices—he was made "both Lord and Christ;" he was a "PROPHET like unto Moses;" he was made PRIEST (Psalm cx.) Can any one doubt, then, that the "restricted idea of royalty in relation to the Christhood" is the only true sense of that office?

It is said also speaking of our Lord "He was the great Christ of God, not only in view of glory to be revealed, but the Christ then in fact—the King of Israel—and I see no cause to postpone the fact." This is simply destitute of a particle of proof. How did our Lord view his so-called "royalty" in fact? "One said to him, Master speak to my brother that he divide the inheritance with me. And he said to him, Man, who made me a ruler or a divider over you?" Luke xii. 13, 14. As prophet or teacher he said to the company, "Beware of covetousness," etc. Apropos of this we read that David was the anointed or the Christ for several years before he became King in fact over Israel.

Suppose one were to try to find some material facts whereby to prove a "preliminary stage" of the millennial kingdom, it would be found that they all resolve themselves into the institution known as the church. Christ is the "Head of his body, the church;" he is "Head over all things to the church; raised above all principality and power and every name that is named, not only in this world but also in that which is to come;" "all power is given unto him in heaven and in earth;" called "Lord of all;" seated on the Father's throne; "crowned with glory and honor." If any one is pleased to say that the above statements imply a "preliminary stage" of the kingdom, he ought plainly to say so, and show how it is thereby proved.

The professing Christian world boldly claim that the church is the kingdom. Rev. Dr. James Macknight has a note on Matt. xix. 28 where our Lord says "in the regeneration when the Son of Man shall sit on the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit on twelve thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel." The note is, "The apostles were to be Christ's ministers; next the Messiah in dignity and office, by whom he was to govern the church."

If the author referred to had suggested certain preliminary elements of the kingdom the matter would have been feasible enough. It would have a solid basis of fact to rest on. Our Lord spoke of "the kingdom prepared from the foundation of the world." This epoch was at least as early as the time of Abraham, for Jesus also said Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, with all the prophets would be seen in the kingdom of God; probably as early as Abel, etc. See Heb. xi. Again, the territory of the kingdom was pointed out to Abraham. The initial elements of the kingdom were covenanted at Sinai, and came into formal existence under Saul and David, which continued till overturned under Zedekiah. The descendants of the twelve tribes still await promised gathering and restoration. The King has been born and Anointed, and has been raised from the dead to sit on David's throne.

The foregoing are all but preliminary or preparatory elements of God's coming kingdom. They all await the time—"the set time" to "favor Zion."

I am reminded here of a statement of Alexander Campbell who strongly held the church to be kingdom. In the British Millennial Harbinger for Mar. 1858, he says, "No one after the events of that day (Pentecost) could, with any propriety, pray 'Thy reign or kingdom come.'" Apropos of this, I find in the ritual church service of the Christian Scientists, that the only outward form of prayer used by them is the Lord's prayer. The congregation repeats each petition after the minister. Between each petition, however, there is interjected by another official, an extract from their text book. As regards the petition "Thy kingdom come," the extract gives "Thy kingdom is come".....Why use this petition if it has already been answered?

The ultimate relation between the kingdom and the Messiahship is shown by the way the Apostle John sets forth the Messiahship as truly fundamental. In his gospel (xx. 31), he says, "These are written that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ the Son of God, and that believing ye might have life through his name." In his 1 Epistle ii. 22, he asks "Who is a liar but he that denieth that Jesus is the Christ?" In 2 Epistle ver. 7, he says "Many deceivers are entered into the world who confess not that Jesus Anointed is come in the flesh.....whosoever transgresseth [taketh the lead"—marg. R. V.] and abideth not in the doctrine of [the] Christ hath not God .....If there come any unto you and bring not this doctrine receive him not into your house, neither bid him God speed." If Jesus did not come in the flesh, he was not the son of David, and therefore not the Messiah.

Dear brothers and sisters:

Sin saves the world from the social and national effect of sin. Our space will not permit us to enlarge, but it is Jesus who has emancipated the slave, who has elevated womanhood, who has rescued childhood from the blight of heathenism, who has elevated society to all the culture and civilization of our times and who is preparing the earth for his coming kingdom and his glorious reign, when war shall be an ancient memory, and the Christmas Jubilee shall echo around a millennial world, "Glory to God in the highest, Peace, Good will toward men." Jesus saves his people not only from their sins, but to a glorious destiny whose height of glory only eternal ages will reveal. The cradle of Bethlehem was the birthplace of a blessing as big as the universe of God, as long as eternal ages, and as high as the heights of heaven, we see only it's beginning. "It doth not yet appear what we shall be," but some day, perhaps the constellation of glory and the myriads of redeemed in the new heavens and earth shall still be keeping their happy Christmas and remembering him whom God sent not only to save lost men, but "to reconcile all things in earth and all things in heaven." A preacher recently used the following illustration: "Once there was a brier growing in a ditch, and there came along a gardener with a spade. As he dug around it and sifted it out, the brier said to itself, What is he doing that for? Does he not know that I am only a worthless brier? What a mistake he has made, planting an old brier like myself among such rose trees as these." But the gardener came once more with keen-edged knife, "made a slit in the brier," and as we say, "budded," it with a rose, and by and by, when summer came, lovely roses were blooming on that old brier. Then the gardener said, Your beauty is not due to that which came out, but to that which I bud into you." This is just what God is doing all the time with poor human lives, Christ takes them in hand, pours his love upon them, lifts them up out of the dust. Puts something of his own life into them, and by and by they begin to be like him.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the full restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, FEB'Y 11, 1903.

WE have decided to continue our special offer as given on our first page through the month of February. The back papers can all be supplied, so each will get the full year's number. Will you not see if there is not some one else in your church or neighborhood who will be benefitted by this arrangement. The "signs" are getting plainer that the time for work is short, so make an effort and do all you can for the cause of Christ NOW. Next year may be too late.

IN godly sorrow the whole bent of the mind is turned against sin.

WHAT wonderful condescension! God beseeches men to be reconciled to him.

CHASTENED sorrow leads us to prayer, but inordinate grief hinders devotion.

IF God and an enlightened conscience approve, it matters but little who may condemn.

NEVER expect God's blessing but in the use of means which he has appointed. He will be enquired of.

TO TALK Christ is comparatively easy, but to act out his self-sacrificing life again is quite a different thing.

THE famine in Sweden gets worse, and on account of snow and cold relief cannot be sent to the starving people.

IN the Pacific ocean a hurricane and tidal wave devastated the Society Islands, and thousands of people were killed.

AS THE precepts of God's Word flow as directly from the love of God as his promises, he that despises either precepts or promises insults the love of God.

A COMMUNICATION from Bro. Zilmer dated Feb. 2, tells of meetings he is holding in Clinton Co. Ind. Five were baptized the day before, and another one made the good confession in the evening.

WE read that the carnal mind is enmity against God; from this it follows that the more the carnal mind understands of God's will as revealed in the Bible, the more it will manifest its opposition to it.

BEING in South Bend last Sunday visiting our son, we had the pleasure of attending the services of the little band there, and enjoying the fellowship of the warm hearted brethren and sisters who worship in the Hall on Michigan Street. Brother J. F. Wagoner was there and preached morning and evening.

THE headlines in the daily papers are of interest to those of our readers who are watching the movements of the nations. For years statesmen have predicted that from the Balkans will come the start of the war that will materially change the status of the powers of the world. That they may be right in this prediction looks probable. "Europe expects war in the Balkans. Armies on the frontier. Probability of peace beyond a few weeks less than probability of a conflict. Russia and Austria massing troops ready to strike direct at Turkish power. Russia to drive the Turk from Europe. Long expected war to seat the Czar at Constantinople now believed to be near at hand. Sultan ready to fight. Orders issued for the prompt mobilization of nearly a quarter of a million soldiers." This will give an idea of the situation. In Macedonia and other Balkan states the Turks have become so oppressive that a revolution is expected soon as the spring opens. Russia appears to have figured out that this is the time to interfere, and while aiding the insurgents force the Sultan out and take charge of his European territory. It seems that Austria is to join in, and of course get a share of the spoils. Whether the other powers will allow this to be done, and ask for a share, or whether there will be resistance, is yet to be seen—as no one has so far declared his intentions. Meanwhile the scare over the Venezuela affair seems to have subsided, and it is now likely to be settled without war. We do well to keep close watch and note the movements of the nations, for the clash will come ere long.

AN earthquake along the west side of Illinois and south into Kentucky, was felt Feb. 8. No serious damage is reported.

BE particular in the choice of your companions; they should be spiritual, self-denying believers; if they are not they will injure you by their spirit and example.

"READER, slander is a deadly poison; mind how you treat it. The following are safe directions for its use: Always make it a rule to think twice before listening to a slander; and think three times before repeating it. Its use would soon be avoided."

"THE grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all, world without end." Why do not people think? How can they sing of the heavens passing away if the world has no end? Verily, they have blind guides. Truly they have turned their ears from the truth, and are turned unto fables.

True Knowledge.

"Man look about him, seeking to know where he is, what he is, and whither he is bound. What shall I do? he asks himself. Who owns the key of knowledge? Where shall I find a reliable guide? To his questions he would receive different answers from different persons. A follower of Darwin would recommend him to read Darwin's works. The atheist would say, Read Bradlaugh or Ingersoll. Those who follow men of philosophical minds, would each adduce evidence of the truthfulness and reasonableness of their particular theory. Yet they are destructive of each other. He reads one author, and another; his library is a complication of profane and sacred literature.

Here is a store of master minds. Here is the world's wisdom. After he has spent years in search of truth; what has he found? Perplexity, and very likely infidelity, or a careless disregard for everything that goes just beyond his own ideas. Can he decide? Whose doctrine is he to accept? Who of these assumers are perfect in their knowledge? We do well to ask ourselves those questions, for they will render in us the true spirit, and, if answered, teach us another leaf out of nature's book of vanity.

Turn, O man, to the only book of worth, the only record of truth. Seek within its pages for that pearl. Read it with the same earnestness that you have read the current philosophy of the day, and there alone can you find the problem of human life and destiny fully solved. God's Word has stood through ages, while these dreamers have vanished with their works into the region of forgetfulness, and this fact sends home to us the words,—"Put not your trust in princes," and "What is man?" O man, this revelation from the Most High is a literary gem that is passed by many a poor, wandering pilgrim; but it shines in splendor that cannot be eclipsed to him who is the happy and successful finder.

The Christian Life.

"Did a holy life consist of one or two noble deeds—some signal of doing or enduring, or suffering, we might account for the failure and reckon it small dishonour to turn back in such a conflict. But a holy life is made up of a multitude of small things. It is the little things of the hour, and not the great things of the age, that fill up a life like that of Paul or John. Little words, not eloquent speeches or sermons; little deeds, not miracles, nor one great heroic act or mighty martyrdom,—make up the true Christian life. The little constant sunbeam, not the lightening; the waters of Shiloh, "that go softly in their meek mission of refreshment, not the water of the river, great and mighty," rushing down in torrent noise and force,—are the true symbols of a holy life.

"The avoidance of little evils, little inconsistencies, little weaknesses, little indiscretions and imprudencies, little foibles, little indulgencies of self and the flesh, little acts of indolence, or indecision or slovenliness, or cowardice, little equivocations, or aberrations from high integrity, little touches of shabbiness and meanness, little bits of covetousness and penuriousness, little exhibitions of worldliness and gaiety, little indifferences to the feelings and wishes of others, little outbreaks of temper, or crossness, or selfishness, or vanity; the avoidance of such things goes far to make up at least the negative beauty of a holy life. And then attention to the little duties of the day and hour, in public transactions and private dealings, or family arrangements; to little self-denials, and thoughtful consideration of others; to little words and tones,—little benevolences, or forbearances, or tenderenesses, to punctuality and quiet kindness and true aim in the ordering of each day,—these are some of the active developments of a holy life, the rich and divine Mosaics of which it is composed. What makes you green hill so beautiful? Not the outstanding peak, or stately elm, but the bright sward which clothes its slopes, comprised of unnumerable blades of slender grass. It is of small things that a great life is made up; and he who acknowledges no life as great save that which is built up of great things, will find little in Bible characters to admire or copy.

An Address.

"FULL OF THE SECOND COMING."

During the past week I read of a minister who, with visible disgust in his countenance turned away from two friends with whom he had been conversing, and said, "Full of the second coming." Brethren and sisters, do you want proof that the Apostle Peter was a true prophet of God? You may have it in the third chapter of his second epistle: "Knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, (or desires) and saying, where is the promise of his coming? For since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation!" From what you personally know of the attitude of the religious bodies in so-called Christendom today, and illustrated by the remark of the gentleman just quoted;—you cannot doubt that the Spirit spake by Peter when he said scoffers would come in the last days, saying, Where is the promise of his coming? All things continue as they have for ages,—and there is no sign of a change. Take notice of the language that this is not the scoffing of reprobates or infidels, against the religion of the Bible altogether; but professed believers in the Scriptures, but scoffers of the doctrine of the second coming of Christ. The mass of the religious teachers of today have no use for the doctrine of the second coming of the Lord Jesus, simply because there is no place for it in the systems they have adopted, and teach.

What do you suppose that gentleman was full of, who turned away from his friends in disgust because they were "full of the second coming?" I think it almost certain that if he was full of anything at all, it was the first coming. The first coming is all they care to know anything about, as a rule. They are ignorant of the fact that the glorious appearing of Jesus was the blessed hope of apostolic times. They do not seem to know that he only appears to salvation to them that "love his appearing." Do not seem to know that he brings his reward with him when he comes,—but what blinds them to these grand truths is, that they suppose they go to him at death, and so see no use of his coming here again. Is it not strange that a professional expounder of the Scripture should be ignorant of what the Apostle says in Rom. iv. 25, that Jesus our Lord was "delivered for our offences, and was raised again for our justification;" that belongs to his first coming, and proves that the death of Christ avails nothing; and notwithstanding his death on our behalf we were today without a Savior if he had not been raised again, and become the first born from the dead. No others could have been born from the dead if he had not been. And being dead, he of course could not have declared himself as the resurrection and the life of all who believe in him; and, indeed, we could not exercise faith in him, for justification, if he remained in the tomb. And then what? Why then he could not again appear as our life, so that we may appear with him in glory, as the apostle says we shall if we hold fast to the end. Why, the disgusted gentleman ought to have known that the New Testament is fuller of the second coming than his friends were. Bickersteth says that "at least one verse in thirty in the New Testament relates to the second coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." In 260 chapters there are 318 passages that relate to the Lord's return.

The gentleman ought to have known that Peter, James and John and Paul were full of it; and that Christ was full of it. He proclaimed it in his ministry, taught it in his parables, declared it in his prophecies, represented it in his transfiguration,—enforced it in his warnings,—memorialized it in his last supper; and by angelic announcement at his ascension. And then the blessed Jesus, after his exaltation and glory re-iterated it to his beloved disciple John on Patmos,—and then closed his wonderful revelation with, "Behold I come quickly; surely I come quickly."

Beloved, if he comes not, there will be no resurrection, no translation, no immortality, no crown, no restitution, no kingdom. Upon the second coming of our Lord hang all the unfulfilled precious promises of God, and the glorious hope of his people. Let this truth come home to us with power; that but for the coming again of Jesus—death would be a finality to all classes; "for they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished," if Christ be not risen and appear again with life for us, that we may appear with him in glory. In view of these things, ought not we to be full of the second coming? In view of the nearness of his coming as indicated by the lapse of time since its first announcement, and by the signs of the times, is it not marvellous that we are not more full of it! What theme so well calculated to impress the mind, touch the heart, and elevate the character? What is so calculated to lead us out of the routine of everyday experience? What affords such boundless suggestion to the imagination and at the same time satisfies the intellect with explicit testimony, and appeals to the emotions with hopes of joy inexpressible? And besides all this, there is in the conviction that the Lord is at hand, and may come at any moment, such an incentive to watchfulness and preparedness as cannot fail to influence us for good. It would have been strange indeed if this most important item of the gospel,—this hope of the true believer of every age, the return of the Lord, had been stated in the Bible as a sort of abstract truth, and not clearly shown what relation it sustains to the duties of life, and the development of holiness, without which no one can see the glories of the world to come. The divine teaching does not so much lay down general principles and leave us to discover their application, as to set forth instances and illustrations through which the principle is made manifest. We do not read so much that a man's faith and hope have a powerful influence upon his life and character; but the New Testament is simply full of examples of this. The practical bearing of everything is shown. Historic events are recalled; human nature in all its black reality is revealed. The love of God is described and exemplified. The Son of God the Savior of men is set before us, and the purpose of it all seems to be as much to develop noble character and encourage holy living, as to clear the mental vision, and dispel error.

Let us for a moment glance at apostolic testimony and see how it represents the Lord's coming as an incentive to holiness, in fact to every godly trait. But I would make one more preliminary remark before advancing. It is not the simple fact that the Lord is coming to which we should look as supplying moral incentive, but also, and indeed, most of all, to what lies beyond that coming. I am persuaded that there are many believers in the pre-millennial coming of Christ whose thoughts and convictions hardly go beyond that point,—forgetting that the dawn is not the day, but only its glorious opening.

In 1 John iii. 3, it says,—and it is a heart-searching statement of the Spirit for every one of us. Every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself as he is pure. To me this language teaches that the purifying process commences with the hope, and continues,—ever continues to the end of life's journey.

It would seem impossible to exaggerate the importance of this doctrine. It is the motive to watchfulness. Matt. xxv. 13. To sobriety—watch and be sober. 1 Thes. v. 2-6. To repentance. Acts iii. 19-21. To fidelity. Luke xix. 12, 13. "Occupy till I come." Not to be ashamed of Christ. Mark viii. 38. "Whosoever therefore shall be ashamed of me and my words," etc., of him also shall the Son of Man be ashamed when he cometh in the glory of his Father with the holy angels. To moderation or mildness. "For ye have need of patience." ....."For yet a little while he that shall come will come and will not tarry." Heb. x. 36. To the mortification of the flesh. Col iii. 3-5. For the sanctification of the whole being. The God of peace sanctify you wholly, and I pray God your whole spirit, soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. 1 Thes. v. 23. To induce obedience to Apostle's injunctions. 1 Tim. vi. 13, 14, to pastoral diligence "Feed the flock of God,".....And when the chief shepherd shall appear ye shall receive a crown of glory." 1 Peter v. 2-4. To abide in Christ, 1 John ii. 28. To bear persecution [illegible] holy conversation [illegible] Pet. iii. 11-13. Brotherly love. 2 Tim. iv. 7, 8. To look for him, Heb. ix. 27, 28. It is the source of consolation to the bereaved. 1 Thes. iv. 14. It is proclaimed every time the Lord's supper is partaken of, "For as often as ye eat this bread and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord's death till he come." 1 Cor. xi. 26. Such are a few of the uses made of the doctrine of Christ's second coming in the New Testament, to say nothing of the numerous allusions in the Old Testament. It is employed to arm every appeal, to point every argument, and enforce every exhortation. Can the same be said of any other doctrine in all the Book of God? I think not! In the New Testament it is the great event that towers above every other. The heaven that gives back Christ, gives back all we loved and lost,—solves all doubts and ends sorrows. His coming looks in upon the whole church as a lofty mountain peak looks in upon every little valley around it base and belongs to them all alike. Every generation lies under the shadow of it,—because whatever is transcendently great is always near, and absorbs all petty interests and annihilates intervals.

Say, brethren and sisters, do you think we can get too full of the second coming? I do not see how we could, for faith looks back to the cross and is at peace; it looks forward to crown and paints for glory. O to have more of the life and power of such a faith, that we may, amid the trials of life and the abounding iniquity be able to rejoice in the Lord always. I sometimes feel astonished that I do not more deeply realize the exalted position I occupy as an heir of God and joint-heir with Christ,—especially when I see proof of the utter blindness of the religious world generally. I yesterday read an extract from the British Weekly, saying that Prof. Beet of that country argued that the gospel was making great progress in the world, and that it was very unlikely that this victorious march of Christ would be interrupted before it has run its course; no; the master will arrest the wheels of time only when they are running not for good, but for evil." What an awful statement. You see from this they are bound to convert the world themselves as they have laid out to do it, so that there will be nothing for him to do when he comes but enjoy a sabbath of a thousand years! for that theory,—the Spirit has said his work will be before him when he comes and reign in the midst of his enemies at first. Principal Edwards, also of England, in discussing the subject of the second coming of Christ, said:—"Surely it is well, not even to wish to bring Christ down again." Is it not painful in the extreme to read these statements? How in the name of truth and common sense, would these men treat the Lord's last message, "Surely I come quickly." They to all intents and purposes send back the reply, "No, no, Lord, that would be a mistake. We are getting along very well with thy cause. Thou canst help us far better where thou art. Do not come for awhile yet Lord, and then we will have the world ready to receive thee." This is no exaggeration of their attitude. But what a contrast to John's response to the Lord's message. Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus; quickly come. I trust every one of us who has named the name of Christ can heartily say amen with John. I trust every adopted child of God present is so living that he or she feels like shouting aloud for joy for having been caught in the gospel net; for having been called out of darkness into God's marvelous light; and that the glorious appearing of Jesus is a matter of hourly expectation, because it is positively of immediate probability. Each waning moon brings it nearer. Each setting sun brings it nearer. Each chime of the clock,—each beat of the pulse brings it nearer. "Now is our salvation nearer than when we believed." Let us, then, lend a listening ear to catch the faintest echo of the foot-falls of our coming Lord, and be often asking, "Watchman what of the night,—and then work and wait and watch" and pray, looking for that blessed hope, for we read in the parable that at "midnight there was a cry made, Behold the Bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him." But I may say to you, we have been warned not to take this literally, because it cannot be at midnight for all the world, as one side of the globe is dark and the other light at the same moment. But our Lord's picture of this event answers perfectly to this fact. It brings into the picture a day scene, a night scene, and a twilight scene. "I tell you in two wome[illegible] mid-day su[illegible] one shall be ta[illegible] ther left. It looks from this [illegible] the lightning flash of his parousia would encircle the world in a moment. Realistic in the highest degree is the picture,—no halt, to burnish the armor for the grand review. No pause in life's drama for shifting the scenery before the final act is introduced! In an instant those who are ready are changed. You are all doubtless familiar with the story of Christ walking on the Sea of Tiberias. He had gone up into the mountain apart to pray. I think this is an enacted parable for us. The church is now in the midst of the Sea, tossed this way and that with contrary winds. In the fourth watch of the night he comes to her, walking upon the sea. For a moment they fear and are troubled, but soon hear his voice, saying, "Be of good cheer, it is I; be not afraid." These words will calm all storms and end all fears. I feel sure you all agree with me that we cannot be too full of the second coming. Why, that is what the Spirit itself calls that blessed hope. How could we cherish it too ardently? It is for this we have forsaken all; it is for this we live in preparation. That glorious time when the light of happy homes will no more go out,—when broken ties shall be re-knit,—lost links will be found,—all hearts shall be bound,—no heart shall break and there is fullness of joy for evermore. What a blessed thought—there'll be no sorrow there; there will be no necessity for the discipline of sorrow; no pride to be humbled,—no covetousness to be dissolved,—no more earthliness to be broken up,—no more evil to be extracted, for we shall be holy as he is holy; no more death, and we shall ever be with the Lord, and there shall be what some one sings so well.

No sickness there, no weary wasting of the frame away;
No fearful shrinking from the midnight air;
No hidden grief.

O let us unitedly pray, Come Lord Jesus, quickly come. Amen.

"Baptized for the Dead."

"In order to get at the meaning of this expression in 1 Cor. xv. 29, we must bear in mind Paul's argument in the preceding verse. His object is to prove the resurrection of the dead. He reasons in this way:—If the dead rise not, Christ is not raised, he is dead and ye are yet in your sins; your faith, therefore, is vain, and those fallen asleep in Christ are perished. But Christ is risen, therefore the dead rise. The resurrection and its results are elaborated to the end of the 28th verse. Then, resuming at verse 29, Paul says: "Else what shall they do who are baptized for the dead, if the dead rise not at all?" "Why are they then baptized for the dead?" Here Paul cites the present position of the believer in proof of the truth of his contention; and the Corinthian believers would feel the force of this argument. They had been baptized into Christ. They, therefore, were buried with him in baptism. Col. ii. 12. Baptized into his death. Rom. vi. 3. Why were they buried with him by baptism into death? The answer is, "That like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life; for if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection." Rom. vi. 4. Therefore we understand Paul's meaning to be: "Else, or if this be not so,—if the dead rise not at all, and Christ be dead, what shall they do, which are baptized into him? Why are we baptized into him if he be not raised?" Or, in other words, "Believers are baptized into the death of Christ that they may be in the likeness of his resurrection; but if the dead rise not, Christ was not raised, and their baptism was useless. Why, then, if you believe the dead rise not, are believers baptized? Their baptism into death,—to die to sin and rise to righteousness, is opposed to the teaching that the dead rise not. For if Christ rose (and you testify to this fact by baptism) it follows that there is a resurrection of the dead." Hence we submit the following paraphrase of the passage: "Else, if it be not as I say, and there is really no resurrection of the dead,—what shall they do who are being baptized for, or on behalf of one of the dead, which Christ is, if the dead rise not, why then are they baptized for one who belongs to the dead?"

If you say, "I am hedged about, I can do nothing, and fain would help, but cannot," your very longing is help. It is never true that we are not helpers where the fervent heart is. there is the serv[illegible] God, and unto him comes ac[illegible] work, there reward.—[illegible]

You.

Casting [illegible] him, for he careth [illegible] 1 Pet v. 7.

What can it mean? Is it aught to him
That the night-watches long and the days are dim?
Can he be touched by the griefs I bear,
Which sadden the heart and whiten the hair?
Around his throne are sweet psalm-notes,
And strong, glad music of happy psalms,
And bliss unruffled by any strife,
How can he care for my poor life?

And yet I want him to care for me,
While I live in the world where the sorrows lie;
When the lights die down on the path I take;
When strength is feeble, and friends forsake;
When love and music that once did bless,
Have let me to silence and loneliness;
And the songs I long to, sobbing prayers—
Then my heart cries out for a God who cares.

When shadows hang o'er me the whole day long,
And my spirit is bowed with shame and wrong;
When I am not good, and the deeper shade
Of conscious sin makes my heart afraid;
And the busy world has too much to do
To stay in its race to help me through,
And I long for a Savior—can it be
That the God of the universe cares for me?

Oh, wondrous story of untold love!
Each child is dear to that heart above;
He fights for me when I cannot fight;
He comforts me in the gloom of night;
He lifts the burden, he gives the song;
He stills the sigh, and awakens the song;
To-morrow that bowed me down he bears,
And loves and pardons, because he cares.

Let all who are sad take heart again.
We are not alone in our hours of pain;
Our Father stoops from his throne above
To cradle and quiet us with his love.
He leaves us not when the storm is high,
And we have safety, for he is nigh.
Can that be trouble which he doth share?
Oh, rest in peace, for the Lord does care!

LET YOUR LIGHT SHINE.

"Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven." How careful we should be to carry out this command, as our fellowmen are so apt to look to us for example, and we should be examples, both by word and action. It is said, "Ye are the light of the world, (God's people.) A city set on a hill cannot be hid." Then, let us so live and let our lights so shine that we may be a help and guide to others. Jesus in speaking to his disciples said, "I am the Light of the world; he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." This is the great light of the world whom we should all strive to follow. Jesus said unto them, Yet a little while is the light with you. Walk while ye have the light, lest darkness come upon you; for he that walketh in darkness knoweth not whither he goeth. While ye have light believe in the light. But the light shines forth from the glorious gospel to all those who wish to be guided by it, and to those who do not it is said, "The God of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ who is the image of God should shine unto them." Not that Christ is not willing that all should have this light; but when they will not believe and spend all their talents seeking pleasures and worldly gain then their minds are blinded by the gods of this world and they lose sight of the true God who giveth light and life eternal. "For ye were sometimes in darkness, but now are ye light in the Lord. Walk as children of the light; but if ye walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another and the blood of Jesus Christ, his Son cleanseth us from all sin; for God who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ." "Arise, shine, for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee," and unto those who walk in this light and let their lights shine, to them is promised a home in the city of God, and there shall be no night there; and they need no candle, neither light of the sun; for the Lord God giveth them light, and they shall reign forever and ever.

Let us all strive to be worthy to enter that city.

Meditations.

One night while thinking of the kingdom of Christ, I read Isa. xlix. 16, "Behold, I have graven thee upon the palms of my hands; thy walls are continually before me."

I looked at my hand remembering that man was created in the image of God, and I saw the little finger as Babylon, [illegible] next Medo-Persian—the [illegible] the fore finger Rome [illegible] passing my [illegible] government of church and [illegible] till it reached the thumb and wrist, representing Christ's stone kingdom and rule over the whole earth. Then I thought of Isaiah in the liii. chapter and 1st verse, "Who hath believed our report? and to whom is the arm of the Lord revealed?" foresaw what Paul taught in 1st Cor. xv. 24–28, about Christ reigning until he surrendered the kingdom to the Father, "That God may be all in all," and in Hebrews 2nd chapter. Then Peter in 2 Peter iii. 8, desired to know how long a day with the Lord was? Then the promise to Peter made by the Savior in Matt. xix. 28, about his reigning on a throne judging a tribe. Then the Savior's prayer in John xvii. Then his promise in Rev. iii. 21. Then I saw that God the Father does not visit us until the new earth appears, for without holiness no man can see him. Then it seemed that wild beasts and insects will dwell in harmony in Christ's kingdom, that man is the only earthly creature which will reach the new earth, for he only is promised everlasting life. Read Psa. xcix; viii; Heb. ii; John xiv. 23; Rev. xxi. 1–8; 2 Peter ii. 12.

May these thoughts impress some one, and may God bless each one who will read carefully the references.

Egyptian Bondage Again.—How Long.

Replying to Sister Elizabeth Reed's reply to my query in the the issue of Dec. 24th:

I was rather suddenly awakened by this reply to find out that I had a "trouble" that I was not aware of. As to Bishop Usher's chronology, I am acquainted with the facts in this connection as stated by Sister Reed, and I am not sure that he is very far wrong. I find that Totten, Guthrie and many others whose names I could mention, agree approximately with the dates given by Usher. As to the text (Exodus xii. 40,) referred to by our Sister, I will add that the LXX translation of this Scripture is as follows: "Now the sojourning of the children of Israel in the land of Egypt, and in the land of Canaan, was four hundred and thirty years." This gives us a little different idea than that found in the King James' version, however, if Ex. xi. 40 in King James' version is read with its full grammatical force, there will be found in it no language which will imply that this 430 years of sojourning was all spent in Egypt. Leaving this verse and relying upon other Scriptures for the necessary help, I refer the reader to the language used by Paul in Gal. iii. 17: "And this I say, that the covenant that was confirmed before God in Christ, the law, which was four hundred and thirty years after, cannot disannul, that it should make the promise of none effect."

This leads me to conclude that Paul (who could not have been misled by Usher) measured the time from the promise made to Abraham of blessing to nations through his seed (Christ) to the giving of the law on Sinai as four hundred and thirty years. According to the laws of nature, it must have been a long time after God's promise to Abraham before the children of Israel went down into Egypt. Much of the 430 years must have been consumed after the giving of the promise until the time when there arose a king in Egypt who knew not Joseph.

Again, the Scriptures assert that Abraham and his offspring were "strangers and pilgrims on the earth." (Heb. xi. 13.) "For I am a stanger with thee, and a sojourner, as all my fathers were." (Ps. xxxix. 13.) Abraham, then, was a sojourner from the time God's favor was shown toward him. This will help to explain the language in Ex. xii. 40.

If I have a wrong conception of the matter, I want to be set right. I am yet of the opinion that the time of affliction in Egypt was much less than 430 years.

OUR HEROES.

Here's a hand to the boy who has courage
To do what he knows to be right.
When he falls in the way of temptation
He has a hard battle to fight.
Who strives against self and his comrades
Will find a most powerful foe,
All honor to him if he conquers,
A cheer to the boy who says "No."

There's many a battle fought daily
The world knows nothing about.
There's many a brave little soldier
Whose strength joins a legion to rout.
And he who fights sin single-handed
Is more of a hero, I say,
Than he who leads soldiers to battle
And conquers by force in the fray.

Be steadfast, my boy, when you're tempted;
And do what you know to be right.
Stand firm by your colors of manhood,
And you will o'ercome in the fight.
"The right" be your battle cry ever
In waging the warfare of life,
And God who knows who are the heroes,
Will give you the strength for the strife.

JOHNNY'S MASTER.

"Johnny," said a man, looking at a boy who was taking care of a shop while his master was out. "You must give me extra measure. Your master is not in."

Johnny looked up in the man's face seriously and said, "My Master is always in."

Johnny's master was the all-seeing God. Let us all, when we are tempted to do wrong, adopt Johnny's motto, "My master is always in." It will save us from many a sin and much sorrow.

DON'T TELL HER.

One day when Auntie was out of the room, Charlie and Frankie tipped over a bottle of ink which stood on her desk.

"Don't tell her," whispered Charlie; "we will shut the door, run away, and she'll never know who done it."

"But we ought to tell her," urged Frank, "and say that we are sorry."

"No, don't tell: it ever so much easier not to," said Charlie.

"I'm going to tell her this very minute, before it gets any harder," said brave little Frankie.

When he had found auntie and told her, she hastened to her room and wiped up the ink and put some salts of lemon on the ugly spots that it had made on the carpet. "I'm so glad you told me at once," she said, "for if it had dried in, it would have ruined my carpet and desk. Now I don't think it will show at all."

"It's just like God forgiving us, isn't it?" asked Frankie. "If we tell him we are sorry, and ask him to forgive us, he does; and we are made happy again."

HOW GRACIE OBEYED.

It was a clear, bright day, and little Gracie took her hoop and started out to have a nice run in the sunshine. She had only gone a little way when she heard her mother calling, "Gracie, Gracie!"

"Oh, dear! mamma wants me for something," she said to herself with a frown on her face. "I will make believe I don't hear her, and then perhaps she won't call me again."

"Gracie, Gracie!" called mamma; and Gracie turned back slowly.

"What is it, mamma?" she asked.

"I want you to rock baby's cradle, a little while, dear," mamma answered. "My head aches so badly that I want to take a nap."

"I never can play when I want to," grumbled Gracie. "I think it's too bad to make me rock the cradle so!" and she threw down her hoop so noisily that baby began to cry. Instead of singing to him and trying to quiet him, she jerked the cradle backward and forward with a cross, "keep quiet won't you!" At last, poor mamma, with her aching head, had to take him up.

Now, does any little boy or girl think that was the way to obey? No, I am sure you do not; and I hope that when you are told to do anything you mind at once, and mind cheerfully.—Sunbeam.

IT ISN'T FEDDERS.

One morning little Lulu was playing on her mother's bed. She was having a fine frolic all by her own self. Standing up on the bed as stiff and straight as a Chinese doll, she would play that she had fainted away, and that some kind friend had caught her "dust in time." Then she would fall back, and the nice soft pillows would stretch out their loving white arms to her, and down she would go "dust as e-a-s-y."

Soon her mother came in, and seeing a pair of little feet mixed up among her snowy ruffles, pulled the fainting young lady out.

"Get out of bed, Lulu dear," said she, as she left the room. But the little girl was by no means tired of the fun, and so she kept right on, [illegible] thought she would have "just one [illegible] more faint," then another, and another followed.

"Oh, its dust splendid! Only if ma hadn't come," she said. Pretty soon she threw herself down, as she had done twenty times before, but, alas, instead of falling on the soft pillows she struck on the footboard and nearly fainted "for true," for she went down with a hard bump, and hurt herself badly. She cried, and her mother hurried in to see what was the matter.

"Oh, mamma," she said, woefully, "after 'ou says stop, it isn't fedders any more."

Boys and girls, isn't it generally the case that when you go on doing things that you are told to stop doing, it "isn't feathers any more?"

The best way is to stop at once. The Bible says that they who do wrong "shall be taken in their own naughtiness."—Water Lily.

SLANG.

This "sermonette" is especially for you, dear girls. The advice could be put in three words—Don't do it. Possibly there might come an occasion—say once in a life time—when a good round bit of the genuine article "slang" would prove funny. But to hear vulgar words used by a gentle girl is almost invariably shocking. I remember passing two girls in the street, and hearing one of them say, "I'll bet you a quarter." It made me shiver. And when a group of school girls fill their conversation—as alas! they often do—with one slang phrase after another, the effect on an outsider is painfully disagreeable.

The habit of talking slang grows rapidly. It is like reporting a bit of scandal. Have you ever noticed, if you say an unkind word against a neighbor, how quickly a chance comes to say another? And with just that same appalling ease a habit of using careless coarse words increases. Weeds grow rapidly.

There is plenty of good strong English to give expression to wit, drollery, indignation, or sympathy, without recourse to the phrases which belong to horse-jockeys, gamblers, tipplers, and vagabonds. The street arab picks up slang as he does the ends of old cigars from the gutter. Surely a well-bred girl is not on the same level in her speech and manner. Why should she use vulgar words any more than she would stain her hands?

There ought to be something akin to flowers in a fresh young girl. She need not be prudish or priggish. No one wishes her to say "prunes and prisms" to coax her lips into the proper curves. But refined and dainty in speech as well as in dress she surely ought to be. Won't you please think about it for five minutes, and see if you do not agree with me?—Harper's Young People.

Selected.

The Scribes.

All readers of the four Gospels in the New Testament are familiar with the character known as the Scribe. He figures very prominently in Jewish History. He was quite "a recognized authority," commanding attention to his utterances, and held in reverence by the people. He was the acknowledged teacher and guardian of the Law—both the written and oral law—and his pronouncements on all questions of faith and practice were accepted as final. The Scribes and the Pharisees were closely associated but were not identical. "The Pharisees were a religious party, the Scribes had a status and held an office. The Scribe is the Talmid, or learned student, the Chachham or Sage, whose honour is to be great in the future world." (Ekersheim.) Whatever the Scribes affirmed was to be accepted as from God.

The origin of this class or order is traced back to the time of Ezra and Nehemiah, if not beyond. Ezra is described (see Ezra vii. 6, 10, 11, 12) as a ready scribe who had set his heart to seek (i. e., to seek out the full meaning of) the Law of the Lord, to do it, and to teach in Israel. It may be that from this the Sopherim (the Scribes) derived the three branches of their studies, the Midrash, or the study of the Law; the Halakhah, or the setting forth of the way in which their descendants were bound to walk: and the Haggadah, i. e., oral teaching. It fell to Nehemiah to establish some permanent authority to watch over religious affairs, and thus, probably, originated "the Great Assembly," also called the "Great Synagogue," composed of chief priests, elders and judges, including the Scribes. [illegible] subsequently a [illegible] and the Sanhedrin was the outcome of these, and in the time of Christ was in full force.

It is not surprising that the Great Teacher came into conflict with the Scribes. They were simply expounders, setting forth the declarations of others, whereas he spake in his own name. They lifelessly consulted their parchments and reiterated formally the thoughts of those who had gone before, ever citing precedents and making much of mere technicalities, he, on the contrary, disdaining all such stereotyped enactments and comments, spake with naturalness, freshness, and vitality, and drawing his illustrations not from musty, worn-out scrolls, but from Nature, pointing to the birds of the air and the flowers of the field, and making these "impressive preachers of faith, hope, charity, and good success." They were all for form, he for life—they were for the letter, he for the spirit,—they appealed to human authority, he to the conscience and the heart—they gave minute instructions to others, involving burdensome rites and observances, but failed themselves in respect to practice, whereas he taught men how rest is to be found in meekly and lovingly doing the Great Father's will, and in his holy and perfect example led the way—they spake as those who were invested with official power, sitting in Moses' seat, he as one who wielded authority in that his teachings went deep down into human character and influencing human conduct and life. The purity of his character and the superiority of his teaching secured to him ever widening influence, and so excited their hostility that they aimed at his destruction, nor rested until they had brought him to the death of the cross.

The Order has passed away and has no place in modern Judaism. Judaism to-day has its teachers—Rabbis—many of whom are men of high attainments, learned in the Law and the Traditions of the Fathers. The more cultured members of the Jewish Community regard these teachers with the respect due to men of learning and piety, who are seeking to minister to them in concerns sacred and spiritual. It is to be feared, however, that amongst the less cultured, specially on the continent of Europe, the superstitious reverence and authority given to Scribes in the olden times, is transferred to the Rabbi, and that instead of exercising the right of private judgment in relation to spiritual matters, his view is accepted as authoritative and final. The missionary, in urging the claims of Christ upon his brethren, often has painful evidence of this. Our prayer is that these teachers, and those under their care, may be led into the higher and more complete truth, as propounded by the Great Rabbi who, without egotism, could say, "I am the Light of the World: he that believeth in me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life."—S. D. H. in Jewish Herald.

No Excuse for Yielding to Temptation.

A child of God may be sure that he is never tempted or tried beyond the God-given power to resist or endure. On that point the divine promise is positive. You may have yielded to temptation, but you have had no excuse for so doing. "There hath no temptation taken you but such as man can bear; but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation make also the way of escape, that ye may be able to endure it." When, therefore, you are inclined to think that the pressure on you is greater than you can stand, you ought to know you are mistaken. Your Father knows your strength better than you do, and he loves you more dearly than even you can know. He says that the strength to go forward victoriously is ever at hand for you. Therefore there is no excuse, in any instance, for yielding to temptation or trial.

Winsome People.

They are the people who love to diffuse happiness. They are happy themselves because they have made others so. They are thoughtful, considerate, and courteous—ever seeking to provide joy and peace for others, ever striving to avoid and remove any thing and everything that wounds unnecessarily. It is an unspeakable delight to be near such people.

"Why are you always thinking of others?" asked a friend of a winsome lady beloved by everybody. "I would not wear my life out bearing other people's burdens."

"[illegible] you?" came the question, by way of answer, with a sweet but reproving smile. "I could not wear it out doing better work than helping the weary and heavy laden."

To do God's will that's all
That I need concern us; not to carry or ask
The meaning of it, but to ply our task
Whatever may befall.

It is a great mistake to think any kindly act too insignificant to be noticed by our Father in heaven. Faber says, "Every solitary kind action that is done, the world over, is working briskly in its own sphere to restore the balance between right and wrong. Kindness has converted more sinners than either zeal, eloquence, or learning; and these three never converted any one unless they were kind also. The continual sense which a kind heart has of its need of kindness keeps it humble. Perhaps an act of kindness never dies, but extends the invisible undulations of its influence over the breadth of centuries."—Christian Work.

Little Things that Hurt.

There are thousands and thousands of little untruths that hum and buzz and sting in society, which are too small to be brushed or driven away. They are in the looks, they are in the inflections and tones of the voice, they are in the actions, they are in the reflections rather than in the direct images that are represented. They are methods of producing impressions that are false, though every means by which they are produced is strictly true. There are little unfairnesses between man and man that are said to be minor matters that are small things; there are little unjust judgments and detractions; there are petty violations of conscience; there are ten thousand of these flaws of passion in men which are called foibles or weaknesses, but which eat like moths. They take away magnanimity and generosity, they take from the soul its enamel and its polish. Men palliate and excuse them, but that has nothing to do with their natural effect on us. They waste and destroy us, and that too in the soul's silent and hidden parts.—Henry Ward Beecher.

To rise each morning with a thought of God in the soul, left over to fill a new mission from the night before; to kneel are descending the steps for the consecration of your life and the renewed assurance of his guidance of you, just for that day—this is the true preface of a beautiful life. Then to uplift confident and reverent hands toward some real good, yet unattained to character or service; and claiming it, to go forth to bring it nearer, by to-day's living, than it has ever come before—this is to unlock God's meaning of your investment and deepest spiritual life. Each moment will come in some manner as an exact complement of your prayer and desire, and in these hours God himself shall quietly fulfill his thought within the fabric of your experience.—I. Mench Chambers.

A Word of Appreciation.

Some time ago I asked the brotherhood through THE RESTITUTION how many copies of the pamphlet "The Reasons of My Withdrawal from the Evangelical Association," would be wanted. Letters came from all parts of the country, some containing money stating the number of copies desired, so that a second edition of 1000 was printed. I wish to state that this edition is nearly exhausted, there being only about 150 left. Those wishing copies better send their orders early, as they will soon be gone. I desire, by this means, to thank the brethren for their encouraging words and financial help. Trusting that the seed will fall in good soil and produce fruit unto eternal life. 25 pages, at 5 cents per copy. A. H. Zilmer, Plymouth, Ind.

A Hard Road to Travel.

Even in San Francisco the way of the ticket "scalper" is hard, one having been fined $300 and jailed for two days for ignoring a court injunction in August, prohibiting him from manipulating round-trip tickets, of which he had become possessed. The action of the San Francisco court is particularly significant, since the amounts involved in these long distance tickets are usually large, and the loss to the unlucky passenger compelled to pay twice, serious. The campaign of righteousness goes on not only surely but rapidly, and now that it has crossed the country there is every reason to believe that it has gained an impetus which will at no distant day crush out this traffic, which is but a form of counterfeiting and petty larceny.—Brooklyn Standard-Union.

Christ in the Revelation.

"The revelation of Jesus Christ, which God gave unto him, to show unto his servants things which must shortly come to pass; and he sent and signified it by his angel unto his servant John." Rev. i. 1. Here as in the days of his flesh Christ faithfully reveals the source of the knowledge made known in the Revelation. The words, "which God gave unto him" reveals God as the fountain from which proceeds the grand and glorious things made known in the book. Now if God reveals future events to Jesus Christ, it logically follows that God knew, what Jesus Christ did not know. If this be not so, it would be impossible for God to make a revelation to him. Therefore the Revelation is in exact accord with Moses, the Prophets, Apostles, and with Jesus Christ, as recorded in the gospel.

Again we read, "To show unto his servants things which must shortly come to pass." Therefore we must look for the events predicted to begin to transpire in the near future from the time of the Revelation A. D. 96. Again the angel signified it to John, that is taught it to him by signs or symbols. In ver. 3 a blessing is pronounced on the reader who keeps the things written in the prophecy and adds, "For the time is at hand." v. 4 reads, "John, to the seven churches which are in Asia." Here a question presents itself which must be answered before we proceed further in the understanding of this symbolic revelation; and that question is, "Why write to the seven mentioned, and pass by in silence the church at Colosse, and Miletus which was nearer than any of the seven to Patmos? The same question may be asked, Why does the Son of Man hold in his hand only seven stars? Surely the Master careth alike for all the churches. The only reasonable answer is that the book is constructed largely on the number seven, which represents completeness, fullness as in the seven days of creation, the weekly cycle is completed; and the square of seven, forty-nine brought the Israelite to the year of jubilee; and he who reads the law will see how prominent is the number seven in all the ceremonies thereof, and according to this view the seven churches represent in symbol all the churches, from the time of the Revelation to the time of the Master; and that the seven different churches represent seven periods of time, that fills up and completes this dispensation to the return of our Lord. This view is veiled under the number seven, but will appear plain when we examine the message to the church of Smyrna, which gives a key to the construction of the messages. The seven spirits of of v. 4 should be understood to mean the Spirit of God in its sevenfold, or fulness which Christ is represented as having. In chapter iii. 1, and in chap. v. 6 they appear as seven horns and seven eyes of the Lamb. These seven eyes are spoken of in Zech. iii. 8,9, "I will bring forth my servant, the Branch. For behold the stone that I have laid before Joshua; upon one stone shall be seven eyes. Behold, I will engrave the graving thereof, saith the Lord of hosts, and I will remove the iniquity of that land in one day." "As the Father hath life in himself, so hath he given unto the Son to have life in himself." Yes, he hath given the Son power and wisdom symbolized by "seven horns and seven eyes." And is as said in ver. 5, "The first born of the dead." Diaglott. The first one to attain unto the life of God, the eternal life. "And hath made us kings and priests unto God and his Father." ver. 6. That is, it is done in the purpose of God, "Who quickeneth the dead and calleth those things that be not as though they were." Rom. iv. 17. In v. 7 we read, "Behold he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him, and they also that pierced him; and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him. Even so, amen." A cloud is a symbol of majesty; but the clouds that accompany our Lord are his saints, the ones he has brought from the death state, he having previously come and gathered them to himself, and they constitute the cloud mentioned. Gog when he invades the holy land is to "Come as a cloud to cover the land." Ezek. xxxviii. 16. In the Diaglott it reads, "All the tribes of the land shall mourn over him." Having reference to the time spoken of in Zech. xii. 10. "And I will pour upon the house of David, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, the spirit of grace and supplications; and they shall look upon him whom they have pierced, and they shall mourn for him, as one mourneth for his only son, and shall be in bitterness for him, as one that is in bitterness for his first born." The house of David now realizes that they rejected and crucified their Messiah, and brought upon themselves all the terrible suffering that they have experienced for most two thousand years; and now he appears for their deliverance; the times of the Gentiles having come to an end.

GEO. FRANTZ.

Children of Israel in Egypt, How Long?

Ex. xii. 40, "Now the sojourning of the children of Israel (who dwelt in Egypt) was 430 years." In a previous issue Bro. Lindsay enquires: "How has the notion that they were in Egypt 430 years arisen?" In response I would say: Through a superficial reading of the foregoing and its corresponding passages. The words "Who dwelt in Egypt" are used as a relative clause to denote the people and not the place of their entire sojourning. Their sojourning commenced at the call of Abraham, "By faith he sojourned in the land of promise as in a strange country." Heb. xi. 9. The children of Israel being included in the sojourning on the principle stated in Heb. vii. 9-10. In Gen. xv. 13. we read, "Know of a surety that thy seed (Isaac and descendants) shall be a stranger in a land that is not theirs, and shall serve them, and they shall afflict them 400 years." Here the 400 years covers the period of their estrangement, servitude and affliction. In Ex. vi. 4 we read of them being strangers in the land of Canaan. The four hundred years was touching Abraham's seed, and must commence with the birth of Isaac, the additional 30 years, date from Abraham's departure from "Ur" "before he dwelt in Haran." When he left "Haran" he was 75 years old, 25 years later Isaac was born, we must believe therefore that 5 years elapsed from the call from "Ur" to his departure from "Haran." Now Jacob was 130 years old when he went into Egypt. Gen. xlvii. 9. And Isaac was 60 years old at the birth of Jacob, Abraham having left Ur 30 years before the birth of Isaac gives 220 years as the period of their pilgrimage, leaving 210 years for their sojourn in Egypt. Now we know that Kohath, the grandfather of Moses, went down into Egypt with his father Levi. Doubtless he is referred to in Gen. xlvi. b as one of the "little ones."—Amram, the father of Moses, was the son of Kohath. I submit therefore the following as their probable ages:—Kohath in Egypt 60 years before the birth of Amram; Amram at the death of Moses probably 70 years; Moses at the Exodus 80 years, total years in Egypt 210. It seems impossible to explain the period of their sojourning in Egypt on other grounds because Jochebed, the mother of Moses, was "the daughter of Levi" and consequently Amram's aunt. See Num. xxv. 59; Ex. vi. 20. Now of Abraham's seed it was said, Gen. xv., "In the 4th generation they shall come hither again." This was literally fulfilled. Thus Levi 1, Kohath 2, Amram 3, Moses 4. Were they in Egypt 400 years we would be compelled to deduct the 80 years, Moses' age at the Exodus, leaving 320 years or 160 years respectively as the ages at which Kohath and Amram begat sons! a miracle indeed for Kohath died aged 133 years and Amram 137. Ex. vi. 18-20.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended.

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Woodruff, Elizabeth N. J.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the doners request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

"The World to Come and the Life Everlasting," is the name of a book of over 400 pages. The title page describes it as a Symposium of Writers on eternal life from the Bible Basis, and is selected from the works of a goodly number of Bible Students who have written during the past few years. It is compiled and published by Bro. John O. Woodruff, of Elizabeth, N. J., of whom it may be ordered. The paper and print are excellent, as is the durable cloth-binding. TO OUR PATRONS.

We want more readers for THE RESTITUTION. We want One Thousand new names on our list for 1903, and can have them if you will help us.

In every Church of our faith in the land there are members who do not take our paper, who would be benefitted by reading it.

There are those who are isolated by circumstances from any Church fellowship, who would be kept firmer in the faith, helped and strengthened for the battles of life if they had THE RESTITUTION each week.

There are others interested in the truths we hold, who would often have their attention called to the principles of our faith by reading our paper. When no preacher can be heard, when you cannot talk to them, THE RESTITUTION in their homes would be ever a present visitor—a missionary that will do more than any other one thing to keep the interest alive.

There are those whom we wish were interested in the Bible and what it promises. Many of this class of persons have never had the opportunity, or have neglected the matter when it was before them.

You are surely known to people such as are mentioned, and you are surely interested in them. We are satisfied you are not unmindful of their eternal well-being. How much do you care for these people? Will you join with us in getting the gospel before them, and keeping it there a year? We have this to offer to you for consideration.

We will send THE RESTITUTION one year to NEW Subscribers for $1.00. We will start them as soon as received and give credit to the end of 1903.

With a little persistent effort in presenting the paper to those you know who are not taking it, you can induce them to try it for $1.00. If you want some sample papers we will gladly supply them to you, and our list can be increased by 1000 names at once.

It can be done easily if you will act on this suggestion, and get those near you interested. If each reader would get a new name our list would be doubled at once.

It would seem as if every reader of THE RESTITUTION could exert influence enough to get one more new name if the effort was made. Will you try it? If the first person you suggest it to does not respond, do not be discouraged, but try some one else. Perhaps the one you least expect will answer quickest.

Did you ever stop to figure up how many words are contained in our paper in a year? You will be surprised at the number of sermons it contains. There is variety too. There is doctrine and the practical, encouragement and cheer, and comfort for the distressed. Each phase of teaching would make several good sized books during the year. You can do no work that yields as large a return for the money expended as by sending THE RESTITUTION to a friend for a year.

We ask you to go at this work and put it along with a will. The time is getting short, and if you can be the means in God's hands of gaining one more for the Master, it will pay for all your labor. We will send several of the back papers to all new subscribers so each will get more than the current year.

Will you not start right away and send on a name, and next week when that person gets his paper, the other

The Atonement.

Rom. v. 11, "And not only so, but we also joy in God, through our Lord Jesus Christ by whom we have now received the atonement." The Greek word katallages from which the word atonement is translated occurs three times in the New Testament, and is translated as follows, namely, in Rom. xi. 15, "For if the casting away of them be the reconciling katallages of the world what shall the receiving of them be, but life from the dead. 2 Cor. v. 18, "And all things are of God, who hath received us to himself by Jesus Christ, and hath given to us the ministery of reconciliation, katallagee. Katallasso occurs five times, and is translated, were reconciled, being reconciled and reconciling; therefore reconciliation is the meaning of the word atonement. Rom. v. 10, "For if when we were enemies we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son, much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by his life." See 1 Cor. vii. 11; 2 Cor. v. 18 20. The word atonement implies first a variance between two or more parties. Second, terms of reconciliation presented by one party to be complied with by the other party. Third, the terms fully met by the second party. Fourth, reconciliation by this means accomplished. The two parties at variance are God and man, and the cause of the variance man's disobedience. Gen. ii. 17. "But of the tree of knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it; for in the day that thou eatest thereof, thou shalt surely die." Gen. iii. 17-19, And unto Adam he said, Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy wife, and hast eaten of the tree whereof I commanded thee saying, Thou shalt not eat of it; cursed is the ground for thy sake, in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life; thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth unto thee, and in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken; for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return. Rom. v. 12, Wherefore by one man sin entered into the world, and death, thanatos, from theneesko, extinction of, Greek by sin; and so death passed upon all men. 1 Cor. xv. 21, For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead. For as in Adam all die. Greek, apothneesko, to become putrescent, to rot. Greenfield, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. The death incurred by the transgression was eternal. Gen. ii. 17, In the day thou eatest thereof, dying thou shalt die. Margin. In this edict there was no limitation. It leaves the man eternally dead. When the law says, if a man steals twenty-five dollars, he shall be sentenced to serve in the state's prison not to exceed one year, the limiting clause requires his release at the end of the year. But if that clause was left out and the law read, if a man steal twenty-five dollars he shall be sentenced to state's prison, there could be nothing in that law to ever release him; but it would leave him in prison continually, with no legal authority to ever release him. So God's law which Adam transgressed had no limiting clause, and as a sequence leaves man eternally dead, without any claims to life. And the only possible chance for his release was to have another life just as equivalent to the one which he had lost put in its stead. If it was an eternal life, then an eternal life would have to be given in exchange for it, which could not be done; for eternal life cannot die. But it was not eternal life lost, as it cannot die, but it was mortal or second life. God in his mercy [illegible] given you all things, but flesh with the life thereof, which is the blood thereof shall ye not eat. And surely your blood of your lives will I require; at the hand of every beast will I require it and at the hand of every man's brother will I require the life of man. Lev. xvii 10-14, And whatsoever man there be of the house of Israel, or the stranger that sojourneth that eateth any manner of blood, I will even set my face against that soul that eateth blood, and will cut him off from among his people. For the life of the flesh is in the blood. And whatsoever man there be of the children of Israel or of the stranger that sojourneth among you, which hunteth and catcheth any beast or fowl that may be eaten; he shall even pour out the blood thereof and cover it with dust. For it is the life of all flesh; the blood of it is for the life thereof. Then the life lost by the transgression is blood life; therefore a blood life must be given as a substitute for it, in order to redeem it from death. Now in order to meet this demand, in order for man's redemption Christ came into the world, and took upon him the likeness of sinful flesh, that for sin he might condemn sin in the flesh. Now as Christ had a blood life just equal in value to the life of the first Adam, he could and did, lay it down in death and left it there, and it will eternally remain there, to meet the demand of the law, that otherwise would hold man eternally in death, for God raised him from the dead, and gave him eternal or spirit life. Rom. viii. 11, For if the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you. Rev. i. 18, I am he that liveth and was dead; and behold, I am alive for ever more. Amen, and have the keys of hell and of death. 1 Cor. xv. 45, And so it is written, the first man Adam was made a living soul, the last Adam was made a quickening Spirit. ver. 47, So the first man is of the earth earthy; the second man is the Lord from heaven. All the blood life there was, was in Adam and Eve when they ate of the forbidden fruit, consequently the life of the whole race was sacrificed in the one sin. All the blood life to be restored through Christ was in him who did not sin, neither was guile found in his mouth. 1 Pet. ii. 22. Therefore it just met the demand of the law, and relieved the Adamic blood life from the death state, giving all of Adam's offsprings a right to life from the dead, when he who purchased them sees fit to restore them to life. So Christ accepts the terms of reconciliation, and suffers the penalty for us. 1 Cor. xv. 3, For I delivered unto you first of all that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures. Jno. i. 29. The next day John seeth Jesus coming unto him, and saith, Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world. Notice this is sin in the singular number, not sins in the plural. Rom. v. 18, Therefore as by the offence of one, judgment came upon all men to condemnation even so by the righteousness of one, the free gift came upon all men to the justification of life. Then all of Adam's offsprings have a right to, and will have life from the dead, not the righteous only, but the unrighteous also. For if all men are entitled to life by the righteousness of one through the gift, and they did not receive it they would be wronged out of what is their just and promised right, God withholding from them what is their just due; for all die unconditionally in or by Adam, and no one but Adam is responsible for the sin and this death, for it was committed by him before any child was born; consequently Christ having bought them with his own precious blood, they have a right to life from the dead. 1 Cor. vi. 20; 1 Pet. i. 18, 19 For as by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, so by the righteousness of one shall many be made righteous. That is the many made sinners by the disobedience of the first Adam shall be made right [illegible] 1 Cor. xv. 21, 22. For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead. For as in Adam all die, even so in or by Christ shall all be made alive. 1 John iv. 14. And we have seen and do testify, that the Father sent the Son to be the Saviour of the world. Heb. ii. 9, But we see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honor that he by the grace of God should taste death for every man. 1 Tim. i. 10, For therefore we both labor and suffer reproach, because we trust in the living God, who is the Savior of all men, specially those that believe. Here we have two salvations presented for our consideration. One which includes all men, good and bad, saving them out of the death that all die in Adam, and one which is given to the believer only; which is eternal salvation. Placing the believer beyond the power of the second death. Now if the blood life of Christ is not sufficient to restore all the blood life which was sacrificed in the transgression of the first Adam, then it is evident, that it is not equally valuable with the first Adam's blood life, which is not true; and as it is as valuable, it necessarily follows that it purchased back from death, all the life that was lost in Adam's transgression. Therefore all mankind will be raised out of the death which they die in Adam. 1 Tim. ii. 5, 6, For there is one God and one mediator between God and man, the man Christ Jesus, who gave himself a ransom for all to be testified in due time. Then Christ did ransom all from the death which follows the sin of Adam; but not from the death following our own actual sins, for only those who believe and obey the Word are saved from the death which comes in consequence of our own transgression. Rom. ii. 7, To them who by patient continuance in well doing, seek for glory and honor and immortality, eternal life; but unto them that are contentious and obey not the truth, but obey unrighteousness, indignation and wrath, tribulation and anguish upon every soul of man that doeth evil, of the Jew first, and also the Gentile. Gal. iv. 7, Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to his flesh, shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit, shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting. Isa. liii. 6, All we like sheep have gone astray, and the Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all. Not iniquities but the iniquity; in the singular number. Isa. liii. 10, 12, Yet it pleased the Lord to bruise him; he hath put him to grief, when thou shalt make his soul an offering for sin. Not sins. And he was numbered with the transgressors, and he bear the sin of many. John vi. 51, And the bread which I will give is my flesh, which I will give for the life of the world. Lev. xvi. 8, 15, 27, And Aaron shall cast lots upon the two goats; one lot for the Lord and the other for the scape goat. Then shall he kill the goat of the sin offering that is for the people, and bring his blood within the vail, and do with that blood as he did with the blood of the bullock, and sprinkle it upon the mercy seat, and before the mercy seat. And the bullock for the sin offering, and the goat for sin offering whose blood was brought in to make atonement in the holy place, shall one carry forth without the camp; and they shall burn in the fire their skins and their flesh, etc.

The above Scriptures show conclusively that the blood of Christ or his life which is mortal, which was left in death, and will eternally remain there to meet the demand of the law, and fully redeems the entire human family, sinners and all, and restores to all mankind the opportunity to secure eternal life with all its blessings and privileges and the full right and assurance of life from the dead. True it does not prevent death, but it gives him life from the death state just as unconditional as he lost it. God saw fit to let man meet the death and it [illegible] for the actual sins of all who will be saved from every age. God's law is just as inexorable with regard to our actual sins, as it is with regard to the Adamic sin; and eternal death is its penalty. And the death which Jesus died, and the agonies that he experienced in the garden, and on the cross forsaken of God, shown by his crying with a loud voice, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me. It is just the agony that the lost sinner will experience in the second death when forsaken of God; but this death every member of the body of Christ will be free from, for they have been baptized into his death. Rom. vi. 3-6, Know ye not that so many of you as have been baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death? Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death; that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life. For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection. Knowing this that our old man is crucified with him, that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin. For he that is dead is freed from sin. Then by faith and obedience we are dead with Christ, being in him, and are members of his body, his flesh and his bones, (Eph. v. 30) and his death becomes ours; and by it are saved from the second death; for his body can die no more. This is what I call the second branch of the atonement, which is clearly set forth in the following Scriptures; viz. Lev. xvi. 12-22, And when he (Aaron) hath made an end of reconciling the holy place and tabernacle of the congregation, and the altar, he shall bring the live goat; and Aaron shall lay both his hands upon the head of the live goat, and confess over him all the iniquities of the children of Israel, and their transgressions in all their sins, putting them upon the head of the goat; and shall send him away by the hand of a fit man into the wilderness; and the goat shall bear upon him all their iniquities into a land not inhabited; and he shall let go the goat in the wilderness. This Scripture represents Christ as our scape goat, who bears our actual sins into the land of death or the uninhabited land, freeing us from them as the scape goat did the children of Israel from theirs. Isa. liii. 4, 5, Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows.....he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed.....by his knowledge shall my righteous servant justify many, for he shall bear their iniquities. He bear the sins of many, and made intercession for the transgressors. Notice it is sins, iniquities, and griefs in the plural, making it apply to our actual sins if we are members of his body. Rom. v. 15, 17, 21. But not as the offense, so also is the free gift. For if through the offense of one many be dead, much more the grace of God, and the gift by grace, which is by one man Jesus Christ, hath abounded unto many. There comes in superabundance, not only meeting the results of the Adamic transgression or sin, but much more the actual sins of those who believe and obey God. And not as it was by one that sinned, so is the gift (no it is more than that) for the judgment was by one to condemnation, but the free gift is of many offences unto justification. Not the one offence of Adam, but the many offences, (in the plural) of the obedient to the faith of the gospel. For if by one man's offences death reigned by one; much more they which receive abundance of grace, not a little, but abundance of grace and the gift of righteousness shall reign in (zoe) life eternal by one Jesus Christ. Moreover the law entered that sin might abound. But where sin abounded, grace did much more abound; that as sin hath reigned unto death, even so might grace reign through righteousness unto eternal life by Jesus Christ our Lord. If it will not be blood life [illegible]

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

ren. that he might be a merciful and faithful high priest in things pertaining to God, to make reconciliation for the sins of the people. Heb. ix. 28. So Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many. 1 Pet. ii. 21, For even hereunto are we called; because Christ also suffered for us. Then his suffering was for us, the body of Christ, and in our stead that we might be relieved from it. Ver. 24 Who his own self bear our sins in his own body on the tree, by whose stripes we are healed. This relieves us from the second death, the result of our actual sins, and we live when raised from the dead, to die no more. 1 Jno. ii. 2, and he is the propitiation for our sins, and not our sins only, but also for the sins of the whole world. Yes, if the whole world would comply with the conditions laid down in the plan of salvation, all might be saved from the second death. 1 John iv. 10, Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins. In the plural again. In Matt. xxvii. 26, Jesus cried with a loud voice, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? This Scripture shows conclusively that Jesus died forsaken of God, just as the sinner will die in the second death. And Christ's death is set over to every member of his body. He died for them or in their stead; not for the first or Adamic death, for we all die that death, but his death is set over to the members of his body, to meet the demand of the law or its penalty, for our actual sins, and by it we are made free from the second death, so God can be just and the justifier of him which believeth on Jesus.

Gen. xxii. 13, And Abraham lifted up his eyes; and looked, and behold, behind him a ram caught in the thicket by his horns; and Abraham went and took the ram, and offered him up for a burnt offering in the stead of Isaac. Gal. iv. 28, Now we brethren as Isaac was are the children of promise. So just as the ram caught in the thicket, was offered up in Isaac's stead, so Christ was offered up in our stead, when we were in danger of the second death, and by it we are rescued from the second death. Ex. xii. 3-11; gives the passover lamb which was slain, and whose blood protected all of God's people where ever it was placed upon the lintels and door posts from death; and not one of the first born of Israel were slain. So Christ our passover was slain for us: 1 Cor. v. 7, and his blood applied to us, will save us from the destroying angel of the second death. God took the first born of the children of Israel, who were saved by the blood of the passover lamb for his own. So God takes all who are saved by the blood of Christ our passover as his own; and as those who were saved were the first born, so we who are saved by Christ are the church of the first born. Heb. xii. 23, And as God exchanged the first born for the tribe of Levi, and made them his priesthood. Num. iii. 4, so God took the kingdom from the Jews, and gave it to the Gentiles. Matt. xxi. 43; Acts xv. 14, 46 and makes them his priesthood. Rev. xx. 4 6; 1 Pet. ii. 5 9; and will eventually make them king priests, after the order of Melchisedec. Rev. v. 9; ii. 26; iii. 21. Then he has two branches or departments. The first is for the redemption of the entire race of Adam, by Christ laying down his blood life to meet the demands of the law that would hold eternally the life of the race unless thus redeemed; and the death and agonies of the garden and the cross, to meet the demand of the law of God for the actual sins of all ages of those that obey God and save them from the second death. Amen. So Christ has bought us with his blood, God the Father forgives us for Jesus' sake through his name, and by complying with the conditions of the gospel, we get the application of Christ's blood and by this means are made free from sin. Selected by Sarah Butcher.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, FEB'Y 18, 1903.

WE have decided to continue our special offer as given on our first page through the month of February. The back papers can all be supplied, so each will get the full year's number. Will you not see if there is not some one else in your church or neighborhood who will be benefitted by this arrangement. The "signs" are getting plainer that the time for work is short, so make an effort and do all you can for the cause of Christ NOW. Next year may be too late.

THERE is some promise in the Bible adapted to every trial.

GOD never changes, however circumstances may vary: he is always love.

NEVER fear people thinking you fallible, you are so, whether they think so or not.

MEDITATION feeds devotion: it endears Christ. "My meditation of him shall be sweet."

READER, leave company when you find you lose by it, and see that you cannot improve it. "Go not in the way of evil men!"

READER, you add tenfold to the weight of your trouble, by your impatience: "Be still, and know that I am God," may be addressed to you.

CHRIST invites you, not only to cast all your burdens upon him but yourself also, which to the rest Christian is the greatest burden: "O wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me?" The answer is, "Come unto me—I will give you rest."

THE present age differs from all preceding ages by the multitude who are running to and fro in every part of the earth. The increase of knowledge is great, and there is no record of anything like it ever existing on the earth before. But it is not knowledge of God; and Daniel neither says nor implies that it was to be divine knowledge.

HOW clear and simple the teaching of the Scriptures when viewed apart from the blinding, bewildering philosophy! "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of lives and man became a living soul." Precisely the same thing is said of all the other animals which God made though it hardly appears in the authorized version. When man dies he gives up the ghost, or breath of life which God breathed unto him, and then he becomes a dead man or a dead soul, and so he remains till he is raised again.

What Think Ye of Christ?

"Each age has its great men. Men whose depth and understanding have transcended the limits of their day and registered another item in the progressive ladder. There have been Socrates, Aristotle and Plato, all of whom shone brilliantly in their spheres; but as years rolled on science increased little by little, till the average capacity was about equal to the isolated genius of the past; and the school boy was master of their problems. And to this rule there has been but one exception all down the ages. Their lights have faded before the rising of the noonday sun, and fallen back to make way for those things which eclipse them, so that in a few short years their practical influence upon the world is nil, and they pass away as though they had not been. Their philosophy does not enter into the economy of the present day,—their influence is dead and their labors perished, except for a few who have a taste for comparative religion and philosophy. Of course we see the last prints of these ancient men of greatness in the popular theology of the age; but the realm of sound every day life has its power or inspiration from another. Jesus Christ stands at the head of all civilization; he is the source of all schemes for development of humanity, and mitigation of human woe,—although the millions do not from the heart embrace his gospel. The place or position of the nations of earth who have encouraged the circulation of the Scriptures of truth tells of the uplifting power of the gospel of Christ even when it is not accepted as the rule of life and conduct. And from what we read a few days ago it looks as if the Pope has been converted, or has been made ashamed of the comparison between the nations from whom he shut out the Word of God, and those who have sown it broadcast. At any rate the Pope has actually appointed a commission for Bible study, and this body is now at work; and recently the official organ of the Vatican published a series of articles on the importance of Bible study, of which the following are leading thoughts:—

"The reading of the Holy Scriptures is the best means for the support of the true and genuine apostolic office, and is entirely adapted to awaken in the people a true Christian knowledge and conscience, which can then be perverted by nobody. What an inestimable blessing it would be if every Christian family would be assembled daily and read a chapter from the gospels? In this way the divine language of the Book, together with its sublime simplicity, would become common property; the image of Jesus Christ would become clearer and more deeply impressed on the hearts of the people; a thorough religious training would be imparted on all sides; and in this way the most dangerous results of ignorance and indifference would be removed. If it would be only made possible to have this constant and steady reading of the Scriptures introduced into many families, as is the case in a number of countries in northern Europe, what an immense gain this would be for the church and the faithful!"

What a discovery to make after nearly 1300 years! We can hardly believe our own eyes, as we see the Vatican holding up the people of Northern Europe, (the Protestant nations) as examples! But it leaks out even in this brief quotation that it is hoped that this action will tend to the "support of the genuine apostolic office;" without reference to its being the power of God unto salvation, the book contains. The Church has the sole voice in that respect still.

But it is too late! Passing events plainly indicate that he who is so profusely represented as nailed to the cross will appear as a conquering hero; great Babylon will come into remembrance before God to give unto her the cup of the wine of the fierceness of his wrath; and the angel whose glory shall lighten the earth shall with his stentorian voice announce that "Babylon is fallen,—is fallen," and in an hour her great riches will come to nought. Rev. xviii.

The great Teacher respecting whom we at the head of this article enquire of the reader what he thinks of him, was while in the flesh distinguished from all other teachers in that he not only commenced a new school of thought, but taught men how to embody his principles in their daily lives. By the life he lived he illustrated the scope of what he taught, and proved their value not only for the few but for the many. He demonstrated his power to provide not only the principles of his teaching, but the faculty for, and incentive to, the habitual exercise of the mind in them. The motive power of his teaching was love; and herein lies the secret of the success of his mission; which is all that it was designed to be, notwithstanding the apparent odds against him near the close of the age for taking out a people for God's name.

By keeping the eternal purpose of God in view, the called of God according to that purpose, instead of being discouraged by their fewness should be enabled to praise and magnify his holy name that it has been theirs to be called to God's kingdom and glory by his favor; and can even now rejoice in hope of the glory of God through an indwelling Christ—"Christ in you, the hope of glory" is the apostolic way of stating it.

If these lines should come under the eyes of any who have not made up their mind with regard to Christ; some times think one way and sometimes another; look now this way and now that; halting between two opinions, as if the pleasures of sin for a season had almost as many charms for them as the eternal weight stored for the future, for those who now live godly in Christ Jesus. To all such we say, save yourselves from this untoward generation before it be too late.

It matters not what a man's vocation may be, he ought to be greater than his vocation.

Notes by the Way.

Having bid farewell to the Bush Creek Church, I arrived in Cleveland, O., Dec. 24. On that evening I had the pleasure of meeting the Bible Class of the Church of the Blessed Hope. It was certainly a pleasure to me to meet these dear ones in Christ, the most of whom I had never met before. As I travel abroad, and meet these dear servants of God, and form their acquaintance, we soon learn to love each other; and dread the time when we must part. The Blessed Hope is a sweet bond of attachment, and in fact we are all blood relations, brought nigh by the blood of Christ.

After the services I was invited by Brother and Sister Tomlinson to accompany them to their home, where I was made heartily welcome, and every attention and comfort at their command was freely given, and highly appreciated by me.

The next day, being Christmas, I spent the time with Brother and Sister Goss and family, and I richly enjoyed conversing with these people on the ever welcome topics pertaining to our common faith.

In the evening I again returned to the home of Bro. Tomlinson. On Sunday morning and evening I preached at the Church of the Blessed Hope. The balance of the week was spent in social meetings held at the homes of the members.

On Tuesday evening they held their annual Christmas entertainment for the Sunday School.

On the week following, commencing on Sunday evening, I held public meetings at the Church, every night during the week excepting Saturday evening. At the latter part of the week I made my home with Bro. and Sister Moore, and was very hospitably entertained by them. I also made brief calls on Brethren Bond, Joblin, Neill, and others.

On the Sunday following, I preached both morning and evening, for the Church of God, in their Hall on Superior St., which is presided over by our worthy and much esteemed Brother George Elton, whom many of the readers will remember by his articles in the paper. While with the Church of God, I made my home with Brother and Sister Upton, and was very well entertained by them. Sister Upton is the daughter of Bro. and Sister Elton, and her father and mother are visiting their home with them for the winter. On this account I had many pleasant interviews with them.

Bro. Elton also kindly escorted me to the homes of the various brethren and sisters, and enjoyed my visits with them also. He took me to see the tomb and monument of Ex-President Garfield, who fell by the hand of a cowardly assassin. We entered the tomb and descended to the receiving vault, and viewed the casket containing the remains of the lamented President. After this, we ascended nearly to the summit of the monument.

The meetings during the week were held at the Elton Studio, with the exception of Thursday, when the congregation held their annual social and supper together in the Hall. I certainly formed a very pleasant acquaintance with Sister Fanny Elton-Saunders and husband. In my rambles about the city, I made the Studio my headquarters, and shall never forget their kindness and many pleasant chats we had together.

I also remember with pleasure my visits with Sister Horsburg and her family.

On the next Sunday morning I commenced meetings with The Blessed Hope Mission, which is presided over by Bro. Jesse Shourds. The first one was held in the rooms of the Mission, on Outhwaite St., and in the evening in Flynn and Foelik Hall, but during the week meetings were held at the Mission rooms. Much interest was manifested in the meetings, and so it was decided to continue them the next week same as before, Sunday evening in the Hall and week nights in their Mission Rooms.

This Church has concluded that the Mission Rooms are too small for their numbers, and so accordingly have rented a more commodious hall in the Colonial Arcade on Euclid Av.

While preaching for this Church, I made my home with Bro. and Sister McLauchlan, and many an interesting occasion we had together, conversing on Bible topics. Many of our readers doubtless remember Brother McLauchlan. He is one of the few old time defenders of the ancient faith of the gospel, which still survive. While advanced in years, yet his old time love for the saving faith and hope of the gospel is still vigorous.

Bro. Shourds, who is his present associate in the work, has been specially interested in Sunday School work, and has been quite successful in training the young mind to comprehend the truth.

While I was holding these meetings in Cleveland, Brother and Sister John Lehman and Bro. Macy from the Bush Creek Church, near Troy, O., came to Cleveland and spent a few days with us. I was real glad to see them. I made my home with Brother Lehman while I was preaching for the Bush Creek Church, and formed a very pleasant acquaintance with them.

Sisters Neill and Butler also came up from Salem. It was refreshing to come in contact with these dear sisters. They are fairly aglow with love for the Blessed Hope.

Words would fail me to describe my feelings as I go from place to place and meet with loved ones in Christ, and hold sweet communion together; and together bow before the throne of grace. It is a foretaste of joys to come, when we shall meet the dear Redeemer and the faithful ones of ages past.

I must not forget to mention that on invitation I attended the Sisters meeting in Cleveland. It reminded me of our Ladies Aid Society at Chicago. They do a good work. May the Lord bless our faithful sisters.

In Cleveland, as elsewhere, I find so many items of interest to speak of that I can only make a brief mention of them.

I expect to leave Cleveland for Randolph, Pa., in about a week.

May the Lord be with you all.

W. H. WILSON.

OUR NEW YEAR GREETING LETTERS.

Dear ones of like precious faith:

As the New Year begins, I can say that I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ for it is the power of God unto salvation to all who believe and obey it. Although isolated from all of like precious faith, I am striving by the grace of God helping me, to walk in the straight and narrow way. Let us all try and see how near in the footsteps of our blessed Lord and Master we can walk. He went about doing good, healing the sick, restoring sight to the blind, feeding the hungry, administering to the needy, comforting the oppressed and speaking kind words to the down hearted. Cannot we do some of those things? A smile, a kind word, a hearty shake of the hand will clear the cloud from many a weary brow, and they cost one so little. We can do many kind acts which will lift up those for whom we do them, and send them on their way rejoicing and we will feel all the better for having lightened some one's burden. Let us all strive more diligently as we see the day approaching, by well-doing seeking for glory, honor and immortality, that we may receive the promised reward. Pray for me that I may ever be found walking in the straight and narrow way.

Yours, in the soon coming of our blessed Lord and Master.

Dear Restitution:

We are starting out in a New Year, and the question with us is, Is God working in us and through us to his own glory? What have we done in the year that is just out? Have we grown any? There is certainly no standing still. We must move forward if we are in the race, or else withdraw, and we have too much at stake to ever think of that. With what zeal and energy we ought to work—God has no use for dead—or even sleepy workers. Don't sit down and be idle, but do or be something and your reward is sure. "Hold fast that which thou hast, that no man take thy crown." We cannot all be an eye or mouth, or ear, else where were the rest of the body? The body must be completed and all parts represented. Are we willing to fill the humblest position? God help us and give us more of his spirit, in the year that is just before us that it may be used to better advantage in the Lord's work, for our reward will be according to our work. Let us be sober and hope to the end. Come Lord Jesus, and come quickly.

Your brother in Christ.

Dear Brother Underwood:

We have decided to locate here at Saw Tell, Cal. We came here from Denver, Colo., in November. The Doctor advised us to come here on account of my husband's health. He had two very sick spells last year and the Doctor says he may be for some reason he has been spared, and since we came here he has been improving. We desire to send New Year's Greeting to all our dear brothers and sisters. We feel so thankful that our minds are still centered on the precious promises in God's Word, and we have no desire to give up the struggle, though the storms may beat and fierce winds may blow, if we are only faithful we will safely land in the haven of eternal repose. Dear ones, remember us in your prayers; for we rejoice in the blessed hope that we are nearing the time when all the faithful ones will meet to part no more.

Your Brother and Sister in Christ.

Editor Restitution:

We could not do without the paper. We usually make Sunday the day to read it. It does one good to sit down after their week's work and read the Bible and the paper. It cheers and enlightens us on our way. So many good words spoken by the brothers and sisters. I often give papers to my neighbors to read, thinking it might help them to see the truth.

Yours, looking for the Master.

Beloved in the Lord, Greeting:

I certainly wish to be recognized as one who is interested in the truth, and speak a word of encouragement to all, especially the isolated ones. It is this, some of our leading members are trying to form a settlement or colony of Christian believers in South Eastern Kansas. The Colony town at present called Rollin, is located in Neosho County. The success of any cause requires the co-operation of those who are interested in it. May not the children of light become as wise as the children of this world? In the little village of Ripley, where mother and I live there are only a few Christian believers in town and a few out. I find the association pleasant and the assembling on the first day of the week with those and their children in Bible school and social meeting, a great advantage in learning God's Word. Christian union based on spiritual unity is a condition of the highest attainment and usefulness. John xvii. 21–23. Recently we had Brother F. L. Austin come and hold a series of meetings. One Mrs. Ora Burnette believed on the Lord and was baptized. We were pleased to receive her into Christian fellowship. May God bless the efforts of our ministers that labor so faithfully for the truth, and the workers for the well-being of the poorer class and isolated ones, and make his grace abound richly, is my prayer.

Your Sister in Christ.

Dear brothers and sisters:

The Gospel, God's Word, teaches but one faith and hope, but there are many others taught by men, that are contrary to the one true faith once delivered to the saints. The false doctrines of the last times is now being taught, we are now in the days of delusion because they love not the truth. Let us of the one faith hold up the light and keep ourselves unspotted from the world, praying in the holy spirit, looking for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and to that eternal life that God has promised to give to his faithful children at the resurrection. God has given this short life to prepare for the eternal life. As we have just entered a New Year, let us draw near to him and he will draw near to us, and fill us with love to him. We have many foes to face but God will give us the victory, if we only trust him. Let us remember all down through the stream of time that God's faithful children always were in the minority, while the false was in the majority, ready to persecute and misrepresent. I am almost alone here, in the faith. My wife has been dead over nine years. Her last words to me was that she was going to sleep in Jesus, and that it would not be long until the wakening time. I firmly believe that she died with eternal life hid with God in Christ, and when Christ, who is our life shall appear, that she will appear with him in glory, and sing the victory song of "O death, where is thy sting, O grave where is thy victory?" Paul said, "If after the manner of men, I have fought with beasts at Ephesus, what advantageth it me if the dead rise not?" I am still fighting with the Sword of the Spirit, the Word of God. People often say to me, "I am redeemed," and I then ask them to sing the victory song. Full redemption will come when the Lord Jesus is seated upon his father David's throne on Mt. Zion. Then the voice of a great multitude will be heard, as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of many thunderings, saying, Alleluia, for the Lord God Omnipotent reigneth. Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honor to him for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready. Who is the wife or bride? The one true church, that God is the founder of. Brothers and Sisters, let us so live this coming year that we can look back and say that we have gained a victory. The Lord is coming to this sin cursed earth, to restore paradise back to its Edenic beauty, then God's faithful children will hear his welcome voice, "Come ye blessed of my Father inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." I would like a letter from any of the brothers and sisters. Address me at Hennessey, Okla.

Your brother in hope of eternal life.

Report.

Brother W. H. Wilson, of Chicago, has just closed a series of very interesting and instructive meetings at the Blessed Hope Mission, covering a period of two weeks.

To say that the Bible lessons outlined by him have been upbuilding, comforting and very helpful, would be stating it mildly. He is thoroughly competent as an instructor, and needs no word of commendation from me; nor does he need an introduction to the readers of THE RESTITUTION, you are all familiar with his writings; as he has from time to time contributed to the columns of that paper. Brother Wilson knows how to "rightly divide the Word of Truth." This you know is very important in this sceptical age.

The meetings began on the morning of Sunday Jan. 18, speaking twice on that day, morning and evening, three evenings during the week following, twice on Sunday the 25. Thursday evening following and twice on Sunday Feb. 1st, the themes being very instructive. The last two were especially so, to-wit: "Jesus the Logos of God," and "Reasons for believing the Bible to be the Word of God."

Our acquaintance with our Brother Wilson, and our social and religious gatherings with him during his stay in Cleveland, will long be remembered, and we trust that at some future day we may again hear him on these great and thrilling themes which were by him so beautifully outlined. We can heartily recommend him to all those brethren of like precious faith, knowing that they will receive lasting and profitable instruction by a visit from him.

May the blessing of the Father attend him, and his good work wherever he goes, and if we should never meet again in the mortal body, may we meet and shake hands on that memorable event of the ingathering of the "first fruits" the resurrection morning, is the prayer of your humble brother in the Anointed One.

J. N. SHOURDS.

Again we rejoice that eleven more have put on Christ by baptism, through the faithful and never tiring efforts of Bro. F. L. Austin, at Burr Oak, Ind.

Meetings began Jan. 6, and closed Feb. 1st. We praise our God for the strength he has given Bro. Austin and us, and for those dear ones that have been added to our band of believers, to share our trials, and enjoy our blessings. May they ever be found faithful, putting on the whole armor of light, that at Christ's appearing they may be found worthy of a crown of righteousness.

Oh, how dear are those meetings to us, where we assemble ourselves together, and mingle our voices in praise to our God. It is a foretaste of that bright and glorious day, when the curse shall be removed, and we shall see no more sin, nor sorrow, nor crying.

May that Morn soon appear. With prayerful hearts we can say, "Come Lord Jesus, come quickly."

SOMEWHERE.

Somewhere the wind is blowing,
I thought as I did along
In the burning heat of the noontide,
And the fancy made me strong.
Yes, somewhere the wind is blowing,
Though here, where I sit and sigh,
Not a breath of air is stirring
Not a cloud in the summer sky.

Somewhere the thirsty long for
Exist on earth's wide bound;
Somewhere the sun is shining
When Winter nips the ground;
Somewhere the flowers are springing
Somewhere the corn is brown,
And ready unto the harvest
To feed the hungry town.

Somewhere the twilight gathers,
And weary men lay by
The burden of the day-time,
And wrapped in slumber lie.
Somewhere the day is breaking,
And gloom and darkness flee,
Though storms our bark are tossing
The calm somewhere a place is seen.

And thou, Life-maker, Life-always
In this my dreary life,
Thou somewhere else—somewhere
In me to set the pain and strife
And somewhere else the sin and sorrow
Of earth are known no more,
Somewhere for weary spirits
Shall find a peaceful shore.

Somewhere the Canes that try us
Shall all have passed away;
And doubt and fears no longer
Impede the perfect day.
O brother, though the darkness
Around thy soul be cast,
The earth is rolling sunward,
And light will come at last.

Gospel of the Kingdom of God Endangered in Scotland.

No. 5.

"We ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip." Heb. ii. "With one mind striving together for the faith of the gospel." Paul.

In preceding papers it was pointed out how laxity as to "the gospel of the kingdom of God" had been favored by certain articles in the Messenger (Glasgow), etc. and some remarks of a corrective nature offered. It is proposed now to look at some facts which tend to explain, but certainly not to excuse such laxity.

The gospel in itself is simple enough. The early disciples had no difficulty in comprehending it. It was easy enough for any unprejudiced Jew to know about the kingdom of heaven, and the Messiah, or even as to such facts as the death and resurrection of Jesus, when such came into existence. The Apostles could say, "We believe and are sure that thou art the Anointed One," and the evangelist could speak of the "Things most surely believed among us." Many through "fear of the Jews," and especially dread of "expulsion from the synagogue," held back from confessing the truth.

To Gentiles the true point of view is awanting. The Gentile mind seems naturally alien from the standpoint of the Jew, especially the Jew of the first century. The Jew knew nothing about a so-called spiritual kingdom, or that the church is the kingdom. The modern Gentile has inherited a perversion of the gospel from the apostasy of a former age. He may thus be said to be by nature an ignorant unbeliever.

Again, the translators in some important respects failed to supply a rendering of certain terms. Especially this applies to the term Christ. This is a title of office like king or emperor, and not a personal name like Jesus. Even the Revised Version has failed here. Christ ought therefore to be translated. Basileus is always translated king, and why not the title Christ? The scholars who provided a translation from the Greek New Testament into Hebrew for the use of Jews, understood this point, and their work should afford an object lesson for Gentiles. We find in the New Testament in Hebrew the Greek term Christ rendered Messiah. A Jewish reader would know that Messiah meant (the) Anointed (One). If any Jew should desire to verify this by consulting the Old Testament in English he would find it corroborated by nearly twenty instances where Messiah is rendered Anointed. In the English New Testament the case is very different, and the Gentile is placed at a disadvantage.

The foregoing remarks will apply to the term Christian which occurs three times in the New Testament. In the version made for the Jews it is rendered by a Hebrew term equivalent to Messianist, meaning a follower of the Anointed (One). Thus a Jew when reading in the New Testament will find that in Acts xi 26 the language "The disciples were called Messianists first in Antioch," in Acts xxvi. 28: "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Messianist;" and in 1 Pet. iv. 16, "If any man suffer as a Messianist."

The Gentile of the first century was not exempt from the necessity of occupying the standpoint of the Jew. We find a purely Gentile audience at Athens where the preacher was evidently moved by such a consideration. In his address at this place the Apostle Paul set before his audience the great Creator of heaven and earth, in whom we live and move and have our being, in contrast with the idols of gold and silver of the Greek mythology. He reached a point where he announced the Messianic idea of the divine government, when he was cut short by the mockery of some of his hearers. Here is his utterance, "The times of this ignorance God winked at; but now commandeth all men every where to repent; because he hath appointed a day in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained; whereof he hath given assurance unto all men in that he hath raised him up from the dead." Acts xvii. 30, 31.

The question put by Philip to the Ethiopian traveller, "Understandest thou what thou readest," has an important bearing on the Gentile reader of the New Testament. The necessity of understanding what we read is indispensable if we would reapany benefit from it. Alexander Campbell said some true words on such points as this. In his discourse on law he remarks—"Words are signs of ideas or thoughts. Unless words are understood ideas or sentiments can neither be communicated nor received." It is sad to think that with regard to what he termed the ancient gospel, "Jesus is the Christ" he failed to put his dictum into practice, thus missing the mark that the Christ was he who was "raised up to sit on David's throne." The remarks in a previous paragraph are apropos of this.

Philip's question was put to a reader of the Old Testament when the New Testament had not come into existence. This reader was perusing the book of the prophet Isaiah, and was interested to know of whom the prophet was speaking. "Philip began at that same Scripture and preached unto him Jesus," that is, that Jesus of Nazareth was the person spoken of by the prophet. The Ethiopian expressing a desire to be baptized, confessed his belief that "Jesus Anointed is the Son of God." This is in accord with Philip's practice in Samaria as recorded in the early part of this chapter. There he preached (the) Anointed, and gospelized the "things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ." Acts viii. 5, 12, 39 37.

The reader will note from what has been advanced, especially in the present paper, that certain obstacles lie in the way of the modern Greek coming into line with the gospel of the kingdom of God. From this cause a certain degree of what may be called exposition becomes necessary to clear up a matter which in itself is really extremely simple. And although much advantage would be gained from a proper translation of the term Christ, etc., it is not meant that our common translation is not capable of being used so as to make the gospel plain to simple minds and honest and good hearts.

It need scarcely be asked here what is the tendency of the ordinary Gentile mind in reading the New Testament. The popular theology generally fills his mind, and shapes his thoughts accordingly. As a general rule he believes in Jesus and certain events such as his death and resurrection. He naturally couples the name of Jesus with the supposed surname Christ, and so far as his belief is concerned, concludes he is a Christian. Is such a claim borne out by the testimony? Is he a Messianist? Does he know and believe that "Jesus is the Christ," he who has been raised up to sit on David's throne? If not, can he be said to be a believer? If he submits to immersion on such belief, can he be said to have become "obedient to the faith." Acts vii. 7. The apostle Paul counselled the disciples—"Examine yourselves whether ye be in the faith." Does not this become the urgent personal duty of persons as may be in such a position as I have spoken of? And should they not be encouraged in the performance of this duty by such baptized believers as have the opportunity?

From the tenor of the remarks in this paper it need not be surprising that the great mass of the professing religious world should remain in ignorance. They are content to fall in with the various forms of Christianity among which their lot is cast. But it seems difficult to understand how persons who for years have been enlightened in the truth should show any laxity towards it.

It has been said that our position savors of unchristianizing the professing world. But this can only be by implication. The fact is that each separate communion might be so charged. If the divine dictum as to the divine terms of salvation is to be acted on, the consequences are in good hands. If that dictum can be withdrawn we may be assured of good reasons for such. Until then our duty seems plain.

Right Living a Proof of Love.

No professed Christian, who does not live right, loves his fellowmen in the sense that God would define love. To live in a manner that will lead others to go wrong, is not love. All the powers of our being must be used to save others, not to destroy them. Silent influence is more powerful for good or ill than speech.

The sinful world reads us through and through, not from what we say we are, but from our daily conduct, our speeches in the social meeting, our eloquent prayers. Our pleadings with them to turn to Christ count for nothing if we are not sincere. We must live in Christ, we must talk with him, must walk with him, must know in our own hearts that there is nothing that is between us and God. O that we might love the world truly as Christ loved it, giving up all that he might save some. Remember, dear ones, that we are not to please ourselves by taking our own ways, or doing our own pleasure if we want to bring others to Christ.

REST IN THE LORD.

There is or can be quite a number of answers given to rest, such as repose, cease from labors, rest as to lean against anything. But the greatest of rests is the rest in the Lord, for that will be an everlasting rest, if we are found worthy to attain unto that rest. The rest of the Christian is obtained by faith. We must believe that there is a God, the Creator of all things, and that he gave his only begotten Son, that whoso or believeth on him, and doeth righteousness will be accepted of him. The Jews would not accept Christ and therefore were cast off and in Heb. iii. 10, 11; "Wherefore I was grieved with that generation, and said, they do always err in their hearts and they have not known my ways, so I swear in my wrath, they shall not enter into my rest." And in Heb. iv. 1, we read, "Let us therefore fear lest a promise being left us of entering into his rest any of you should seem to come short of it, for unto us was the gospel preached, as well as unto them, but the Word preached did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that had heard it, for we which have believed do enter into his rest as he said. For he spake in a certain place of the seventh day on this wise, And God did rest the seventh day from all his works, and in this place again if they shall enter into my rest, seeing therefore it remaineth that some must enter therein, and they to whom it was preached entered not in because of unbelief." And again in Isa. xx. 15, "For thus saith the Lord God the holy one of Israel, in returning and rest shall ye be saved, in quietness and in confidence shall be your strength and ye would not." And in Jer. vi. 16, they had the promise of rest in the Lord if they would only obey, and ask for the old paths. Thus saith the Lord, Stand ye in the ways, and see and ask for the old paths, where is the good way and walk therein and ye shall find rest for your souls; but they said we will not walk therein." Again in Matt. xi. 28, we are most earnestly invited to come unto the rest in the Lord. He says, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you and learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls, for my yoke is easy and my burden is light." My prayer is that we may all be able to secure that everlasting rest.

Dear brothers and sisters:

A Christian greeting to you all, and that means a great many when we think of all the dear ones we have met north, south, east and west. What a gathering it will be, when the morn of glory dawns, and all the righteous dead break forth in the glad song of victory over death and the grave. We can truly pray, hasten thy coming, Lord Jesus.

The Elder and myself are holding meetings at Decker School House—have been here two weeks. The weather has been bad, stormy and very cold much of the time. So many have moved away from here, some have fallen asleep and some gone back to the world, that our hearts are constantly saddened; but thank God, many are faithful, and will be to the end.

We go from here to East Millbrook to hold meetings in an abandoned Congregational Church. We expect opposition here, and hope it may result in searching the Scriptures, and embracing the truth. Brethren every where, pray earnestly that good may be done at this place, and that we may have health and strength given us for the work.

Coronation of Nebuchnezzer.

(FROM BELTESHAZZAR.)

About sunrise it was noised abroad that the triumphant army returning from Jerusalem was marching down the east bank of the river, preparatory to the grand review before the king. The result was what it always is in similar cases. Thousands forgot every thing else, and went off to see the military enter the city. But it proved to be only a select portion of the army which was coming. But even that was received with shouts from many thousand throats.

On came the proud veterans, horse and foot, walking like triumphant legions as they were. First a thousand cavalry, their small, round-bodied horses, with cropped mains and tails, bearing their burly riders proudly as if they, as well as the soldiers, called forth the shouts. Then ten thousand bowmen on foot, though the horsemen also were armed with bows and arrows. Then twenty thousand foot soldiers, some with short swords, well burnished and flashing in the morning sun; some with spears and some with daggers and maces, and their shining helmets and shields, and their breastplates of quilted linen fixed the gaze of the exultant multitude as the returning veterans marched by.

Last in the long line was a train of pack-mules laden with spoils of the Temple at Jerusalem, guarded and escorted by many trusty soldiers.

* * * *

At the fifth hour—eleven o'clock in the morning—a blare of trumpets announced the approach of the king and queen, and his accompanying nobles. The soldiers drove back the multitude; the royal party approached in their gaily equipped chariots, and descended from them and passed rapidly up the broad stairway to the temporary throne, erected on the first story of the great temple. When all was reduced to silence, one of the chief priests offered a solemn prayer to Merodach, a former king of the order of Babylon, now canonized and become the favorite god of Nebuchadnezzer.

* * * *

The prayer to Merodach was ended, and now a single signal blast upon a trumpet was heard. It announced to the choir of two hundred singers that stood behind the throne—men and women—that the moment had arrived for the coronation anthem to be sung, which had been composed and adapted to vocal music by the king's poet and musician specially for the occasion. It was sung by musical voices with great spirit, and the chorus was rendered in a loud shout to be heard by thousands.

Son of the great king Nabopolassar,
Crown him!
Warrior and mighty conqueror,
Crown him!
Over Jerusalem victorious,
Crown him!
Conqueror of Egypt's king,
Crown him!
Hope of his people—
Ruler of Babylon—
Favorite of Merodach and Nebo—
Crown him lord and king!

Almost at the instant of the last words of the chorus, a Chaldean astronomer, watching a sun dial on the tower, announced by three short, sharp blasts of a trumpet that the hour of high noon was at hand. Then two of the chief priests bore the crown to Nebuchadnezzer, lifted it from its rich cushion and placed it on his head, with these words uttered in loud exclamation: "By the grace of Merodach, we crown thee, O Nebuchadnezzer, king of Babylon." This was answered by ten thousand throats, all shouting: "O king, live forever."

The king then ascended the throne, and taking the queen's coronet from the cushion, placed it himself upon the head of Amyitis, saying in a loud voice: "Queen of all Babylonia, receive thy crown."

Then, as the answering shout of the multitude ascended, it was silenced by a burst of instrumental music in a wild march of triumph, and the commander of the long line of soldiers put them in motion to march in review before the king, their lately victorious chief. Imagine the scene. The very horses of the mounted bowmen caught the spirit of the hour, and bore their proud riders in stately steppings past the king. Then came the archers on foot, with all their trappings flashing in the sunlight. Then the ten thousand foot soldiers, and last of all, the precious spoils of the temple at Jerusalem.

It was enough. The multitude was surfeited with excitement and sight-seeing, and the long, loud shouts died away to an echo. It was over, and the new-crowned king and his noble queen, the nobles and the escort, turned from the great temple toward the palace, and soon passed the arched gate through the double inclosing wall into the precincts of the royal palace.

Coronation day was ended, and a vast concourse of tired citizens were seeking their homes in the city, and another multitude moved in various directions outside to the places from whence they came.—Selected by Georgie Osborn.

What is Russia?

Siberia is Russia—five million square miles, in which whole countries are a quivering carpet of wild flowers in the spring; a rolling grain field in autumn; an ice-bound waste in winter, stored full of every mineral, crossed by the longest railway in the world, and chiefly inhabited by a population of convicts and exiles.

Central Asia is Russia—a million and a half square miles of barren desert and irrigated oases, the most famous cities of Asia and the greatest river, a few years ago the hotbed of Mussulman fanaticism, probably the cradle of the human race, and possibly the scene of its most fateful conflict.

The Eastern Question is: How will Russia try again to get Constantinople? The Far Eastern Question is; Will Russia succeed in dominating China? The question of questions for the British Empire is: Will Russia attempt to invade India?

The Triple Alliance is a league to work against Russia. The Dual Alliance is Russia's reply. Russia called the nations to the Conference of Peace. It would be easier to say what is not Russia.

Unless you realize that in Russia the Czar is everything, literally everything; that not only is his will law, but that it is also heaven-inspired right, that his land and his subjects are his to dispose of wholly as he will—I am speaking, of course, of the masses of the people—you will not grasp the fundamental condition of Russia today. In a Russian battle not so long ago, the artillery, urgently needed in front to save the day, was stopped by a ditch. The soldiers thereupon flung themselves in until the ditch was full, and the artillery galloped over their bodies.

The incident illustrates the relation of the common people of Russia to their sovereign. In material things it is the same. I was once discussing with a Russian administrator the military capabilities of the Trans-Siberian Railroad, and I remarked that there would not be rolling stock sufficient to convey masses of troops in a short time.

"Every engine and carriage in Russia would be put there if necessary," was the reply.

"But," I objected, "that would disorganize the whole commerce of the country, and bring tens of thousands to ruin."

"You don't understand," answered this official, "If the Czar gave the word to take every railway carriage in Russia and run it across the Siberian Railway and throw it into the China Sea at the other end, who, I should like to know, would prevent it."—Henry Norman in Scribner.

Now.

One morning, while about my work, I thought to leave a portion of it till later in the day, when, the afterthought came that I might be called away, and in that case it would remain undone. I at once set about it, and as I worked the thought came vividly to my mind, that now, now, is the time, the acceptable time, "now is the day of salvation."

We sometimes think, when we have reached certain times we can render better service to God. But he wants the best service we have now. "Today, if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts." "Draw nigh unto him, and he will draw nigh unto you." Every hour we need him, and every hour he requires our service. Not tomorrow, but today. Now let us give him the very best that we have; seeking first the kingdom of heaven, and its righteousness; knowing all things needful will be added.

God knows so much better than we, it seems strange we should ever fail to trust him. How often our best efforts prove futile, while God in his own way will bring about the desired results. Then let us not give him half, but whole-hearted service, and give it now.—Mrs. N. R. Norcutt.

A Scientist's Conviction.

There is a light "that lighteth every man that cometh into the world," an inward voice that testifies to the conscience the truth of God, and his eternal power and Godhead. Against this voice men can lose their hearts and resist its utterances, until they lose their power. But this does not prove that God has never spoken to them, nor that they have had no convictions of the truth.

Perhaps no one has more carefully traced out the evidences of design, contrivance and skill in nature, than the late Charles Darwin; and yet the facts he ascertained contradicted his theories which he held, and his convictions at times almost overpowered the fancies which he promulgated.

In a Glasgow lecture the Duke of Argyll said: "In the last year of his life Mr. Darwin did me the honor of calling upon me in London, and I had a long and interesting conversation with that distinguished observer of nature. In the course of conversation I said it was impossible to look at the wonderful processes of nature which he had observed, without seeing that they were the effect and the expression of mind. I shall never forget Mr. Darwin's answer. He looked at me hard, and said:

'Well, it often comes over me with over-powering force, but at other times (and he shook his head) it seems to go away.'"

"It seems to go away." Light rejected becomes darkness, and conviction resisted leaves the soul unconvinced and hardened in unbelief. "If the light that is in you become darkness, how great is that darkness."—The Christian.

Strength Versus Weakness.

"Peter followed him afar off." "Joseph of Armathea went in boldly unto Pilate, and craved the body of Jesus." This interchange is ever going on in the church. Some are offended and fall back, and frequently the strongest become weak when tribulation arises. On the other hand, the weakest then distinguish themselves and make their joyful confession to be heard, that so there never may be wanting those who know and confess Christ.

For God, like a rich householder, chooses to have all kinds of servants in his house—not the strong and able merely, but also the small and weak. And in order that the strong may not despise any, they are forced to learn in their own case their weakness; and in order that none may judge another, the spirit of God comes upon the weak, encouraging, comforting, strengthening them, and that to such a degree that every one is constrained to recognize and extol the divine power at work in them.—Martin Luther.

If asked "Are you a Christian?" do not say, "I hope I am." If you should ask me, "Are you a married man?" what would you think if I should say, "I hope I am." There are some things a man ought to know, and this one of them.—J. August Smith.

By terrible things in righteousness wilt thou answer us, O God of our salvation; who art the confidence of all the ends of the earth, and of them that are afar off upon the sea.—Psa. lxv. 5.

Differing Ways.

A dismal way is the downcast way,
Saving up shadows for a sunny day,
Nursing sorrow but to make it last,
Scowling at joy till it hurries past,
Living life as a nightmare dream,
Seeing gloom in the place of gleams—
Oh, poor soul!
Paying by choice such a bitter toll!

A happy way is the uplift way,
Looking for the sunlight every day,
Banishing sorrow with a spirit high,
Clinging to joy till it can't pass by,
Living life as real and sweet,
Seeing its beauty and grace complete—
Oh, rich soul!
Knowing the truth of God's control!

Is It Possible?

Is it possible to live a worthy life even in these latter days; by living natural, honorable and obedient unto God, which require faith and works; and one without the other is dead. Therefore through Christ it has been made possible for all men to gain eternal life; yet we find "that many shall seek, but few shall find" eternal life. God looking down the stream of time could see that mortal man would wax worse; and that the family of humanity would become so entangled with theology, creeds and isms; and that the imposition that they would necessarily and unavoidably have to go through, as we see during our life time is that the worst enemy man has is mankind; and that they would be so born and constituted that their ability would not be sufficient with the surrounding influence to enable them to grasp the glorious gospel and live it "until he comes whose right it is to make all things new." Still there will be a small portion out of the great mass (the little flock) who will be able by his help to live the life required and have a part in the first resurrection, which entitles them to eternal life and to become kings and priests in the restoration age, being joint heirs with Christ, through the promises made to Abraham: yet as is always the case many try to console themselves by trying to believe that God is under some obligation to them, and that he will provide a way whereby they must be saved; still they have lived a life that he absolutely forbid them; "though they perish forever," and will not have a part in the first resurrection and will be for ever dead, yet they try to hope that by some miraculous way; or even if it is at the second resurrection to be raised with the righteous dead and given another hearing. Why if they had the laws given them containing the message and they failed to obtain or regard it they are already condemned; and it is surely not necessary or merciful to raise them in order to condemn again, yet they feel as though they amounted to something; while in fact the iniquities they have worked against God and his followers have brought them to nought, and therefore he is under no obligation to them, for they are the result of sin: as Paul stated, "they are natural born brutes made to be taken and destroyed;" and as he has said, "Man hath no pre-eminence over the beast, as one dies so doth the other;" and such principles and practices that lead humanity to destruction (and many of the leaders know better) all justify themselves, (as we will term it) by getting just as near the brink of the hill, as they can not to tumble in; which we must 'concede by all knowledge and wisdom that there is no other hill than this life and death; or the grave, and they will contend that necessary evils must exist in order to maintain a livelihood and a business; and they are not capable within themselves to originate and accumulate and make a living and property and gain eternal life; but will rob others of their opportunities at all hazards in order to try and succeed themselves. Still we must realize that evil will come upon us not of necessity but of circumstances; as was the case with the late panic and religious political eruption we have of recent years passed through. When secret organizations of all natures were being formed and claiming to be for the good of humanity; when in fact it was their ruin; and cannot be outlived for generations to come; which was produced by certain elements and made a condition of affairs that made those of right principle and practice creatures of circumstances, which was unavoidably by them; and it is true that the world is moving on to destruction in every profession of life, just as creeds and theology dictate, representing all kinds of theories and isms, producing principles and practices that are half right and half wrong, as we might state it; and make life too short or too long. Instead of humanity getting down to business and following the principles and practices that were given them by their Creator, they go to some extent upon the principle of building up and then wrecking; which is a curse to all humanity and a sin of the gravest kind before God. Yet I would not be a critic or a grumbler; but simply by the help of God follow principles that were given us by him; but as Paul said he sinned daily, therefore will I think we are no better than he; but Satan and his imps are always at work, "deceiving and being deceived," when we see such as hypnotism and drugging being practiced and its like upon especially those unaware, to wield an influence over those whom they come in contact in business, society, love, disease, etc., which is evidence of the evil day that is upon us; and gives the wicked that practice it an opportunity to do great harm, cause the true marriage vow to be broken and wreck many, a worthy life and even murder; and unless people know themselves they are very liable to be influenced to such an extent that they will become wrecks and wreck others. Although it is true that "in the last days they will come with lying wonders and deceive the very elect if possible," and they have invented everything, except to keep from being sick, dying, raise the dead to life (and maintain it), which is certain evidence that God's Word is true; and those who have tested those faiths, sciences, etc., as I will term them. I notice that they all get sick, go to ruin and die just the same, and as I am on a general subject I must state that I had the good fortune to hear a lecture recently on phrenology by Mrs. O. S. Fowler, the widow of Prof. O. S. Fowler, formally of the Fowler and Wells Institute of Phrenology in New York. Any thinking person will at once realize her ability as being far superior to the great mass of humanity; and that her ideas on phrenology are very instructive and of great benefit to humanity if they would only study it sufficiently to appreciate it. Still with all her ability she thinks she has made a wonderful progress since the death of her husband by the charts and information placed in her possession by locating the organ, (or the seat of the spark) of life and the heart that God referred to when speaking to mankind, which is located under and in the center of the brain, is certainly correct; and there conveys the principle, if I comprehend the idea that she aimed to convey, was that the Spirit of God that is in you at death, returned to God who gave it, and really does not explain that the organ of life in man, (or the animal kingdom) in our feeble way (or mortal man's ability) to express it, is like a dynamo, just as soon as it is brought in contact with electricity the machine is put in motion; (or brought to life) so with the magnet it will draw certain minerals, etc. And so it was with Adam, "God blowed into his nostrils the breath of life and he became a living soul," the breath of life only being air containing the necessary qualities, when coming in contact with the life-giving organs gave the clay man life, action or motion until these organs are worn out or destroyed. Therefore this will not leave the impression as theology, creeds and pagan theories have been teaching since Satan deceived Eve in the garden of Eden, that there is a part of man that never dies. But may we continue to hope for the soon coming of our "Lord and Savior Jesus Christ in power and great glory" and raise the righteous dead from the grave and change the righteous living in an instant, and then meet him in the air and to forever be with him; and light upon Mt. Zion of which he will reign on David's throne, when the law shall go forth from Zion and the Word of the Lord from Jerusalem; and the rest of the nations living will have to go up to Jerusalem to worship the Lord of Hosts from year to year; or have no rain during the thousand years' reign of Christ and his saints; when at the end of the thousand years the righteous dead shall be raised and the righteous living purified and the earth cleansed by fire, the curse raised and wickedness and unrighteousness known no more; when sickness, sorrow and death have passed away and he will deliver up the kingdom to the Father, the God of heaven.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, post office, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Woodruff, Elizabeth N. J.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av, Cleveland, O

A Word of Appreciation.

Some time ago I asked the brotherhood through THE RESTITUTION how many copies of the pamphlet "The Reasons of My Withdrawal from the Evangelical Association," would be wanted. Letters came from all parts of the country, some containing money stating the number of copies desired, so that a second edition of 1000 was printed. I wish to state that this edition is nearly exhausted, there being only about 150 left. Those wishing copies better send their orders early, as they will soon be gone. I desire, by this means, to thank the brethren for their encouraging words and financial help. Trusting that the seed will fall in good soil and produce fruit unto eternal life. 25 pages, at 5 cents per copy. A. H. Zilmer, Plymouth, Ind.

TO OUR PATRONS.

We want more readers for THE RESTITUTION. We want One Thousand new names on our list for 1903, and can have them if you will help us.

In every Church of our faith in the land there are members who do not take our paper, who would be benefitted by reading it.

There are those who are isolated by circumstances from any Church fellowship, who would be kept firmer in the faith, helped and strengthened for the battles of life if they had THE RESTITUTION each week.

There are others interested in the truths we hold, who would often have their attention called to the principles of our faith by reading our paper. When no preacher can be secured, when you cannot talk to them, let THE RESTITUTION in their homes be ever a present visitor—a missionary that will do more than any other one thing to keep the interest alive.

There are those whom we wish were interested in the Bible and what it promises. Many of this class of persons have never had the opportunity, or have neglected the matter when it was before them.

You are surely known to people such as are mentioned, and you are surely interested in them. We are satisfied you are not unmindful of their eternal well-being. How much do you care for these people? Will you join with us in getting the gospel before them, and keeping it there a year? We have this to offer to you for consideration

We will send THE RESTITUTION one year to NEW Subscribers for $1.00. We will start them as soon as received and give credit to the end of 1903.

With a little persistent effort in presenting the paper to those you know who are not taking it, you can induce them to try it for $1.00. If you want some sample papers we will gladly supply them to you, and our list can be increased by 1000 names at once.

It can be done easily if you will act on this suggestion, and get those near you interested. If each reader would get a new name our list would be doubled at once.

It would seem as if every reader of THE RESTITUTION could exert influence enough to get one more new name if the effort was made. Will you try it? If the first person you suggest it to does not respond, do not be discouraged, but try some one else. Perhaps the one you least expect will answer quickest.

Did you ever stop to figure up how many words are contained in our paper in a year? You will be surprised at the number of sermons it contains. There is variety too. There is doctrine and the practical, encouragement and cheer, and comfort for the distressed. Each phase of teaching would make several good sized books during the year. You can do no work that yields as large a return for the money expended as by sending THE RESTITUTION to a friend for a year.

We ask you to go at this work and push it along with a will. The time is getting short, and if you can be the means in God's hands of gaining one more for the Master, it will pay for all your labor. We will send several of the back papers to all new subscribers so each will get more than the current year.

Will you not start right away and send one name, and next week when that person gets his paper, some one else will hear of it, and you can send another subscriber.

The Language of the Bible.

The language of the Bible is the language of men. God in giving a revelation to man gave it through the medium of human speech, the words used by the people to whom it was primarily addressed. God made known his will to man in the main, through the Hebrew and Greek languages. In these holy men of God spake and wrote as they were moved by the Holy Spirit. The Bible is like any other book to be understood in accordance with the laws of language; therefore he who pays no regard to these can never learn the truth; the Bible to him is a sealed book. He may be a graduate of some theological school as that of Rome where so many eminent German scholars have been educated; or Oxford from which the Wesleys were graduated; or Andover presided over by celebrated men as Stewart, and later by McCosh. This fact avails nothing in his favor so long as he is looking for God's thoughts far beneath the plain surface of words or apart from the language employed. When I was a boy I often worked with a man in my neighborhood, who could quote a great many passages of Scripture. When he would quote, or I would quote a passage he would say, the spiritual meaning of the passage is so and so. This to guard me, as he honestly thought, against misapprehending the truth. I regarded the man as an embodiment of Scriptural wisdom. But he never taught me how to find the spiritual meaning. The good man came honestly by his "mode" of interpreting the Scriptures. From the pulpit, sacred to clerical learning, came the notion of the occult meaning and mysteries of revelation. The tutor of my youth later in life learned the way of truth; and many years later I made the discovery that his mistake and that of the clergy was due to the notion of the "fitness of things." This was the exercise of the human judgment on things revealed. To illustrate. The Bible plainly reveals the fact that the earth is to be the future and eternal dwelling place of the righteous. This would not do. The earth was too gross a place for the home of the immaterial and immortal soul; so heaven was adjudged the proper abode for so ethereal a being. These dealers in mysteries knew too that the language of the Bible in many places could not be taken in an absolute literal sense. They knew that the term sleep, for instance, which is the proper and literal denominative of the state of unconscious repose of a living man is sometimes in the Scriptures applied to dead men. They are said to be asleep. I need not quote cases of this kind. The reader will readily call to mind such instances. The use of words and things in a figurative sense was license enough for this class of interpretators. What the literalist would view as "a figure of speech," to be explained according to the rules of rhetoric the spiritualizer viewed in the light of hiding a deep meaning—a spiritual meaning that only the spiritually discerned could get at. So they abused figures of speech under a false name. This brings up the question, Is the Bible to be construed literally? Literally, surely, how else? By the literal is meant in harmony with the laws of language. This involves the meaning of words, the grammatical construction of sentences or the relation of the parts of speech as in any other book; and also the use of figures of speech or rhetoric. When the reader or the student regards these essential things he is prepared to learn the truth if he sets himself diligently to the task of searching the Scriptures and comparing spiritual things with spiritual things. This does not mean that he will not meet with difficulties in his investigation; and with knotty problems that no amount of exegetical skill will solve, at least for the present. The Bible is pre-eminently a book for study, and I thank the Lord that it is such. A few days ago a man I employ to do my chores when I am away from home, asked the question, Is not the Bible to be understood as it reads? I said yes. A few days later he quoted these words of Jesus: "Let the dead bury their dead," (Matt. viii. 22) and asked, What does this mean? I remarked that the word "dead" occurring twice in this short sentence is used in two different senses. The request of this disciple was that he might be allowed to first bury his father, then he would afterward follow Jesus. The word "dead" in the one case related to that father who was a fit subject for burial. He was absolutely dead, life was extinct. "Let the dead," here it is used in a figurative sense because it is affirmed of the living friends and neighbors whose duty it was to bury that dead man. These were not concerned about the way of life as was this disciple who believed the words of the great Teacher. They were under condemnation or sentence of death, so affirmed under figure of speech, to be dead. "And you hath he quickened who were dead in trespasses and sins." Eph. ii. 1. As to the fact of two meanings attaching to the word "dead" in this short sentence there can be no mistake. And yet the great majority of expounders do make a mistake and blunder over this, as similar figures of rhetoric. Read death under figure is affirmed sometimes of living subjects they infer that a literally dead man must be alive. Alexander Campbell entitled a tract he wrote "Life not death," carrying the figurative meaning of the word back into its primary use. This may be called an abuse of language. Such audacious tampering deserves rebuke. Where the word dead is applied to a living person there must be a point of resemblance between the condition of this living person and the condition of the literally dead. That point of oneness is not life in the two conditions. To so affirm is to destroy the figure which turns on the term "dead" as applied to a living person. Early in my Christian experience or when I first embraced the truth, men older in years myself, and wise in their own conceits would assay to destroy the force of Scripture proof by citing a passage where a word was used in a figurative sense or as a figure of speech; it mattered not to them whether the passage had any bearing or not on the point in dispute; the fact that they were found language not absolutely literal was sufficient in their estimation to nullify my plain and positive proof. They thought they had gained the point, when they had done nothing but raise a little dust. They were not informing me of something I did not know. Their clap trap argument left my proof texts untouched. These stood as proof of my contention and would stand against inference however artfully drawn. There is no weapon with which to successfully assail the plain statements of God's Word on man's nature, his condition in death, the destiny of the wicked, the resurrection of the dead, the time of inauguration, and the location of the kingdom, the regathering of the two houses of Israel, the existence of other nations beyond the epoch of our Lord's second coming, this coming personal and pre-millennial, and on other topics not unimportant. To say there is figurative language in the Bible is of no avail. The literalist still holds his ground, and the fair thing for the objector to do is to examine the proof texts on these several propositions, and see if it is possible that they can be made to mean something very different from the meaning attached to them by the literalist. The objector must show that there are figures in these proof texts. A phrase or sentence can not be figurative without a figure. To prove that an expression or sentence is figurative, it must be shown that there is a figure in it, and the class determined to which it belongs. No one has attempted to do this fair and reasonable thing with the texts adduced in proof of the propositions enumerated above, and no one ever will. I will have something more to say on this topic at some future time

J. L. WISER.

By God's Appointment Christ Saves that which Is Lost.

There is one God and one mediator between God and man, the man Christ Jesus, who gave himself a ransom for all, to be testified in due time. Christ's mission or mediatorial work as the second Adam is to restore what the first Adam lost. Had there been no transgression nor sin, there would have been no occasion for a Redeemer to take away the sin of the world. It is to undo what the evil one has done that God sent his Son for. The first Adam was given dominion over every living thing, and the second Adam is to have dominion over the same. The first promise is concerning Christ's glorious work on earth.

After the serpent had deceived our first parents and brought sin and death into the world the promise was made that the Seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head. Later on the Lord renewed this promise to Abraham saying, Thy Seed shall possess the gate of his enemies, and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed. Paul says of this promise: And he gave him (Abraham) none inheritance in it, no, not so much as to set his foot on; yet he promised that he would give it to him for a possession when as yet he had no child." And this promise includes all saints, for Paul said, And if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." Gal. iii 29.

This was a Magna Charta promise, and it must have a literal fulfillment. When will it be accomplished? We reply in the restitution."

On page 134, And so the saints, when their redemption is completed, they will regain the ancient homestead. And the ransomed of the Lord will, shall their endless days in possession of the very earth and soil whereon they knelt and prayed, wept and suffered." . . . Here he will reign upon this earth, in this land, under this sun.

H. Pollard, editor of Our Hope, says of in Nov. 29, 1901: "So far as Our Hope is able to speak for the Advent Christian Churches, east and west, northies and south, all hold, without exception, that God's covenant promise to Abraham, secured to him and to his 'seed,' Christ, Gal. iii. 16, the entire earth in fee simple as a joint inheritance, Rom. iv. 13, which inheritance the image on the feet and it becomes a great mountain and fills the whole earth. It breaks in pieces the four kingdoms that have controlled the world and ends their rule and authority. That it is their authority that is broken and passes away and not the people is shown by Dan. vii. 14, 27, where the Son of Man is given dominion and glory and a kingdom, that all people, nations and languages should serve him. This shows that it was not the people that became as chaff, but the ruling powers. Christ is given the heathen for an inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for a possession, and they are broken and dashed to pieces. Here in a different way the same event is brought to view, and the same breaking and dashing to pieces, and for the same purpose as the above quotation. An inheritance is not given to be destroyed. Webster says it is something desirable. Christ came to save life, not to destroy it. He speaks peace to the heathen when he has dominion from sea to sea, and from the river to the ends of the earth. The Revelator quotes the above passage and places the event after Christ's coming when the risen saints are given power over the nations, and the kingdoms of this world become the kingdoms of our Lord and his Christ, for as yet the whole world lies in the wicked one.

God says, Look unto me and be ye saved all the ends of the earth. The Psalmist in the following quotation shows when and how this gracious and world wide invitation will be literally fulfilled, and what God's purpose is concerning the unenlightened heathen world. In Psa. xxii., xxvii., xxviii., and lxxii. God says by a prophet after his own heart. All the ends of the world shall remember and turn to the Lord, and all the kindreds of the nations shall worship before him, for the kingdom is the Lord's and he is governor among the nations. All nations shall serve him, all nations shall call him blessed.

These blessed predictions include the world at large that are to be blessed by the seed, and to remember and turn to the Lord in the times of restitution, when the kingdom is the Lord's, and he is governor among the nations. These are the nations that bring their honor and glory into the beloved city, where there is no more weeping, nor violence, nor destruction, and it needs not the light of the sun nor the moon, for the Lord is its everlasting light and the days of its mourning are ended. Isa. xxxii. 20-60; xiv. 20-65; xvii. 19.

These nations are not the seed God is now taking out of the Gentile world. Christ says they are not of the world, but are to be made one (not divided into sects as now) that the world may believe, and the Psalmist has given the due time when the world is to believe. The gospel is to be preached to every creature to fulfill the oath clad gospel promised blessing that is to be given to all the families of the earth. The accepting or rejecting the gospel decide the future destiny of all men, dividing them into two classes—the believer and unbeliever, the saved and the lost. Christ is the only name and way given by which men can be saved. God sent his Son into the world, not to condemn it, but that the world through him might be saved. God is in Christ, reconciling the world to himself. God made his Son to have dominion over the works of his hands, and has put all things under his feet, but Paul says not yet. God is now blessing the world with special light and knowledge preparatory for the coming age, but the selfishness and jealousy of men and nations are turning it largely into a curse by using this God given light, and the heaped up riches of these last days to make navies and implements of war and destruction, and all will be used to their utmost capacity to destroy the lives of men, for God has a controversy with the nations, and the time of trouble is near at hand such as never was, when all nations shall be gathered at Jerusalem, and the slain of the Lord shall be from one end of the earth to the other. But the elect seed will be delivered and escape this time of trouble. The Savior comes into mid air. The dead in Christ are raised, the living saints changed and together are caught up to meet the Lord in the air, so shall they ever be with the Lord. At the close of this vast destruction which terminates man's selfish rule on earth and Gentile time, Christ comes to the earth with his saints and puts his feet on Mount Olivet from which he ascended, and it cleaves apart and forms a great valley of safety. Zech. xiv. Joel iii. 9. Thus the restitution times commence—the mustard seed is planted—the leaven is at work, and the stone enlarges till it fills the whole earth.

Much is said in Scripture concerning the resurrection of Christ, for on it hangs all future life. A knowledge of it is to be given to all men as an assurance or ground work of faith, that the world is to have a righteous gospel judgment in the day when God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ according to the gospel or his Word. Through his death and resurrection he obtained the opening keys for the grave. The dead are to be raised, the earth is to cast out her dead, but every man in his own order or company. Christ the first fruits and afterwards they that are Christ's at his coming. All power is given him in heaven and in earth and over all flesh. All things are now put under his feet in their present rebellious state. He reigns with his joint heirs till all enemies are destroyed. During which the devil is bound, but at the end he is let loose to test the loyalty of the nations in the four quarters of the earth, which are in number as the sand of the sea, after which the deceiver and the deceived are destroyed, and there is no more death, nor pain, nor curse, for all things are made new, and the devil and all his works destroyed.

Rest For God's Children.

"Let us therefore fear, lest a promise being left us of entering into his rest, any of you should seem to come short of it." Heb. iv. 1.

Dear brothers and sisters in Christ, do we ever stop to think that we may be the one that may come short of that rest that God has promised to his children? Do you ever stop to consider the words of Jesus' words, when he says, "Many are called, but few are chosen?" Matt. xxii. 14.

We of the faith of Abraham, who have been called by the "Gospel of the kingdom," and have put on Christ by baptism, and have risen with him to walk in newness of life, have we left the carnal man in the watery grave, or did we bring him out with us? Let us be careful, and look well to our own character building, before we condemn our brother or sister for some fault we may see in them. You know Jesus has said, "First cast out the beam from thine own eye, and then we shall see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye." Let us therefore fear, lest we fall short of that rest." Are we working to be classed with the "chosen few? Are our works "gold, silver and precious stones," or will they be "Hay, wood and stubble?" This should be a question of vital importance to every child of God. Jesus says, "Two shall be in the field, one shall be taken and the other left; two women shall be grinding at the mill, one shall be taken and the other left." Why is one of them left? It is because their works have been of a destructible nature, while the one that will be taken has worked out his or her salvation with fear and trembling, looking unto the coming of the Lord for their reward. They have built gold, silver, precious stones in their character, and will be able to pass through the refiner's fire, and will come in the first resurrection to be kings and priests of God, and of Christ, and shall reign with him one thousand years. "Blessed and holy is he who hath part in the first resurrection, for on such the second death hath no power." Ah, dear ones of like precious faith, it will be a fearful thing to fall short of that. Paul says "Let us labor, therefore, to enter into that rest, lest any man fall after the same example of unbelief."

Press Toward the Mark.

There are many things about ourselves it were well to forget. An apostle said: "This one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." There is no experience, in the past, however glorious, which we may safely treasure in the memory as a substitute for present struggle, earnest aspiration, or eager hope. There is no experience however humiliating, which should be dwelt upon to the paralysis of faith or the enervation of courage. There is a sense in which we should die daily to the past.

Plymouth, Indiana, Feb'y 25, 1903.

We have decided to continue our special offer as given on our first page through the month of February. The back papers can all be supplied, so each will get the full year's number. Will you not see if there is not some one else in your church or neighborhood who will be benefitted by this arrangement. The "signs" are getting plainer that the time for work is short, so make an effort and do all you can for the cause of Christ NOW. Next year may be too late.

The way to be righted yourself, is to be careful not to wrong others: "With what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again."

If God has chosen your way, depend upon it, it is the best that could be chosen; it may be rough, but it is right; it may be tedious, but it is safe.

He that glorifieth, let him glory in the Lord. For not he that commendeth himself is approved, but whom the Lord commendeth. 2 Cor. x. 17, 18.

When a man of Paul's character and work felt the possibility that he might, and was filled with anxious watchfulness and care lest he should fall short of his reward, what ought our positions and feelings be?

In France, Dr. Monsville found that of one hundred children of the first five years of life among the Jewish population 12.9 die; whilst from the same number of the same class of Christians 24.1 die. One half of all the Christians die at 36 years, and one half of all the Jews at 58 years and one month.

Some people's idea of freedom is freedom to please themselves and ride rough shod over others. This is not the idea of Paul, who says, Gal. v. 13: "For ye, brethren, were called to freedom; only use not your freedom for an occasion of the flesh, but through love be servants one of another." "The liberty of Christ" is not that expressed in the phrase, "I shall do as I please," but that, rather, which adopts Paul's exhortation, "Let each one of us please his neighbor for that which is good unto edifying."

Passing Events in the Light of Prophecy.

Under the heading of the "Macedonian Peril," the Daily News of London, had a long and interesting communication from its Constantinople correspondent. He states that the Macedonian question causes great and well founded anxiety both to Turkey and the representatives of the great Powers. He terms events from the time of the Russo-Turkish war of 1877-8, when one set of Bulgarians obtained their freedom, while others had to remain under Turkish rule. The natural result followed. He estimates that there are 140,000 Macedonian refugees in Bulgaria. He says Russia cannot and will not remain passive. She has to maintain her role as protector of orthodox Christians. Austria must follow. The Turk is getting alarmed. The question is whether Turkey is prepared to make substantial reforms by consenting to foreign control.

The Times referring to the proposals of Austria and Russia, says: "The Austro-Russian scheme aims at providing for a Gendarmerie with officers drawn from neutral European states, and for the appointment of a high administrative official, unhampered by the paralyzing influence of the Porte.

The sick man is thus invited to submit to what is described as a "slight operation." He knows that some of the surgeons are more anxious for his demise than his recovery. Will he not fear that the operation may lead to the loss of another limb? If he refuses to voluntarily submit to the surgical knife will Austria and Russia employ force? A short time will show.

An important debate took place recently in the French Chamber of Deputies. M. Estournelles de Constans said the cause of the deficits throughout Europe was the Armed peace. It absorbed 54 per cent of the resources of France and was driving her into a colonial policy. 'Such a policy, in our opinion, is [illegible] against England, Germany, M. Ribot, a former Minister, pointed out that the National Debt of France had increased by £25,600,000, within two years, which was a greater burden than the country could bear.

The European situation does not improve. There are many questions, several of them of a very complex nature and more than one seemingly approaching a climax. The Standard says:

"In Russian policy intervals of quiescence, longer or shorter, are succeeded without any special cause, by periods of restlessness. Just now a phase of spasmodic activity is at its height. A line drawn from Pekin through Teheran to Constantinople would serve to connect a series of centres of disturbance. Every one knows that Russian statecraft is, as a rule, subtle and patient, rather than violent, and this familiar truth make all the more remarkable the simultaneous development of somewhat aggressive enterprises at a number of separate points.

The St. James' Gazette says: "That Russia means business may be gathered from the fact that all the newest and fastest vessels of the volunteer fleet are being collected in the Black Sea and laid up at the disposal of the government until they are wanted.

The British Embassy at Constantinople has addressed to the Porte a protest against the passage of Russian torpedo destroyers through the Dardanelles to the Black Sea. Should occasion arise, Great Britain reserves the right to demand similar privileges for her warships.

The Scotsman says: Action has been taken by Russia, and a protest has been lodged by Great Britain, which have bearings on the all-important question of the preserving the peace of Europe.

The editor of Glad Tidings says: "The Delhi Durbar appears to have been a magnificent spectacle. Neither India, nor any other country has ever seen anything to equal this mammoth collection of camps outside Delhi. They covered an area of fifty square miles. The Daily Chronicle says: The Durbar is an outward sign of union in a single system. It is only the continuous success of British rule in India that blinds us to the wonder of it—the wonder of a system whereby a British army of 80,000 men garisons an empire of more than a million and a half square miles, and nearly 300,000,000 of men are ruled by a handful of strangers from beyond the seas."

Ghosts.

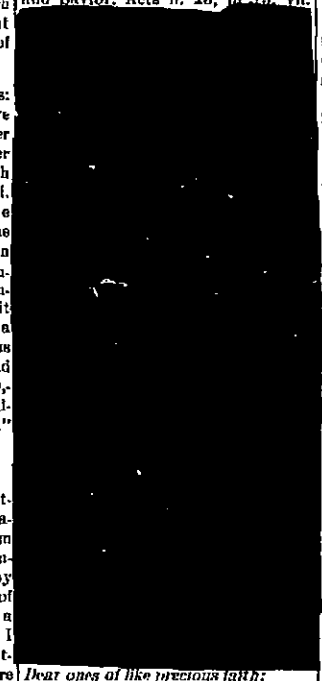
Dr. Andrew Wilson says, "Ghost-seeing is susceptible of ready explanation. Take a nerve that leads from the eye to the brain. Seeing is a mental act. I hold a piece of chalk in my hand, and when I put the piece of chalk out of sight, you still have a mental vision of it. But suppose I say, 'Not merely have I an image outside that bit of chalk: I can see it there in the principle of Macbeth with the dagger when he said, 'Let me clutch it,' you would say that it was illusion. Yes, but that was the ghost of the bit of chalk. The image of the bit of chalk was stored up somewhere in the brain. But suppose that along the nerve of sight that image stored up in the brain travelled backward until it came to the part of the eye that originally received it. It then gave the idea of something outside us that has no real or objective existence. Ghosts are produced in that way. They come from no outer or external world, except the world that is inside peoples own heads."

"He Purgeth It."

"Every branch that beareth fruit he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit."—Jesus.

In Dean Alford's New Testament the Greek word Kathaiser is rendered "he cleanseth," which is evidently its meaning, hence in the third verse Christ proceeds to the process, "Now ye are clean (Katharoi) through the Word which I have spoken to you." And in chap. xvii. 17 he prays his Father to complete this purging process in the language, "Sanctify them through thy truth; thy Word is truth." The truth, then, as taught in the discourses of Jesus is the divine remedy for uncleanness. Before his day the same means were used, hence the frequent use of the expression in the prophets, "the Word of the Lord came .....saying, etc., "this is the Word of God that abideth for ever," and was preached unto men in the gospel of the kingdom, Isa. xl. 8; 1 Peter i. 25.

[illegible] divine method of salvation has always been. It cleansed before from Adam to Abraham, thence to Christ; and if men would be saved, sanctified and purified from the corruption of sin we must allow the same purging influence of the gospel of God's kingdom as ratified in the blood of the anointed Jesus, to have its perfect work upon our hearts and lives. Peter taught that God put no difference between Jews and Gentiles, but purifies all hearts by faith in the Word of the gospel. Acts xv. 7, 9. The Greek term rendered "word" is logos, as in John i. 1, "In the beginning was the Word," which signifies the wisdom of Jehovah by which the heavens and the earth were formed, and afterwards revealed God's requirements and man's duty. Eph. i. 9, 10; iii. 3-6. This logos was Theos (God), and was in Christ, hence he spake "the words of God," John iii. 34, which Paul said were "quick and powerful (living and active, Alford) discerning the thoughts and intents of the heart" in the same effectual manner as that a sword would pierce, "even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit (or a person and his life) and of the joints and marrow.' Heb. iv. 12. Because of this Jesus had the power to discern the thoughts of his enemies, Matt. ix. 4; xii. 25; Luke vi. 8, and "knew what was in man," even the animosity that was satiated in his blood, that broke the tender heart of his mother as she gazed upon her wounded Son, and heard the death shriek which terrified his foes,—and that convinced the centurion who had charge of his execution that he was in truth the Son of God. Thus were the thoughts of many hearts revealed, Luke ii. 34, 35, and the chief priests and Pharisees openly condemned, as being the murderers of their Messiah and Savior. Acts ii. 23; iii. 15; vii.



Dear ones of like precious faith:

It is a little late, but as I have been reading so many good letters in the paper from all over the land. We read that there will be a time when our Lord comes to gather his chosen people home. They will come from the four wings of the earth, from the east, west, north and south. So let let us be watchful lest we be not ready when he comes. There is work in the vineyard for us all to do. We can distribute tracts, many good ones are advertized in the dear RESTITUTION, and send to our friends in every letter and hand them out to our neighbors and try to get some one to take the paper, or do as I have done, if you cannot get them to take it, send it to them, and thank them for reading it. I have paid for three copies, one to my dear old parents and two to my neighbors. We have no church nearer than Brush Creek, Ohio, and that is about seventeen miles, so we dont get there very often But we have the visits of the dear old paper every week. There are none of the one faith around here but wife and I and her sister, Mrs. W. H. Eidemiller. We had the pleasure of hearing Brother W. H. Wilson at the Peterson school-house, about three miles south of Piqua, Ohio, and that was a feast. The good Book says "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature, he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." For proof, the faith that saves comes by hearing the Word of God, see Rom. x. 17. For proof that there is but one faith, see Eph. iv. 5, and for proof that the faith that justifies is the belief of what God promises, see Rom. iv. No promise this side of the resurrection, that is the day of life, of the crown of rejoicing, of victory. Men may strive to beat back the tides of death, but they will surely come, but there is a hope beyond the night of dreary watching, the life age is about to dawn, the golden lamp of faith will yet shine brightly in the valley of death. This is not all, we have heard the prophecy from the sacred depths of God's own eternal truth, "Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake ye that dwell in the dust; for thy dew shall be as the dew of the herbs." Now as death is a long sleep, so sleep is a short death and vividly foreshadows the death state in which even the righteous are fallen asleep. 1 Cor. xv. 6. Hence the same Bible which tells us that the dead are asleep, also tells us that they know not anything. Eccl. ix. 5. Hence a thousand years after David had gone to sleep with his fathers, Peter said, "David is not ascended into the heavens." Acts ii. 34. Them that sleep in Jesus will God bring with him in the same sense that he brought our Lord Jesus, by a resurrection, Heb. xiii. 20. So, brothers and sisters, let us be watchful lest we fall by the wayside. There are so many temptations in this vain world. The Bible says he that overcometh will I permit to sit in my throne, as I overcame and sit down with my Father in his throne. My letter is getting lengthly, and I will quit for fear I will tire you. May we be found worthy when the Lord comes is my prayer. Pray for me, dear brothers and sisters.

Your brother in Christ.

Brother Underwood:

We are glad that we are still numbered with the readers of our paper. We enjoy reading the good letters from those who are like myself endeavoring to so live that they may share in the soon coming kingdom.

We remain as ever, yours in the one faith.

Dear household of like precious faith:

I have been reading so many nice letters of late, scattered over such a wide territory. I want to add my mite. I have met several brethren that came out of Babylon, the same road that I did. I first joined the Christian or Campbellite Church. They insisted on me taking the office of Elder, and on account of my ignorance I finally yielded. Then I decided to apply to David's lamp, the Word, determined to follow where it led, church or no church. I was surprised at the light it gave me. Their pet hobby of the kingdom, birth of the Spirit, and going to heaven and some other things was a mistake. After my lamp showed me those things so clear, I could not help obeying Jude, to contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints. I could not do that and not say anything about it, so they withdrew their fellowship from me and Elder Elliott, who was on the same doctrine. About that time I accidentally picked up my first copy of THE RESTITUTION. I read it over and over, and was so well pleased with it that I subscribed and have taken it ever since. It is getting better all the time. If you stick to it and the Bible you will never go very far wrong. I have never had the pleasure of meeting any of our brethren in Oklahoma since some time in the seventies.

Your Brother in hope,

PRECIOUS PROMISES.

God has revealed to us by his Word many great and precious promises. Peter calls them exceeding great and precious, and it is by faith in them that we become partakers of divine nature. Think of the love and tenderness of the Father toward us, when he made promise of resurrection and life and exaltation to his own most glorious nature, through faith in Christ Jesus. Ah! yes we are redeemed by the precious blood of Christ, the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world. Consider how great and precious the promise, God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him might not perish but have everlasting life. Why the ultimate aim of our journey through life should be to attain unto that eternal life, that rest that remains for the people of God. God made promise to Abraham and his seed, of the land of Canaan for an everlasting possession, and Abraham was called the father of the faithful. In Galatians we read, "And he saith not unto seeds as of many, but unto thy seed which is Christ; for ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus, for as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ, and if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise."

Dearly beloved, this is how we come into covenant relation with God, we believe the promises he has made, and have obeyed them from the heart by baptism, and now we are children of God, and if children then heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ. If, then, we are children of God, how earnestly should we strive to walk worthy of so exalted a position; and to those that endure to the end, the blessed promise is, "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection, on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be kings and priests unto God and shall reign a thousand years, and they shall be among those that sing the new song, Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof, for thou hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred and tongue and people and nation, and hast made us unto our God kings and priests and we shall reign on the earth.' Oh; yes. Christ came an high priest of good things to come, and obtained an eternal redemption for us, that they which are called might receive the promise of eternal inheritance. No wonder John says, "Behold what manner of love the Father has bestowed upon us that we should be called the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is." Glorious promises, such as these if believed and obeyed from the heart, will purify us and will enable us to stand fast in the faith, and wait patiently until Jesus comes to call us and fashion these corruptible bodies like unto his own glorious body. I fear I sometimes fail to realize how exceedingly great and precious God's promises are, they reach out into eternity. Oh; that we may all prove faithful unto him that called us to such honor and glory is my earnest prayer.

MRS. MATTIE NEILL.

The World's Great Need.

"Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion! Shout! O daughter of Jerusalem! Behold, thy King cometh unto thee. He is just and victorious and unselfish." Zach. ix. 9.

The ecstatic cry of the patriot seer as, in vision, he sees the King whose coming is the deepest need, the highest hope of his beloved land and race of Israel. We may catch up the joyful cry of the old prophet and apply it to a wider need and a larger hope—humanity's need and hope of its King.

I. Supreme, absolute, is the world's need of a King.

Human society has always felt this need of a rightful ruler—to rule rightfully, and it has tried hard to fill it. Through the ages it has tried many ways and sought out many inventions.

It has tried despotisms—absolute, irresponsible rulers; given them full power to administer justice between man and man and to provide security to person and property, to judge and to assure human rights—and this has failed!

It has tried constitutional monarchies—for the attainment of the same great and essential ends. And these have failed! It has tried republics—what it has fondly called a government by the people and for the people—to gain the same great ends. And this also, as we know and have reason to know well by sad experience and by the plain sight of our eyes, has failed to attain the ends sought—coming nearer, indeed, than others, as we believe, but yet having not attained.

And still there remains, as all thoughtful men know, the need of a supreme authority, a rightful and effective ruler—a king. Human society needs a king (1) to overthrow the evils that are rife.

Notwithstanding all remedies that have been tried to prevent or heal them, the world is full of evils!

Even in this "Land of Liberty," where every man is a free man, and every man has his chance, as is claimed; this republic where, as we say, the people is sovereign; this popular constitutional government where, as we proudly claim, the dignity of the man is respected and the rights of man are safeguarded as nowhere else on earth—even here, where wise and righteous government is best assured, what evils are rife!
